DEAR SIR: I had just closed my letter No. 1, when I received the enclosed from General Sullivan, which was left open for my perusal. I am extremely happy that it contains such favourable accounts, and do myself the pleasure to congratulate your Excellency. I am still in hopes, if reinforcements are soon sent, we shall hold Canada, especially as the Canadians are so friendly. I am, however, humbly of opinion that we still ought to build the gondolas, and make every preparation to prevent the enemy's crossing the Lake and penetrating into the Colonies, which I think will certainly be our own fault if they do.

God bless you, my dear General, and believe me most fervently your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Montreal, June 6, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I this moment received a letter from General Sullivan, at Sorel, dated at four o'clock yesterday evening, informing me that a body of the King's troops and a number of ships were between him and the Three Rivers, and that he soon expected to be attacked. I have sent every man that could be spared to his assistance, but am fearful he will be obliged to abandon his post. If the enemy land on that side, I am fearful they will endeavour to possess themselves of Chambly and St. Johns. If they come upon this side, (on which they are at present,) we must evacuate this town. Some days since the sick and baggage have been removed to St. Johns. I am now removing a parcel of goods I have seized for the use of the Army; I expect to have all over this evening. I shall obtain only four or five hundred men to garrison this place, until I receive orders to leave it, or am obliged to quit it by a superior force. Out of upwards of eight thousand men in this country, not five thousand effective can be mustered. The small-pox has broken out and divided the Army in such a manner that it is almost ruined. Our want of almost every necessary for the Army, and repeated misfortunes and losses, have greatly dispirited the troops. Our enemies are daily increasing, and our friends deserting us. Under these discouragements and obstacles, with a powerful Army against us, well disciplined, and wanting in no one article to carry on their operations, it will be a miracle if we keep the country; my only expectations are to secure our retreat to St. Johns, or the Isle-aux-Noix, where it will doubtless be thought necessary to make a stand; for which purpose, all the batteaus and vessels on your side the Lake that can be spared should be sent over; our gondolas we shall be obliged to destroy; others ought immediately to be taken inland, to secure the Lake. The enemy, I am well informed, have brought over a number with them, framed and done to put up in a short time. The want of a little attention in time has lost us this fine country. I hope for better things on your side, and that, in rotation of fortune, something better will turn up for us here.

In every vicissitude of fortune, I am, with great esteem and affection, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To General Philip Schuyler.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.—EXTRACT.

Boston, June 9, 1776.

Yesterday a ship from Scotland was taken and brought into Marblehead by the Continental armed schooners Warren and Lee. She had on board a company of Highlanders, consisting of near one hundred privates, one captain, three subalterns, and two volunteers; they inform that thirty-two sail of transports came out with them under convoy of a frigate of thirty-two guns, with three thousand Highlanders on board, all bound to Boston. They brought no papers nor letters of any consequence, and can give no intelligence of importance. The transport is said to be a very good ship, of one hundred and thirty tons burden; had on board four carriage guns, the arms and baggage belonging to the company, some tents, and clothing and provisions. The Captain's name is Marwell, who commands the company, and is brother to the Dutchess of Gordon.

MR. PALFREY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sunday morning, June 16, 1776.

Mr. Palfrey presents his most respectful compliments to his Excellency General Washington, with the enclosed return of the state of his office. The Commissary-General has informed Mr. Palfrey he shall have a further demand in the course of ten days for one hundred thousand dollars, which, with the payment of the Connecticut Militia, and the remainder of the abstracts for April, will nearly if not quite exhaust the chest. Mr. P. therefore requests his Excellency to back the application he intends to make to Congress for a further supply.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, June 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I received your several favours of the 11th continued to the 12th, and 12th with a copy of General Arnold's letter. The return delivered you by General Wooster, you forgot to enclose.

The account of Mr. Deane is variant from Colonel Kirkland's; but yet they both seem to agree in the most material points, viz: that some parts of our frontiers are to feel the effects of the savage resentment which the friends of Government have been industriously trying to call forth against us.

You have done well in your Message to the Six Nations. The sooner a conference can be held the better; and I think the most vigorous exertions necessary to secure a post, as you mention, where Fort Stanwix formerly stood, and below that, as I intimated in my last. If you can effect these, I am hopeful all their attempts in that quarter will be unavailing. I have ordered a ton of powder, half a ton of lead, five thousand flints, some cannon, intrenching tools, and a dozen whip-saws and files, to be immediately sent you, which you will receive in two or three days, with a list of them and every other article sent from hence at this time.

I have enclosed you a copy of an invoice of goods now in the hands of Mr. Robert Henry, which he offered the Quartermaster-General this week on moderate terms, as the Quartermaster informs me. It certainly will be proper that you purchase them, or such of them as will suit the Army in Canada; and it will be less troublesome and expensive than sending articles from hence, supposing they can be procured, and that can be had either in Albany or its vicinity, rather than to send here for them; for I am really so immersed in business, and have such a variety of things to attend to, that I scarcely know which way to turn myself. Perhaps, if you make a strict inquiry, you may obtain not only more goods, but other necessities.

The Indians are here, just returned from Philadelphia. I will communicate to them your wishes for their return, and give direction that every mark of respect be shown them by those who go with them.

I have requested the Paymaster to procure, if possible, as much hard money as will discharge Mr. Black's claim. How he will succeed, I cannot tell. If he can get it, it shall be forwarded as soon as a proper conveyance can be had. In regard to a person to superintend the building of gondolas, and other carpenters to carry on the works, I refer you to my letter of the 9th; and shall only add, that they cannot be now had, every one qualified for the business being employed here.

The intelligence contained in General Sullivan's letter is extremely pleasing, and I sincerely wish his most sanguine hopes may be more than answered. If the affection of the Canadians can be engaged—and he seems to have no doubt of it—it will be of much importance, and probably the means of retrieving our misfortunes in that quarter. I find, by General Arnold's letter to General Sullivan, Colonel Bedel, Major Butterfield, and Captain Young, are gone to the Sorel for trial. If their conduct was as base and infamous as represented, it will surely meet with an exemplary punishment. Men who will not discharge the duty they owe their country from principle, must be influenced to it by other motives, or at least be prevented from betraying our most valuable rights by a cowardly and disgraceful behaviour.

Enclosed you have an extract of a letter I received by last night's post from General Ward, from which we may reasonably conjecture that the rest of the transports which sailed with the one taken, will not be long before they arrive. It seems evident they expected to find General Howe at Boston; and I am hopeful some others, under this idea, will fall into our hands. There are also accounts in town of two or three valuable prizes more being taken to the eastward—one with several light cannon, another a West-Indian, homeward-bound, with a quantity of dollars and sugars; but I fear, though the accounts seem particular, that they want confirmation, as General Ward mentions nothing of them. I am, dear sir, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Schuyler.

P. S. The whip-saws, I fear, can't be got; the Quartermaster says he has tried without success.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

New-York, June 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was favoured with yours of the 5th and 6th instant, by express, yesterday evening, from General Schuyler, and am exceedingly happy on account of the agreeable and interesting intelligence it contains. Before it came to hand I almost dreaded to hear from Canada, as my advices seemed to promise nothing favourable, but rather our further misfortunes. But I am now hopeful our affairs, from the confused, distracted, and almost forlorn state in which you found them, will emerge, and assume an aspect of order and success. I am convinced many of our misfortunes are to be attributed to a want of discipline, and a proper regard to the conduct of the soldiery. Hence it was, and from our feeble efforts to protect the Canadians, that they had almost joined and taken part against us. As you are fully apprized of this, and conceive them well disposed towards us, with confidence I trust you will take every step in your power to conciliate and secure their friendship. If this can be effected—and of which you seem to have no doubt—I see no objection to our indulging a hope that this country (of such importance in the present controversy) may yet be added to, and complete our Union. I confess this interesting work is now more difficult than it would have been heretofore, had matters been properly conducted; but yet I flatter myself it may be accomplished by a wise, prudent, and animated behaviour in the officers and men engaged in it, especially if assisted by the friendly disposition of the inhabitants. I think every mark of friendship and favour should be shown them, to encourage their zeal and attachment to our cause, and from which, if they once heartily embark, we shall derive innumerable benefits.

Your conduct in pushing and securing posts low down the country is certainly judicious, and of the utmost advantage. The further down we can take and maintain posts, the greater will our possession of the country be, observing, at the same time, the necessity of having a safe retreat left, if you should be obliged to abandon them by a superior force. I am hopeful, and shall anxiously wait to hear of General Thompson's making a successful attack upon the party intrenching at the Three Rivers. Their defeat will be of the most essential service. It will chagrin them, disconcert their schemes on the one hand, and animate our men, and give life to our Canadian friends on the other, and efface from their minds the unfavourable impressions our late conduct has made. It will be of material consequence, in your advances down the country, to secure the several important posts as you go, at which you may, in case you should be obliged to decline the main object you have in view, make a vigorous and successful stand in your retreat. I concur with you in opinion in thinking it not of material moment to keep a very large number of men at La Chine, or the upper posts. There should be no more than will be necessary to repel such attacks and attempts as may be made by the savages and the regular troops above you—allowing for such a number of disaffected Canadians as may join them. But then there should be a sufficient number for that purpose, as our further misfortunes there might be of the most injurious consequence. If they can be maintained, the disaffection above will dwindle away, and the insurrection promise nothing disastrous. It is impossible for me at this distance, and not acquainted with the situation of affairs as well as you who are on the spot, to give any particular directions for your conduct and operations. I therefore have only to request that you, with your officers, will, in every instance, pursue such measures as the exigency of our affairs may seem to require, and as to you shall appear most likely to advance and promote the interest and happiness of your country.

The return which you mention to have enclosed was not in your letter; you probably, through hurry, forgot to put it in, or General Schuyler may have omitted it when in his hands. I wrote you the 13th instant on this subject, and must again enjoin a particular attention to this part of your duty, it being of the utmost importance to be frequently certified of our whole strength and stores. In compliance with your request I shall transmit a copy of your letter to Congress by to-morrow's post; it will give them sensible pleasure, and such as they had no good reason to expect, at least so soon.

I have enclosed you an extract of a letter from General Ward. From the capture mentioned in it, there is reason to expect the other transports that sailed with her are not far off the coast.

In regard to your giving commissions, it is a measure that I can neither approve nor disapprove; having no authority to act in this instance myself. The propriety of it must depend upon the powers and practice of your predecessors in command. If they had none, it will be judged of, most probably, by the good or bad consequences it may produce. Congress, from your letter, will see you have exercised such a power, and when they write you, will either confirm or refuse it, in all probability.

Let me should conceive that I do not think La Chine or the Cedars posts of importance, and whose defence are not very material, I must here add that I esteem them of much consequence; but only mean that more men need not be employed than what will be equal to any probable attack that may be made against them.

I would observe, before I have done, that it is my most earnest request that harmony, a good understanding, and free communication of sentiments, may prevail and be preserved between the Generals and Field Officers—particularly the former. Nothing can produce greater benefits than this, nor tend more to promote your military operations; whereas history and observation do sufficiently evince (they abound with numberless examples) the fatal consequences which have ever resulted from distrusts, jealousy, and disagreements among officers of these ranks. Wishing, therefore, your counsels and efforts to be founded in a happy union, and to meet the smiles of a kind Providence, I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Sullivan.

P. S. Knowing your great zeal for the cause of your country and desire to render her every possible service, I must caution you not to put too much to the hazard in your exertions to establish her rights, and to receive, with a proper degree of caution, the professions the Canadians may make; they have the character of an ingenuous, artful people, and very capable of finesse and cunning. Therefore, my advice is, that you put not too much in their power, but seem to trust them, rather than do it too far. I would also have you to keep all your posts, as you go, well secured, to guard against any treacherous conduct.

G. W.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

New-York, June 16, 1776.

SIR: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of your favours of the 27th ultimo and of the 3d and 6th instant; and in answer to the first, I think you were right in your direction to Mr. Bartlett about the brigantine Hannah, as Mr. Morris had written for one. The two schooners, considering their force and number of men, certainly behaved extremely well in repelling the attack of such a number of boats; and it is only to be lamented that the affair was attended with the death of Captain Mugford; he seemed to deserve a better fate.

The determination of the Court of Inquiry upon Colonel Varnum's complaint, transmitted in that of the 3d, is very different from what he expected, or I imagined it would be from his state of the case. Whether it is right or wrong, it is not in my power to determine, as the evidence which was before them is not inserted in the proceedings; which ought to have been, as I, at this distance, can have no other means to warrant me either in confirming or rejecting the sentence. I cannot but add, that it seems extraordinary to me and exceedingly strange, that Captain Lane should have been at so much trouble and expense to get the men, without having a right to them; for which reason, to discountenance a practice extremely pernicious in its nature, of one officer trying to take away and seduce the men of another, and on account of the imperfection in the proceedings in not stating the matter fully and the whole evidence, the complaint should be reheard, and everything appertaining to it—the manner of inlistment, &c.—particularly specified, for me to found my judgment on.

The arms, &c., which you sent to Norwich, as mentioned in the invoice contained in that of the 6th, are not arrived. The number of carbines is only half of what General Putnam wrote for, as I have been informed, and it is less by three hundred than I directed to be sent in my letter from Philadelphia, of the 28th ultimo. This I suppose had not come to hand when you wrote, as you have not acknowledged the receipt of it.

I have enclosed two letters for Major Small and Charles Procter, Esquire, supposed to be at Halifax, which being written with a design to procure the enlargement of Captain Procter, a prisoner on board the Mercury man-of-war, or induce them to intercede for a more humane treatment to be shown him, I request you to forward by the first opportunity, by way of Nova-Scotia.

I am this moment favoured with yours of the 9th instant, advising me of the capture made by our armed vessels of one of the transports, with a company of Highlanders on board; and I flatter myself, if our vessels keep a good lookout, as the whole fleet are bound to Boston which sailed with her, that more of them will fall into our hands. This is a further proof that Government expected General Howe was still in Boston.

I am extremely sorry that your health is more and more impaired; and having heard by letter from Colonel Hancock that Mr. Whitcomb, Colonel Whitcomb's brother, is appointed a Brigadier-General, I shall order him to relieve you as soon as I am informed that he accepts his commission; and if he does, you may immediately call him to your assistance, before I am certified of his acceptance; this will ease you of some trouble, till I can regulate a few matters of importance here, which I hope to do in a little time.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable General Ward.

MRS. JOHNSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, June 16, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty of complaining to you, as it is from you I expect redress. I was compelled to leave home, much against my inclination, and am detained here by General Schuyler, who, I am convinced, acts more out of ill nature to Sir John than from any reason that either he or I have given him. As I am not allowed to return home, and my situation here made as disagreeable as it can be, by repeated messages and threats from General Schuyler, too indelicate and cruel to be expected from a gentleman, I should wish to be with my friends at New-York, and would prefer my captivity under your Excellency's protection, to being in the power of General Schuyler, who rules with more severity than could be wished by your Excellency's humble servant,

M. JOHNSON.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

La Prairie, June 16, 1776—11 o'clock A. M.

DEAR SIR: I received your letter from Sorel of the 14th instant, at three o'clock, previous to which I had destroyed all the knees, &c. In the morning, I sent Captain Wilkinson express to you; at three o'clock he met the enemy at Varenne, and narrowly escaped being taken; at five he arrived at Montreal; at seven P. M. I embarked the whole garrison in eleven batteaus, and got safe over. The rain made it seven o'clock before carts could be procured at Longueil and La Prairie to carry the sick and baggage. The whole are safe here, with some rum, molasses, wine, &c., seized at Montreal. The salt could not be got over. We have destroyed all the batteaus, and will break down all the bridges in our rear. I expect to be at St. Johns at five o'clock this evening. We have thirty carts, which I will send to Chambly as soon as they are discharged of their loading. Four or five of the enemy's vessels are as high as Vercheres or Varenne. Our people saw their troops at the latter place, and a Frenchman from Montreal says they mounted guard there last. The number of the enemy is very considerable. No particular account has been received of their movements.

I am, very respectfully, dear sir, your obedient and humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Brigadier-General Sullivan, Chambly.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

St. Johns, June 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have this minute received a letter from General Schuyler, advising me that the batteaus which I wrote for might be sent over the Lake and detained, for the purpose of bringing a number of the Militia who are ordered into this country. I suppose he has written you fully on the matter. We have about nine hundred barrels of pork and eighty barrels of flour here. The sloop and schooner are arrived at the Isle Motte, with a considerable quantity. The schooner is loaded with dry-goods, shot, shells, &c. I believe it will be best to send her away directly. Nothing is done yet to fortify our camp. I think it requires immediate attention. I intended going to Chambly in the morning, but expect to have the pleasure of seeing you here, where I think we are secure at present.

I am, with great respect, dear sir, your most humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To General Sullivan, Chambly.

P. S. I have borrowed several sums of hard money. I should be glad of four or five hundred pounds, if you can spare it. Will it not be best to give our paper money a currency, by declaring those enemies who refuse it? Unless some such method is taken, the poor soldiers receive no benefit from their pay, and starve in the midst of plenty, with their pockets full of money.

Yours, &c.,

B. ARNOLD.

To General Sullivan, Sorel.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN WHIPPLE.

Newport, June 16, 1776.

SIR: You are to go to sea with your ship as soon as possible, and cruise, till your provisions are out or you have weakened your ship by manning prizes so as to make it unsafe to cruise, in such places on our coast as you may think will be most likely to intercept the enemies of the United Colonies. And you are to take and send into port for trial all vessels belonging to or bound to Great Britain, and all other vessels with British property on board, and all vessels that you may suspect of having a design of supplying the British Army or Navy or the enemies to the United Colonies.

You are to send your prizes into the first port you can with most safety within the United Colonies, and transmit to the Marine Committee, or their agents, or to me, an account of your circumstances, as often as may be.

If you take any transports, you are to take the principal officers on board your ship. If by distress you are obliged to put into any port where the Congress have no agents, you are to draw on the Treasurers of the Congress, or on me, or on any of the agents, for what sum is sufficient to repair your ship, or for necessities.

ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To Abraham Whipple, Esquire, Commander of the Ship Columbus.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN BIDDLE.

Newport, June 16, 1776.

SIR: You are to go to sea with your brig as soon as possible, and cruise, till your provisions are out or you have weakened your brig by manning prizes so as to make it unsafe to cruise, in such places on our coast as you may think will be most likely to intercept the enemies to the United Colonies. And you are to take and send into port for trial all vessels belonging to or bound to Great Britain, and all other vessels with any British property on board, and all vessels that you may suspect of having a design of supplying the Army or Navy of the enemies of the United Colonies.

You are to send your prizes into the first port within the United Colonies that you can with most safety, and transmit to the Marine Committee, or their agents, or to me, an account of your circumstances, as often as may be.

If you take any transports, you are to take the principal officers on board your ship. If by distress you should put into any port where the Congress have no agents, you are to draw on the Treasurers of the Congress, or on me, or on any of the agents, for what sum is sufficient to repair your brig, or for necessities.

ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To Nicholas Biddle, Esq., Commander of the Brigantine Andrew Doria.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, June 16, 1776.

SIR: Last evening I received Major Harrison's letter of the 10th instant, and, agreeably to your desire, have directed Lieutenant Martin to be ready as soon as possible to set out for New-York.

The 13th instant, at evening, I ordered five hundred men, with proper officers, a detachment of the train, with a thirteen-inch mortar, two eighteen-pounders, and some small cannon, under the command of Colonel Whitcomb, to take post on Long-Island, to annoy the enemy's ships; the necessary works were thrown up in the night, and next morning our cannon and mortar began to play upon the pirates, which soon drove them all out of the harbour. The fleet consisted of thirteen in number: the Renown, of fifty guns, several smaller ships of war, and some transports with Highlanders on board. As near as we could judge, there were about eight hundred troops on board the transports. They blew up the Light-House as they went off, and then put to sea with their fleet. I think it probable they will leave some frigates to cruise in the Bay.

A number of the Colony troops and Militia were to have thrown up a battery the same night on Pettick's Island and Nantasket Head, but by some unforeseen obstructions, they did not get their cannon ready in time; however, they gave the enemy a number of shot as the ships passed through the channel. Our shot cut away some of their yards and rigging, and several went into the ships' sides; but the shells from the mortar terrified them most. They returned a few shot from the Commodore's ship, without any effect, and got under sail with all expedition.

I have proposed to the General Court to anchor a decoy ship where the man-of-war lay, with a broad pendant, in order to draw in the transports which may be coming this way.

No Paymaster, nor money for the troops stationed here, have yet arrived, which delay has occasioned great difficulty, as there is now more than three months' pay due to the men. I have endeavoured to borrow the money of the General Court, but have not succeeded, the Treasury being nearly exhausted by large demands.

I am your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. Several invalids, belonging to the marching regiments, have applied to me to be turned over to other regiments, as they were not able to march, but I did not think myself authorized to comply with their request. I have discharged three or four, who were likely to be of no service, but a burden to the Continent.

P. S. June 17.—I have just received information that the Continental Privateers have taken and brought into Nantasket, in this harbour, a ship and a brig from Glasgow, with two hundred and ten Highland troops on board, with their baggage; the ship mounted six carriage-guns, and fought the Privateers some time before she struck. We had four men wounded; the enemy had three privates and a Major killed, and eight or ten men wounded. The prisoners are coming up to town, among whom is a Colonel. Any further particulars that may be of importance, I shall forward as soon as I can learn them.

EDMUND PENDLETON AND OTHERS TO VIRGINIA DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

Williamsburgh, June 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The confusion which hath for some time happened amongst the people in the disputed lands between Pennsylvania and this Colony, and a representation to the Convention that a civil war was like to be the consequence if something was not done to prevent it, induced that body to take the subject into consideration, who were sorry to discover that a jealousy seemed to prevail in the governing powers of Pennsylvania of our intending the garrisons on the Ohio to influence that dispute, and to overawe their people; whereas we only mean by them to protect our people and those in the contested settlement from the danger they are exposed to of Indian ravages, without the most distant view to offer any injury to our friends and neighbours, with whom it is our inclination as well as interest to unite. A temporary boundary appeared to the Convention the only means of quieting the people, until we have leisure to refer the final decision to some arbitrating power between us; and in fixing that, they judged that to point a line which would most nearly leave the inhabitants in the country they respectively settled under, would be most likely to give general satisfaction; and having examined several gentlemen well acquainted with that country, who were of opinion that end would be answered by the line described in the enclosed resolution, they have resolved to propose that line to the Pennsylvania Assembly, and have commanded us to transmit it to you, requesting that you would negotiate the matter in such manner as you shall think most effectual.

We are, with great regard, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servants,

EDMUND PENDLETON, THOMAS LUD. LEE,
DUDLEY DIGGS, WILLIAM CABELL,
P. CARRINGTON, JOS. JONES.

To the Honourable the Virginia Delegates in Congress.

FREDERICK COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

In Committee for the Lower District of Frederick County, }
June 17, 1776. }

Present: Jonathan Wilson, Esq., (in the Chair,) Edward Burgess, Robert Owen, Thomas Cramphin, Jun., Charles G. Griffith, Zadock Magruder, Samuel W. Magruder, Gerard Briscoe, Archibald Orme, Allen Bowie, Thomas S. Wootton.

Resolved, unanimously, That our sole and primary intention in appointing Delegates to meet in Convention was, to regulate the mode of opposition necessary to be made by us internally against the arbitrary machinations of the British Ministry, and to appoint Delegates to meet our sister Colonies in Congress, to recommend such measures as, by a sense of the majority of the Colonies, would best secure the natural and inherent rights of the people generally.

Resolved, unanimously, That all just and legal Government was instituted for the ease and convenience of the People, and that the People have the indubitable right to reform or abolish a Government which may appear to them insufficient for the exigency of their affairs.

Resolved, unanimously, That what may be recommended by a majority of the Congress, equally delegated by the people of the United Colonies, we will, at the hazard of our lives and fortunes, support and maintain; and that every resolution of Convention tending to separate this Province from a majority of the Colonies, without the consent of the people, is destructive to our internal safety, and big with public ruin.

Resolved, unanimously, That as a knowledge of the conduct of the Representative is the constituent's only principle and permanent security, we claim the right of being fully informed therein, unless in the secret operations of war; and that we shall ever hold the Representative amenable to that body from whom he derives his authority.

Resolved, unanimously, That the Legislative, Judicative, Executive, and Military powers, ought to be separate, and that in all countries where the power to make laws and the power to enforce such laws is vested in one man, or in one body of men, a tyranny is established.

Resolved, unanimously, That these Resolutions be immediately printed in the Maryland Gazette.

Signed per order:

SIMON NICHOLLS, Clerk.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Committee, Baltimore, June 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Information having been given to this Committee by Mr. Lux, that you had application by letter from Dr. Stevenson that two casks of gunpowder were taken from him, for which he never had been paid, this Committee desire that you will please to transmit them a copy of said letter that they may have an opportunity of answering the charge. They have further to inform you that an application has been made by Dr. Stevenson for a barrel of gunpowder, which he imported from Philadelphia, and was received into the publick store; but as he has neither signed the Association nor enrolment, he stands in the light of an enemy to America, and therefore it would be dangerous to trust so much powder in his hands; they therefore desire your orders therein.

We are, gentlemen, your most humble servants,

SAMUEL PURVIANCE, Jun., Chairman.

WILLIAM LUX, J. GRIEST,

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN VANBIBBER.

[No. 25.]

Annapolis, June 17, 1776.

SIR: By the resolves of the Convention, one thousand pounds were appropriated for the building of one or more Powder-Mills. Five hundred pounds have been already drawn by a gentleman in Charles County, named Hanson, upon his giving bond with security to erect a Powder-Mill; there remain five hundred pounds unappropriated, which you may have an order for on complying with the terms prescribed by the Convention. We are, &c.

To Captain Isaac Vanbibber, Baltimore-town.

P. S. If any change be necessary about repairing the vessels, application must be made to the Convention; we cannot give license to the owners themselves to repair, or oblige them so to do.

NEW-YORK DELEGATES TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, June 17, 1776.

SIR: We were honoured by your favours of the 11th inst. A resolution of Congress has passed agreeable to your intention, restraining the exportation of salt beef and pork from any of these Colonies, under the limitations mentioned in your resolve.

We received great pleasure from knowing the sentiments of the honourable the Convention relative to the important subject on which we thought it our duty to ask their opinion. We are very happy in having it in our power to assure them that we have hitherto taken no steps inconsistent with their intention, as expressed in their letter, by which we shall be careful to regulate our future conduct.

We remain, sir, with the greatest respect, your and the Convention's most obedient and humble servants,

FRANCIS LEWIS, WILLIAM FLOYD,
R. H. LIVINGSTON, HENRY WISNER.
JOHN ALSOP,

To the Honourable Nathaniel Woodhull, President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, June 17, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you by express yesterday, and enclosed you all the resolutions of Congress to that time; since which nothing has occurred. This will be handed to you by Captain Bradford, who has in charge the money destined for the Army in Canada—three boxes containing twenty-one thousand seven hundred and twenty-five and a half silver dollars, and three boxes containing one hundred and eighty-seven thousand paper dollars. I am to request you will please to discharge the Philadelphia guard, and order a fresh guard to proceed with the money to General Schuyler, or the Paymaster, Mr. Trumbull, in such manner as you shall judge best, and either in the same wagon or another, as you shall direct. Please to forward by the officer of the guard the enclosed letter.

I have the honour to be, sir, your very humble servant,
JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Philadelphia, June 17, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have invoice of three boxes of silver dollars, containing 21,725½ dollars; also, invoice of three boxes, containing 187,000 paper dollars, which I wish safe to hand, for the use of the Army in Canada; more hard money will soon follow, and in a few days shall send on some more paper money. I wish soon to hear a more favourable account of our affairs in Canada.

In a few days I shall write you, and enclose you the resolutions of Congress, which are almost perfected, and when executed I think will much promote the general good. You shall have them as early as possible after they are complete.

I am, in great haste, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Schuyler. In his absence, to Mr. Trumbull, Deputy Paymaster-General, or to Commander-in-Chief in Canada.

PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 18, 1776.]

Philadelphia, June 17, 1776.

SIR: An application has been made to this Board by a number of persons, prisoners on board the Liverpool, to negotiate their exchange for the seamen who belonged to the King's ships, and are now prisoners in this city. The persons who apply for this exchange are either such as have been taken on board merchant ships, or boats that ply in the river and bay. This Committee think that able seamen, taken on board the King's ships, are very improper to be exchanged for such persons as make this application; and as the enemy are at this time greatly distressed for seamen, an exchange would be prejudicial to the general service. This Committee would be glad to have the sentiments of Congress upon this matter as soon as possible.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN NIXON, Chairman.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

TO THE PRIVATES OF THE SEVERAL BATTALIONS OF MILITARY ASSOCIATORS IN THE PROVINCE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

GENTLEMEN: The honourable Congress having resolved upon a flying camp of ten thousand men, for the protection of our Province and Maryland, viz: six thousand for this Province, six hundred for the lower Counties, and three thousand four hundred for Maryland, and that Maryland should appoint one, and this Colony two Brigadiers-General: the Committee of Privates of the Associators of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, considering that an appointment made by any body of men besides the Associators would not be perfectly satisfactory; and being further convinced that it was their right to make the appointment, and that the security of their liberties depended greatly on the exercise of this right, and being desirous of having it enjoyed equally by all, have agreed with the Board of Officers to call a Provincial meeting of Associators, consisting of two Privates and two Officers from each Battalion, elected by the said Battalions, for the purpose of choosing said Generals, to meet in Lancaster, on Thursday, the 4th of July. We attended particularly to the season of the year, and the difficulty of your attending so near harvest; but yet, as the matter was very important, and we were unwilling to do anything without consulting all, and giving them an equal opportunity with ourselves of exercising their right, we adopted this measure. We, therefore, were persuaded, that freemen, associated for the defence of their rights, would overlook every difficulty attending a perfect and free exercise of it. Our Assembly (we mean such of its members as are not quite with us) wished to have the appointment, but we prepared the following Protest against it, as the whole of our success depends on a proper choice. We trust you will see it in the same important light with us, and send the delegation above-mentioned, that every Battalion in the Province may have a perfectly equal representation.

If said conference should unite in some test to be taken by the Associators, that we might know who to depend on, it might be well. We wish to take nothing upon ourselves, but being the advance-guard, our duty requires that we give the alarm. We are, gentlemen, &c.

Signed by order of the Committee of Privates:

SAMUEL SIMPSON, President.

To the Honourable the Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA:

The Protest of the Committee of the Privates of the Military Association belonging to the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA, respectfully sheweth:

That this Committee, understanding that the honourable Congress has recommended to this Colony to appoint two Brigadiers-General to command the Associators of this Province, do protest against any appointment of said Brigadiers-General to be made by this House:

First. Because there is no regular Militia law which obliges the constituents of this House to become Associators, or to find persons in their room, if they decline associating; and therefore the Association is not properly Provincial, and of consequence this House is not properly constituted to be competent to the business, nor can the appointment come before them as a Provincial representation.

Second. Because many of the Associators have been excluded by this very House from voting for the members now composing it, though this House was applied to on their behalf, and therefore they are not represented in this House.

Third. Because the Counties which have the greatest number of Associators have not a proportional representation, and therefore cannot be considered as having an equal voice in the nomination.

Fourth. Because the Association has been voluntary, and this House choosing, by their Resolutions respecting it, that it should remain so, therefore cannot interfere, nor in anywise, consistent with decency, attempt to impose officers upon us not of our own choosing.

Fifth. Because many members of this House are the representatives of persons in religious profession, like themselves, totally averse to military defence, and therefore cannot be called the representatives of Associators; nor do we wish to interfere so much with their religious sentiments as to reduce them to the necessity of quitting their seats or joining in the nomination.

Sixth. Because it is well known that there are men in this House who have, ever since our opposition to Great Britain, refused to concur in any measure necessary for defence; and we have reason to fear that some are disposed to break the Union of the Colonies, and submit to the tyranny of Great Britain.

Seventh. Because this House is under no oaths of fidelity to their constituents, by which they would be bound to consult their interests; nor are they proper persons to make the oaths which are to bind themselves.

Eighth. Because, though the members of this House, who were under oaths of allegiance to the Crown, consider themselves absolved therefrom, and have admitted the new elected members to their seats without taking oaths, thereby dissolving the old Constitution, and finally abolishing the Charter; yet effectual care is taken to head the several pages of their Resolves, as usual, with "Votes of Assembly. John Penn, Esq., Governour," without the assent of the people for this purpose. These things wear such a face of design as renders the intentions of this House suspicious; and we think a House still confessing the King's representative their Governour, cannot safely be trusted with the appointment of Generals to command us, lest it would give us such as would enable a certain party to make up with the enemy at the expense of our lives and liberties.

Ninth. Because a House which showed itself so unfriendly to the Association at a time when so much depended upon their exertions, as, after frequent and repeated applications for justice, to impose no more than three shillings and six pence fine on Non-Associators for every day of general muster, and that in so lax a manner that it is a question whether it will ever be collected, is not to be trusted with the appointment of Generals to command us, lest they should show as little regard to our interest in the one case as in the other.

Tenth. Because as this House was chosen by those only who were acknowledged the liege subjects of George our enemy, and derived their sole right of electing this House from that very circumstance, we conceive that the moment they undertook to set aside this allegiance, they, by that very act, destroyed the only principle on which they sat as Representatives, and therefore they are not a House on the principles on which they were elected; and having derived no new authority from the people, freed from such allegiance, they are a representative body on no one principle whatever, and therefore can in no manner undertake to do the business of Representatives further than the people indulge them, without usurping authority and acting arbitrarily.

Eleventh. Because the Associators have the right of appointing officers to command them, and mean ever to retain it.

We, therefore, protest against, and declare we will not submit to, any appointment of General Officers to command us which this House may think proper to go into.

Nevertheless, that the Resolve of Congress may be fully complied with, we have taken the proper steps to have a number of Associators, Representatives from every Battalion in the Province, collected together as soon as possible, to proceed to the choice of said Brigadiers-General, under whom we doubt not but the Associators will serve with cheerfulness; and they, being the officers of their choice, will have the confidence of the Associators.

Signed by order of the Committee of Privates:

SAMUEL SIMPSON, President.

To the Honourable the House of Representatives of the Freemen of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Assembly met :

The Protest of the Board of Officers of the Five Battalions of the City and Liberties of PHILADELPHIA, respectfully sheweth :

That this Board address you by the title heretofore used to the honourable House of Assembly, in order to avoid the least appearance of disrespect to the honourable Members now sitting. That this Board has received information that the honourable Congress of the United Colonies has recommended to this Colony to appoint two Brigadiers General, to command the Associators of this Province; and we, apprehending that this House may be induced to take upon them to nominate and appoint the said Brigadiers-General without having the authority of the Associators for that purpose, and further apprehending that any nomination made by this honourable House will not give satisfaction to the Associators of the Province, and consequently that they will not act under them,—for these, and other weighty and important considerations, this Board do hereby protest against this honourable House making, or attempting to make, the said appointments.

Signed by order :

DANIEL ROBERDEAU, President.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, June 17, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to inform Congress that General Wooster has repaired to Head-Quarters in obedience to their resolve transmitted him; and shall be extremely glad if they will give me such further directions about him as they may conceive necessary. He is desirous of seeing his family in Connecticut, as I am informed, having been a good while from it. I shall await their instructions as to his future employment.

I am, sir, with sentiments of much esteem, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the President of Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 18, 1776.]

New-York, June 17, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed came to my hands as a private letter from General Sullivan. As a private letter, I lay it before Congress. The tendency (for it requires no explanation) will account for the contrast between it and the letter of General Arnold.

That the former is aiming at the command in Canada is obvious; whether he merits it or not, is a matter to be considered; and that it may be considered with propriety, I think it my duty to observe, as of my own knowledge, that he is active, spirited, and zealously attached to the cause. That he does not want abilities, many members of Congress, as well as myself, can testify; but he has his wants, and he has his foibles. The latter are manifested in a little tincture of vanity, and in an over-desire of being popular, which now and then leads him into some embarrassments. His wants are common to us all—the want of experience to move upon a large scale; for the limited and contracted knowledge which any of us have in military matters, stand in very little stead, and is greatly overbalanced by sound judgment, and some knowledge of men and books, especially when accompanied by an enterprising genius, which I must do General Sullivan the justice to say I think he possesses. But as the security of Canada is of the last importance to the well-being of these Colonies, I should like to know the sentiments of Congress respecting the nomination of any officer to that command. The character I have drawn of General Sullivan is just, according to my ideas of him. Congress will be pleased, therefore, to determine upon the propriety of continuing him in Canada, or sending another, as they shall see fit. Whether General Sullivan knew of the promotion of General Gates, (at the time of his writing,) and that he had quitted the department he left him in when he marched his brigade from hence to Canada, I cannot undertake to say, nor can I determine whether his wish to be recalled would be changed by it if he did. I shall add no more than my respectful compliments to Congress, and that I have the honour to be, with every sentiment of regard and esteem, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the President of Congress.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sorel, June 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: After having, as I think, given you a just representation of our affairs in Canada, which I dare say every person here will witness to, I must beg you to excuse my giving you the trouble of one petition, which is, that if it be possible for your Excellency or General Lee to come here, that it might be done, though I suppose General Lee cannot be spared from where he is. I am well persuaded that Canada would be ours from the moment of your Excellency's arrival; but in case neither of you can come to take command, I beg that, if any other officer is sent to take it, I may have leave to return, as I am well convinced that the same disorder and confusion which has almost ruined our Army here would again take place, and complete its destruction, which I should not wish to see. This confusion and disorder your Excellency discovered in some degree on your arrival at Cambridge. And if your Excellency or General Lee cannot come to take the command, we that are on the spot will undertake to keep possession of the ground we have, and keep advancing our posts till we have, by the assistance of Heaven, completed the wishes of Congress and fulfilled the desires of your Excellency.

I have the honour to be, may it please your Excellency, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

New-York, June 17, 1776.

SIR: I was this evening honoured with yours of the 15th instant, and it is with no small degree of pain that I am under the necessity of informing you it is out of my power at this time to comply with the request made by your honourable body. The many important works carrying on for the defence of this place, against which there is the highest probability of an attack being made in a little time, will not allow me to spare from hence any person having the least skill in the business of an Engineer; nor have I but one on whose judgment I would wish to depend in laying out any work of the least consequence. Congress well know my wants in this instance, and several of my late letters to them have pressed the appointment of gentlemen qualified for the business. Added to this, on account of the deficiency, I have not been able to improve or secure two posts in the Highlands, esteemed of the utmost importance to prevent the enemy passing up the North River, and getting into the interior parts of this Colony, should our attempts to stop them here prove ineffectual. But I beg you to be assured, sir, and to inform the Committee, as soon as it is in my power I shall, with infinite pleasure, direct a person to attend them for two or three days, if the service will not admit of a longer absence, in order to trace out such works and plans for carrying them on as shall appear necessary; and wishing you to ascribe my non-compliance to want of ability, and not inclination, to perform your request, I have the honour, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To George Clymer, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 18, 1776.]

New-York, June 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have found it necessary to send to Philadelphia to purchase, and have there purchased, twenty thousand barrels of flour for the supply of the Army in and near this place and that in Canada, which it seems by General Schuyler's last letters cannot be subsisted by the quantity to be had in that country; and on that information

General Washington has ordered me to ship flour from hence to Albany, which I am now doing. The demand here being so much increased, and finding I could get that article from Philadelphia delivered here something cheaper than I could purchase here even now, thought myself justified in taking the measure; and as it cannot be effected without cash, and the chest here not being over-supplied, I have taken the liberty to draw on you, of this date, in favour of Mr. Matthew Irwin, of Philadelphia, for sixty thousand dollars, payable at four days' sight, which, I hope, you will honour with payment, and have charged to me accordingly.

I have likewise desired Mr. Irwin to purchase me what pork he can in Philadelphia. If he can purchase any, I shall have occasion to draw on you in his favour for a further sum, which I shall do unless I am forbid by return of the post. I wish your direction whether I may or may not draw on you from time to time for such sums as I may want to use in Philadelphia for necessaries for the Army.

I am, dear sir, with great esteem and respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Forces:

The Memorial of GARRET ROORBACK, of the City of New-York, humbly sheweth:

That on the 18th day of January last, your Memorialist was appointed by the Committee of Safety in the City of New-York to the office of Barrackmaster, for the said City and County.

That he has acted in that capacity ever since, in subordination to the Barrackmaster-General; and flattered himself that he had fully discharged the duty of his office, and given general satisfaction.

That your Memorialist, however, has been so unhappy as to find that complaints respecting his conduct have been made to Colonel Moylan, the present Quartermaster-General, who has forbid him to act any longer as Barrackmaster as aforesaid.

That your Memorialist has not been informed of the particulars of the charge against him, and is apprehensive that some evil-minded person or persons, who are not friendly to the cause of American freedom, and who are enemies to your Memorialist, are the authors of this charge, with a view to deprive him of his office.

That your Memorialist, being conscious that he has executed the duty of his office to the utmost of his ability, is desirous that he may be made acquainted with the nature of the accusation against him, and that some proof may be given to convict him of the same.

Your Memorialist therefore humbly prays that your Excellency will be pleased to order that, before another is appointed in his stead to the office he now enjoys, he may have an opportunity of defending himself against an accusation which he is convinced is ill founded and unjust.

GARRET ROORBACK.

New-York, June 17, 1776.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, June 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Bennett arrived at eight last night, and delivered me your Excellency's favour of the 13th ultimo.

I was apprehensive that few intrenching tools could be spared from New-York, and therefore I employed all the blacksmiths here in making what they could, and have written to the Committee of Tryon County (on the 15th instant) to collect all they could as soon as possible at the German Flats; by these means I hope to procure a considerable number.

Your Excellency's letter to General Sullivan I have sent under cover of one of mine, in which I have transcribed that part of yours to me which relates to Bedel's and Butterfield's conduct, and the appointment of Courts-Martial, and have observed that as General Montgomery imagined that he could not, without my consent, order punishment to be inflicted when offenders were capitally convicted, that I had, agreeable to his request, authorized him to do it, conceiving that I should be justified in delegating that power, as the delay which would be occasioned by waiting for my consent might prove prejudicial to the service, and that I requested he would also proceed to order execution in such cases, unless he thought proper to pardon. It would we well, however, as I conceive, to obviate any difficulties that might arise, that he should have your Excellency's orders on the subject.

I am happy that I have anticipated your Excellency's advice to convene the Indians, of which I informed your Excellency in mine of the 11th instant, and in that of the 15th, which you will receive by this conveyance, enclosing the resolutions of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs, of the 13th instant. Mr. Douw and Mr. Edwards have requested me to prepare a speech; part of which I have drafted, and as soon as completed, which I hope will be in a day or two, I shall do myself the honour to forward it to you. I am quite in sentiment with your Excellency that it will be proper to omit saying anything about the time of taking post at Fort Stanwix, but we are under a necessity of informing the Indians that we intend doing it. No post that we can possess between the German Flats and Fort Stanwix can prevent the enemy from intercepting any convoys going to the latter, unless they are sufficiently strong to make effectual resistance; but to guard against this evil, I propose to send immediately a sufficient supply of provisions for some months, and have already procured forty-seven batteaus for that purpose.

The German Flats is so respectable a settlement, and the country about the Canajoharie Falls below it now so well inhabited, that I do not apprehend any attempts will be made to intercept our provisions, &c., at that place. It will be proper, however, to have a small picket fort on the western part of the German Flats, as a place of rendezvous for the Militia, in case any attempt should be made on the fort intended to be built near to where Fort Stanwix formerly stood. The Oneidas, who live only twenty-four miles from that place, and I believe are very sincerely attached to us, will, I doubt not, give us the most early intelligence of the motions of the enemy in that quarter; and a body of Militia may be sent up whenever there may be occasion.

The spot where Ticonderoga now stands was, I conceive, very judiciously occupied by the French, because it commanded both the passes by water into these Colonies, and afforded an easy access to any reinforcements they might choose to send up, as well as a safe retreat whenever they might be under the necessity of making one. But although it equally commands, now in our possession, the waters which lead to this part of the country, yet it is so situated that, if invested by an army, the intercourse with the fort by Lake George is immediately cut off. Nor can any attempt be made to raise a siege unless such a number of boats were always kept at the south end of Lake George as would be sufficient to convey a superior force at one embarkation across Lake George, and even then many difficult passes must be carried before an enemy need retire. If a fortress was erected on the east side of Lake Champlain, nearly opposite to Ticonderoga, it would equally command both communications, with this advantage, that the Militia of the Northern Colonies are more at hand for immediate succour, may all march by land to the fort, and attempt to raise a siege, whilst their provisions may be conveyed by Wood Creek, the waters of which are navigable to within thirteen miles of Fort Edward. But, as I have already observed in mine of the 15th, we have no men, and, I may add, no implements, even to put Ticonderoga in a state of defence.

Enclose your Excellency copy of a letter from Colonel Wynkoop, and another from my assistant Secretary at Fort George; the return of the garrison mentioned in the latter did not come to hand. I suppose it was forgotten to be enclosed.

The scandalous desertion which prevails in our Army causes very disagreeable reflections, especially as, through the mistaken lenity of the officers, that inadequate punishment which our military code permits to be inflicted, seldom is.

Congress imagined that two regiments could be raised for this campaign's service out of the corps that served last winter in Canada. I very early gave them my opinion that it was impracticable. I wish I had been mistaken. In obedience to their commands, I suggested a plan for the appointment of the officers. It was disapproved of in Canada.

I then left it to be settled by General Wooster and the officers there. Lieutenant-Colonel Elmore (who had been a Major last year, and was promoted to a Lieutenant-Colonelcy in a regiment commanded by General Wooster, and raised for the winter service, of the raising of which corps I never had any information officially given me) was appointed by General Wooster Colonel to one of the two intended regiments; Nicolson was the other; and both are come away from Canada, and, if common fame says true, (for I have no other information,) not an officer or man of either is left in Canada, nor do I know that they have any men, excepting about nineteen or twenty, lately gone to Ticonderoga, of a Captain Cochran's Company, which is the mighty work of several recruiting officers of Elmore's Regiment, who have had large sums advanced them, so early as the month of February, for the recruiting service.

Some more of the officers have applied to me for money to recruit; but as I neither knew them, nor by whose leave they came from Canada, I did not choose to risk any more. I shall, however, write to Colonel Elmore and Colonel Nicolson to repair to this place, and take their orders, not that I expect any considerable good will result from it; perhaps it would be better to break both regiments, and reappoint such of the officers as are proper to be employed, and cause them to enlist men during the war.

I am happy that your Excellency had not ordered pay to any officers from Canada. The Paymaster-General here has orders to settle with them; and notwithstanding all the care that both he and I have been able to take, some have drawn double pay, and others are gone off without accounting for moneys they had received from General Montgomery. Other officers, Committees, &c., one in particular, a Captain Stewart, of Easton's Regiment, who I cannot get into my possession, has defrauded the publick, as I am informed, of near two hundred pounds, although he swore to his pay-roll.

I have been under the necessity, to prevent clamour, of granting warrants to persons who had never been returned to me as officers serving in Canada, but who I was convinced had served as such. It was very irregular in me, but occasioned by the negligence of never deigning to send me a return from, or letting me know what was doing in, Canada. Much money to the publick, and much trouble would be saved, and a great deal of fraud would be prevented, if Regimental Paymasters were appointed, especially where troops are so continually on the move as they are to the northward.

I had got thus far, when I was honoured with your Excellency's of the 14th instant. It is certain that what I intended for a requisition of cannon I find, on reperusal, was not sufficiently explicit. I hope, however, that I have not often given cause for the observation, and I hope some allowance will be made on account of the infinite variety of business I am driven to attend to.

I think eight pieces of cannon and carriages will do—four nine-pounders and as many of six, with one hundred rounds to each, with the necessary implements, which I cannot more particularly specify, as I have not one artilleryman here. A dozen Artillerymen will also be wanted. These men and articles your Excellency will please to order up.

I am this moment informed that about two tons of powder is at Mr. Livingston's Mill, which I will instantly send for. I believe it will therefore be needless to send any for the western service, but a considerable quantity is wanted in Canada; but as I have no return from thence, I cannot possibly specify the quantity. I must also beg your Excellency to order up two tons of lead, either in ball or staves, as most convenient.

I shall immediately write to the different Governments who are to send Militia, agreeable to your Excellency's orders, and send the route I would wish them to take.

My disorder has again attacked me severely, and I begin to fear that it will again confine me to my room. I have been in bed most part of the afternoon, which has occasioned my detaining Bennett.

I am, with the most sincere regard, dear sir, your Excellency's obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. Bennett has now received ten dollars on account. Enclose an extract of a letter just received from Fort George, with a return of provisions forwarded from thence.

CAPTAIN WYNKOOP TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Ticonderoga, June 10, 1776.

SIR: Your favours of the 6th and 8th instant I have this moment only received. The letter the General mentions, I have sent with Lieutenant Stockwell, of Captain O'Hara's Company, to Skenesborough, where I expected he would find the General; we have since understood by some of the men that returned, that the letters were sent after the General by one of the men that went with the Lieutenant.

Of the prisoners that came here from St. Johns, of Colonel Bedel's Regiment, there are only fifteen men left, except a few in the hospital; the rest have all deserted. Nineteen of Colonel Paterson's Regiment deserted last night. I have understood this morning only that the deserters go across about three miles from this place, and go by the way of No. 4. The garrison at present is so weakly manned, that I could spare no men to send after them. I have just now ordered an officer, with a party of men, to fetch the boat away from the fellow who sets the deserters across.

The row-galley arrived here yesterday, the Captain of which brought me a letter from the Commodore, who writes me that the commanding officer at St. Johns ordered the row-galley off to Ticonderoga, contrary to the General's orders, and has ordered the Captain to take in salt, belonging to one Mrs. Tucker, who is landed at Crown Point, as the Captain tells me. There are one hundred and fifty bushels of salt, which I have ordered, and is now in store, and shall wait your Honour's order what must be done with it. The Commodore's letter is dated the 7th instant; he writes me that our Army is gone down to Point Deschambault, where they mean to make a stand.

I am, your Honour's very humble servant,

CORNELIUS WYNKOOP.

To Major-General Philip Schuyler, Esq.

JOHN LANSING, JUN., ASSISTANT SECRETARY, ETC., TO CAPTAIN VARICK.—EXTRACT.

Fort George, June 13, 1776.

The orders to Stevens's and Downes's Companies, to go off for Canada, I received on Tuesday last. On Wednesday, Colonel Gansevoort communicated them to the officers, with directions to embark immediately, who pretended that they wanted a day to prepare themselves, and solicited very ardently to have their departure delayed till the subsequent day; Colonel Gansevoort at last complied with their request. Yesterday morning upon calling the rolls, upwards of twenty were found to have deserted, the rest went off with evident reluctance. Pray communicate this to the General.

A true copy. Attest:

RICHARD VARICK,
Secretary to Major-Gen. Schuyler.

JOHN LANSING, JUN., TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Fort George, June 14, 1776.

SIR: By the enclosed memorandum, you will perceive that seven hundred and eighty barrels of flour and eighty-four of pork have been forwarded since your departure; seventy-seven of the former and twelve of the latter remain still at this post.

Colonel Gansevoort has sent off so many of his men to Ticonderoga with provisions, that he says he cannot immediately comply with your order with respect to carrying the batteaus across the Lake. He proposes to forward as many to-morrow morning as possible. The Colonel has ordered a scouting party, consisting of four officers and three privates.

Should the enemy pay a visit at this post, they must inevitably succeed in destroying all the stores and batteaus which remain here, as the garrison is in no condition to prevent it. Enclose a return of the garrison.

By Colonel Gansevoort's desire, I have sent three casks of nails to Albany, with directions to the wagoner to deliver them to Mr. Livingston.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most humble servant,

JOHN LANSING, JUN.

To the Honourable General Schuyler.

P. S. Forty barrels of pork are arrived since writing the above.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, June 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The liberty the Commissioners of Indian Affairs have taken in the enclosed resolutions [of June 13] needs an apology. They were really at a loss how to accomplish the intentions of Congress without your aid, but, assured of your zeal and attention to the common cause, they hoped your Honour would excuse their freedom. I shall be happy to be honoured with a line, conveying to me your opinion on the subject of the enclosed, and whether you think the company can be speedily raised.

By a letter from General Sullivan of the 6th instant, our affairs in Canada have begun to regain a more favourable aspect. May gracious Heaven indulgently smile on our future operations, and baffle the most nefarious intentions of our inveterate foes, is my most fervent wish.

General Washington has ordered me to send your Honour a route by which I might wish the two battalions of Militia from your Colony destined for Canada should march. I have ordered all the battalions out of Lake George to Ticonderoga, from whence they will be conveyed to Skenesborough, to which place I wish the battalions to march by the most direct road, advising me by express some days before they begin the march, that I may take measures accordingly. If they have any baggage it must be sent with a small guard by this place to Fort George, in such time as to arrive at Ticonderoga before the troops, and should therefore set out five days before the troops.

Be pleased to forward the enclosed by express as directed.

I am, with sentiments of respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Albany, June 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I enclose you a letter from his Excellency General Washington, which arrived last night. Yours to him of the 5th and 6th had not yet come to hand, as it left this on the 12th at night.

Major Sherburne having informed me that it was your request that the prisoners should be sent back, I immediately gave the orders; but as I yesterday received letters from the commanding officers at Ticonderoga and Fort George that numbers of them had deserted, I suspect that very few will join you. Fifteen, fit for duty, of Bedel's, were only left at the former place on the 10th instant, and twenty of Burrel's went off in a body from Fort George a few days ago, and are not yet apprehended.

The following is an extract of his Excellency's letter to me of the 13th instant:

"If the account of Colonel Bedel's and Major Butterfield's conduct be true, they have certainly acted a part deserving the most exemplary notice. I hope you will take proper measures, and have good courts appointed, to bring them, and every other officer that has been or shall be guilty of misconduct, to trial, that they may be punished according to their offences. Our misfortunes at the Cedars were occasioned, it is said, entirely by their base and cowardly behaviour, and cannot be ascribed to any other cause."

General Montgomery, on a similar occasion, conceived that he was not authorized to order the sentence of a General Court-Martial to be put into execution, where any one was capitally convicted. The Department being under my command, I accordingly sent him an order to do it whenever he should think it necessary. General Wooster had the like order. I conceived that I should be justified in delegating that power, especially as delay in executions, when immediate examples may be necessary, may have dangerous consequences.

I do therefore request, that if any officer or soldier in Canada should be capitally convicted, that you will issue warrants to the proper officer for carrying the sentence into execution, unless you should judge it proper to extend mercy. But if any doubts arise in your mind on the propriety of doing this, you will please to transmit me all the proceedings of the Court-Martial, that, being enabled to judge, I may give the necessary orders.

Intelligence from various quarters seem to confirm the report that the French King has protested against the sending foreign troops to America. We ought not, however, to make any dependance on it, lest it should be thrown out to make us remiss in our defensive preparations. I am anxious to learn the events of the expedition under the command of General Thompson. I hope it will be a happy one. Adieu, my dear General.

I am, very truly and with much esteem, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To General Sullivan.

MEETING OF INHABITANTS OF HARTFORD.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of New-Hartford, legally convened on the 18th day of June, 1776:

Whereas of late there has been an extravagant advance on West-India goods, Rum in particular: It is resolved by said inhabitants, That they will not purchase any West-India Rum at a higher price than four shillings and six pence per gallon by the hogshead, and four shillings and nine pence per gallon by the barrel, and six shillings per single gallon; and they will not purchase any New-England Rum at a higher price than three shillings and three pence per gallon by the hogshead, or three shillings per gallon by the barrel, and four shillings and three pence per gallon. And also, resolved by said inhabitants, that the choice of the Delegates for the Continental Congress is vested in the freemen.

Test:

JOSEPH MERRELL,

Second Clerk of said meeting.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Hartford, June 17, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: We cannot but express our uneasiness, disappointment, and surprise, at the late resolution of Congress for the removal of the cannon from New-London. When we had—relying upon the faith of that respectable body, in consequence of their former resolution, made upon mature deliberation, as we imagined, and upon a full hearing and knowledge of the circumstances and importance of that port, not only to this Colony in particular, but to the Continent in general—proceeded to lay out a large and expensive plan of fortifications, got the works in considerable forwardness, provided carriages, mounted cannon, and all going on with the utmost despatch, for the purpose of making an effectual defence; now to be thus at once so suddenly, unexpectedly, and without a hearing, stripped naked and left defenceless, without a possibility of present relief, as must inevitably be the case if that number of cannon be taken from us, we think extremely hard and unaccountable, and flatter ourselves that, upon a reconsideration of the matter, the second resolve will be altered and made more consonant to the first, especially when we consider no Colony has exerted itself more in the common cause, and none received less assistance from the Continent. We have never had any Continental troops employed for our internal defence, neither has the Continent heretofore afforded us any assistance towards fortifying our sea-ports, which has not been the case with respect to most, if not all the other Colonies.

We do place the greatest confidence in, have the highest esteem for, and pay the utmost deference to, all the resolves of your respectable body. But suffer us, as it becomes freemen ever jealous of their rights and zealous for their defence, to query, why we are to have our principal port thus stripped and left defenceless?—a port which is confessedly the key of this Colony, and of the Sound, and the best asylum for the Navy, and which, if taken possession of by our enemies, will inevitably stop all communication by water with New-York and elsewhere.

Again, we beg leave to query, why such great requisitions are made upon us from every quarter for men so far beyond our quotas and abilities? and what a situation shall we be in, thus exhausted of our arms, cannon, and men, in case our enemies should make inroads upon our coasts? and how is it possible for us, thus exhausted, to afford those supplies of provisions necessary for the support of our armies, whose dependance, therefore, especially of the meat kind, has been almost wholly on this Colony? However, notwithstanding all these embarrassments under which we labour, and the danger we are exposed to, we are willing to exert every nerve to the utmost of our power. We are raising troops with all possible expedition, agreeable to the requisitions made; and upon the importunity and assiduity of those good gentlemen sent from Philadelphia for that purpose, have ordered six of the heaviest cannon to be delivered them, which we wish safe to hand. The remainder of them we found it absolutely necessary to retain until the further order of Congress can be obtained thereon; and doubt not but, upon a review of the necessity, importance, and justice of the measure, it will meet with your approbation, and the first order of Congress, so far as it respects the remaining cannon, will be confirmed, and they suffered to remain.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable President Hancock.

P. S. Beg leave to add, that this unexpectedly large requisition, at this difficult and busy season of the year, in addition to the late one for Boston, (in which we were obliged to give an additional premium of forty shillings per man,) has put us to the necessity of giving large encouragements, by way of bounty, over and above the Continental pay, six pounds, lawful money, per man, for the Northern Department, and three pounds, lawful money, per man, for those destined for New-York, otherwise our Militia will not be induced to engage for the term requested, which is much beyond any idea we had conceived of the Militia being drawn out for, which our laws relating to alarms will not warrant; we are obliged to raise them as enlisted soldiers for the ensuing campaign, and until winter obliges them to retire, when they can earn little or nothing at home. Trust, therefore, it will be thought reasonable and just that this Colony be considered and compensated for this extraordinary and necessary expense, incurred as aforesaid.

Yours, ut antea.

J. TRUMBULL.

MARY WOOSTER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-Haven, June 17, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: Some time since I wrote to your Honour, soliciting the favour of having the Naval office for the port of New-Haven continued in General Wooster's hands.

I would now inform your Honour that a letter from the General gives us to understand that he is at present in Philadelphia, and will be in this Colony in a few days. I would therefore ask your Honour to suspend bestowing the above favour to any other person until the General shall be able to wait on your Honour in person, and give such sureties as the law requires for the faithful discharge of the trust, if he should be honoured with it.

I am, respectfully, your Honour's obedient servant,

MARY WOOSTER.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN BIDDLE.

Providence, June 17, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Warner comes down and Mr. Brown. I think it will be best for you to order Mr. Darne to act as Lieutenant in the room of Mr. Josiah, and for Mr. Brown to act as Master; but I think it will be prudent not to give a commission or warrant till we hear further from Mr. Josiah, for if he returns he must have his old berth.

I am your friend,

E. HOPKINS.

To Nicholas Biddle, Esquire, Commander of the Andrew Doria.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN THE COLONY TRAIN AT NANTASKET, UNDER THE COMMAND OF COL. CRAFTS, TO HIS FRIEND IN BOSTON, DATED JUNE 17, 1776.

MY DEAR FRIEND: I promised to give you a short account of our transactions. We embarked with a part of Colonel Marshall's and Whitney's Regiment late on Thursday evening for the lower harbour, under the command of Major Revere; the whole expedition directed by General Lincoln,—Captain Swan for Pettick's Island, Major Revere and Captain Melville for Nantasket, Captain Balch for Hoff's Neck, Captain Edes for Moonhead, and Captain Burbeck, of the Continental train, with five hundred men for Long-Island Head. The night proved very unfavourable, by being a flat calm. The Continental troops, from their nearness, and the advantage of the tide, reached their destination in season. From our distance, and the tide being against us half the way, we did not arrive here till after sunrise. We expected to have found a breastwork erected; but, to our surprise, not a sod had been raised, and not one hundred men to support us. Tide of flood had been made, and we could not get the vessel near enough to land the cannon. The Major reconnoitred, and found the enemy's vessels all busy. We having no boats proper to unload, were obliged to attempt it in a flat-bottomed one. We got a field-piece on shore, but in getting one of the heavy cannon into the boat, (which was entirely insufficient for so great a weight,) filled, and did not recover it till low water. The other piece, with great difficulty, we got on shore and mounted, which had like to have been too late. The Continental train began firing, and the ships immediately got under way, and anchored opposite the Light-House. Captain Swan arrived at Pettick's Island about two in the morning, expecting, as we did, to find a work ready for his cannon. He went on shore; but, to his great mortification, found not a soul there, nor any work thrown up; and having no small arms on board but such as his officers had, he waited till day-light, and then sailed for the Braintree shore to cover the ordnance he had on board. By order of the General he came down to us, and much assisted in getting up our cannon on Quaker-Hill, and giving them a grand salute. The Commodore lay foremost, and after firing the second shot, he blew up the Light-House, and at our fourth round the whole fleet got under way a second time. Some of our shot, we have no doubt, struck him, as all the boats in the fleet were sent to tow him off. He fired but one shot, but we pelted him till out of reach of our cannon. Thus we have got rid of a nest of scoundrels the very day two years they blocked the harbour up.

On Sunday afternoon, we saw a ship and a brigantine standing in for the Light-House channel, chased and fired upon by four privateers, who frequently exchanged broadsides. We, supposing them to be part of the Scotch fleet, got every man to his quarters, and carried one eighteen-pounder to Point Alderton, on purpose to hinder their retreat, should they get into the road, opposite where we had three eighteen-pounders. About five o'clock the privateers left them and stood for the southward, when the ship and brig crowded all their sail for the channel. Our orders were, not to fire till the last got abreast of us. In tacking, she got aground just under our cannon, when we hailed her to strike to this Colony; they refused, and we fired one eighteen-pounder, loaded with round and canister shot, when she struck, and cried out for quarters. We ordered the boat and Captain on shore, and then fired at the ship; but being quite dark, we supposed she had struck. By this time the privateers came up. A Captain of the Highlanders, in the brigantine's boat, came on shore. Some time after, the ship got under way and stood for the Narrows, when a fine privateer brigantine, commanded by Captain Harding, of New-Haven, (who, we hear, came in this bay on purpose to meet our old friend Darson,) and five schooners, gave chase. The brig came alongside, when a hot engagement ensued, which lasted three-quarters of an hour, when the ship struck. The brigantine floating, took advantage of the confusion, and attempted to follow, both supposing the enemy in possession of Boston. We found them from Scotland, with Highlanders, to join General Howe. The ship had on board one hundred and fourteen, the brigantine seventy-four; the former lost, in the engagement, Major Menzies, eight privates, and thirteen wounded; the latter, one killed by the privateers in the day. The privateer brigantine had three wounded, one supposed mortally.

MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

In the House of Representatives, June 17, 1776.

Whereas many inconveniences and dangerous consequences may, and in all probability will, accrue to this Colony in the course of its defence against its unnatural enemies, if a speedy and effectual prohibition does not take place, of the exportation of Provisions from each and every Port,

Harbour, and place, within the same, to any other Harbour or place without the limits of said Colony: Wherefore it is

Resolved, That from and after the 25th day of this instant, June, no person or persons whatever presume to lade on board any Ship or Vessel within this Colony any kinds or articles of Provision, except Jamaica and pickled Fish, with intent to convey the same out of this Colony by water, until the 10th day of November next, unless the same be laden on board such Ship or Vessel with intent to supply the Fleets and Armies of the United Colonies, or the inhabitants of some part or parts of this Colony.

Provided, always, That any person or persons who have, agreeably to, and in consequence of a resolve of the American Congress for encouraging the importation of warlike Stores into the United Colonies, imported any such Stores, and have not already exported Provisions or other Merchandise to the amount thereof, or may hereafter import such Stores, such person or persons may lade on board any Ship or Vessel, and convey and send out of this Colony to any other place, except the Dominions of Great Britain, any kinds of Provisions to the amount or value of such warlike Stores imported as aforesaid.

Provided, also, That nothing in this Resolve shall be construed to extend to the preventing so much Provisions as, in the judgment of the Committee of Safety, &c., may be sufficient for the persons on board for the intended voyage, being put on board any Ship or other Vessel (not prohibited by any resolve of Congress, or law or resolve of this Colony,) arriving at, trading with, or sailing from any Port, Harbour, or other place in this Colony, such voyage not being prohibited by any resolve of Congress, or law or resolve of this Colony.

And the Committee of Safety, &c., in the several towns and other places within this Colony, are hereby ordered and directed to see that this Resolve be effectually carried into execution.

Sent up for concurrence.

TIMOTHY DANIELSON, Speaker, P. T.

In Council, June 19, 1776. Read, and concurred.

JOHN LOWELL, Deputy Secretary, P. T.

Consented to by the major part of the Council.

Attest: JOHN LOWELL, Deputy Secretary, P. T.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

New-Hampshire, Exeter, June 17, 1776.

SIR: Your Honour's letter of the 30th April past, was duly received, in which you request from this Colony some supply of hard money towards the support of the expedition into Canada. A Committee was immediately appointed for the purpose, who have collected several hundred pounds, which, with what we had in the Treasury, may amount to upwards of one thousand pounds, and shall be sent off without delay to General Schuyler. Agreeable to your directions, we shall draw for the same amount. Mr. John Langdon, we understand, has collected about nine hundred pounds more, all which may go together under proper guard. We shall be mindful to collect what further sums we possibly can, being very sensible of the importance of supporting our strength and credit in Canada, that our troops may not be compelled to evacuate the country.

We are also favoured with your Honour's spirited and animating letter of the 4th of June current, per express, enclosing the resolves of Congress for raising and employing certain quotas of the Militia through the several Colonies, the contents of which letter will, we trust, make due impression upon us. That our affairs are hastening fast to a crisis, and the approaching campaign may, in all probability, determine the fate of America, we are truly apprehensive of, and will cheerfully strain every sinew to maintain and prosecute so just a war on our side till gloriously ended, or perish in the ruins of it.

Our Assembly very readily voted the quota of men assigned for this Colony; but knowing well the difficulty of raising such a body of troops when we have so large a proportion already in the service, and so many employed in husbandry and other occupations absolutely necessary, thought it most prudent to give a generous bounty to induce men to enlist, and accordingly resolved upon giving the bounty of twenty dollars, which it is expected, will speedily effect the business, and we shall lose no time to equip and get them away as fast as they possibly can be raised. We are much concerned to hear the bad accounts from Canada, and to know the melancholy aspect of our affairs there; but we hope, by vigorous exertions, and the favour of Providence, the ensuing campaign, to retrieve our credit, recover lost ground, and obtain the wished-for success.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly, I am, with great esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL LEWIS TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburgh, June 18, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have several letters by express from Major-General Lee. In consequence of which I have ordered two battalions to be got in readiness to march to Cross Creek, in North-Carolina, which, together with the Eighth Battalion, now with the General, very much weakens us, especially as the remaining battalions are stationed to afford a general protection, not knowing by which of the many avenues open to our enemy we may be attacked. I wish, with General Lee, that two battalions may be sent to replace those sent southward. Clinton, after drawing the troops from this quarter, may change his station, and in a few days appear in one of our rivers; indeed, if he aimed a blow at Virginia, the step he has taken is the most likely by which he could promise himself success.

I am, honourable sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ANDREW LEWIS, Brigadier-General.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CUMBERLAND DUGAN.

Annapolis, June 18, 1776.

SIR: You will be pleased to deliver to George Handy, or his order, as many barrels of flour as may be necessary for loading the schooner Three-Sisters, a vessel we have chartered to perform a voyage to the foreign West-Indies. Should there not be enough in your hands, be pleased to apply to Messrs. Lux & Bowley, who have one hundred barrels of flour of ours in their custody. We wish the vessel to be despatched; and are yours, &c.

To Mr. Cumberland Dugan.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, June 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since my last I have nothing further in charge from Congress, except the enclosed resolve to prohibit the exportation of salted beef and pork, which I am to request you will have published in your newspapers as soon as possible.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Convention of New-Hampshire.

(Same to Governour Trumbull, Connecticut, and Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.)

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, June 18, 1776.

SIR: You will see from the enclosed resolves, which I do myself the pleasure of forwarding in obedience to the commands of Congress, that they have bent their whole attention to our affairs in Canada, and have adopted such measures as in their opinion are calculated to place them on a better and more reputable footing for the future.

The most unfortunate death of General Thomas having made a vacancy in that department, and the service requiring an officer of experience and distinction, the Congress have thought proper to appoint General Gates to succeed him. And I am to request you will send him into that Province, to take the command of the forces there, as soon as possible; and that you direct him to view Point-au-Fer, and to order a fortress to be erected there, if he shall think proper.

My opinion on the resolve of the 25th May was well founded; Congress having since determined, as you will find by a resolve herewith transmitted, that you are to employ the Indians wherever you think their services will contribute most to the publick good.

I shall write to the Colonies of New-York, New-Jersey, and Connecticut, to request them to authorize you to call on their Militia, if necessary. My time will not permit me to do it now, as the post will set out directly, and the enclosed resolves were not passed till late yesterday evening.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. A Mustermaster-General, in the room of Mr. Moylan, will be appointed this day or to-morrow, and a Deputy will afterwards be sent into Canada.

I beg you will think of the Eastern Department, with respect to General Officers, when your very important concerns will admit.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO JAMES MEASE.

Philadelphia, June 18, 1776.

SIR: I have it in charge from Congress, to direct that you immediately purchase and forward to Stephen Moylan, Esq., Quartermaster-General, in New-York, as much cloth, suitable for tents, as you can procure. The service requires your immediate attention; you will therefore please to lose no time in executing this order.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To James Mease, Esq., Commissary.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GUNNING BEDFORD.

Philadelphia, June 18, 1776.

SIR: I have it in charge to inform you that the Congress have this day appointed you Mustermaster-General in the Army of the United Colonies, and to direct that you immediately repair to Head-Quarters at New-York, which you will please to notice. Your commission is ready for you.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Gunning Bedford, Esq., Mustermaster-General.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, June 18, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of your application to Congress respecting the further exchange of prisoners from the ships of war, I am authorized to inform you that the Congress are in sentiment with you that it will be prejudicial to the general service, and that they therefore judge it improper that any further exchange should take place; which you will please to notice accordingly.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To John Nixon, Esq., Chairman of the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania.—To be communicated.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO COLONEL HASLETT.

Philadelphia, June 18, 1776.

SIR: The two companies which were stationed at Cape May being ordered to join their regiment and proceed to Canada, and the service requiring a constant force there, I have it in charge from the Congress to direct that you immediately order two companies of the battalion of Continental troops under your command to proceed to Cape May, there to protect the inhabitants and the navigation, and to do duty until further order of Congress.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Colonel Haslett, or Officer commanding the Battalion of Continental troops in Delaware Government.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF NEW-JERSEY.

Philadelphia, June 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As it is impossible fully to ascertain the strength of our enemies, or the force destined for the attack of New-York, it is incumbent on us to be prepared to defend ourselves against any number of troops that may be ordered against that place. This, it is apparent, can never be effectually done but by adopting the enclosed resolve, wherein it is recommended by Congress to your Colony to empower the General at New-York to call such part of the Militia to his assistance as may be necessary to repel our enemies.

The great advantages the American cause will receive from the civil power thus lending its aid to the military, and acting in conjunction with it, are too manifest to be mentioned. The whole strength of a Colony may, by this means, be drawn to a point the instant the situation of affairs shall render it necessary.

The Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, while the British troops lay in Boston, passed a resolve, at the request of Congress, similar to that which they now recommend to you.

The Colony of New-Jersey will, I am persuaded, imitate their example on the present occasion, and convince her sister Colonies that in virtue and love of her country, she is determined to be exceeded by none.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Honourable Convention of New-Jersey.

(Same to the honourable Convention of New-York, and honourable Assembly of Connecticut.)

To the Honourable the Continental Congress:

The Petition of CHARLES WALKER, of the Island of PROVIDENCE, humbly sheweth:

That when Admiral Hopkins arrived at Providence with the Continental Fleet under his command, not having sufficient room in his own ships for the ordnance stores which he found at that place, your Petitioner furnished him with a convenient vessel, for which the Admiral gave your Petitioner a certificate, entitling him to receive of the Congress a full and ample payment of all his accounts against the vessel. That your Petitioner had his accounts properly made out and authenticated under the seal of the Island, but in his voyage to this place had the misfortune to be taken by an English ship of war, and carried into Norfolk to Lord Dunmore, where, fearing ill treatment from the enemies of America if his papers should fall into their hands, they being directed to the Congress, he thought it advisable to throw them into the sea. That your Petitioner having made his escape, and arriving at this place, laid his case before your honourable body, which has been pleased to send to Admiral Hopkins concerning him. But your Petitioner, certain of the great uneasiness his family must be in on his account, and considering that by the time intelligence can be had from the Admiral he may make a voyage to his native country and back again, humbly prays that the Congress will be pleased to grant him such a sum of money, in part payment for the vessel aforesaid, as by sundry copies of accounts, which he has got, may appear to be due, to enable him, with the permission and approbation of their honourable body, to purchase a vessel and cargo of provisions, and to go with it to Providence, with every assurance that a man of integrity can give to return again, God willing, with a cargo of salt, or such other articles as may be useful here.

The premises your Petitioner humbly submits to your wise consideration, and hopes that your honourable body will give a favourable answer to his Petition; and he, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

CHARLES WALKER.

Proceedings of the Provincial Conference of Committees of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, held at the Carpenter's Hall, at PHILADELPHIA, begun June 18, and continued by adjournments to June 25, 1776.

Tuesday, June 18, 1776.

This day a number of gentlemen met at Carpenter's Hall, in Philadelphia, being deputed by the Committees of several of the Counties of this Province to join in Provincial Conference, in consequence of a Circular Letter from the Committee of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, enclosing the Resolution of the Continental Congress of the 15th May last.

Colonel McKean, as Chairman of the City Committee, declared the motives which had induced that Committee to propose the holding of the present Conference, and then laid on the table a certificate of Deputies appointed* to attend on the part of said Committee.

Returns were also given in from the Counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Chester, Lancaster, Berks, Northampton, York, Cumberland, Bedford, and Westmoreland, by the Deputies of said Counties, by which it appears the following gentlemen were appointed, viz:

For the Committee of the City, &c., of PHILADELPHIA.—*Dr. Benjamin Franklin, Colonel Thomas McKean, Mr. Christopher Marshall, Sen., Major John Bayard, Colonel Timothy Matlack, Colonel Joseph Dean, Captain Francis Gurney, Major William Coates, Mr. George Schlosser, Captain Jonathan B. Morris, Captain Joseph Moulder, Mr. William Lowman, Dr. Benjamin Rush, Mr. Christopher Ludwig, Mr. James Milligan, Mr. Jacob Schriener, Captain Sharp Delaney, Major John Cox, Captain Benjamin Loxley, Captain Samuel Brewster, Captain Joseph Blewer, Mr. William Robinson.

For the Committee of PHILADELPHIA County.—Colonel Henry Hill, Colonel Robert Lewis, Dr. Enoch Edwards, *Colonel William Hamilton, Colonel John Bull, Colonel Frederick Antis, *Major James Potts, Major Robert Loller, Mr. Joseph Mather, Mr. Matthew Brooks, *Mr. Edward Bartholomew.

For the Committee of Bucks County.—John Kidd, Esq., Major Henry Wynkoop, Mr. James Wallace, Colonel Joseph Hart, Mr. Benjamin Segle.

For the Committee of CHESTER County.—Colonel Richard Thomas, Major William Evans, Colonel Thomas Hockley, Major Caleb Davis, Elisha Price, Esq., Mr. Samuel Fairlamb, Colonel William Montgomery, Colonel Hugh Lloyd, Richard Reiley, Esq., Colonel Evan Evans, Colonel Lewis Grono, Major Sketchley Morton, Captain Thomas Levis.

For the Committee of LANCASTER County.—William Atlee, Esq., Mr. Lodowick Lowman, Colonel Bartram Galbraith, Colonel Alexander Lowrey, Captain Andrew Graaff, Mr. William Brown, Mr. John Smiley, Major James Cunningham, Major David Jenkins.

For the Committee of BERKS County.—Colonel Jacob Morgan, Colonel Henry Haller, Colonel Mark Bird, Dr. Bodo Otto, Mr. Benjamin Spiker, Colonel Daniel Hunter, Colonel Valentine Eakerd, Colonel Nicholas Lutz, Captain Joseph Hiester, Mr. Charles Shoemaker.

For the Committee of NORTHAMPTON County.—Robert Levers, Esq.,

Colonel Neigal Gray, John Weitzel, Esq., Nicholas Dupue, Esq., Mr. David Deshler, Mr. Benjamin Dupue.

For the Committee of YORK County.—Colonel James Smith, Colonel Robert McPherson, Colonel Richard McAlister, Colonel David Kennedy, Colonel William Rankin, Colonel Henry Slagel, Mr. James Eggar, *Mr. John Hay, Captain Joseph Read.

For the Committee of CUMBERLAND County.—Mr. James McLane, *Colonel John Allison, John McClay, Esq., William Elliot, Esq., Colonel William Clark, Dr. John Colhoon, Mr. John Creigh, Mr. Hugh McCormick, Mr. John Harris, Mr. Hugh Alexander.

For the Committee of BEDFORD County.—Colonel David Espy, Colonel John Piper, Samuel Davidson, Esq.

For the Committee of WESTMORELAND County.—Mr. Edward Cook, Mr. James Perry.

A quorum of the Members from the above Counties being met, except that only two appeared from Chester County, proceeded to the choice of a President, Vice-President, and two Secretaries; and Colonel Thomas McKean was chosen President, Colonel Joseph Hart Vice-President, Jonathan B. Smith and Samuel C. Morris, Secretaries.

Then the Conference adjourned to three o'clock P. M.

Tuesday, June 18, 1776, 3 o'clock P. M.

The Conference met, present as above, and adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Wednesday, June 19, 1776.

The Conference met, present twelve Committees, ninety-seven Members.

A Return was delivered at the table from Northumberland, and the Deputies attended, being Col. William Cook, Alexander Hunter, Esq., Messrs. John Heitzel, Robert Martin, and Matthew Brown, as did those also from Chester.

On motion, it was Resolved unanimously, That in taking the sense of this Conference on any question which may come before them, the City and Counties respectively shall have one vote.

On motion, it was Ordered, That the Resolution of the Continental Congress, of 15th May last, recommending the total suppression of all authority under the King of Great Britain, &c., be read.

And it was read accordingly, and is in the words following, viz:

"In Congress, May 15, 1776.

"Whereas His Britannick Majesty, in conjunction with the Lords and Commons of Great Britain, has, by a late Act of Parliament, excluded the inhabitants of these United Colonies from the protection of his Crown: And whereas no answer whatever to the humble Petitions of the Colonies for redress of grievances and reconciliation with Great Britain has been, or is likely to be, given; but the whole force of that Kingdom, aided by foreign mercenaries, is to be exerted for the destruction of the good people of these Colonies: And whereas it appears absolutely irreconcilable to reason and good conscience for the people of these Colonies now to take the oaths and affirmations necessary for the support of any Government under the Crown of Great Britain, and it is necessary that the exercise of every kind of authority under the said Crown should be totally suppressed, and all the powers of Government exerted under the authority of the people of the Colonies, for the preservation of internal peace, virtue, and good order, as well as for the defence of their lives, liberties, and properties, against the hostile invasions and cruel depredations of their enemies: Therefore,

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the respective Assemblies and Conventions of the United Colonies, where no Government sufficient to the exigencies of their affairs has been hitherto established, to adopt such Government as shall, in the opinion of the Representatives of the people, best conduce to the happiness and safety of their constituents in particular, and America in general.

"By order of the Congress:

"JOHN HANCOCK, President."

By special order the same was read a second time, and, after mature consideration,

Resolved, unanimously, That the said Resolution of Congress of the 15th May last is fully approved by this Conference.

On motion, Resolved, unanimously, That the present Government of this Province is not competent to the exigencies of our affairs.

On motion, Resolved, N. C. D., That it is necessary that a Provincial Convention be called by this Conference for the express purpose of forming a new Government in this Province, on the authority of the People only.

Resolved, unanimously, That a Committee be appointed to ascertain the number of Members of which the Convention ought to consist, and the proportion of Representatives for the City and each County; and that two Members from the City and each County be appointed on said Committee, except from Westmoreland, which can furnish but one.

And the following gentlemen were appointed, viz: Messrs. Bayard, Bull, Kidd, Davis, Ailee, Bird, Matlack, Mather, Hart, Levis, Cunningham, Haller, Gray, Smith, McClean, Espy, Weitzell, Cook, Levers, McAlister, Creigh, Piper, Hunter.

Resolved, That the Committee now appointed be instructed to fix upon some number, not less than ninety nor more than one hundred and ten, for the whole Province.

Then the Conference adjourned to half after three o'clock P. M.

Wednesday, June 19, 1776, P. M.

The Conference met.

A Petition from the German Associators of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia was read, praying that all Associators who are taxable may be entitled to vote.

Ordered to lie on the table for the perusal of the Members.

On motion, Resolved, unanimously, That this Conference will now enter into a consideration of the qualifications of Electors, and of persons who may be elected.

Resolved unanimously, That this Conference will immediately resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole, to enter upon said consideration.

The President left the Chair. The President resumed the Chair.

Colonel Hart, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that the Committee had come to no resolution, and desired leave to sit again.

Ordered, That the Committee of the Whole have leave to sit again to-morrow morning at eight o'clock.

The Conference adjourned to eight o'clock to-morrow, A. M.

Thursday, June 20, 1776.

The Conference met, every Committee present.

The order of yesterday, for resolving the Conference into a Committee of the Whole, was read.

Resolved, unanimously, That the Conference will now go into a Committee of the Whole.

The President left the Chair. The President resumed the Chair.

Colonel Hart reported from the Committee of the Whole, that they had come into two Resolutions, which he was ready to report when the Conference would receive them.

Ordered, That they be received forthwith.

Then the said Resolutions being read and considered, were agreed to by the Conference, without one dissenting voice, and are as follow, viz:

"Resolved, That every Associator in the Province shall be admitted to a vote for Members of the Convention, in the City or County in which he resides; provided such Associator be of the age of twenty-one years, and shall have lived one year in this Province immediately preceding the election, and shall have contributed at any time before the passing of this resolve to the payment of either Provincial or County taxes, or shall have been rated or assessed towards the same.

"Resolved, That every person qualified by the laws of this Province to vote for Representatives in Assembly, shall be admitted to vote for Members of the intended Convention; provided he shall first take the following Test on Oath or Affirmation, if thereunto required by any one of the Judges or Inspectors of the election, who are hereby empowered to administer the same.

"I, . . . . ., do declare that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to George the Third, King of Great Britain, &c., and that I will not, by any means, directly or indirectly, oppose the establishment of a free Government in this Province by the Convention now to be chosen, nor the measures adopted by the Congress against the tyranny attempted to be established in these Colonies by the Court of Great Britain."

Ordered, That the Committee of the Whole have leave to sit this afternoon at three o'clock.

Then the Conference adjourned to three o'clock this afternoon.

Thursday, June 20, 1776, P. M.

The Conference met.

On motion, Resolved, unanimously, That whereas the County of Westmoreland hath been exempted from the payment of Taxes for three years last past, and thereby many persons may be excluded from a vote at the ensuing election, in consequence of the foregoing regulations, contrary to the intention thereof; therefore, every person of twenty-one years of age, being a freeman, residing in said County, shall be admitted to vote, he being an Associator, and having lived one year in this Province next preceding the election, and taking the Test aforesaid, if thereunto required.

Resolved, unanimously, That the election shall be made by ballot, in the manner heretofore used in this Province at the general election.

Resolved, unanimously, That no person who has been published by any Committee of Inspection or the Committee of Safety in this Province as an enemy to the liberties of America, and has not been restored to the favour of his country, shall be permitted to vote at the election of Members for said Convention.

The Conference then adjourned to eight o'clock to-morrow, A. M.

Friday, June 21, 1776.

The Conference met.

On motion, Resolved, unanimously, That every voter at the proposed election shall be a freeman; and, if thereunto required by any of the Judges or Inspectors, shall, before his vote is received, take the foregoing Test.

Resolved, unanimously, That any persons qualified to vote for Members of Assembly by the laws of this Province may be elected a Member of Convention; provided that he shall have resided at least one year immediately preceding the said election in the City or County for which he shall be chosen, and shall, before he takes his seat in Convention, take the following Oath or Affirmation, viz:

"I, . . . . ., do declare that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to George the Third, King of Great Britain, &c., and that I will steadily and firmly, at all times, promote the most effectual means, according to the best of my skill and knowledge, to oppose the tyrannical proceedings of the King and Parliament of Great Britain against the American Colonies, and to establish and support a Government in this Province on the authority of the people only, &c. That I will oppose any measure that shall or may in the least interfere with or obstruct the religious principles or practices of any of the good people of this Province as heretofore enjoyed."

Also, Resolved, That no person elected to serve as a Member of Convention shall take his seat, or give his vote, until he shall have made and subscribed the following Declaration:

"I, . . . . ., do profess faith in God the Father and in Jesus Christ his Eternal Son, the true God, and in the Holy Spirit, one God, blessed forevermore; and do acknowledge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be given by Divine Inspiration."

An Address and Petition from the Commanders of the thirteen Row-Galleys in the service of this Province, praying to be heard on a difference with the Committee of Safety, was presented at the table, and read.*

*To the honourable the Conference of Committees of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA: The Address and Petition of the Commanders of the thirteen Row-Galleys in the service of said Province, respectfully sheweth:

That your Petitioners, having addressed the publick on the 16th of May last, in an appeal respecting the actions of the 8th and 9th of the said month with the Roebuck and Liverpool men-of-war, were, in consequence of a memorial from the Committee of Safety to the honourable House of Assembly, dated May 24, summoned to appear before a Committee of the House, with our evidences, as we expected to prove the facts alleged in our appeal; but, to our great disappointment, the Committee aforesaid, after spending one afternoon in inquiring whether our petitioners were the authors of said appeal, never called upon us to pro

Ordered to lie on the table for the perusal of the Members.

Resolved, That Messrs. Moulder, Lollar, Wallace, Hockley, Lowrey, Eachard, B. Dupue, McPherson, Clarke, Davidson, Cook, and Parry, be a Committee to consider of the proper time, place and manner of holding and regulating the ensuing election, and to fix a day for the meeting of the Representatives of the people so chosen.

A Memorial from the Patriotic Society of the City of Philadelphia was delivered at the table by a Committee from said Society, and read by their Clerk on special request.*

Ordered to lie on the table for the perusal of the Members. The Conference adjourned to three o'clock P. M.

The Conference met.

The Committee appointed to ascertain the number and proportion of Members to represent the Province in each particular City and County in Convention, made their Report, in the words following, viz:

"The Committee appointed for, &c., report, That your Committee, having conferred together and endeavoured to obtain the best intelligence that can be had, find that full information respecting the number of taxables in each County cannot now be had, and therefore cannot be adopted as a rule in fixing the number of Representatives for the City and Counties respectively. Your Committee, however, are satisfied that the number of taxables in the Counties respectively does not differ so much as to make it of any probable disadvantage to allow an equal representation from each County, especially as the Convention will probably vote by City and Counties (as in the preceding Conventions) upon the questions which shall come before them.

duce any evidence to prove the truth of the matters contained in the appeal; but an inquiry was set on foot tending to exculpate the Committee of Safety from the guilt with which they might have been chargeable if the matters contained in our appeal were once proven. The characters, honour and reputation of your petitioners being wounded by said inquiry, they presented the enclosed memorial to the House of Assembly, praying to be heard in their own defence, and to have an opportunity of proving what they had alleged in their appeal; but although the House, by a motion which appears on their Journals, did agree to grant us a hearing, and appointed a Committee for the purpose, yet they broke up without complying with our request, leaving upon their votes a judgment in favour of the Committee of Safety, and condemning your petitioners unheard, signed by several members of the House, which has since been inserted in the public papers. We are therefore obliged, in justice to our own characters, and the publick, in whose service we are, to apply to this House, the only Provincial body now existing under the authority of the people, to grant us that hearing which the honourable House of Assembly neglected to afford us. We wish to stand or fall by the judgment of our country, and are happy in thinking that we have everything to hope from the virtue and patriotism of this House which the justice of our cause may require. All we ask is a fair hearing; and if we are not able to support what we have declared to the publick, we shall cheerfully submit to any censure which this House may choose to inflict on us; and, on the contrary, should we make good our charge, and prove to the satisfaction of this House that we have been unworthily treated, we have not the least doubt but this House will see us redressed.

Your petitioners do therefore pray this House to set apart a day for hearing their evidences in support of the matters contained in their appeal, and to inquire into the state of the galleys and other vessels for the defence of this Province, during the actions of the 8th and 9th of May last. Your petitioners do further pray the support of this House against the proceedings of the Committee of Safety in the appointment of a Commodore, which seems evidently designed to lay your petitioners under the necessity of resigning, or being broke for disobedience, at least until this House has inquired into the matter, and discovered where the fault lies; as we wish, agreeable to the sentiments expressed in the enclosed remonstrance to the Committee of Safety, to serve our country at the hazard of our lives, notwithstanding the many endeavours to disgust us with the service, and are determined at the same time to obey no orders of the present Commodore, whom the Committee of Safety has appointed in direct opposition to our remonstrance. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

Signed for and by order of the whole.

H. DOUGHERTY,
JOHN HAMILTON,
JAMES MONTGOMERY.

* To the honourable the Conference of the several Committees of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA, now convened and sitting in PHILADELPHIA: The Memorial of the Patriotic Society of the City of PHILADELPHIA, humbly sheweth:

That, in times like the present, when all authority is founded on consent and convenience, and no permanent order is yet established, we conceive that necessity sufficiently justifies our present application to this House, as the only mode of regular proceeding which the present state of affairs will admit of, there being now no other Provincial representation in existence here; and because we likewise conceive that the late House of Assembly, by breaking up and dispersing in the very crisis of danger

"We therefore recommend that it be resolved that eight Representatives be sent by the City of Philadelphia, and eight by each County in the Province, to the Convention."

On motion, That the inhabitants of the City be divided from the County of Philadelphia, and that they be not admitted to vote or be voted for in the election of the County Member for the Convention,

It was moved that the previous question be put, viz: Whether this question shall be now put? And it was put accordingly, and carried in the negative.

Resolved, That this Conference approve of the Report of the Committee.

The Conference then adjourned to eight o'clock to-morrow, A. M.

Saturday, June 22, 1776, A. M.

The Conference met.

On motion, Resolved, unanimously, That the determinations of this Conference on the Representation of the City and of the County of Philadelphia, shall not be drawn into precedent in future.

An Address from the Committee of Privates of the Association of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, was delivered in and read, praying this Conference to take into their consideration divers matters relating to the present state of this Province.

Ordered to lie on the table for the perusal of the Members.

On motion, Ordered, That the Petitions and Addresses from the Commanders of the Row-Galleys, the Patriotic Society, and the Committee of Privates of the Association of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, be read a second time; and they were read accordingly.

A paper, being a copy of a Minute from the proceedings and difficulty, and that without a sufficient number present to authorize such an act, has thereby deserted the publick cause, dissolved themselves, and left the people, so far as respects that House, unrepresented. These are the grounds on which the reasonableness and necessity of our applying to this House are founded.

The case which we have to lay before you needs neither apology nor solicitation. It is the case of all. This House, their memorialists, and their constituents in every part of the Province, are alike interested therein. We have, for a considerable time, beheld a difference subsisting between the Committee of Safety and the Captains of the Row-Galleys, and it appears to us that the publick welfare is likely to be endangered thereby. The particular cause or progress of that difference we mean not to enter into; but, in general terms, we can say, that, on the part of the Captains, the publick seem fully satisfied, and have a clear confidence both in their attachment to the cause and their abilities for the service. On the part of the Committee we cannot make the same declaration; for though we have the highest esteem for the wisdom and integrity of several of its members, yet they are blended with others whose connections, interests and prejudices are opposite to the common cause. And it is to this unnatural and impolitic mixture of persons of contrary sentiments that we attribute the present distraction subsisting between the Committee and the Captains. This Province hath now resolved upon a change of Government, yet many of the members of the Committee are dissentients therefrom, and have entered into a remonstrance against it. They are in opposition to the very cause in which the Captains, as soldiers, are fighting; and we wonder not that they are endeavouring to discomfit and dishearten these men. More than that, the Associators throughout the Province are to this hour destitute of the quantities of ammunition necessary to enable them to exert themselves upon emergency for the common defence. We see the danger that is coming upon us from this narrowness of spirit, or, what is worse, a disaffection in principle. We have been patient till patience is become criminal. As members of the community at large, or as individuals, whose lives and properties depend upon a most vigorous defence, we can no longer sit still and suffer these things. The times will not now admit of ceremony. Our duty as citizens and as fathers compel us to these declarations. The charge intrusted to the Committee of Safety is too great to be left to the mere will and pleasure of a few individuals, especially when we consider that they were appointed under a Government which is both dissolved and suppressed.

The House of Assembly, while it existed, were in some measure accountable to their constituents by a weekly publication of their proceedings, and the members thereof were removable at elections; but the Committee of Safety, from the very nature of its business, have the privilege of secrecy, and the time of their duration is unlimited. These circumstances increase the importance of their trust, and render it necessary that they should be men removed as far from every temptation to disaffection as possible—men of the clearest and most unsuspicious political characters; yet many of them, we have strong reason to believe, are not so.

We have here pointed out a radical evil, but we know not how to apply a radical cure. We therefore pray this honourable House to take the important premises into their most serious consideration; and, as the most pressing necessity requires, to apply such timely and effectual remedy as in their wisdom they shall see meet; and their memorialists, as in duty bound, shall, &c.

Signed by order of the meeting.

FRANCIS WADE, Chairman.

of the Committee of Safety of this Province, was read; and is in the words following, viz:

"In Congress, June 20, 1776.

"Robert Morris, one of the Delegates from the Province of Pennsylvania, reminded the Congress that the Assembly of said Province had adjourned on the 14th instant, without having been able to carry into execution the Resolves of Congress of the 3d instant for raising six thousand Militia for establishing a flying camp. And then informed the Congress that their said Resolve not being directed in terms to the Committee of Safety, but addressed to the Colony, the said Committee were in doubt whether it would be expected from them to execute said Resolve, as they are, in recess of Assembly, the Executive body of this Province. He also alleged, that if the Congress expected the Committee to proceed in this business, it would be necessary or advisable that they should recommend it expressly to them; for under the present circumstances of the Province, he much doubted if they would be obeyed unless so authorized; and added, that if the Congress did not see proper to take further order in this matter, he hoped the Committee of Safety would always be held blameless, as they now gave Congress this necessary information for the express purpose of having an explicit declaration, if they were expected to act in this important business, which they were ready to undertake if so desired.

"This application was made by Mr. Morris, by order of the Committee of Safety; and, after a debate of considerable length, and two motions made and seconded, one was withdrawn, the other determined in the negative; in consequence whereof I have made this memorandum immediately on the spot, to appear when it may be necessary, and to prevent blame being cast where it is not merited.

"R. MORRIS.

"The above is a true state.

Cumberland County to be divided into three Districts, viz: The First and Third Divisions, Carlisle, East Pennsborough, Allen, Middleton, West Pennsborough, Newton, and Hopewell, to be held at Carlisle; the Second and Fifth Divisions, Antrim, Peters, Guilford, Hamilton, Thannet, Lurgan, and Letterkenny, to be held at Chambersburgh; the Fourth Division, Tyrone, Tyboyne, Rye, Milford, Greenwood, Armagh, Leck, Derry, and Fermanagh, to be held at Robert Campbell's, in Tuscarora.

Northumberland County to be held at George McCandlish's, in Turbert Township.

Westmoreland County to be divided into two divisions; that on the South side of Youghagena River at Sparks's Fort, and Northern District at Hanna's Town.

The County of Lancaster to be divided into six Districts, viz: In the First, the Borough of Lancaster, Lancaster Township, Leacock, Warwick, Manheim, Hempfield, Manor, Conestoga, and Lampeter, to be held at the Court-House in the Borough of Lancaster; the Second Division, Little Britain, Drummore, Bart, Coleraine, Martick, Strasburgh, and Sadsbury, to be held at James Porter's, Jun.; the Third Division, Derry, Londonderry, Ralpho, Donnegall, and Mountjoy, to be held at Elizabeth-Town; the Fourth Division, Salisbury, Carnarvon, Brecknock, Earl, and Cocolico, to be held at New-Holland; the Fifth Division, Elizabeth, Heidelberg, Bethel, Lebanon, and East Hanover, to be held at Lebanon-Town; the Sixth Division, West Hanover, Paxton, and Upper Paxton, to be held at Garber's Mill.

And that the electors of every Borough, Ward, or Township, in each of the Counties, shall meet on Saturday, the 6th of July next, between the hours of two and six o'clock in the afternoon, and choose Inspectors to receive the votes from the electors of their Boroughs, Wards, or Townships, respectively. The place for said elections to be advertised by the County Committee, who shall also superintend such elections, and make returns of the Inspectors chosen, to the Judges of the general election. And if any District shall neglect to choose Inspectors as aforesaid, in such case the Judges of the election shall appoint Inspectors for those who so neglect, on the morning of the day of the general election; and that each of the said Inspectors, on the day of the general election, shall, before he proceeds to take or receive any votes, take the following oath or affirmation, viz:

"I, A. B. do declare, that I will duly attend the ensuing election during the continuance thereof, and will truly and faithfully assist the Judges of said election, to prevent all frauds and deceits whatever, of electors or others, in carrying on the same, and in causing the poll or votes at such election to be marked off on the respective lists, and fairly cast up."

Which oath or affirmation to be administered by any one of the Judges.

And that the Deputies from the City of Philadelphia and from each County, shall nominate and appoint three discreet and able members of their respective Committees residing within the several Districts, to be Judges of the general election within said Districts; which said Judges, together with the Inspectors, shall appoint Clerks for taking the polls at the said election; and the said Judges and Clerks shall respectively take the same oath or affirmation as is required to be taken by the Inspectors, which shall be administered by any one of the Judges to the others, they being hereby authorized and appointed to administer the same.

And that the Commissioners of the City and Counties in this Province, when required, shall deliver unto the Judges of said election true duplicates of all the taxables in the several Districts of their respective Counties. And that the Judges aforesaid shall, and are hereby, required and empowered to act in all cases respecting said elections in the room and places of Sheriffs, until the same are finished; and when the polls are closed, and the votes counted off, or cast up, in the several Districts of such Counties as are divided as aforesaid, the Judges and Inspectors shall cause certified accounts thereof to be taken by some of them to their respective County towns, on the next day, and of the names of the persons chosen in the several Districts, with the number of votes for each candidate; which, when compared and added together, the eight highest numbers shall be the persons to represent such County in Convention; and also that the Judges, or any two of them, for the City and Counties respectively, shall certify from under their hands and seals to the Convention, on the day appointed for their meeting as aforesaid, a true list or certificate of the names of the Members so chosen, in the City and Counties respectively, together with the number of votes for each of them. And the Captain or Commanding Officer of each Company in the several Battalions of this Province are hereby required to furnish complete lists of their Companies to the Judges and Inspectors of the several Districts, on the morning of the election. Which persons, so chosen to be Members of the Convention, shall meet at Philadelphia, on Monday, the 15th day of July next, in Convention as aforesaid.

Ordered, That the following gentlemen be appointed to be Judges of the Election in the Counties, and in the respective Districts, viz:

City, &c., of Philadelphia: Samuel Massey, Frederick Kuhl, Thomas Cuthbert.

Ordered, That Doctor Rush, the Chairman, Colonel Hill, and Colonel Smith, prepare a draft of an Address to the inhabitants of the Province, and report to the Conference.

Resolved, unanimously, That Messrs. Bayard, Bird, and Smith, be appointed a Committee to wait upon the Chairman of the Committee of Safety, and desire a copy of all Orders given to Captain Samuel Davidson since his appointment as principal Commander of the Navy of this Province, to be laid before this Conference.

Resolved, unanimously, That it be recommended to the said Convention to choose and appoint Delegates or Deputies to represent this Province in the Congress of the United Colonies, and also a Council of Safety to exercise the whole of the Executive powers of Government, so far as relates to the military defence and safety of the Province; and to make such allowance for the services of the said Delegates and Council of Safety, respectively, as shall be reasonable. Which said Delegates and Council of Safety are to continue for six months, unless a new Government shall be formed within that time, in which case their appointment is to cease.

The Conference then adjourned to three o'clock P. M.

Sunday, June 23, 1776, P. M.

The Conference met.

The gentlemen appointed to prepare a draft of an Address to the inhabitants of this Province, delivered at the table a draft; which was read.

On motion, that divers Resolutions of Congress, of 3d and 4th days of June instant, requiring ten thousand of the Militia of the Colony of Pennsylvania, the Government of the Counties of Newcastle, Kent, and Sussex, upon Delaware, and the Colony of Maryland, be raised to form a Flying Camp; be read, the same were read accordingly, and are in the words following, viz:

"IN CONGRESS, June 3.—Resolved, That a Flying Camp be immediately established in the Middle Colonies, and that it consist of ten thousand men.

"To complete which number, Resolved, That the Colony of Pennsylvania be requested to furnish of the Militia, - - - - - 6,000

"Maryland, - - - - - 3,400

"Delaware Government, - - - - - 600

10,000"

"JUNE 4th, 1776.—Resolved, That it be recommended to the Assemblies and Conventions of the Colonies requested to supply or furnish Militia by the Resolutions of yesterday, to take particular care that the Militias come provided with arms, accoutrements, and camp-kettles.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

"That three Provincial Brigadiers-General be employed for the Flying Camp—two from Pennsylvania and one from Maryland. That the said Brigadiers-General be appointed by the respective Colonies above-mentioned. That the Flying Camp be under the command of such Continental General Officers as the Commander-in-Chief shall direct. That the Militia, when in service, be regularly paid and victualled in the same manner as the Continental Troops.

"Resolved, That the Militia be engaged to the first day of December next, unless sooner discharged by Congress.

"That the pay of the Militia commence from the day of their marching from home, and that they be allowed one penny a mile, lawful money, in lieu of rations, for travelling expenses, and one day's pay for every twenty miles between home and the general rendezvous, going and returning.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

By special order, the same was read a second time.

On motion, Ordered, That a Resolution of the Assembly of this Province, of June 14th instant, in consequence of the foregoing requisition of Congress, be read; and the same was read accordingly.

By special order, the same was read a second time, and is in the words following, viz:

"IN ASSEMBLY, June 14, 1776.—Resolved, by the Members of Assembly now met, That they are earnestly desirous of carrying into execution the Resolutions of Congress of the 1st instant; but that as they despair, after repeated disappointments, of procuring a quorum of the House, they find themselves unable at this time to proceed on said Resolutions.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"ABEL EVANS, Clerk."

On motion, Ordered, That the copy of a Minute from the Proceedings of the Committee of Safety of this Province, entered on the Journal of this Conference on Saturday last, be read; and it was read accordingly.

Whereas it appears to this Conference that the six thousand Militia required of this Colony by Congress, and agreed by the Assembly of this Province to be raised, are absolutely necessary for the defence and security of the Thirteen United Colonies: And whereas it appears that the requisition of Congress was made to the Colony of Pennsylvania, and that the same cannot be complied with by the Assembly or Committee of Safety of this Province; and that unless this Conference (being the only representative body of this Colony that can at this time with propriety interpose in this business) undertake to accomplish the desires of the Congress, and of the Assembly in the premises, the aforesaid Flying Camp cannot be raised in due time; and the liberties and safety of this Province as well as of the other Colonies, may be thereby endangered: And whereas the Militia of this Province at first associated by the advice and under the authority of the Committees of Inspection and Observation of the City and the several Counties: Therefore,

Resolved, unanimously, That this Conference do recommend to the Committees and Associators of this Province to embody four thousand five hundred of the Militia, which, with the fifteen hundred men now in the pay of this Province, will be the quota of this Colony required by Congress.

Resolved, unanimously, That Messrs. Hill, Gurney, Hart, Montgomery, Morgan, Cunningham, Gray, McAlister, McClean, Espy, Cook, and Perry, be a Committee to devise ways and means for raising the said four thousand five hundred men, and to inquire into all matters necessary to fit them for taking the field.

On motion, unanimously Ordered, That the Chairman, Dr. Rush, and Colonel Smith, be a Committee to draft a Resolution declaring the sense of the Conference with respect to an Independence of this Province on the Crown and Parliament of Great Britain, and report to-morrow morning.

Resolved, unanimously, That it be recommended to Commodore Samuel Davidson, and to the Captains of the Row-Galleys, &c., to forbear to take any steps which may involve the Fleet in confusion; and that they wait the result of an interview which this Conference intend to propose to the Committee of Safety, and that Messrs. Blewer, Lewis, Bird, Loller, and Colhoon, be a Committee to wait on those gentlemen on board their vessels to-morrow morning.

The Committee appointed to wait on the Chairman of the Committee of Safety reported that they had waited on George Clymer, Esq., according to order, and had delivered the message they had in charge, and that he said he would immediately call the Committee, and give an answer this afternoon.

The draft of an Address, &c., was, by order, read a second time; and being considered and amended, was agreed to unanimously, and is in the following words:

"The Address of the Deputies from the Committees of PENNSYLVANIA, assembled in Provincial Conference, June 22:

"TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

"FRIENDS AND COUNTRYMEN: In obedience to the power we derived from you, we have fixed upon a mode of electing a Convention to form a Government for the Province of Pennsylvania, under the authority of the People.

"Divine Providence is about to grant you a favour which few people have ever enjoyed before, the privilege of choosing Deputies to form a Government under which you are to live. We need not inform you of the importance of the trust you are about to commit to them. Your liberty, safety, happiness, and everything that posterity will hold dear to them, to the end of time, will depend upon their deliberations. It becomes you, therefore, to choose such persons only to act for you in the ensuing Convention as are distinguished for wisdom, integrity, and a firm attachment to the liberties of this Province, as well as to the liberties of the United Colonies in general.

"In order that your Deputies may know your sentiments as fully as possible upon the subject of Government, we beg that you would convey to them your wishes and opinions upon that head immediately after their election.

"We have experienced an unexpected unanimity in our councils, and we have the pleasure of observing a growing unanimity among the people of the Province. We beg that this brotherly spirit may be cultivated, and that you would remember that the present unsettled state of the Province requires that you should show forbearance, charity, and moderation towards each other. We beg that you would endeavour to remove the prejudices of the weak and ignorant respecting the proposed change in our Government, and assure them that it is absolutely necessary to secure property, liberty, and the sacred rights of conscience, to every individual in the Province.

"The season of the year and the exigencies of our Colony require despatch in the formation of a regular Government. You will not, therefore, be surprised at our fixing the day for the election of Deputies so early as the 8th of next July.

"We wish you success in your attempts to establish and perpetuate your liberties, and pray God to take you under his special protection.

"Signed by unanimous order of the Conference:

"THOMAS MCKEAN, President."

Colonel Roberdeau and Mr. Parker, from the Committee of Safety, delivered in at the table a Letter from George Clymer, Esq., Chairman of said Committee, enclosing the Instructions given to Captain Davidson by that Committee.

Ordered to lie on the table for the perusal of the Members.

Monday, June 24, A. M.

The Conference met according to adjournment; but many of the Members being on Committees, the Conference adjourned to three o'clock, this afternoon.

June 24, 1776, P. M.

The Conference met.

The Committee appointed for that purpose brought in a draft of a Declaration on the subject of the Independence of this Colony of the Crown of Great Britain, which was ordered to be read, by special order. The same was read a second time, and, being fully considered, it was, with the greatest unanimity of all the Members, agreed to and adopted, and is in the words following, viz:

"Whereas, George the Third, King of Great Britain, &c., in violation of the principles of the British Constitution, and of the laws of justice and humanity, hath, by an accumulation of oppressions unparalleled in history, excluded the inhabitants of this, with the other American Colonies, from his protection; and whereas he hath paid no regard to any of our numerous and dutiful petitions for a redress of our complicated grievances, but hath lately purchased foreign troops to assist in enslaving us, and hath excited the savages of this country to carry on a war against us, as also the negroes to imbrue their hands in the blood of their masters, in a manner unpractised by civilized nations; and hath lately insulted our calamities, by declaring that he will show us no mercy until he has reduced us: And whereas the obligations of allegiance (being reciprocal between a King and his subjects) are now dissolved on the side of the Colonists, by the despotism of the said King, inasmuch that it now appears that loyalty to him is treason against the good people of this country: And whereas not only the Parliament, but, there is reason to believe, too many of the people of Great Britain, have concurred in the aforesaid arbitrary and unjust proceedings against us: And whereas the publick virtue of this Colony (so essential to its liberty and happiness) must be endangered by a future political union with, or dependance upon, a Crown and nation so lost to justice, patriotism, and magnanimity:—We, the Deputies of the people of Pennsylvania, assembled in full Provincial Conference, for forming a plan for executing the Resolve of Congress of the 15th of May last, for suppressing all authority in this Province derived from the Crown of Great Britain, and for establishing a Government upon the authority of the people only, now, in this publick manner, in behalf of ourselves, and with the approbation, consent, and authority of our constituents, unanimously declare our willingness to concur in a vote of the Congress declaring the United Colonies free and independent States, provided the forming the Government, and the regulation of the internal police of this Colony, be always reserved to the people of the said Colony; and we do further call upon the nations of Europe, and appeal to the great Arbiter and Governour of the Empires of the World, to witness for us that this declaration did not originate in ambition, or in an impatience of lawful authority, but that we were driven to it, in obedience to the first principles of nature, by the oppressions and cruelties of the aforesaid King and Parliament of Great Britain, as the only possible measure that was left us to preserve and establish our liberties, and to transmit them inviolate to posterity.”

Ordered, That this Declaration be signed at the table, and that the President deliver it in Congress.

The Committee appointed to wait on the Captains of the Row-Galleys, &c., made their Report; which was read, and is in the following words:

“That they had proceeded to said Fleet in order to execute their appointment, and waited on said Captains, (the Commodore being gone to Philadelphia.) who declare solemnly that they would pursue no measure that would involve the Fleet in confusion, or in anywise incapacitate them from serving the publick in the most effectual manner for the support, safety, and defence of this Province, further than that they would not submit to, but would ever protest against, the advancement of Captain Davidson, whom the Committee of Safety have appointed Commodore of said Fleet; and further requested to be heard by this Board, or the Convention, respecting the premises, as will appear by a declaration of said Captains to said Board.

“J. BLEWER, ROBERT LOLLER,
“T. LEVIS, JOHN COLHOON.”
“M. BIRD,

The Committee also delivered a written Report of the Captains of the Provincial Galleys; which was read, and is in the following words, viz:

“We, the said Commanders, do resolve to abide by the determination set forth in our Remonstrance of the 18th instant to the Committee of Safety, respecting the appointment of a Commodore. We do therefore warmly remonstrate against any such appointment, and declare to this Board that we will not submit to it. We do also report to the sub-Committee that the reports which have prevailed in town about our going on board the Province ship, to strike the broad pennant, with boats manned and armed, are false, and without the least foundation. There was not a single firearm in one of the boats, neither the smallest appearance of hostility or design on our parts. Even orders were given to our men not to stir out of their boats, or attempt to come on board the ship. We do pray, when convenient, that we may have a hearing before the honourable the Committee of Conference, or Convention. In the interim, your Committee may rest assured that we will constantly remain in the line of our duty, for the defence of our River and Province, and that no differences of whatsoever kind shall interfere with the good of the publick, and the glorious cause in which we are engaged.

“H. DOUGHERTY,
“JOHN HAMILTON,
“JAMES MONTGOMERY,
“RICHARD EYRES, “ALEXANDER HENDERSON,
“HUGH MONTGOMERY,
“WILLIAM GAMBLE, (of Fire-Ship.)
“BENJAMIN THOMSON,
“ROBERT HUME.”

Ordered, That the above Reports lie on the table for perusal of the Members.

On motion, Resolved, unanimously, That the same Committee be appointed to wait on the Committee of Safety, and desire a conference on the subject-matter of their Report from their conversation with the Captains of the Row-Galleys, &c., in the service of this Province, and to make report of their proceedings in the premises.

Resolved, That Messrs. Bayard, Rush, and Smith, be a Committee to prepare a draft of an Address to the Associators of this Province, on the subject of embodying four thousand five hundred men.

The Committee appointed to devise ways and means, &c., made their Report; which, being read, was referred to to-morrow.

The Committee appointed to wait on the Committee of Safety, reported in the following words:

“That, in conversation, they found they were willing to agree to anything with this Conference, in reason, that would promote harmony and good order; and, further, that any of the Conference was welcome to examine any of their accounts or proceedings.

“J. BLEWER, ROBERT LOLLER,
“M. BIRD, JOHN COLHOON.”

Tuesday, June 25, 1776.

The Conference met.

The Conference resumed the consideration of the Report on the ways and means, &c.; and after full consideration,

Resolved, unanimously, That it be recommended to the Associators of the City of Philadelphia, and the several Counties, to embody themselves in the following proportion, viz:

City of Philadelphia , -	210	Brought up, -	2,754
County of Philadelphia , -	746	Berks , - - - -	666
Bucks , - - - -	400	Northampton , - -	346
Chester , - - - -	652	York , - - - -	400
Lancaster , - - -	746	Cumberland , - - -	334
	2,754		4,500
Troops under Colonel Miles , - - - - -	-		1,500
		Men, -	6,000

Resolved, unanimously, That the four thousand five hundred Militia recommended to be raised, be formed into six Battalions; each Battalion to be commanded by one Colonel, one Lieutenant-Colonel, and one Major; the Staff to consist of a Chaplain, a Surgeon, an Adjutant, a Quartermaster, and a Surgeon's Mate; and to have one Sergeant-Major, one Quartermaster-Sergeant, a Drum-Major, and a Fife-Major; and to be composed of nine Companies, viz: eight Battalion Companies, to consist of a Captain, two Lieutenants, one Ensign, four Sergeants, four Corporals, a Drummer, a Fifer, and sixty-six Privates, each; and one Rifle Company, to consist of a Captain, three Lieutenants, four Sergeants, four Corporals, one Drummer, one Fifer, and eighty Privates—excepting that for the Chester County Battalion; one Company of Artillery is to be raised in the City of Philadelphia, instead of a Rifle Company.

Resolved, unanimously, That it be recommended to the Committees of Inspection and Observation for the City and Liberties, &c., of Philadelphia, and for each County, to order the Militia aforesaid to be raised out of the Battalions associated within their respective limits, in such proportion as they shall judge most equal.

Resolved, unanimously, That the Committee of Inspection and Observation in each County wherein a whole Battalion is to be raised, shall nominate and appoint the Field and other Officers to command such Battalion; and that the Committees aforesaid of the City and the Counties wherein only a part of the Battalion is to be raised, shall have the right, respectively, to nominate and appoint the Field-Officers and other Officers, as nearly as may be, in proportion to the number of men raised in the same; and they are desired to send sub-Committees to confer together on such appointments, that harmony may prevail in this whole transaction.

Resolved, unanimously, That each Private procure his own Musket or Rifle, with the other accoutrements required by Congress; but if they cannot be procured, it is recommended to the Colonels of the several Battalions in this Province to lend the Colonels of the Battalions now to be raised the Muskets which have been made by order of the House of Assembly, and have been delivered to them for the use of the Militia; and the Colonels are hereby authorized and directed to receive the arms so to be delivered, and to lend the same to such Privates as cannot procure arms for themselves, until the expiration of the present service; and if any Private shall neglect or refuse to return the arms to him lent, in good order, to the Colonel of the Battalion to which he belongs, at the end of the service, the original price thereof shall be deducted out of his pay.

Resolved, unanimously, That it be recommended to the Committees aforesaid to advance to each Private engaging in this service the sum of fifty shillings, being the first month's pay, and also to furnish one Camp-kettle for every six men; and to take particular care that the Troops now recommended to be imbodyed provide themselves with good Arms and Accoutrements, a Blanket, a Haversack, and a Knapsack, each, at their own expense; the Camp-kettles to be returned to the Colonels of the respective Battalions at the end of the campaign.

On motion, Resolved, That it be recommended to the Committee of Safety of this Province to confine the command of Commodore Davidson to the Ship-of-War and Floating-Battery belonging to the Province; and to issue no orders to the Captains or other Officers of the Row-Galleys, Fire-Ship, or Fire-Rafts, through the said Commodore, until the Convention meets; and that it be recommended to the Captains and other Officers of the Galleys, &c., to pay all due obedience to the Committee of Safety until that time, and until a new appointment shall take place.

Resolved, That Messrs. Hill, Smith, and Blewer, be a Committee to wait on the Committee of Safety, with a copy of the said Resolution.

The above Committee report that they have delivered the said recommendation to the Committee of Safety, which was then sitting.

Resolved, That it be recommended to every County and District Committee in this Province to pay the strictest attention to the examination of all strangers or persons travelling through the City or Counties, and permit no persons travelling through the City or Counties to remain therein, unless they produce a pass or certificate from the City, County, or District Committee from whence they last came; and it is further recommended to all Committees to furnish proper passes to all friends to American liberty, upon their application therefor.

The Committee appointed to prepare a draft of an Address to the Associators, on the subject of imbodying four thousand five hundred men, in consequence of the Resolution of Congress, &c., presented a draft thereof; which was read.

By special order, the same was read a second time, and agreed to unanimously, and is as follows, viz:

“To the Associators of PENNSYLVANIA:

“GENTLEMEN: The only design of our meeting together was to put an end to our own power in the Province, by fixing upon a plan for calling a Convention to form a Government under the authority of the people; but the sudden and unexpected separation of the late Assembly has compelled us to undertake the execution of a resolve of Congress for calling forth four thousand five hundred of the Militia of the Province, to join the Militia of the neighbouring Colonies, to form a camp for our immediate protection. We presume only to recommend the plan we have formed to you, trusting that, in a case of so much consequence, your love of virtue and zeal for liberty will supply the want of authority delegated to us expressly for that purpose.

“We need not remind you that you are now furnished with new motives to animate and support your courage. You are not about to contend against the power of Great Britain in order to displace one set of villains to make room for another. Your arms will not be enervated in the day of battle with the reflection that you are to risk your lives or shed your blood for a British tyrant, or that your posterity will have your work to do over again. You are about to contend for permanent freedom, to be supported by a Government which will be derived from yourselves, and which will have for its object, not the emolument of one man, or class of men, only, but the safety, liberty, and happiness of every individual in the community.

“We call upon you, therefore, by the respect and obedience which are due to the authority of the United Colonies, to concur in this important measure. The present campaign will probably decide the fate of America. It is now in your power to immortalize your names, by mingling your achievements with the events of the year 1776, a year which, we hope, will be famed in the annals of history to the end of time, for establishing, upon a lasting foundation, the liberties of one quarter of the globe.

“Remember, the honour of our Colony is at stake. Should you desert the common cause at the present juncture, the glory you have acquired by your former exertions of strength and virtue will be tarnished, and our friends and brethren who are now acquiring laurels in the most remote parts of America will reproach us, and blush to own themselves natives or inhabitants of Pennsylvania.

“But there are other motives before you. Your houses, your fields, the legacies of your ancestors, or the dear-bought fruits of your own industry, and your liberty, now urge you to the field. These cannot plead with you in vain. Or we might point out to you, further, your wives, your children, your aged fathers and mothers, who now look up to you for aid, and hope for salvation in this day of calamity only from the instrumentality of your swords.

“Signed by a unanimous order of the Conference:

“THOMAS MCKEAN, President.”

Resolved, unanimously, That thanks be given to the President for his impartiality and close attention to the business of this Conference.

Resolved, unanimously, That the thanks of this Conference be given to the Committee of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, &c., for their unwearied endeavours in the publick service, and particularly for their patriotick exertions in carrying into execution the Resolve of Congress of 15th May last, for suppressing all authority under the Crown of Great Britain.

Then the Conference dissolved itself.

THOMAS MCKEAN, President.

JONATHAN B. SMITH, }
SAMUEL C. MORRIS, } Secretaries.

To the Honourable the Committee of Safety of the Province of PENNSYLVANIA:

The Remonstrance of the Captains of the Row-Galleys belonging to this Province, respectfully sheweth:

That your Remonstrants, understanding that this Board is about to appoint Captain Samuel Davidson to the Commodoreship or chief command of the Fleet for the defence of our river and Province, conceive that said appointment would be contrary to every rule of war and the custom of all nations, because he is one of the youngest Captains in the service, and cannot be put over the heads of senior Commanders on any other principle than as an insult offered to them, and with a design to render the service disgusting and disagreeable, especially as he has borne little or no part in training up the service, and bringing it to a perfection which has convinced the publick of its great utility in defending the Province against the attacks of the enemy, and as he had not the least share in the late engagements with the enemy's ships of war: They do, therefore, warily remonstrate against any such appointment, and declare to this Board that they will not submit to it, nor will they obey any Commander so irregularly set over them. And lest this Board should imagine that your Remonstrants intend to resign their commissions in case such an appointment should take place, they would inform this Board that, as the safety of their country appears to require it, they mean to continue in the service, and to appeal to the justice of their country; and they have not the least doubt of obtaining ample redress from that publick which it has ever been their greatest glory to serve with fidelity. They do further remonstrate against any appointment of Marine Officers to command the Row-Galleys now on the stocks, seeing they are built upon a larger and better construction, as this Board must know that it is equally contrary to custom and the laws of war, and tending to fix a stigma upon the elder Commanders without showing reason therefor, and thereby holding up to the publick suspicions of their want of abilities. Your Remonstrants conceive that the line of appointment is plain and easy, and can never be deviated from without manifest injury to the characters of those over whose heads the appointment is made: they do, therefore, object to all such appointments; and, as they wish not to be troublesome to this Board, they conclude with requesting that, whatever fate their Remonstrance may meet with, this Board would be kind enough forthwith to inform them of what they mean to do in the matter, that your Remonstrants may have it in their power to pursue that line of conduct which shall enable them to obtain from their country that justice which may be denied them by this Board.

Signed for and by order of the whole:

H. DOUGHERTY,
JOHN RICE,
JOHN HAMILTON.

NEW-JERSEY CONVENTION TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 19, 1776.]

Provincial Congress of New-Jersey, Burlington, }
June 18, 1776. }

Our Colony has, of late, been alarmed with sundry attempts of disaffected persons to create disturbances. The Proclamation of William Franklin, our late Governour, for calling together the Assembly, is one of those which we have thought deserving the most serious attention. Enclosed we have sent a copy of certain resolves, which we have thought necessary to pass on the occasion, together with a copy of our instructions to Colonel Heard.

We this minute received, by express from Colonel Heard, a letter, of which the enclosed is a copy. We have ordered Mr. Franklin down to this place under guard, and now beg leave to submit to the consideration of Congress whether it would not be for the general good of the United Colonies that Mr. Franklin should be removed to some other Colony. Congress will easily see the reasons of this application, as Mr. Franklin, we presume, would be capable of doing less mischief in Connecticut or Pennsylvania than in New-Jersey. Whatever advice Congress may think proper to give us we shall be glad to receive, and would further intimate that the countenance and approbation of the Continental Congress would satisfy some persons who might otherwise be disposed to blame us. The enclosed printed papers will show what steps we have taken with respect to the Militia.

I am, sir, your most humble servant.

By order of Congress:

SAMUEL TUCKER, President.

To President Hancock.

Proceedings of Convention of New-Jersey respecting the apprehending WILLIAM FRANKLIN, Esq., late Governour of that Colony.

In Provincial Congress, New-Jersey, }
June 14, 1776. }

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Congress, the Proclamation of William Franklin, Esq., late Governour of

New-Jersey, bearing date on the 30th day of May last, in the name of the King of Great Britain, appointing a meeting of the General Assembly to be held on the 30th day of this instant, June, ought not to be obeyed.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Congress, the said William Franklin, Esq., by such his Proclamation, has acted in direct contempt and violation of the Resolve of the Continental Congress of the 15th day of May last.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Congress, the said William Franklin, Esq., has discovered himself to be an enemy to the liberties of this country, and that measures ought to be immediately taken for securing the person of the said William Franklin, Esq.

Resolved, That, in the opinion of this Congress, all payments of money on account of salary or otherwise to the said William Franklin, Esq., as Governour, ought from henceforth to cease, and that the Treasurer or Treasurers of this Province shall account for the moneys in their hands to this Congress, or to the future Legislature of this Colony.

Resolved, That the following order issue to Colonel Nathaniel Heard, of Middlesex County:

"The Provincial Congress of New-Jersey, reposing great confidence in your zeal and prudence, have thought fit to entrust to your care the execution of the enclosed Resolves. It is the desire of Congress that this necessary business be conducted with all the delicacy and tenderness which the nature of the business can possibly admit. For this end, you will find among the papers the form of a written Parole, in which there is left a blank space for you to fill up, at the choice of Mr. Franklin, with the name of Princeton, Bordentown, or his own farm at Rancocus. When he shall have signed the Parole, the Congress will rely upon his honour for the faithful performance of his engagements; but should he refuse to sign the Parole, you are desired to put him under strong guard, and keep him in close custody until the further orders of this Congress. Whatever expense may be necessary for this service will be cheerfully defrayed by the Congress. We refer to your discretion what means to use for that purpose; and you have full power and authority to take to your aid whatever force you may require."

The following is a copy of a Letter from Colonel Heard:

"Amboy, June 17, 1776.

"SIR: Agreeable to an order and resolve of the Provincial Congress lately sent to me, I this morning, with Major Deare, went to Governour Franklin, and desired him to comply with the order of Congress, and sign the Parole sent me, which he absolutely refused to do, and forbade me, at my peril, to carry the order into execution. We then left the Governour's house, and ordered a company of Militia, which were in readiness, to attend, and have placed a guard of about sixty men at and around his house. I expect he will persist in refusing to comply, and therefore send this per express, and beg the further directions of Congress respecting this matter as soon as possible by return of the bearer, and shall act accordingly.

"I am, in great haste, sir, your most humble servant,

"NATHANIEL HEARD.

"To Samuel Tucker, Esq., President of the Provincial Congress, New-Jersey."

In Provincial Congress, New-Jersey, Burlington, }
June 18, 1776. }

Ordered, unanimously, That a copy of the following Letter, signed by the President, be sent to Colonel Heard:

"SIR: It is the desire of Congress that you immediately bring William Franklin, Esq., to this place, under such guard as you may think sufficient."

True copies: WILLIAM PATTERSON, Secretary.

SAMUEL TUCKER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Burlington, New-Jersey, June 18, 1776.

SIR: Some time in March last, by order of our Committee of Safety, I sent, by Messrs. Livingston and De Hart, some counterfeit bills of Continental currency, done, as appeared by the affidavits accompanying the same, by a woman and her husband, then confined in Morris County jail. The Representatives of that County having informed our Convention that the said woman and her husband still remain in confinement, that they are very poor, and are supported by the County, I am, therefore, directed by our Convention to apply to you for direction what Congress intend shall be further done with those poor wretches—whether they be detained in jail, or what further punishment they may have subjected themselves to. Your answer will oblige your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

COURT OF INQUIRY ON CAPTAIN COPP.

At a Court of Inquiry, held at the house of Mrs. Montagnie, on the 18th day of June, 1776, to examine into the conduct of Captain Copp, upon complaint of Lieutenant-Colonel Zedwitz, for assaulting and striking him:

Present: Colonel Nixon, President.

Members:

Colonel McDougall ,	Lieut. Colonel Weisensfels ,
Colonel Webb ,	Major Colborn ,
Lieut. Colonel Hall ,	Major Tuttle .
Lieut. Colonel Nixon ,

For want of evidence, adjourned till ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Court met, according to adjournment, at ten o'clock, on the 19th. Present, the same Members as yesterday.

The Court unanimously agreed (upon hearing the parties and witnesses) that Captain Copp was not guilty of assaulting Colonel Zedwitz; and the parties have agreed to compromise the matter.

It appeared in the course of the examination of the dispute between Colonel Zedwitz and Captain Copp, that insinuations of cowardice had been thrown out by Colonel Zedwitz against Captain Copp relative to his conduct in the attempt of storming Quebeck, on the 31st of December last. The charge appears to the Court to be groundless, and to have originated from a mistake of Colonel Zedwitz, for which he has expressed his sorrow to Captain Copp, in the presence of the Court, and which is satisfactory to Captain Copp.

JOHN NIXON, President.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Albany, June 18, 1776.

SIR: The honourable the Continental Congress having ordered four battalions of Militia to be sent from your Province into Canada, I do, in obedience to his Excellency General Washington's commands, signify to you the route I wish them to take.

You will please to order them to march by the most direct road to Skenesborough, where they will find boats to convey them to St. Johns; the baggage to be sent by this place to Fort George, and thence to Ticonderoga, under an officer's guard, where the troops will halt and take it in.

You will please to send an officer before they march, to acquaint me on what day they will probably reach Skenesborough, that I may give the necessary orders for supplying them with batteaus, &c.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable the President or Commander-in-Chief of the Province of the Massachusetts-Bay.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO MESHECH WEARE.

Albany, June 18, 1776.

SIR: The honourable the Continental Congress having ordered two battalions of Militia to be sent from New-Hampshire to reinforce the Army in Canada, I do, in obedience to General Washington's commands, signify to you the route I wish them to take.

You will please to order them to march by the most direct road either to Onion River or to Crown Point; the difference in the water conveyance will make no great odds; the goodness of the roads, and the greater length of the march to the one or the other place is, therefore, chiefly to be considered. I am not able to point out which is best, and you will be able to inform yourself much better, and give the orders, as you shall judge most advantageous for the service.

You will please to send me an officer express to advise me of the day on which they will probably arrive at Lake Champlain, and at what place, that I may give the necessary orders for furnishing batteaus.

A very great part of Colonel Bedel's Regiment is deserted; I hope it will be in the power of the inhabitants to apprehend them, and beg you will give the necessary orders for it.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable the President or Commander-in-Chief of the Colony of New-Hampshire.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, at Hartford, June 18, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, the Deputy-Governour, William Williams, R. Law, T. Hosmer, B. Huntington, Esquires.

On Application of Mr. Moseley:

Voted, That an Order be drawn on Elderkin & Wales's Powder-Mill for two hundred pounds of Powder, in favour of Timothy Strong, Selectman of Woodbury, to be paid at such price as shall be fixed by this Board, thirty-eight pounds of which Powder had been lent by said Town for publick use, and to be considered.

(Order given. Delivered Esquire Moseley.)

Voted, That an Order of £400 be drawn in favour of Job Winslow, to be accounted for on his Bill, for building the Row-Galley Crane, at East-Haddam, &c.

(Order given. Delivered said Winslow.)

Dismissed.

At a meeting of the Governour, &c., at Hartford, Wednesday, June 19, 1776:

On motion, &c., Voted, An Order be drawn on the Pay-Table for Captain Uriah Hayden, for the sum of £400, to be accounted for on his Bill, for building the Colony Ship built by him, &c., to be settled on his Account for said service.

(Order given. Delivered Captain Shipman.)

Voted, An Order to be drawn in favour of James Tilley, in so far payment of his Bill for Rigging, &c., bought by him for the use of the Colony, the sum of £700, to be settled on his Bill or Account of such supplies.

(Order delivered Mr. Tilley.)

Appointed Ebenezer Peck Second Lieutenant, and as Lieutenant of Marines, under Captain McCleave, for the Whiting Galley.

Appointed William Plymate Master of said Galley.

Appointed Amos Stanton Second Lieutenant, and as Lieutenant of Marines on board the Galley Shark, at Norwich.

Appointed William Wilber Master of said Galley.

Allowed and voted, That the Marines on board the Vessels and Galleys finding themselves a Gun and Cartouch-box, shall be allowed six shillings for the same.

Ordered, That four of the Colony Cannon now in the custody of Colonel Jonathan Fitch, at New-Haven, and taken from the Minerva, and proportion of Shot, and about twelve Canister-Shot, be delivered Captain McCleave, for the use of the Galley Whiting.

Order given, and delivered said McCleave; and that Captain McCleave receive, also, twenty-five pounds of Powder of Colonel Fitch.

Voted, That the residue of the Colony Cannon at New-Haven be placed, for the present, in the Fort at Black-Rock, in the care of Captain Thompson; and the two at said Town without carriages, be mounted; and that Captain Thompson take care to have it done in a prudent, reasonable manner.

(Order given, and delivered G. Thompson.)

Voted, That Captain Thompson be enabled to build a cheap Barrack near Black-Rock, for the use of the Company there, employing his own men to do the labour, and to expend for Timber, Boards, and Nails, &c., not exceeding £25.

(Order given accordingly.)

Allowed an Account of Captain Thompson's for many sundries of Timber, Plank, Rum, &c., for and about building the Fort, &c., to the amount of £74 10s. 8d.

(Order given. Delivered said Thompson.)

And also Voted, An Order for Mr. James Rice, for £200, to be accounted for on settlement of his Account, for sundry services about the Galley, &c. (Order given.)

Dismissed.

At a meeting of the Governour, &c., at Hartford, June 20, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, the Honourable Deputy-Governour, E. Dyre, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, Richard Law, Titus Hosmer, B. Huntington, Jedediah Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, That six tons of nine-pound Shot be cast at the Furnace at Salisbury.

That two and a half tons of one and one-and-a-half-pound Shot, sorted to the Swivels, be also cast.

That the Pigs cast there lie undisposed of for the present.

Ordered, That Captain Tinker, of the Crane galley, proceed directly for New-London.

Settled the Account of Colonel Sears; having before allowed, (as per page 129,) £776 3s. 6d., which, being a partial account, the remainder, being £197 14s. 6d., is now allowed, and ordered to be drawn for, his whole Account being £1298 10s. 8d., York money, equal to £973 18s., lawful money; the rest, being in lawful money £197 14s. 6d., as above, now allowed, and order drawn.

An Account of Colonel Jonathan Fitch, for sundry purchases for Stores, &c., for the Brig Defence, had been laid and referred to a sub-Committee, and examined, amounting to £640 5s. 11d., he having before received of the Treasurer £500; the balance is now allowed, and ordered to be drawn for, being £140 5s. 11d.

(Order drawn, and delivered said Fitch at Hartford.)

Dismissed.

At a meeting of the Governour, &c., at Hartford, June 21, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, the Honourable Deputy-Governour, Colonel Dyre, Colonel Huntington, William Williams, and Richard Law, Esquires.

Voted, That an Order be drawn on Colonel Pitkin's Powder-Mill for two hundred pounds of Powder, in favour of the Selectmen of . . . . ., they to account with the Governour and Council, for Colony use, at such price as said Governour and Council shall affix.

(An Order given.)

Dismissed.

THOMAS RICHARDSON TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

New-London, June 18, 1776.

SIR: I came to this place on Sunday evening, and was much surprised to learn that Mr. Hollingsworth had not returned from Hartford, where he went on Thursday last to demand the cannon of Governour Trumbull, in consequence of the order of Congress. When he saw his Honour, he could not obtain the cannon until the Assembly met, which was appointed on Saturday. When they met, they could not come to any determination until the western post arrived, by whom they expected an answer from Congress to the remonstrance they sent forward in consequence of the first demand we made when we presented your order. The post came in without any answer, and on Sunday evening they determined to send six of the heaviest cannon, and detain the remainder until they should hear the fate of their remonstrance. We have shipped the six cannon on board of a vessel of Mr. Shaw's, which the Governour gave us an order for, and are now preparing to get part of our way towards York this evening. I am much afraid the delays we have met with, and at last being obliged to return with little better than half of our errand, will be as disagreeable to those that sent us as to ourselves; but as we are not conscious of neglecting any part of our duty, we hope to meet the approbation of our employers. We learn by some vessels which left this port on Sunday evening, that there is a sloop tender cruising off Montauk Point, which was the occasion of their putting back again. We make no doubt but you have, or will forward the Fly, as soon as you possibly can, consistently with safety, as we shall wait with the greatest impatience in York for her arrival. Congress have demanded of this Colony seven thousand troops to be raised immediately, in consequence of information that an attempt is to be made on New-York by the British troops in a very few days; this ought, in our opinion, to hurry the cannon, that, in case they cannot be got further, they may be appropriated to the defence of that place in the present emergency.

I am, with the greatest regard, your very humble servant,

THOMAS RICHARDSON.

To Commodore Esek Hopkins.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN WHIPPLE.

Providence, June 18, 1776.

SIR: I have received advice that the British ships are driven out of Boston Bay. I think that harbour the safest to send any prizes you may take anywhere to the eastward of the Shoals. There was a ship and a brig taken by the Connecticut brig and four schooners, yesterday, with two hundred and ten soldiers on board. The ship had ten six-pounders, and fought well. I am, in haste, your friend,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Abraham Whipple, Esq., Commander of the Columbus.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN JONES.

Providence, June 18, 1776.

SIR: I have received orders that you proceed to Boston in the room of Newburyport. You are to make all the despatch there you can. The ships of war are driven out of that Bay, and I believe that port is the safest to send in prizes of any on the Continent. I am your friend, ESEK HOPKINS, Com. in Chief.

To John P. Jones, Esq., Commander of the Providence; Newport.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN BIDDLE.

Providence, June 18, 1776.

SIR: I have received intelligence that the British ships are driven out of Boston Bay, and that two transports are taken with two hundred and ten soldiers on board. I think it will be best, if you should take any prizes eastward of the Shoals, to send them to Boston.

Should the Providence not get to Boston, where she is ordered, you will call on Mr. John Bradford, and take a vessel loaded with coal, and convoy it to the Capes of Philadelphia, or into the river. I am your friend,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Nicholas Biddle, Esq., Commander of the Andrew Doria.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO JOHN BRADFORD.

Providence, June 18, 1776.

SIR: I received your letter of the 17th instant. I had before given Captain Jones, of the Providence, orders to sail for Newburyport. I shall send an express immediately to Newport, if she is not sailed, to proceed directly to Boston. There being no coal to be had in this Government, I think it will be best to bring what you can with you.

Please to send a line to Captain Jones, of the Providence, to Newburyport, to come to Boston, or where you think best, if he has sailed before my express arrives at Newport.

You will be good enough to supply any of the Continental vessels under my command with any necessaries they may want.

I am, with great respect, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Mr. John Bradford, Agent for the Fleet at Boston.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE COMMITTEE OF OBSERVATION FOR WORCESTER COUNTY.

[No. 27.]

Annapolis, June 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Wallace, and sundry other gentlemen in company, are about to set up and carry on a Salt work on the seaboard in your County. It is, in our opinion, a matter of so much consequence to the publick as to merit every possible encouragement; and therefore request you to forward it, by giving the gentlemen engaged therein your friendly assistance. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation of Worcester County.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Philadelphia, June 19, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed resolves I do myself the honour of transmitting, in obedience to the commands of Congress, and beg leave to request your immediate attention to the same.

The Congress approve the proposal in your letter, and join in opinion with you, considering the very critical situation of our affairs in Canada, that it will be best to send the two battalions into that Province, although they were not raised with a view to that department.

The late act of your Assembly for engaging one-third of the Militia on the sea-coast, and one-fourth in the interior parts of your Colony, for the defence of your own and the neighbouring Colonies, falls far short of the object Congress had in view by their resolution of the 3d of June. I must, therefore, request you will adopt such measures as in your judgment will be most likely to comply with their requisition of that date. I send herewith the blank commissions, to be filled up agreeably to the resolve of Congress.

I am to request that you will deliver to the Agent of the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania the cannon and trucks ordered by Congress to be taken from thence; and also to inform you that the Congress expect this resolution will be immediately complied with.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull, Lebanon, Connecticut.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, June 19, 1776.

SIR: Since my letter on the 18th instant, I have nothing further in charge from Congress that particularly relates to yourself, or the Army immediately under your command.

I have written to the Conventions of the Jerseys and New-York, and to the Assembly of Connecticut, on the subject of the resolve enclosed in my last, and have pressed them to a compliance with the request therein contained.

Mr. Bedford, who is appointed Mustermaster-General, I have directed to repair to Head-Quarters immediately, and have delivered him his commission. You will please to appoint a Deputy Mustermaster-General for the department of Canada.

I do myself the honour of writing to Governour Trumbull by this conveyance, and transmitting a copy of sundry resolves respecting his Government. I also forward him blank commissions.

Your several favours to the 17th instant have been duly received, and are at this time before Congress. As soon as I have it in my power, I shall, with particular pleasure, transmit the result.

The carpenters, mentioned in the resolve of the 17th, I shall send to General Schuyler directly from this city.

The enclosed resolves I transmit, to which I beg leave to refer you.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. I have been so engaged that I have not had opportunity to confer with the other Delegates of Massachusetts on the subject of your letter, but beg leave to refer the matter to you, fully convinced that you will send such officer as will effectually execute your and our wish. I will do myself the honour to address you by next post.

CAPTAIN CHARLES POND TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sloop Schuyler, Fire-Island, June 19, 1776.

I have the pleasure of informing his Excellency of our taking two prizes—one a ship of two hundred and fifty tons burden, the other a sloop of thirty-five tons, bound to Sandy Hook; the ship, from Glasgow, with one company of the Forty-Second Regiment, was taken by one of Admiral Hopkins's fleet, who took the soldiers on board, and sent the ship for Rhode-Island. Soon after, she was taken by the Cerberus frigate, and sent under convoy of the above said sloop for Sandy Hook. Remaining on board the ship, five commissioned officers, with two ladies and four privates; total prisoners, twenty. Stores on board ship Crawford—thirteen tierces of beef, eleven tierces of pork, three thousand weight of bread, four puncheons of rum, one hundred barrels of coal, ten firkins of butter, and one cask of cheese. On board the sloop—fifteen casks of molasses, two chests of dry goods, one tierce and one barrel of kegs of powder, one case of flints, and some saltpetre. The ship is part of the way in the inlet, but at present is aground. Pray send directions about the prisoners, as I am short-handed.

CHARLES POND, Captain.

GENERAL SCOTT TO GARRET ROORBACK.

New-York, June 19, 1776.

MR. ROORBACK: I have just received information that the Westchester Company of Colonel Drake's Regiment will be in town this evening, and the Colonel has prudently sent notice of it, that quarters and subsistence may be provided for them. You are therefore to look to the providing them with quarters, and to wait on the Commissary-General, to whom I now write, respecting their subsistence.

JOHN MORIN SCOTT, Brig. Gen.

To Mr. Garret Roorback, Barrackmaster.

KINGS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Kings County, June 19, 1776.

Agreeable to the resolves of the Honourable Provincial Congress, for raising the new levies of troops, was nominated and appointed, Jaques Rapelje, Captain, George Carpenter, Second Lieutenant.

Copy of the Minutes:

JOHN LEFFERTS, Chairman.

B. VAN BRUNT, Col. of Kings Co. Reg.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, June 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Whilst I was in conference with the Oneida Indians who returned from Canada, I received a letter from General Arnold, and another from Doctor Stringer, copy of one and extract of the other I do myself the honour to enclose your Excellency, and congratulate you on the success of our arms, as communicated by Dr. Stringer. I could wish he had been more explicit. That we have had the advantage, I believe admits of no doubt, as Captain Livingston, my Aid-de-camp, who is at Fort George, informs me that a Mr. Hide was arrived, who gives much the same account, but adds that General Thompson had been on the point of losing his batteaus, as a party of the enemy had been sent to seize them.

As soon as we had finished the conference with the Indians I returned home, intending immediately to have despatched an express with the intelligence communicated as above, but I was so violently attacked by the fever (and have been for three days successively) that I could neither write nor dictate, nor hardly read your Excellency's favour of the 16th, which was then delivered me.

The return alluded to in mine of the 12th, I had enclosed in that of the 11th and 12th, of which I only sent you a copy, General Wooster having taken charge of the original, and which I hope has come to hand.

Mr. Deane, whom I sent with the Message to invite the Indians to a conference, is returned from Oneida, from whence the Message and belt were carried on to the other tribes by a trusty Oneida.

The batteaumen of three batteaus, who got off when the others were stopped some time ago upon the Mohawk River by the Committee of Tryon County, are returned; they were not permitted to go farther than Niagara. The intelligence they bring is, that, as soon as it was known there that Sir John Johnson was gone off, a vessel, with twenty-five barrels of pork, as much flour, and some sugar and rum, was despatched to Oswegatchie; that the commanding officer declared that there were one thousand Indians there, chiefly of the Western Nations; that it was given out that Butler intended to hold a conference at Oswego, and that they had plenty of provisions.

As these batteauxmen, if not Tories, were under the influence of a Mr. Ellis, who is greatly suspected of being our enemy, I do not give full credit to what they say, especially as to the article of provisions and the number of Indians, for the Oneidas informed Mr. Deane that all the Six Nations were at home except a small part of the Senecas.

I had already anticipated your Excellency's wish that I should purchase all the goods I could get at this place and its vicinity, having employed proper persons the very day I returned from Fort George; but the difficulty we labour under is want of hard money; for some of the merchants, especially a Mr. Blake, whom I have mentioned before, would not sell a good assortment he had, although his price was not disputed, and although I had caused him to be informed that I had entreated your Excellency to give order for the payment of his bill in hard money if it could be got.

The disorder I labour under greatly distresses me, and has brought me very low; but my presence is judged, both by my colleagues and the Oneidas, so absolutely necessary at the ensuing treaty, that I am resolved to be there, and will go in a close carriage, if I cannot otherwise.

June 20th, eight o'clock, A. M.—I could not proceed with my letter of last night, as my fever, after an absence of two hours, returned, and has continued until half an hour ago; since which I have received a letter from Colonel Wynkoop, enclosing a copy of one from Colonel Poor to him, dated the 15th, at St. Johns, and advises that "our Army are now on their retreat out of Canada, and, as there is not batteaux enough here to transport our men and baggage over the Lake, you will immediately send all the boats that can be procured to St. Johns. Pray, sir, don't fail, as a safe retreat may depend upon it. You will likewise order the shipping down, and let them stop near the middle of Isle of Motte, it being best for them to stop there, as the navigation this way of it is very difficult."

I have ordered all the batteaux in Lake George to be carried to Ticonderoga, that they might be ready to go to Skenesborough to take in the Militia of the Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut, whom I have desired to march to that place; those of New-Hampshire to Crown Point or Onion River, as should be deemed most convenient for them; those from this Colony I propose sending by Lake George. I find myself under a great dilemma. If I send on the batteaux the Militia cannot move; but I do not conceive the necessity of moving the Militia farther than Ticonderoga if our Army is obliged to retreat. I shall therefore order the batteaux to be forwarded, unless General Sullivan advises otherwise, whose express left Fort George before Mr. Lansing, who brought me the above letter, and informs me (as what he had from the express) that General Thompson and Colonel Irvine are certainly taken prisoners, and that our people were obliged to retreat, with the loss of about one hundred and twenty men, the enemy being considerably reinforced the evening before the attack.

Your Excellency will see by the enclosed return that the men at Fort George are inadequate, in point of numbers, to keep the garrison, in case of an attack, and man the batteaux, of which there are sometimes twenty and upwards, with five men in each, at once on the Lake, either going to or coming from Ticonderoga. I shall, therefore, at all events, retain a body of Militia there and at Ticonderoga, although the order of Congress is that they are to go into Canada; but as on the preservation of these posts the safety of the Army in Canada does absolutely and immediately depend, I think I shall be justified in the measure both with your Excellency and the Congress.

Yesterday Mr. Trumbull, the Deputy Paymaster-General, received to the amount of six thousand dollars in specie from the Colony of Connecticut. I have ordered it to be immediately forwarded to General Sullivan.

I thank your Excellency for the account of the prize taken to the eastward, and for the account that it is possible some more are taken. I am ever happy to receive such accounts, as I make the most of them to keep up the spirits of the people here, which are really lowered much by the repeated misfortunes in Canada.

I have this moment sent to the Committee to request that the proportion of the Militia of this County, which is four hundred and twenty-five, may be immediately collected, that I may send them to reinforce the garrisons of Fort George and Ticonderoga. Colonel Wynkoop writes me that he has sent on only three companies of Van Schaick's to Canada, not being able by any means to spare the other.

Since my last accounts from Fort George a considerable quantity of provisions has been sent forward. I have desired Mr. Livingston to write fully to Mr. Trumbull on the subject of supplying the Army. No fat cattle are yet to be had; but if they were we cannot get them, as we have not any money, and without immediate payment none will sell, either in this or the adjacent Colonies.

Your Excellency will perceive by General Arnold's letter, that he had seized the effects of the Tories in Montreal: this was in consequence of a query of mine to the commanding officer in Canada, whether such a measure would not be necessary; giving at the same time my opinion that it was, and that these persons ought to be secured and sent down here. Mr. Lansing says that he has been informed that many of these goods were sent to Sorel, where our soldiers seized them as plunder.

June 20, eleven o'clock.—This moment the officer whom General Sullivan sent express has delivered me the enclosed. Taking the whole together of what he and General Arnold write, I do not by any means think the former's resolution to keep post at Sorel a very eligible one, especially when he is "every moment informed of the vast number of the enemy which have arrived;" and although he does not believe "that great numbers have arrived from England, and all the troops from Halifax," yet he apprehends their numbers are very great; and as he has only two thousand five hundred and thirty-three rank and file, to oppose them, and "most of the officers seem discouraged, and, of course, their men." But if your Excellency should be in sentiment with me that he ought to quit Sorel for a place from whence there is a greater prospect of securing a retreat to such part of Lake Champlain where the enemy cannot follow; yet I fear your orders will come too late. I should, however, conceive myself inexcusable if I did not advise it; for the safety of the Colonies depends in a great measure on the safety of that Army; and however disagreeable the consequences may be of evacuating Canada, they cannot ever be equal to the loss of our Army, and with it the whole country. General Sullivan, in his letter to me, confirms me that I am right in the opinion I have given above, for he says: "By the enclosed you will see our situation: our enemies multiply upon our hands, and we have few to oppose them. I believe the whole force intended for Canada has arrived, with Burgoyne at their head. I now think only of a glorious death or a victory obtained against superior numbers."

Although our affairs are in such a disagreeable situation, I do not by any means despond; and do believe, if our Army can retreat into Lake Champlain, that it will be impossible for the enemy to reach as far south as Crown Point—at least not this campaign, and that they will never be able to penetrate into the country; but if our Army is lost, they will go where they please, in spite of our naval force on the Lake, which is by no means an object of much importance, nor will be unless greatly increased, which I shall do with all the despatch I am capable of in my low state of health.

Enclosed is the substance of the conference with the Indians returned from Canada.

I am, dear General, your most obedient humble servant,
PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. Agreeably to General Schuyler's desire, who is sick in bed, I enclose your Excellency a copy of his letter of this date to General Sullivan.

From your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
RICHARD VARICK.

Albany, June 20, 1776.

Montreal, June 10, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received your letter of the 28th ult. to the honourable Commissioners respecting the Oneidas, the 6th instant. There was a meeting of those Indians, and several other tribes, at Caughnawaga, some of whom agreed to deliver up the hatchet received from Governour Carleton last year, and remain neutral in the present dispute. On the 7th they came to Montreal, when, after the usual speeches and ceremonies, they (the St. François, Caughnawagas and Canassadagas) gave up the hatchet. The Oswegatchies pretended they had no authority for doing it; to whom I observed, we were ready to receive them as friends; but if they preferred war to peace, we were ready to meet them as enemies; that we had it in our power to destroy them whenever we pleased, which they would soon be convinced of if they did not lay down the hatchet. The Oneidas received the presents you desired, except the blankets and clouts, which could not be procured in town, having all been sent to Chambly. I gave them an order on the Quartermaster there, but find since that they went directly to St. Johns, and did not receive them.

General Thompson left the Sorel three days since, with two thousand men, for Three Rivers, where are about three or four hundred of the enemy intrenching. One frigate and brigantine and eight sloops and schooners are above Richelieu. I expect every moment to hear of an action between General Thompson and the enemy. A number of Indians and some regular troops are above this place, waiting, as is said, for a reinforcement from above, and for Governour Carleton to advance, when I expect we shall have an opportunity of seeing them here.

I have received your instructions respecting the Tories and their effects; most of the former had absconded; great part of the latter is secured. I have sent to St. Johns a quantity of goods for the use of the Army—some bought and some seized. I am in hopes of fixing on some method in a day or two to have them made up, as they are much wanted.

I am, very respectfully, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

[Extract.]

St. Johns, June 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yesterday Mr. McCarty arrived from Sorel, and brings us an agreeable piece of news, that General Thompson, with two thousand two hundred men, had, last Friday, attacked the enemy, consisting of about four thousand, (I cannot say he attacked with two thousand two hundred, because five or six hundred of his men were on the opposite shore, and never engaged,) and, by the vast havoc our fire made, (which was reserved until we got almost within bayonet reach of the enemy,) they must have lost not less, in three different attacks, than three hundred men; our loss not exceeding twenty. An active officer on horseback, who was continually riding backwards and forwards in the regular Army, supposed to be Maclean, was certainly killed. A minister (one of the chaplains) that stood by and viewed the whole scene, says he never beheld such slaughter as our people made when they fired, resembling much the Bunker-Hill affair. By all accounts I suppose we will have General Sullivan's express to-day; he was to go down from Sorel immediately. A great number of Canadians are joining him, by virtue of a Proclamation; and it is thought not less than two thousand will reinforce him. Butler and Sir John are certainly at the Cedars, with a large body of Indians, and, we have been informed, are intending a visit here, by way of a river that empties itself from thence somewhere into the Lake Champlain, near Point-au-Fer.

I am, &c.,

SAMUEL STRINGER.

To General Schuyler.

At a meeting of thirteen Oneida Indians, upon their return from Canada, on the 19th day of June, 1776, at the house of Samuel Thompson, in the City of Albany:

Present the Honourable Philip Schuyler, Volkert P. Douw, Esq., Commissioners, John T. Bunker, Interpreter.

General Schuyler opened the Conference by saying:

"Brothers: We are glad to see you safe returned, and that the report of so many of the Caughnawaga Brothers being killed, you have found not to be true."

Whereupon, Cornelius, one of their number, said:

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

"Brothers: After we arrived in Caughnawaga, we proceeded to Montreal, where we met with four other Nations. Three of those Nations, to wit: the Scawenedees, Arondax, and Annogongas, brought with them the bloody axe which Guy Johnson gave them last year, and there buried it.

"Brothers: General Arnold thereupon returned them thanks, and promised that he would render them every service in his power, and he hoped they would attend to his advice, and that if they received any injury, he engaged to protect them as far as it laid in his power.

"To which the Caughnawagas replied, that he might be assured they would use their utmost endeavours with such other Indians as had the axe yet in their hands, to cause them to bury it.

"Brothers: We are in a critical situation; our troubles are great; we have engaged ourselves by treaty with you to observe a neutrality in the present dispute; but the Indians are daily successfully urged to take up arms for the King.

"Brother Schuyler: You told us at Lake George, on our way to Canada, that we should be well used, and want for nothing. The officer who accompanied us as far as Ticonderoga used us well; but the officer who went with us from there to St. Johns used us very indifferently, for when we arrived there he left us, without being able to find him again until the next day, when we discovered him at some distance from the place in a house.

"In Canada General Arnold told us that he could not (by reason of other business) bestow much attention on us. Besides, it appeared that he was suspicious of our designs, especially when an officer came into the room, who told him in English (which one of us understood) that we would cut their throats as soon as an opportunity offered, and that we were not to be trusted. We were, however, taken care of by an officer.

"Brother: We expected, according to your promise, that we should have got some necessaries there, instead whereof we have only received two shirts, a pair of stockings, and each of us a hat."

To this General Schuyler replied:

"Brothers of the Oneida Nation: We thank you for the long journey you have taken on our account, and we are pleased that three of the four Nations in Canada have given up the bloody hatchet, and we doubt not but that the Caughnawagas will prevail upon the other Nations to follow their example. We have no reason to doubt that our enemies are daily inducing some of the Indians to take up the hatchet. There are wicked persons in every nation, and with such the enemy can easily succeed in their designs.

"Brothers: Such we have among ourselves. The conduct of the officer who said you were all rascals and not to be trusted, when you were with General Arnold, is a plain proof of it. But I shall take care (if he belongs to the army) to have him confined and severely punished.

"Brothers: I am sorry that you have not been treated in Canada according to my orders, and as I had reason to expect. By the letter I have now in my hands from General Arnold, he informs me that he could not readily get the necessaries you wanted; that when he got them you were gone, and that he has sent them after you. These are his reasons; but to convince you that we esteem you above all other nations, we shall make you a present as a small recompense for your services.

"Brothers: The officer under whose care you went from Ticonderoga to St. Johns, I shall send for and give him a severe reprimand for his ill-conduct.

"Brothers: Mr. Deane lately returned from Oneida; your friends there are all well. I had sent him up to your Nation with a belt, inviting them and the other Nations to a Conference on the 1st of next month, at the German Flats. Your Nation have accepted of the invitation, and sent the belt on to the rest of the Six Nations. I would have had the Council here, but was afraid that the small-pox might spread among you.

"Brothers: I also instructed Mr. Deane to inform your Nation that I intended to send some powder and ball to them. This morning it was to be sent up; but hearing of your arrival, I propose to send it under your care. The wagon will be ready whenever you go, and I desire, Brothers, that it may be conveyed to you as privately as possible.

"Brothers: This supply of ammunition which I give to your Nation, is a plain proof that the fellow at General Arnold's is a scoundrel, and that we have the most unlimited confidence in you. If we distrusted you, would we furnish you with the means of doing us hurt?

"Brothers: I have received from General Washington a letter, informing me that your brethren who went down are treated kindly, and that they may soon be expected here for the purpose of attending at the German Flats, to which Council I also invite you."

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO MARINE COMMITTEE.

Providence, June 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Herewith you have the muster-rolls, as delivered to me, of the Alfred, Columbus, Andrew Doria, Providence, and Fly; the Cabot's Captain Hopkins tells me he sent to Mr. James Reid, Paymaster, a day or two before the brig sailed, and it will not be in his power to send any further account till the brig comes in.

You also have a copy of the account Captain Biddle gave of his (I believe) unsuccessful cruise. You have likewise copies of all the orders I have given the several Commanders since I came in here. Also, a list of the warrants and commissions given to officers in the several vessels. Lieutenant Hinman, Lieutenant Grinnell, and Lieutenant Phipps's commissions, and Joseph Shields and Samuel Tiley's warrants, were given in consequence of Captain Saltonstall's promise before he left Connecticut, if they came and brought the men which we received below Reedy-Island; as also the amount of commissions delivered up to me, and those that are discharged and deserted.

The Columbus is gone out on a cruise. The Providence and Fly went out, but were driven in by a ship, supposed to be the Cerberus; whether they are gone out since, I cannot tell; but I believe not, without they went this day. The Andrew Doria will go out in a day or two. I shall go down with the Alfred, in two or three days, to Newport, and there man her, if possible, though I am in doubt whether I shall be able without help from the commanding officer there for some of his men.

The General Assembly gave me twenty men for the Providence and twenty for the Columbus, to enable me to send them out, who are to be returned when the cruise is over.

I think it will be impossible to man the new ships without taking them out of the Army, or by a general embargo, which will be, in my opinion, much more for the publick good. The enemy taking so many merchant vessels will, in time, get almost all the seamen in their hands, besides supplying them with provisions; when, if encouraged, small privateers would bring in more goods, and if taken would be of no advantage to them, save the men they took in them. It is not possible to get seamen while the merchant vessels give twelve, fourteen, and some sixteen, dollars per month.

I think you will soon find it necessary to order to be condemned all vessels bound to Great Britain, Newfoundland, and Halifax, wherever owned, as they soon will have all the vessels and goods covered as West-India property, when we know that they never send any without insurance in England.

You likewise have a copy of an agreement signed by the ship Alfred's officers and most of the company. Similar articles were signed by the Columbus, Andrew Doria, Cabot, Providence, and Fly's officers and company, some few people on board each vessel excepted. I am in some doubt whether it may not cause some disputes, without the Congress will interfere, and resolve that the articles shall be strictly adhered to by the whole of the several ships' crews.

Lieutenant Hacker has commanded the Fly ever since we took her into service, and has behaved so well that I think he deserves a Captain's commission from you. Lieutenant Hinman is now out in the Cabot, as Commander of her, and I believe is a good officer, and I cannot tell where you can mend it if you should give him a Captain's commission. Mr. Jones, as the oldest Lieutenant, now commands the Providence, who I hope will behave so well as to be continued.

Enclosed you have a copy of what money I have advanced to particular people, which should be lodged with the Paymasters. The money advanced by the several Commanders, and some by Mr. Shaw, to the seamen, I have not been able to get from them, save the Cabot's, which Mr. Reed has had some time.

You also have an account of what cannon and stores were delivered at New-London and Rhode-Island, together with a copy of a letter just received from Captain Whipple, of the Columbus.

I send these by Captain Nicholas, to whom I have given leave to go to Philadelphia, partly on his own business, and partly with design that he may give you any information which you may think necessary to be informed of, which may have slipped my attention, as I think him very capable of giving you an impartial history of our whole proceedings.

I am, with great respect, gentlemen, your humble servant,
ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Marine Committee, at Philadelphia.

CAPTAIN JONES TO COLONEL TILLINGHAST.

Sloop Providence, June 20, 1776.

SIR: I have made so many unsuccessful attempts to convey the Fly past Fisher's Island, that I have determined to give it up, and pursue my orders for Boston. When I arrive there I will transmit you my letter of attorney; in the mean time you will singularly oblige me by applying to the Admiral for an order to receive for me a copy of the Alfred's log-book, which I had made out for my private use before I left that ship, and which was unjustly withheld from me when I took command of the sloop, by the ill-natured and narrow-minded Captain Saltonstall. When the old gentleman was down here he promised to order that my copy should be delivered, but when my Lieutenant applied for it, the Master of the Alfred told the Admiral a cursed lie, and said there was no copy made out. On inquiry you will find that Mr. Vaughan, the mate of the Alfred, made out the copy in question for me before I went to New-York. I should not be so particular, did I not stand in absolute need of it before I can make out a fair copy of my Journal to lay before the Congress, for I was so stunted in point of time in the Alfred, that I did not copy a single remark; besides, it is a little hard that I, who planned and superintended the log-book, should not be thought worthy of a copy, when a midshipman, if he pleases, may claim one. I take it for granted that you will receive the book. I must therefore beg you to send it, if possible, to me at Mr. John Head's, or Captain J. Bradford's, Boston. Regard not the expense, I will cheerfully pay it.

I am, sir, with esteem, your obliged and very humble servant,
J. PAUL JONES.

CAPTAIN JONES TO COLONEL TILLINGHAST.

Sloop Providence, June 20, 1776.

SIR: I forgot to mention to you that your account against the Providence will be necessary to me at Boston, as I mean to transmit the state and condition of the sloop from thence to Congress. I will also be glad of Admiral Hopkins's account against me or the sloop, and you will please to include in your account the articles furnished to the vessel by the Commissary at Newport. There is a bolt of canvass belonging to the sloop in the upper part of the store; I wish it could be sent to Boston, together with a quantity of knives, (four or five dozen,) a pair of small pistols, some twine, needles, palm, fish-hooks, lines, &c., which Mr. Brownell took away from the sloop, and hath in his possession. It seems he lodges at a Thomas Venner's, on a hill opposite the burying-ground, on the west side. You will herewith receive a pair of pistols, a musket, and a cutlass, belonging to the Alfred, which please to deliver.

I am, sir, your obliged very humble servant,

J. PAUL JONES.

WILLIAM WATSON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Plymouth, June 19, 1776.

SIR: I wrote to your Excellency on the 20th April ult., desiring that the papers might be remitted to me which were taken with the two prizes brought into this port last winter by Captain Coit. My letter must have miscarried, as I have received no answer to it; on this account the trial of these two vessels has been postponed from time to time, as no evidence can be had against them but from those papers. The former owners lay claim to them, and urge that their going to Nova-Scotia for provisions was absolutely necessary for the support of their families and connexions, and that they did not intend to supply the garrison at Boston. These papers, can they be obtained, will elucidate this matter.

Relying on your Excellency's giving a few moments attention to this business, I must beg leave to subscribe myself your Excellency's most obedient, much obliged, and very humble servant,

WILLIAM WATSON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

CAPTAIN HARDING TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Boston, June 19, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I sailed on Sunday last from Plymouth. Soon after we came to sail, I heard a considerable firing to the northward. In the evening fell in with four armed schooners near the entrance of Boston harbour, who informed me they had been engaged with a ship and brig, and were obliged to quit them. Soon after I came up into Nantasket Roads, where I found the ship and brig at anchor. I immediately fell in between the two, and came to anchor about eleven o'clock at night. I hailed the ship, who answered, from Great Britain. I ordered her to strike her colours to America. They answered me by asking, What brig is that? I told them the Defence. I then hailed him again, and told him I did not want to kill their men; but have the ship I would at all events, and again desired them to strike; upon which the Major (since dead) said, Yes, I'll strike, and fired a broadside upon me, which I immediately returned, upon which an engagement begun, which continued three glasses, when the ship and brig both struck. In this engagement I had nine wounded, but none killed. The enemy had eighteen killed, and a number wounded. My officers and men behaved with great bravery; no men could have outdone them.

We took out of the above vessels two hundred and ten prisoners, among whom is Colonel Campbell, of General Frazer's Regiment of Highlanders. The Major was killed.

Yesterday a ship was seen in the bay, which came towards the entrance of the harbour, upon which I came to sail, with four schooners in company. We came up with her, and took her without any engagement. There were on board about one hundred and twelve Highlanders.

As there are a number more of the same fleet expected every day, and the General here urges my stay, I shall tarry a few days, and then proceed for New-London. My brig is much damaged in her sails and rigging.

If your Honour has any commands, be so good as to communicate them by a line. I hope your Honour will excuse this request, and excuse my copying this fair, for want of time.

I am, with great respect, yours, SETH HARDING.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL CAMPBELL TO GENERAL HOWE.

Boston, June 19, 1776.

SIR: I am sorry to inform you that it has been my unfortunate lot to have fallen into the hands of the Americans in the middle of Boston harbour; but when the circumstances which have occasioned this disaster are understood, I flatter myself no reflection will arise to myself or my officers on account of it. On the 16th of June the George and Annabella transports, with two companies of the Seventy-First Regiment of Highlanders, made the land off Cape-Ann, after a passage of seven weeks from Scotland, during the course of which we had not the opportunity of speaking to a single vessel that could give us the smallest information of the British troops having evacuated Boston. On the 17th, at daylight, we found ourselves opposite to the harbour's mouth at Boston; but, from contrary winds, it was necessary to make several tacks to reach it. Four schooners (which we took to be pilots, or armed vessels in the service of his Majesty, but which were afterwards found to be four American privateers, of eight carriage-guns, twelve swivels, and forty men each) were bearing down upon us at four o'clock in the morning. At half an hour thereafter two of them engaged us, and about eleven o'clock the other two were close alongside. The George transport, (on board of which were Major Menzies and myself, with one hundred and eight of the Second Battalion, the Adjutant, the Quartermaster, two Lieutenants, and five volunteers, were passengers) had only six pieces of cannon to oppose them; and the Annabella (on board of which was Captain McKenzie, together with two subalterns, two volunteers, and eighty-two private men of the First Battalion) had only two swivels for her defence. Under such circumstances, I thought it expedient for the Annabella to keep ahead of the George, that our artillery might be used with more effect and less obstruction. Two of the privateers having stationed themselves upon our larboard quarter and two upon our starboard quarter, a tolerable cannonade ensued, which, with very few intermissions, lasted till four o'clock in the evening, when the enemy bore away, and anchored in Plymouth harbour. Our loss upon this occasion was only three men mortally wounded on board the George, one killed and one man slightly wounded on board the Annabella. As my orders were for the port of Boston, I thought it my duty, at this happy crisis, to push forward into the harbour, not doubting I should receive protection either from a fort or some ship of force stationed there for the security of our fleet.

Toward the close of the evening we perceived the four schooners that were engaged with us in the morning, joined by the brig Defence, of sixteen carriage-guns, twenty swivels, and one hundred and seventeen men, and a schooner of eight carriage-guns, twelve swivels, and forty men, got under way and made towards us. As we stood up for Nantasket Road, an American battery opened upon us, which was the first serious proof we had that there could scarcely be many friends of ours at Boston; and we were too far embayed to retreat, especially as the wind had died away, and the tide of flood not half expended. After each of the vessels had twice run aground, we anchored at George's Island, and prepared for action; but the Annabella, by some misfortune, got aground so far astern of the George we could expect but a feeble support from her musketry. About eleven o'clock four of the schooners anchored right upon our bow, and one right astern of us. The armed brig took her station on our starboard side, at the distance of two hundred yards, and hailed us to strike the British flag. Although the mate of our ship and every sailor on board (the Captain only excepted) refused positively to fight any longer, I have the pleasure to inform you that there was not an officer, non-commissioned officer, or private man of the Seventy-First but what stood to their quarters with a ready and cheerful obedience. On our refusing to strike the British flag, the action was renewed with a good deal of warmth on both sides, and it was our misfortune, after the sharp combat of an hour and a half, to have expended every shot that we had for our artillery. Under such circumstances, hemmed in as we were with six privateers, in the middle of an enemy's harbour, beset with a dead calm, without the power of escaping, or even the most distant hope of relief, I thought it became my duty not to sacrifice the lives of gallant men wantonly in the arduous attempt of an evident impossibility. In this unfortunate affair Major Menzies and seven private soldiers were killed, the Quartermaster and twelve private soldiers wounded. The Major was buried with the honours of war at Boston.

Since our captivity, I have the honour to acquaint you that we have experienced the utmost civility and good treatment from the people of power at Boston, insomuch, sir, that I should do injustice to the feelings of generosity did I not make this particular information with pleasure and satisfaction. I have now to request of you that, so soon as the distracted state of this unfortunate controversy will admit, you will be pleased to take an early opportunity of settling a cartel for myself and officers.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL,

Lieut. Col. 2d Bat. 71st Regiment.

To General Howe.

P. S. On my arrival at Boston I found that Captain

Maxwell, with the Light-Infantry of the first battalion of the Seventy-First Regiment, had the misfortune to fall into the hands of some other privateers, and was carried into Marblehead the 10th instant. Captain Campbell, with the Grenadiers of the second battalion, who was ignorant, as we were, of the evacuation of Boston, stood into the mouth of this harbour, and was surrounded and taken by eight privateers this forenoon.

In case a cartel is established, the following return is, as near as I can effect, the number of officers, non-commissioned officers, and private men of the Seventy-First Regiment who are prisoners-of-war at and in the neighbourhood of Boston:

The George transport: Lieutenant-Colonel Archibald Campbell; Lieutenant and Adjutant Archibald Campbell; Lieutenant Archibald Balneaves; Lieutenant Hugh Campbell; Quartermaster William Ogilvie; Surgeon's Mate, David Burns; Patrick McDougal, volunteer, and acting Sergeant-Major; James Flint, volunteer; Dugald Campbell, ditto; Donald McBane, John Wilson, three Sergeants, four Corporals, two Drummers, ninety private men.

The Annabella transport: Captain George McKinzie; Lieutenant Colin McKinzie; Ensign Peter Fraser; Mr. McKinzie and Alexander McTavish, volunteers; four Sergeants, four Corporals, two Drummers, eighty-one private men.

Lord Howe transport: Captain Lawrence Campbell; Lieutenant Robert Duncanson; Lieutenant Archibald McLean; Lieutenant Lewis Colhoun; Duncan Campbell, volunteer; four Sergeants, four Corporals, two Drummers, ninety-six private men.

Ann transport: Captain Hamilton Maxwell; Lieutenant Charles Campbell; Lieutenant Fraser; Lieutenant —; four Sergeants, four Corporals, two Drummers, ninety-six private men.

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL,
Lieut. Col. 2d Bat. 71st Regiment.

Williamsburgh, June 22, 1776.

Last Thursday, June 20, Captain Barron took and brought up to Jamestown a transport ship, with two hundred and twenty Highlanders on board, being part of Frazer's battalion, mostly recruits, and part of the Forty-Second Regiment, or Royal Highland watch. They were landed yesterday morning, and arrived here under a guard the same day. The transport had sixteen wooden guns mounted. She was made prize of some little time before by the Congress privateer, (as was also another transport that was in company with her,) who took their officers from them, their arms, and ammunition, and put on board ten hands to carry her into port; but being separated from the Congress in a gale of wind, the men overpowered those who had charge of the vessel, and were steering in search of Lord Dunmore. Upon sight of Captain Barron's vessel, they despatched a boat to him, with a sergeant, one private, and one of the men who were put on board by the Congress to make inquiry. The latter, finding a convenient opportunity, informed Captain Barron of their situation, upon which he boarded her and took possession. They have been out about seven weeks from Greenock, and sailed in company with a large fleet. The above men, it is said, are all that were contained in both transports. The officers, arms, and ammunition, were put on board the other.

SPOTTSYLVANIA COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a Committee held for Spottsylvania County, the 20th day of June, 1776, the following charge was exhibited by Captain Gabriel Jones, to wit:

Captain Gabriel Jones complains against Benjamin Grymes for speaking disrespectfully of the Convention and Committees of this Colony; wherefore he prays this Committee may take the same under their consideration. In consequence of which, as well the said Captain Jones as the said Grymes appeared, with the witnesses produced by each party; on hearing of whom, and the said Grymes's confession in his own defence, this Committee are of opinion that the said Grymes is guilty of the said charge, the purport of the said Grymes's confession being this: That he, in conversation with the said witness, did say that his nephew, John Grymes, was an innocent man; that he had been unjustly treated by the Committee of Safety and the Convention; that the Americans had taken a wrong method to have their grievances redressed; that each Colony ought to have sent two members to England for that purpose. All which confession the said witnesses declared upon oath was true, as the said Grymes, in their hearing, expressed himself, with this further addition, that the Committees, instead of suppressing riots and mobs, (as he had attempted to do,) encouraged them; that the said Grymes declared that the Congress and Convention had done nothing right; that the Convention were a pack of rascals; that their President used to be a friend of all Governours, but now eight hundred pounds a year had made an alteration. This Committee, therefore, give it as their opinion that the said Grymes, being inimical to the good cause of America, ought to be held up to the publick censure.

Ordered, That the Clerk of this Committee transmit a copy of these proceedings to the Printer.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN CHEW, Jun., Clerk.

HALIFAX COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Halifax County, June 20, 1776.

Present: Walter Coles, Esq., Vice-Chairman, and a majority of the Members.

The following persons, to wit: Thomas Yuille, Thomas Hope, James Steven, Walter Robertson, Richard Walker, and Ralph Owen, who were cited to attend this Committee by a former resolution, this day appeared, and the oath prescribed by a resolution of the Convention of this Colony being tendered to them, they refused to take the same.

Whereupon, it is Resolved, That the Sergeant to this Committee do wait on them to receive their arms and ammunition, which are to be applied as directed by the General Congress. And to the end that the publick may be informed of the names of the persons who have thus shown themselves to be disaffected to the American interest,

Resolved, That the Clerk of this Committee do forthwith transmit a copy of the above Proceedings to Mr. Purdie, with a request to him to publish them in his Gazette.

T. TUNSTALL, Clerk.

NORFOLK COUNTY (VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee for Norfolk County, June 20, 1776:

Bennett Armstrong this day appeared before this Committee, being charged with selling Indian Corn, of the growth of North-Carolina, at sixteen shillings and eight pence per barrel, since the price was stated at fifteen shillings; and it being proved that the said Armstrong has knowingly and wilfully broken through the Continental Association, by extorting the above price,

Resolved, That the said Armstrong has therein violated the ninth Article of the Continental Association, and also a former resolution of this Committee, and that the same be published in the Virginia Gazette.

LATIMER HOLSTEAD, Clerk pro tem.

Whereas I have been so imprudent as to act contrary to the ninth Article of the Continental Association, as well as of a resolution of the Committee of Norfolk County, in the sale of a parcel of corn, I do now declare my sincere sorrow for the said offence, which proceeded entirely from my misunderstanding the matter; and I promise so to conduct myself in future as to give no just cause of complaint, and humbly hope the publick will accept of this acknowledgment, by again receiving me into their favour and protection.

BENNET ARMSTRONG.

Norfolk, July 18, 1776.

At a meeting of the Committee for Norfolk County, July 18, 1776:

It having been made appear to the Committee for this County, held on the 20th of June last, that Bennet Armstrong had violated the ninth Article of the Continental Association, which was then ordered to be published in the Gazette, and the said Armstrong this day appearing, and presenting a recantation, promising in future to give no just cause of complaint,

Resolved, That the said Bennet Armstrong, on publishing his apology in the Gazette, be recommended to the publick as a proper object of clemency.

LATIMER HOLSTEAD, Clerk pro tem.

CALVERT COUNTY (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

Calvert County, June 20, 1776.

The Committee met according to adjournment.

Present, eight Members; Mr. B. Mackall, in the Chair. The following Depositions were taken:

David Hunter, of Calvert County, being sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposeseth: That some time about last Christmas, a certain William Wallen (now residing in the city of Annapolis) came to this deponent's house, and said that he had been sitting up the night before at Colonel Fitzhugh's, in company with Governour Eden, and asked said Hunter why his boat lay idle, when he could receive money for her. This deponent asked him from whom? The said Wallen answered, that he would give him money, if he (the said Hunter) would carry a letter to Lord Dunmore; then offered him (this deponent) three or four half-joes, and told him that if he (the said Hunter) was taken, he would be supplied with books and provisions, and handsomely rewarded when released.

Sworn to before me, the subscriber, the day and year above.

RICHARD PARRAN.

David Hunter, Jun., of Calvert County, being sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposeseth: That he was present when the said Wallen offered his father a sum of money to carry a letter to Lord Dunmore; that said Wallen asked this deponent's father whether this deponent was a Whig or Tory, and being answered by this deponent that he was neither, the said Wallen asked this deponent what it would be for him to be confined in a Jail, when he would be supplied with history? And that in case he, this deponent, met with any tenders, that he might throw the letter overboard.

Sworn before me, the day and year within-mentioned.

RICHARD PARRAN.

Resolved, That the above Depositions be immediately sent to the Committee of Observation for Anne Arundel County.

A true copy from the Minutes:

BENJAMIN MACKALL, 4th Clerk pro tem.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DOCTOR JOHNSON.

Annapolis, June 20, 1776.

SIR: We received yours of the 14th, informing us of the discovery of a cliff or bank on the river Patuxent strongly impregnated with common salt, and are in great hopes that on a further inspection it may prove adequate to our utmost wishes; but as experiment only can ascertain the quantity of the earth of that quality, you will greatly oblige us if you would make the proper trials, how far and to what depth it may probably be traced. If its extent should be considerable, it will be a discovery of the greatest importance to the publick; and we therefore wish you would immediately communicate to us the success of your inquiry, and we will most cheerfully reimburse you all expenses you may be at in making the experiment.

We are pleased with the progress you advise us you are making in the manufactory of saltpetre, and are in hopes that, by a skilful management and proper attention of the several managers in this Province, the demands for that useful article may be sufficiently supplied in a short time. We wish you full success; and are yours, &c.

To Dr. Edward Johnson, Calvert County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN VANBIBBER.

Annapolis, June 20, 1776.

SIR: You have enclosed an invoice and bill of lading for two hundred and forty barrels of flour, forty barrels of bread, and two hundred and fifty kegs of bread, in the schooner Three Sisters, Captain Joseph Handy, master, which we hope will reach you safe. You will dispose of the cargo to the best advantage, for the benefit of the Province, according to your general instructions and the letters heretofore sent you, and be pleased to make our returns by the same vessel, in small-arms, to which you may add a few field-pieces, if to be had cheap. If these cannot be got, you are to send us powder and blankets. We designed to send you also two other vessels—the brigs Fortune and Rogers—but these vessels have been long detained by the men-of-war and tenders; the brig Fortune had sailed, but was obliged to put back again. We apprehend that we shall be obliged to unload these vessels, and send their cargoes to you in smaller vessels.

We have received your letters of the 9th and 22d March, and have also paid your bill, dated 24th March, to Captain John Stout, for eight hundred dollars; and also your draft to Captain Copper on W. Lux, for ninety pounds currency; and have got in safe the goods you sent us by the Wicked Dick, Captain Tibbet, also by the pilot-boat Chatham, and some powder, we hear, is arrived in North-Carolina, not got to hand. We would caution you against sending any more that way as yet; the coast there is too dangerous at present—full of men-of-war and tenders. We shall be glad to hear from you by every good opportunity; and are, &c.

To Captain Abraham Vanbibber.

P. S. The brig Nancy, Captain Wise, addressed to you, has been unfortunately taken by a tender in Annamosseeck-Road, in a fog which prevented the Captain from seeing her approach until she was so near that he could not avoid the misfortune.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN HANDY.

Annapolis, June 20, 1776.

SIR: You are to proceed from hence with all possible despatch to the Island of St. Eustatia, with the letter directed to Mr. Abraham Vanbibber, who will give you directions what you are to do with your cargo; his advice you are to follow in every particular. Should you have any goods put on board by Captain Vanbibber to bring back, as soon as you have done your business make the best of your way home, and avoid speaking with vessels on the coast or elsewhere. When you come into the latitude of our Cape, if you have a strong fair wind in, and no danger of men-of-war or tenders, push up the Bay as far as possible; if you find a better chance of getting safe into any of the inlets between Cape Henlopen and Cape Charles than into our Bay, you may push into one of them, and send an express to the Council of Safety, letting them know where you are, and what you have got; take care to land your goods as soon as you can, under the direction of a Committee, for fear of being followed by tenders, or other armed vessels. In going out you are to take a brisk gale of wind, or get out in the night. Hope you will conduct yourself with care and industry in the voyage. If you are chased, and find you must be taken, throw all your papers overboard, with weights to sink them. Should Mr. Vanbibber not be at St. Eustatia, or in that neighbourhood, you are to apply to Mr. Richard Harrison, at Martinique, and deliver your letter for Vanbibber to him, and follow his directions. We are, &c.

To Captain Joseph Handy.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CUMBERLAND DUGAN.

Annapolis, June 20, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have an order for one hundred barrels of flour, now in possession of Messrs. Lux & Bowley, which we have already paid them for, and was to have gone by the pilot-boat Chatham; you will be pleased to fill up the vessel with some of the superfine flour, most likely to keep and answer the market; and where flour cannot be stowed away, then kegs of bread; and if there be not flour sufficient that is good and likely to keep, then put on board bread to make up the cargo. No time is to be lost, that this vessel may be got away with all imaginable speed.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Cumberland Dugan.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO LUX AND BOWLEY.

[No. 32.]

Annapolis, June 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Please to deliver to Captain Joseph Handy the quantity of one hundred barrels of flour, which we have already paid for, and was to have gone by the pilot-boat Chatham. We are, &c.

To Messrs. Lux & Bowley.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CUMBERLAND DUGAN.
[No. 33.] Annapolis, June 20, 1776.

SIR: Since writing the enclosed letter, we have some expectation of loading another vessel of about six hundred and fifty barrels, and should be glad to know when the bread will be baked; we shall probably want it next week; as also all the flour the Three Sisters cannot take.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Cumberland Dugan.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JOHN LEYPOLD.

SIR: The Council of Safety request you would go to Baltimore town, and examine the flour now in the warehouse of Mr. Cumberland Dugan; also examine some of the flour now on board the brigs Fortune and Rogers, and let us know, on your return, what state the same is in.

We are, &c.

To Mr. John Leybold.

TO THE PEOPLE.

In times like the present, it is necessary that the chain of political occurrences should be continued among the people without any material interruptions; because, in order to be unanimous in our conduct, our knowledge of men and things must lead the way; for people cannot be expected to act alike who are not alike informed. For this reason, therefore, the following concise clue or chain of circumstances which have happened in the politicks of this city since the meeting at the State-House on the 20th of May, is given to the publick:

The purpose of that meeting was to agree upon a Protest to be presented to the House of Assembly against their having anything to do with the resolve of Congress of the 15th of May, for establishing a new Government; and the reasons assigned were, the embarrassments the House were under by oaths of allegiance to our enemy; their acting in conjunction with the King's representative; their insufficiency for business in general; and the influence which many of the Members appeared to be under by Crown and Proprietary connections and dependancies: to which we may now add, that the conduct of those men since has shown that the suspicions of the publick were well-grounded.

The Protest was delivered in to the Assembly soon after the dissolution of the meeting;—on the part of which it should be observed that its objections against the authority of the House were limited to the single instance of their framing a new Government, and left it at large in all other cases. "We mean not," say the protestors, "to object against the House exercising the proper powers it has hitherto been accustomed to use, for the safety and convenience of the Province, until such time as a new Constitution, originating from, and founded on the authority of, the people, can be finally settled by a Provincial Convention to be called for that purpose." This being the case, it follows that neither the House nor any separate Members thereof can lay hold on anything said or insinuated in the Protest as an excuse or subterfuge for their own neglect of the publick safety.

Let us now take a review of the conduct of the House on this occasion. The Protest being read, was ordered to lie on the table: some proposed to have it laid under the table. It signified but little which was done, as the protestors had taken a decided part, and intended to go through with the matter.

In this sitting, the Assembly got into a double way of doing business. Part of their resolves were only passed and circulated among the people, but are not to be found upon their printed votes; and in one case their printed votes contradict their verbal resolves: for it was given out that the House had resolved to do business without the Governour—consequently, they no longer acknowledged him in that character; yet their votes are titled as before, "John Penn, Esquire, Governour." It was given out that they had absolved, or dissolved, or some how or other got over and thrown aside the oaths of allegiance; but nothing of this appears upon their printed votes, neither have we any authority for believing it, unless Mr. James Rankin's letter to the inhabitants of York County be admitted as evidence. In that he says: "The Committee of York might have known that the House has dispensed with the oaths."

No "ayes" or "nays" are to be found this sitting; for when any objecting Members found they could not carry their point, they withdrew their objection, to avoid being known to the publick.

It is impossible that confidence can be placed in any House, let its name be what it may, that acts one thing within doors, and in its printed votes holds forth a different one to the world.

The case respecting the oaths is as follows: The new Members were admitted to take their seats without them. A Member then moved that the German inhabitants of this Province be hereafter considered as legal voters without taking the oaths of allegiance. This was certainly a just and reasonable motion; for if allegiance was no longer a necessary qualification for a Representative, it was no longer a necessary qualification in an elector. On this, one of the Proprietary gentlemen, who had taken his seat without oaths, moved to have the matter respecting the admission of the Germans put off. He was seconded by another of the same cast; but, finding that such a glaring partiality would not be supported by the House, they withdrew their motion, to avoid appearing among the nays. A Committee was afterwards nominated to draw up "resolutions for rendering naturalization and the oaths or affirmations of allegiance unnecessary in all cases;" but the matter dropped here, and never passed the House.

It is peculiarly remarkable that the persons who objected against admitting the Germans were put on the Committee for taking off their disqualifications; by which artful scheme, the objectors to their enfranchisement were represented in the votes as their friends. Nor was there a Committee of any consequence throughout the last sitting in which the names of the Proprietary party are not to be found. This could not but be considered as a constant insult upon the protestors, as one of their principal causes of objection against the House was the weight of that influence in it.

If the votes of the House be examined, it will appear that they have gone through nothing—spent their time to no purpose; and the cause of this neglect is clearly evident. They were got into parties, and though they sometimes joined in general matters, yet the greater part of their time was taken up in watching each other's motions. The Proprietary party, still pinning its dependance upon the Crown, had the ruinous delusions of reconciliation in view. The popular party, believing that nothing but a final separation from Britain and a well-confederated union of all the Colonies could secure our happiness, were very suspicious of the designs of the Proprietary party; and between these two, a certain gentleman, the framer of the first instructions to the Delegates, steered an indefinite course, sometimes agreeing with one side, sometimes with the other, sometimes with neither; seeming, upon the whole, to have no other fixed object in view than himself.

The first business which appears upon the printed votes is the appointment of a Committee for drawing up a memorial to be presented to Congress, praying to be informed "whether the Assemblies and Conventions now subsisting in the several Colonies are, or are not, the bodies to whom the consideration of continuing the old or adopting new Governments is referred?" This memorial contains an insult both upon the people and the Congress, because it solicits a qualification from the Congress, which the Congress, in the preamble to their resolves, say ought to come from the people. Neither does the resolve of Congress say anything about continuing the old Government, but of totally suppressing it. Wherefore the memorialists request an explanation on a case which is not within the meaning of the resolve. But this, like whatever else the Assembly took in hand in their late and last sitting, came to nothing, being never presented.

The affair of the row-galleys came next on hand. Men in office are naturally jealous of their honour, especially when they conceive that they have done their duty. The engagement between the ships and the row-galleys, being the first of the kind happening here, was managed on the part of the latter beyond anything that could be expected. Nevertheless the Captains conceived themselves aggrieved by some reports circulated soon after the engagement, to remove which they published a handbill; and the Committee of Safety, in order to justify, or perhaps rather to revenge themselves, went much farther with it, and although the Committee of the House of Assembly had an opportunity to have softened and healed up the difference, they, by their report, have only irritated and made it worse, and after complying with the request of the Captains for a hearing, broke up without fulfilling it. This matter would not have risen to the present height had there been no secret enemy at the bottom.

While the House was sitting, it received a letter from the Convention of Virginia, setting forth the reasons which induced that body to support the doctrine of Independence; which letter was read in the House, laid aside, and no answer returned. The incivility of such a proceeding tends to weaken the friendship, and consequently the union of the Colonies.

In consequence of a memorial from the freemen of Cumberland County, a motion was made in Assembly for withdrawing the instructions to the Delegates; and after a debate of three days new ones were agreed upon. The preamble to the new instructions runs thus: "When, by our instructions of last November, we strictly enjoined you, in behalf of this Colony, to dissent from, and utterly to reject any proposition, should such be made, that might cause or lead to a separation from Great Britain, or a change of the form of this Government, our restrictions did not arise from any diffidence of your abilities, prudence, or integrity, but from an earnest desire to serve the good people of Pennsylvania with fidelity."

The reason here given is vague, general, and unsatisfactory; neither did the circumstances of things then confirm or corroborate with the reason given now, because the necessity of a Continental Union existed as much at that time as this. But since the House hath pleaded a kind of "not guilty" excuse for their instructions, it is but right that they should know part of the opinion which some of the publick entertained respecting those instructions, which was, that they considered them as an artful and selfish compromise for the safety of the persons who were the promoters of them; and there is very little doubt to be made, but that the honour of first drawing them up, passing them, or acting under them, would have been strongly contended for, and pleaded as an evidence of the loyalty, both of the House of Assembly and their Delegates, in case the enemy had been able to have penetrated this Province. The new instructions left the Delegates at large; yet we have no reason to believe that their conduct in Congress is altered thereby. The opponents of Independency may as well invite the enemy at once, as to continue to do it by holding out the doctrine of reconciliation; for we observe that Britain of late has directed all her force towards those Provinces only where independence prevails least, because, from such Provinces, she naturally expects the least resistance.

The rescinding the old instructions was violently opposed by the Proprietary party; everything respecting the King of Great Britain was represented by them in the softest colours. One of those gentlemen declared in the House that he thought the King's answer to the Petition of the City of London "a very proper one."

After passing those instructions, a new scheme began to appear in the House, which, if carried into execution, would probably have thrown the Province into irrecoverable disorder. It was wished by some friends that, in order to conciliate matters, the House would pass a resolve, recommending the electing of a Convention on the equitable plan proposed on the 20th of May; but those Members who conceived themselves disappointed because the resolve of Congress was not wholly left to the House, formed a scheme for carrying the matter respecting the Convention much farther than bare approbation, and were for entering upon the business itself, by fixing the numbers the Convention should consist of, the proportion to each County, and other matters. As the House had never been requested, but, on the contrary, forbidden to interfere in any part of the business of a new Government, and as nearly all the Counties had at that time nominated their Deputies to the Conference, some of which were upon the road, for the express purpose of settling and adjusting the number, proportion, time, and place of the Convention, nothing but confusion could have been produced by the Assembly meddling therewith; because the Conference would have met notwithstanding, and being qualified by their constituents for that especial purpose, their authority for that business would have been far superior to that of the Assembly, and in this case, two plans for a Convention would have appeared at the same time, by which means the day of election would probably have been a day of confusion, some insisting on one mode and some on the other. It is time now that our object should be single, for while two are in view, the spirit of disunion will be kept alive. The discovery of this scheme created new suspicions between the Members of the House; those who considered it as a dangerous experiment, were warmly against it, while others, who had not fully reflected on the consequences, were easily drawn in to approve it; and, under the influence of these apprehensions, the different parties alternately withdrew from the House to frustrate the designs of each other, till the Members, heartily tired and wearied with mutual disappointment, agreed to break up the House and go home. In their votes, they have called it an adjournment to the 26th of August, but there were present at that time only thirty-six Members, which not making a House, they could only adjourn from day to day for the want of a quorum, and not until another sitting; for if any number less than a House, which is two-thirds of the whole, could make a regular adjournment, the consequences would be equally as prejudicial as if the power of adjourning had resided in a Governour; and if the gentlemen who were in the House at that time will contend for the excellence and existence of their Charter, they ought, should the House ever meet again, to be impeached of high treason for breaking it in almost the only instance in which it was valuable. On whatever principle the separate Members may justify their conduct, is not here intended to be inquired into; but as a House they have no excuse. They have deserted the publick trust in a time of the greatest danger and difficulty. Like James II, they have abdicated the Government, and by their own act of desertion and cowardice have laid the Provincial Conference under the necessity of taking instant charge of affairs; and I see not how the Members of Conference can excuse themselves without attending to this point. The revolution is now begun, and must be supported, and the Members of Assembly have their apology, by saying that the Conference was to meet in a few days.

Besides, the confusion now subsisting between the Committee of Safety and the officers of the row-galleys, by which the welfare of this city and Province is in immediate danger, makes a superintending power indispensably necessary. It matters not where the fault lies, or whether in both—it is the consequences which the publick look at. One thing in this dispute ought not to be forgotten, which is, that several of the Committee of Safety are suspected Tories, have signed the remonstrance, and are highly improper to be at the head of military secrets and affairs on the present system; and I cannot see how any man, especially a military man, holding independent principles, can think himself safe under the direction or authority of those who oppose them; and when this matter is reflected on, there will appear strong reason to believe that their present disputes arise from a heterogeneous composition in the present Committee of Safety. Besides which, the authority of that body being derived from the House of Assembly, is at present in suspense, which, added to other circumstances that are daily occurring, lay an absolute duty on the Conference to take the state of affairs into consideration, and provide accordingly.

The House of Assembly has, as appears by their votes, confessed their inability to go through the necessary measures for defence. The circumstance is this: the resolve of Congress respecting the embodying six thousand men, laid a fortnight on the Assembly's table, without being attended to, and at the time of their dissolution, they passed a resolve excusing themselves, by saying, "that they are earnestly desirous of carrying into execution the resolution of Congress of the 1st instant, but that, as they despair, after repeated disappointments, of procuring a quorum of the House, they find themselves unable at this time to proceed on the said resolution." Yet the House took an effectual method to prevent their ever being able, by breaking up directly after passing the said resolve.

This is the state we at present lie in; and unless something is instantly done to regulate our affairs, the consequences may be dreadful. We have now a large and respectable representation, amounting to one hundred and eight Members from the different Counties; and as the Assembly hath broken up and deserted its trust, the inhabitants have now no other body than the Conference to look at or apply to for conducting and superintending our military operations, and restoring order and confidence throughout the Province, and this opportunity ought not to be passed over. It signifies but little what our particular sentiments respecting modes and forms may be, because it is our safety and not our opinions that is most at stake.

Philadelphia, June 20, 1776.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 24, 1776, and referred to the Board of War.]

New-York, June 20, 1776.

SIR: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of your favours of the 14th and 18th instant, and the interesting resolves contained in them, with which I have been honoured.

The several matters recommended to my attention shall be particularly regarded, and the directions of Congress and your requests complied with in every instance as far as in my power.

The instituting a War Office is certainly an event of great importance, and in all probability will be recorded as such in the historick page. The benefits derived from it, I flatter myself, will be considerable, though the plan upon which it is first founded may not be entirely perfect. This, like other great works, in its first edition may not be free from error; time will discover its defects, and experience suggest the remedy, and such further improvements as may be necessary. But it was right to give it a beginning, in my opinion.

The recommendation to the Convention of New-York, for restraining and punishing disaffected persons, I am hopeful will be attended with salutary consequences; and the prohibition against exporting provisions appears to have been a measure founded in sound policy, lest proper supplies should be wanted wherewith to subsist our armies.

I have transmitted General Schuyler the resolves about the Indians, and the others on which he is to act, and have requested his strict attention and exertions in order to their being carried into execution with all possible despatch.

I note your request respecting Mr. Hancock; he shall have such directions as may be necessary for conducting his office, and am happy he will have so early a remittance for paying the troops in his department.

The silver and paper money designed for Canada will be highly serviceable, and I hope will be the means of re-establishing our credit there in some degree with the Canadians, and also encourage our men too, who have complained in this instance. When it arrives I will send it forward under a proper guard.

I have communicated to Major-General Gates the resolve of Congress for him to repair to Canada, and directed him to view Point-au-Fer, that a fortress may be erected if he shall judge it necessary; he is preparing for his command, and in a few days will take his departure for it. I would fain hope his arrival there will give our affairs a complexion different from what they have worn for a long time past, and that very essential benefits will result from it.

The kind attention Congress have shown to afford the Commander-in-Chief here every assistance, by resolving that recommendatory letters be written to the Conventions of New-Jersey, New-York, and the Assembly of Connecticut, to authorize him to call in the Militia in cases of emergency, claims my thankful acknowledgments, and think, if carried into execution, will produce many advantages, in case it may be expedient at any time to call in early reinforcements. The delays incident to the ordinary mode may frequently render their aid too late and prove exceedingly injurious.

I this evening received intelligence of the 19th instant from Captain Pond, of the armed sloop Schuyler, of his having taken, about fifty miles from this, on the south side of Long-Island, a ship and a sloop bound to Sandy-Hook. The ship from Glasgow, with a company of the Forty-Second Regiment, had been taken by one of Commodore Hopkins's fleet, who took the soldiers out and ordered her to Rhode-Island; after which he was retaken by the Cerberus, and put under convoy of the sloop. As Captain Pond informs, there were five commissioned officers, two ladies, and four privates, on board; they are not yet arrived at Head-Quarters. Enclosed is an invoice of what they have on board.

General Wooster having expressed an inclination and wish to wait on Congress, I have given him permission, not having any occasion for him here. He set out this morning.

I have been up to view the grounds above King's Bridge, and find them to admit of seven places well calculated for defence; and esteeming it a pass of the utmost importance, have ordered works to be laid out; and I shall direct part of the two battalions from Pennsylvania to set about the execution immediately, and will add to their number several of the militia when they come in, to expedite them with all possible despatch. Their consequence, as they will keep open the communication with the country, requires the most speedy completion of them.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, June 20, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I herewith transmit you sundry resolves of Congress respecting the Indians, the fortifying Fort Stanwix, &c., and for rendering more easy and commodious our passes into Canada. As the resolves are of an interesting and important nature, I must request your particular attention to them, and most active exertions for accomplishing and carrying the whole into execution with all possible despatch.

I am hopeful the bounty Congress have agreed to allow, as you will perceive by the last resolve, will prove a powerful inducement to engage the Indians in our service, and their endeavours to make prisoners of all the King's troops they possibly can. You will use every method you shall judge necessary to conciliate their favour; and, to this end, you are authorized to promise them a punctual payment of the allowance Congress have determined on for such officers and privates belonging to the King's Army as they may captivate and deliver us.

June 21.—I have this moment received your favours of the 15th and 17th, and the post being about to depart have not time to answer them fully. I shall only add, that Lady Johnson may remain at Albany till further directions.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Schuyler.

CAPTAIN CREGIER TO THOMAS RANDALL.

On board the Schooner General Putnam, }
Egg-Harbour, June 20, 1776. }

SIR: After my due respects to yourself and honourable House, I am to inform you that on my passage here from Barnegat, I saw three sail of vessels plying to the north-east—they appeared to be three ships. I immediately hauled my wind to speak to them, the wind about north by west. After standing for them some time, I found one of them to be a very large ship, and was soon convinced she was a ship of war of about fifty guns. I then bore away for this harbour, where I arrived this morning. I cruised in and out of Barnegat five days, in hopes of meeting some vessels bound into that inlet, as I was informed two vessels were to put into that place. This information I received by a person who was on board of a sloop that was driven on shore by the Lively frigate, on the 11th of June. She came from the West-Indies, having on board about three hundred bushels of salt, with other goods. The owners were one Schenck & Vanvechten. The ship's boats, after she struck the beach, immediately boarded her, but the inhabitants coming to them, quitted her without plundering. They endeavoured to set fire to her, but to no effect, as timely assistance prevented their scheme. I shall keep a good look-out, and hope to render a better account in my next; and am, with the profoundest respect, your most obedient servant,

THOMAS CREGIER.

To Thomas Randall, Esq.

CORNELIUS STEENROD TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Camp at New-York, June 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I received the resolve of your honourable House, appointing me to the command of a Company in Continental service, liberty in that resolve was given me to appoint the subaltern officers under me; which company I have since completed, with commissioned, non-commissioned officers, and privates, all to five men, who stand ready to make up the deficiency if they might know who is to be their officers. As one of my Lieutenants is cashiered, they know not who may succeed him: if it should be one they do not approve of, they are determined not to join; and those who have already joined my company declare, that if they cannot have the choice of their officers, they will not serve, be the consequence what it will. They have, therefore, with my consent, made choice of Mr. Isaac Ryckman, Jun., a person whom they greatly approve of, and are willing to serve under.

The commissions in my company not being made out, should be glad your Honours would consider it, and order their making out, which will be gratefully acknowledged by, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

CORNELIUS STEENROD.

To the Honourable Congress of New-York.

COLONEL HAND TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Paulus Hook, June 20, 1776.

SIR: Being under the necessity of crossing the ferry from New-York to this place, I had a fellow passenger in the boat who talked much and very disrespectfully of our efforts to defend the city; particularly that the British troops would land on Long-Island, march up to York, and destroy the city by bombardment; that there was no doubt but they would, at any time, beat us fourteen to ten; that their ships would undoubtedly demolish our fortifications; that while we amused our country by opposition, the people were famishing. When asked how, he said for want of salt, for one instance. I could add more of his impertinence, but think it best not to trouble your Excellency. Three gentlemen who were in the boat sign this paper as evidences. I send the delinquent prisoner for your Excellency's examination; and am your humble servant,

EDWARD HAND, Col. First Reg't.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COMPLAINT OF WILLIAM SMITH AGAINST CAPTAIN JOHN JOHNSON, OF COLONEL McDougall's REGIMENT.

On the night of the 18th instant, about eleven o'clock, the said William Smith coming past the guard-house, at the corner of the Fly Market, was hailed by the sentry, and gave the countersign rather too loud, on which the sentry took him to the guard-house, where the said Johnson was Captain of the guard, who immediately, without any other provocation, gave orders to have him confined up stairs, in company with two or three vagabonds, in the dark, (saying, if the rascal did not know his duty, he would bring him to a sense of it,) where he, by accident, broke some glass windows that were in the way; from thence he was ordered into close confinement, Johnson not allowing him even to sit down on the stairs, or to write to his wife to inform her where he was; which usage so irritated him that he could not refrain from cursing him, as he readily acknowledges; when Johnson struck him with his fist. In this place he was confined till about nine o'clock the next morning, a negro man standing sentry over him, whom Johnson commanded several times to run the said William Smith through the body with his bayonet, which he can bring a witness to prove. He, therefore, as a citizen, humbly requests the honourable Provincial Congress to take the above into consideration, and desires, through their means, satisfaction for the same.

New-York, June 20, 1776.

THOMAS BROWN TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, 6th month 20th, 1776.

ESTEEMED FRIENDS: The present operation of drafting men hath caused me thus to address you, as it is likely to fall heavy on, and to be a real grievance to, some of your people called Quakers. I, as an individual, think proper to inform you that I am a man of a sober deportment, and can by no means join in or be accessory to the destruction of men's lives; knowing assuredly that I am called to a greater attainment in the life of Christianity than what is hitherto professed among many: and although some of us swerve aside, and actually join with others in your present commotions, and, to the great grief of some, are thought to be in the practice of unrighteous gain, which is now prevalent; yet there are others who hold out a light, I think, conspicuous. Be pleased to consider me a man of low circumstances, who cannot avail myself of any advantage in the present times, and have but little business and little money to support a young family during these troubles, and it being my lot, together with my apprentice, to be drafted, it will, I expect, prevent me following any business longer; and as there are some officers who may be exercised with less lenity than others, and may be immoderate in their fines, (as has been the case already,) and as it is not fit that any oppression or unrighteous practices should be the effect of your administration, especially at a time when we are contending for right, (however, I shall at this time avoid being prolix,) shall request, contrary to any former intention, that I may have liberty to retire without molestation or impediment. And may success attend your endeavours to effect a reconciliation, if possible, is the desire of your respectful friend,

THOMAS BROWN.

To the Provincial Congress, now sitting in New-York.

THE INTEREST OF AMERICA.—LETTER III.

It is proposed that we should be a proper Democracy, and form into a free popular Government. In my last I offered reasons why we should have but one branch of Legislature in a Province. I would propose whether each Province might not proceed something in the following manner: That the boundaries of the Province, County, Towns, Precincts, and Districts, for the present, continue as they have been; each County, City, Town, Precinct, or District, choose one, or such a number of persons as shall be thought proper, to represent them in Provincial Congress; the Provincial Congress yearly appoint a Committee of their number, (suppose three or five,) with a President, who should also be called the President of the Province; this President, with a majority of the Committee, to transact the publick business that shall be necessary in the recess of the Congress, and call together that body upon sudden emergencies, &c.; the Provincial Congress, once in a certain space of time, to choose all the publick officers whose business respects the whole Province, such as Judge of the Supreme Court, Treasurer, Secretary, Publick Notaries, Attorney-General, &c. There should be an annual Town-meeting, also a County-meeting, (but not on the same day,) through the Province, at which time each County should choose three or four Judges, a Sheriff, a County Attorney, &c., and each Town, Precinct and District choose not less than two, and not above seven, Justices of the Peace, and the other Town Officers as has been usual in these Provinces; yet it is probable the Judges and Justices, and some other officers, should not be rechosen oftener than once in three years. The laws of the Province (a very few excepted) to continue in force till they can be revised and formed into a new code. Where there is reference to British laws, an alteration may easily be made. Whether the Delegates for the Continental Congress should be chosen by the Provincial Congress, or by each County choosing one for themselves, deserves well to be considered, and, if need be, the several Counties consulted upon that head.

The proper mode of Government is so easy and natural, that when a Congress is met, two or three Committees, taking several parts, might, in one day's time, form the whole plan so far as would be necessary for one session, some further requisition and alterations being left for future time.

As it is proposed we should form into a free popular Government, we should, as much as possible, guard against the disadvantages and difficulties that attend such a form of Government. We must, from the beginning, take all possible care, come into all proper methods, and use all proper means, to keep the Government pure. The grand difficulty of popular Government lies in election. If elections are free and regular, it will be impossible to shake a popular Government. Corruption and bribery, party spirit and animosities among a people, afford a threatening aspect. Rich and aspiring men there will always be, and these will endeavour to corrupt, bribe, and lead the populace. This will shake the foundation of a free State; and this is known by aspiring and ambitious men; hence they will always pursue this method. There are always a number of men in every State who seek to rise above their fellow-creatures, and would be so much above them as to have them and their estates at their disposal, and use them as their footstool to mount to what height they please. They would treat the rest of mankind as we do our cattle and horses, or as slaves are treated. We feed and take care of our horses, or they cannot do our business; we allow slaves food and raiment, or they cannot labour to advantage; so those rich and oppressive men would allow other people enough to till the country and manage manufactures to advantage, and if they are allowed the name of freedom, it is but a name; for all that can possibly be spared, beside maintaining their families, shall flow in some channel or other till it centres in the collective gulf of riches belonging to these aspiring men. Such men will always endeavour to corrupt, bribe, and influence the populace, too many of whom are often dependant upon them; and if people will not maintain their liberty and act for themselves at elections, without being bought and sold, or influenced by the rich and great, they will soon find themselves engulfed in the arbitrary Government. As the grand thing in popular Governments is to keep elections free and incorrupt, it is of importance that as many electors as possible should be in small bodies. It is not so easy to corrupt a great many small, distinct, distant bodies, as it is one large one. For this reason, besides some others, I think it would be better that each Town, District, or Precinct, should choose a Provincial Delegate or two, rather than the choice should be made by Counties; and to prevent the bad effects of corrupt elections, they should be often, they should ordinarily be annual; for if people find that they are bit, that they are imposed upon by intriguing, deceitful men, and oppressive measures are pursued, they will be wise enough at the next election to undo what they ignorantly and by imposition were led to do before. People will feel their oppression, and when they have severely felt, they will wake up from their lethargy, and not be so ready to take another sleepy dose. Frequent elections will happily tend to defeat the designs of aspiring men.

To keep elections free, we must have good laws; but this is not enough; it should, if possible, be a disgrace not to act according to law. A good custom will often do more than a good law. If it was thought mean and base for people to be bought and sold, or improperly biased at elections, they would avoid it. Persons of sense, reputation, and true love to their country, can do much to lead people into a manly, rational way of thinking and acting in this matter. It should be a maxim that no man be allowed to thrust himself into office; to seek it, to court it, is selfish and sordid. No one should be in place for his own sake, but for the good of the whole; and it savours too much of pride or covetousness for a man to put himself forward. Time has been in some part of America (I have known it) that a man could not more effectually disappoint himself than by letting it be known that he was desirous of an office or delegacy. No man should be allowed to come into place but such as the people choose, and desire that he would, for the sake of the publick good, take upon him such an arduous task. Government is a weight that will make a good man tremble. Every man that is fit for it will come to it with concern, and if it might be would much rather be excused.

I cannot conclude at present without expostulating with my countrymen on the head of elections. Many of you (many more than I should have expected) suffer yourselves to be imposed upon by evil-designing men. Why will you not act for yourselves at elections? Why will you be bought and sold, as I may say, or be influenced by some of the most dangerous of your fellow-creatures? Too much of it has been seen of late, and there is danger of much more in a short time. Will you be blinded? Will you be beguiled? Will you be overreached, circumvented, and kidnapped by designing men? There are numbers in our land disappointed, sadly disappointed. They were heretofore aspiring, they hoped they were rising, they had their schemes for preferment, they had great expectations; but they have met with a shock; things work contrary to them. What can they now do? They have no way left that they can brook or comply with, but by intriguing and planning specious appearances of friendship, and every art of deceit, to work themselves into place, where they can have influence to accomplish something agreeable to their party. They are, with appearance of friendship, by one means or other, creeping into Offices, Committees, and Congresses. They leave no stone unturned, and the stone which they can turn to most advantage is corrupting and unduly influencing elections. They speak fair, they will join in the country's cause so far as will be best not to go too fast and run into danger; they appear to mean you great good will, but it is only appearance. Let them have their way, let them have it in their power, and they will soon again subject you to British tyranny, or to a tyranny and oppression among ourselves not much better. They will proceed from step to step until you are under their feet. Their apparent friendship now is in order to get a foot into the stirrup, and when they are once well in the saddle, you may be sure you shall be ridden till you are nothing but skin and bones. Do you ask how you shall know these men? Ask yourselves what these men were three years ago. What were then their views of Government? What were their pursuits? Who were their friends? What party were they of? Whose favour were they seeking? Did they then appear true friends to the country and the common people? Are they not men that are brought to the freedom which this country is coming to, with the greatest reluctance? And will you now believe they are so soon become friends? Can you now trust them to form your Government and make your laws? Can you be so credulous? Can you believe the professions of these men? Open your eyes, act for yourselves, trust men that are well known for a long time to have been friends to their country. Be upon your guard, and take the advice of those that are known to be true friends. Act for yourselves at every election.

SPARTANUS.

New-York, June 20, 1776.

Agreeable to a Resolve of the Provincial Congress, of the 31st of May last, were elected for this City and County the following gentlemen, to serve in Congress the ensuing year, with the additional power of forming a new Government for this Colony. #### NEW-YORK COMMITTEE.

Committee Chamber, New-York, June 20, 1776.

Whereas it has been represented to this Committee that printed tickets are circulating in this City for small change, which, if permitted, in our estimation will have a tendency to depreciate the Paper currency emitted by Congresses, Committees, or Corporated bodies: Therefore, Resolved, That we will not receive in payment any tickets issued by any individual; and we do recommend to the publick not to encourage, by any means, the circulation of any such tickets for the future.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL SULLIVAN.

Albany, June 20, 1776, 10 o'clock P. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Your despatches arrived at a quarter past eleven this morning.

I very seriously deplore the disagreeable situation of you and your Army in Canada, and although I applaud your magnanimous spirit, yet I cannot, by any means, approve that you should "think only of a glorious death, or a victory obtained against superior numbers." These sentiments should take place when every other resource is cut off, and when a defeat may not be attended with decisive consequences against us. The evacuation of Canada will certainly be attended with many disagreeable ones; but will not the total destruction of our Army, and a consequent loss of the country, be attended with those infinitely more fatal? Surely it will. I only mention that the enemy will, in that case, be able to penetrate into the Colonies by the way of the Lakes; not so if our Army retreats in safety. Every effort of theirs to accomplish it, at least for this campaign, will prove ineffectual; but should they ever be able to advance to the most southern extreme of the Lakes, our Army, with reinforcements from Militia, will there stop their progress. I am therefore of opinion, if it should be still in your power when you receive this, that you ought not to remain any longer at Sorel than you have a prospect of retreating with safety, and that the better to secure your retreat, every batteau, as I have formerly observed, which you can possibly spare ought to be sent without the least delay to St. Johns. I think I am fully authorized to give this opinion from what you say of the strength of the enemy in your letter to his Excellency General Washington and me, and I have informed his Excellency that I would give you the above advice.

Colonel Dayton is in Tryon County; we shall, I believe, have our hands full in that quarter. I am preparing everything to take post at Fort Stanwix, and to repel the threatened invasion of the Mohawk River. No part of Colonel Wayne's is as yet arrived here, nor any of the Militia ordered by the resolutions of Congress which I transmitted you on the 12th instant.

I have ordered Colonel Wynkoop to send all the batteaus he can to St. Johns, agreeable to General Arnold's and Colonel Poor's request, signified in their letters of the 13th inst. This will deprive me from forwarding the Militia; but if you should not want the batteaus, I entreat you to order them back to Ticonderoga, under the command of an active officer, and as many others as you can spare, that the Militia may be sent without delay.

Please to make my compliments to Major Scammel; the four blank commissions I have are at Fort George, and I will order one to be forwarded to you to be filled up for him.

The ague, which now attacks me every day with the utmost violence, has considerably reduced me, and a few fits more, unless they become more moderate, will render me equally unfit to think or act.

God bless you, and may Heaven smile propitious on your endeavours.

I am, dear sir, with the best wishes for your health and happiness, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To General Sullivan.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Hartford, June 20, 1776.

SIR: Since my last to you, per Mr. Huntington, I have procured an accurate map of the harbour of New-London, with the adjacent Sound and shore, which I now transmit, by which you will be better able to see and judge of the great convenience and importance thereof, and hope and trust that all due attention will be given thereto. The mouth of that harbour is so narrow, and the shores of such a make, that guns placed near the Light-House, and over against them on the eastern shore, would prevent any ship from lying nearer than without Blackledge.

This, in case of an invasion by sea, would secure a passage for vessels, out or inward bound, eastward or westward, unmolested by the enemy. Advantageous posts are pitched upon on the two sides of the harbour-mouth, and travelling carriages, prepared for guns, on each side the harbour for the above purposes. The river is navigable for large ships for three or four leagues above the town; the river is narrow, and the shores on each side hilly and mountainous, so that if the enemy should ever gain possession of the harbour, shipping might easily run up and be entirely secure. No harbour for vessels of any considerable burden is on all the north side of Long-Island, although there is one or two which serves for common coasting vessels.

Acquainted you in my last (to which refer) that we were endeavouring to raise troops with all possible despatch, agreeable to the late requisitions.

Have procured, with much difficulty, eighteen hundred pounds in hard money, and forwarded to the Paymaster-General in the Northern Department.

Have not room to add but that I am, with due respect and esteem, your humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To Honourable President Hancock.

WESTFIELD (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEE.

The Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, of the town of Westfield, having heretofore had many complaints of the inimical temper and disposition of Captain John Bancroft, of said Westfield, towards the grand struggle for the preservation of American liberty: And whereas information being had that the said John received into his house, fed, and refreshed the notorious Captain McKay and his attendants, on his escape (and most infamous breach of parole) from Hartford, and endeavour to get through the woods to Quebeck, there to join the Ministerial butchers, to cut the throats of our brethren in Canada: In consequence of such information, we summoned the said John to appear before us; and it appearing, on examination, by his own confession, that he was well knowing that one John Graves was gone to Springfield or Hartford for the purpose of piloting prisoners off, and that, on his appearing at his house with said McKay, he was at no loss what their business was; whereupon a motion was made and seconded, whether the feeding, refreshing, and not giving notice of parole, or any prisoners, on their escape to our most inhuman enemies, does not fairly prove that the said Captain John Bancroft is an enemy to American liberty? It passed in the affirmative: Therefore,

Resolved, unanimously, That the said John ought to be held up to publick view as an enemy to American liberty, and all persons cautioned against holding correspondence or connection with him until he is of a better temper and disposition of mind, and that he be confined within the limits of his own farm until further orders of the Committee.

Voted, That the foregoing proceedings with regard to the said John Bancroft be by the Clerk of said Committee procured to be inserted in the Connecticut Courant and one of the Boston newspapers.

SAMUEL MATHER, Chairman.

Westfield, June 20, 1776.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GENERAL GREENE.

Providence, June 20, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 24th May, and, through a continued hurry, found no opportunity to answer it before. I am greatly obliged to you for the intelligence you give me in it. I have nothing new to acquaint you with, save that the brig Andrew Doria has taken two transports, with two hundred men on board, and I believe they are both retaken by the men-of-war in coming in here. We have lost twenty-four seamen by the bargain, and have in their room four Scotch officers and twenty-six of the ships' crew, with about one hundred broad-swords and one hundred and sixty small-arms, which Captain Biddle took out.

Captain Whipple had a small engagement the day before yesterday, in which he lost one man, with the Cerberus, of twenty-eight guns, and six small guns on the quarter deck and fore-castle. There are three frigates round Block Island, which makes it difficult to get in or out, as our force is not sufficient to engage them. Shall endeavour to make some other rendezvous as soon as I can get the vessels all out; at present think Boston the best I can find on this coast.

I must request the favour of you to indulge three of your soldiers with not rating them as deserters, viz: James Dement, Andrew Ingersoll, and Edmund Parsons, belonging to Captain Warner's Company, in Colonel Little's Regiment, who went out in the Cabot, and two of them came back in the prize ships sent in by the Cabot a few days ago; and they tell me as soon as the ship is discharged they will return to the regiment. They have behaved so well, should be sorry they should lose any wages that may be due to them. Should be glad of your directions in that matter; whether I must send them back directly, or continue them on service here.

I am, with regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Nathanael Greene, Esq., Brigadier-General of the Continental Troops, at New-York.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN WHIPPLE.

Providence, June 20, 1776.

SIR: Herewith I send a letter directed to you from the Congress. Should it reach you, hope you will immediately take such steps as you may be able, to satisfy the Congress with your conduct. Captain Saltonstall and myself are both ordered there to account for our conduct. Shall take pleasure in your company.

Must beg you to be exact in your state of the ship and people on board her; and as the ship cannot go on a cruise, you will land the men you had of Colonel Richmond.

I am your friend and humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Abraham Whipple, Esq., Cominander of the Columbus, Newport.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN BIDDLE.

Providence June 20, 1776.

SIR: I have just received orders from Congress to repair to Philadelphia immediately, and as I believe Captain Saltonstall and Captain Whipple are likewise ordered there, the command of the fleet devolves on you, as oldest officer. Should be glad you would take the most prudent steps to conduct the same in such a manner as will be most for the publick good. Be careful that you take no steps with the ships till further orders from Congress.

You are likewise to transmit to me immediately an account of the state of your brig's stores, of every kind of provisions, a list of the effective and non-effective men, and, in short, everything relative to the vessel under your command. And likewise you will order the other commanders, Captain Jones and Captain Hacker, to do the same, and you will transmit them with your own as soon as in your power.

I am your friend, &c.,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Nicholas Biddle, Esq., Commander of the Andrew Doria, at Newport.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, June 20, 1776.

SIR: It is with great pleasure that I do myself the honour to transmit to your Excellency the enclosed vote of the General Assembly.

The putting the Colony Brigade upon the Continental establishment, for which we esteem ourselves so much indebted to your Excellency, gave the highest satisfaction. Mr. Hopkins sent me the commissions, with power to fill up those for the Captains and subalterns as should be thought best here, but added, that "as the Field Officers will be appointed, or at least approved, by Congress, I could wish that you would transmit to me the names of such gentlemen as you may think most capable to fill those offices." The General Assembly have not nominated any persons to those offices. I most earnestly request your Excellency's attention to the troops in this Colony, and to the necessity of appointing an officer of ability and reputation to command them, which is most ardently wished by everybody.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Rhode-Island, &c., in General Assembly, }
June Session, 1776. }

It is Voted and Resolved, nemine contradicente, That the thanks of this Assembly be given to his Excellency George Washington, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the United Colonies, for his favourable representation of the state of this Colony to the most honourable the Continental Congress, and interposition in procuring the Colony's Brigade to be taken into Continental pay, and that his Honour the Governor be requested to transmit to his Excellency a copy of this vote.

A true copy. Witness:

HENRY WARD, Secretary.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, June 20, 1776.

SIR: I have to inform you that the Continental privateers brought into this port, the 18th instant, another Scotch transport, with a Highland Company of Grenadiers on board, consisting of upwards of a hundred, with their officers, with a few arms more than what belonged to the company. Each transport brings a considerable quantity of provisions for the troops. The prisoners are going into the country towns, agreeable to the order of Congress.

The Colonel mentioned in my last is Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, commander of one of General Frazer's Battalions of Highlanders. He is a member of Parliament, and a gentleman of fortune.

I must repeat my earnest request to be relieved immediately, as I have been so very ill for some time past as to be confined to my chamber, and have no prospect of recovering my health until I have a relaxation from business.

I am your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.

To His Excellency General Washington.

JOHN BRADFORD TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Boston, June 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I thought it my duty to acquaint you that your Colony brig Defence is now in this port, after being concerned in taking two ships and a brig, with three hundred and thirty privates and officers. Your worthy commander is now sick at my house, where the best care shall be taken of him. His disorder was a violent seizure of a cold. He has had two physicians; they have given him an emetic, and taken some blood from him. This morning he is so much relieved that I make no doubt he will be abroad tomorrow. If, in the interim, anything should appear which calls our cruisers out, I shall endeavour to get the brig among them to share in the emolument. If at any time I can render your Colony any services, it will give me the highest pleasure; being, with great truth, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

J. BRADFORD,

Navy Agent for the Colony of Massachusetts.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., and the Committee of Safety.

LORD HOWE TO DR. FRANKLIN.

Eagle, June 20, 1776.

I cannot, my worthy friend, permit the letters and parcels which I have sent, in the state I received them, to be landed without adding a word upon the subject of the injurious extremities in which our unhappy disputes have engaged us.

You will learn the nature of my mission from the official despatches, which I have recommended to be forwarded by the same conveyance. Retaining all the earnestness I ever expressed to see our differences accommodated, I shall conceive, if I meet with the disposition in the Colonies which I was once taught to expect, the most flattering hopes of proving serviceable in the objects of the King's paternal solicitude, by promoting the establishment of lasting peace and union with the Colonies. But if the deep-rooted prejudices of America, and the necessity of preventing her trade from passing into foreign channels must keep us still a divided people, I shall, from every private as well as public motive, most heartily lament that this is not the moment wherein those great objects of my ambition are to be attained, and that I am to be longer deprived of an opportunity to assure you personally of the regard with which I am your sincere and faithful humble servant,

HOWE.

To Benjamin Franklin, Esq., Philadelphia.

P. S. I was disappointed of the opportunity I expected for sending this letter at the time it was dated, and have ever since been prevented by calms and contrary winds from getting here to inform General Howe of the commission with which I have the satisfaction to be charged, and of his being joined in it.

Off Sandy Hook, 12th of July.

LORD HOWE'S CIRCULAR TO THE GOVERNOURS OF THE COLONIES.

Eagle, off the Coast of the Province of Massachusetts-Bay, }
June 20, 1776. }

SIR: Being appointed Commander-in-Chief of the ships and vessels of his Majesty's Fleet employed in North-America, and having the honour to be, by his Majesty, constituted one of his Commissioners for restoring peace to his Colonies, and for granting pardons to such of his subjects therein as shall be duly solicitous to benefit by that effect of his gracious indulgence, I embrace this opportunity to inform you of my arrival on the American coast, where my first object will be an early meeting with General Howe, whom his Majesty hath been pleased to join with me in the said Commission.

In the mean time I have judged it expedient to issue the enclosed Declaration, in order that all persons may have immediate information of his Majesty's most gracious intentions; and I desire you will be pleased forthwith to cause the said Declaration to be promulgated, in such manner and at such places in the Colony of Connecticut as will render the same of the most publick notoriety.

Assured of being favoured with your assistance in every measure for the speedy and effectual restoration of the publick tranquillity, I am to request you will communicate from time to time such information as you may think will facilitate the attainment of that important object in the Colony over which you preside.

I have the honour to be, with great respect and consideration, your most obedient, humble servant,

HOWE.

By RICHARD Viscount HOWE, of the Kingdom of IRELAND, one of the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to his Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in NORTH-AMERICA, &c., &c., &c.

DECLARATION.

Whereas, by an act passed in the last session of Parliament to prohibit all trade and intercourse with the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the three lower Counties on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia, and for other purposes therein mentioned, it is enacted, that "it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons, appointed and authorized by his Majesty, to grant a pardon or pardons to any number or description of persons, by Proclamation, in his Majesty's name; to declare any Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, or any County, Town, Port, District, or place, in any Colony or Province, to be at the peace of his Majesty; and that from and after the issuing of any such Proclamation in any of the aforesaid Colonies or Provinces, or if his Majesty shall be graciously pleased to signify the same by his Royal Proclamation, then, and from and after the issuing of such Proclamation, the said act, with respect to such Colony or Province, Colonies or Provinces, County, Town, Port, District, or place, shall cease, determine, and be utterly void."

And whereas the King, desirous to deliver all his subjects from the calamities of war, and other oppressions which they now undergo, and to restore the said Colonies to his protection and peace, as soon as the constitutional authority of Government therein may be replaced, hath been graciously pleased, by letters patent under the great seal, dated the 6th day of May, in the sixteenth year of his Majesty's reign, to nominate and appoint me, Richard Viscount Howe, of the Kingdom of Ireland, and William Howe, Esq., General of his Forces in North-America, and each of us, jointly and severally, to be his Majesty's Commissioner and Commissioners for granting his free and general pardons to all those who in the tumult of and disorder of the times may have deviated from their just allegiance, and who are willing, by a speedy return to their duty, to reap the benefits of the Royal favour, and also for declaring, in his Majesty's name, any Colony, Province, County, Town, Port, District, or place, to be at the peace of his Majesty;—I do, therefore, hereby declare that due consideration shall be had to the meritorious services of all persons who shall aid and assist in restoring the publick tranquillity in the said Colonies, or in any part or parts thereof; that pardons shall be granted, dutiful representations received, and every suitable encouragement given for promoting such measures as shall be conducive to the establishment of legal Government and peace, in pursuance of his Majesty's most gracious purposes aforesaid.

Given on board his Majesty's ship the Eagle, off the coast of the Province of Massachusetts-Bay, the 20th day of June, 1776.

HOWE.

GENERAL CARLETON TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Montreal, June 20, 1776.

MY LORD: In a former letter I informed your Lordship that the troops were ordered to assemble at Three Rivers; they all pushed forward with great expedition, as fast as they arrived off Quebeck, by land or water, as best answered that end. The 8th instant the Rebels attempted a very bold enterprise indeed; they crossed over from Sorel, in fifty boats, better than two thousand men, landed at the Point du Lac before daylight, and marched to attack the troops at Three Rivers, disregarding the sloop Martin, some armed vessels, and transports full of troops, that were at anchor three miles above the town, otherwise than to keep out of reach of their cannon. They made some attempt to force the Sixty-Second Regiment; but whether they found Brigadier-General Frazer, who commanded at Three Rivers, too strong and too well posted, or that they were alarmed by Brigadier-General Nesbitt, who landed the troops from the transports behind them, 'tis certain they soon gave up offensive measures, and retreated with all speed up the river, keeping in the woods. The Brigadiers Nesbitt and Frazer pushed up likewise, but kept by the water-side, in hopes of getting their boats and cutting off their retreat—the first as far as La Chine, the latter to the Point du Lac. The sloop Martin and armed vessels sailed as high as the river Du Loup, and took two boats, but the rest were gone too far, as were their troops.

I know not the number of killed and wounded of the Rebels; about two hundred surrendered or were taken prisoners, amongst whom were their chief, Mr. Thompson, (who I think they call a Major-General,) and a Mr. Irwin, who was the second on this expedition, and some others. The killed and wounded of the King's troops amounted to twelve or thirteen soldiers only.

The next day the troops were ordered to their former stations; all who had transports up re-embarked. Brigadier-General Frazer was ordered to march along the north shore with the troops whose transports had not been able to get up, and measures were taken to march a body of troops also by the south shore, had the wind continued unfavourable, for it seemed of great importance in this unhappy war that the Rebels should be driven from the upper part of the Province as soon as possible. The wind springing up fair the fleet sailed, and arrived off Sorel the evening of the 14th instant; the last of the Rebels had retreated from thence some hours before. The Grenadiers and Light-Infantry of the troops in this division immediately landed, supported by Brigadier Nesbitt and part of his brigade. The next morning more troops were sent on shore, and the command of this column given to Lieutenant-General Burgoyne, with instructions to pursue the Rebels up the river Sorel to St. Johns, but without hazarding anything till the column on his right should be able to co-operate with him. As soon as the regulations for the different transports could be made out, the remainder of the fleet sailed for Longueil, four leagues from Chambly, (Chambly is fifteen leagues from Sorel, by the river of that name;) and had not the wind failed, this column might have arrived at Longueil the same night, and about the same time with Mr. Arnold and the remainder of the Rebels returning from Montreal. The next day the troops landed, and marched by La Prairie towards St. Johns. The advance guard was supported by all the English remaining, after the dispositions already mentioned, under the command of Major-General Phillips, and this division followed by two regiments of the Brunswick troops, and that of Hanau, commanded by Major-General Riedesel. The advance guard arrived the morning of the 19th instant near to St. Johns, when they learned that the head of Lieutenant-General Burgoyne's column had taken possession of the redoubts the night before. They found all the buildings in flames; all the craft and large boats the Rebels could not drag up the Rapids of Chambly, with some provisions, were also burned. I hear twenty-two pieces of cannon are left behind, hid in the woods. Several other marks appear of great precipitation and fright; on this occasion I think they had no small cause. All his Majesty's national and foreign troops showed a great zeal and eagerness to overtake the Rebels; and I doubt not but they would have given every proof of fidelity and valour, had the enemy delayed their retreat a little longer. The corps of artillery showed great diligence likewise on the occasion. There were brigades which marched with both columns: Brigadier Frazer's corps crossed from the north, and fell into the rear of the two columns on the south side; they were also joined by numbers of Canadians, and that on the right by many Indians.

Captain Lemaitre will have the honour to present to your Lordship these despatches; he is an intelligent officer, and well qualified to give any further information of the transactions in this Province; I shall take the liberty to recommend him to your Lordship as an officer of merit.

I am, &c.,

GUY CARLETON.

ORDER IN COUNCIL.

At the Court at St. James's, the 21st day of June, 1776:
Present: The King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas his Majesty was graciously pleased, by his Royal Proclamation bearing date the 22d day of March last, to promise and declare, that the Bounties of three Pounds for every Able Seaman, and of two Pounds for every Ordinary Seaman fit for his Majesty's service, should be paid, in the manner thereby directed, to every such Able and Ordinary Seaman not above the age of fifty nor under the age of eighteen years, who should, on or before the 13th day of April then following, enter themselves to serve in his Majesty's Royal Navy, either with the Captains or Lieutenants of his Majesty's ships, or the chief officers on board such tenders as should be employed for raising men for the service of the Royal Navy: And whereas the time thereby limited was, by order in Council, prolonged and extended from the said 30th day of April to the 30th day of this instant June: And it being judged expedient for his Majesty's service that the said Bounties should be continued to be paid for some longer time, his Majesty, with the advice of his Privy Council, doth therefore order, and it is hereby accordingly ordered, that the time limited for payment of the said Bounties be prolonged and extended from the said 30th day of this instant, June, to the 31st day of August next, inclusive. Whereof all persons concerned are to take notice, and govern themselves accordingly.

G. CHETWYND.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GENERAL HOWE.

Whitehall, June 21, 1776.

SIR: Since my letter to you of the 11th instant, acknowledging the receipt of your despatches of the 7th and 12th of May, by the Harriott packet, I have received no letter from you; but we are happily relieved from our anxiety lest the troops should suffer from the want of provisions, by the accounts received by private persons of a later date, which mention the arrival of the transports from Antigua, and of the Greyhound, with five victuallers from Cork, and that you had given orders for everything to be in readiness to leave Halifax on the 28th.

What adds greatly to the satisfaction of these accounts, is the intelligence we have received that the transports, with the Highland troops, were within a week's sail of Boston on the 21st; and Commodore Hotham, who has the first division of the Hessian forces under his convoy, acquaints the Admiralty, in a letter dated the 5th of June, that he had then made half his passage to Rhode-Island. We have little doubt, therefore, that the Highlanders will have joined you before you can have arrived at New-York, and so seasonable a reinforcement must have given fresh spirits and confidence to the troops, and greatly facilitated your taking possession of that place.

The second division of the Hessians are now at Spithead, and everything is in readiness for their proceeding to New-York, under convoy of four of his Majesty's ships.

The Sixteenth Regiment of light dragoons, and the remount horses for the Seventeenth, together with the draught horses for the baggage and the artillery, and four hundred and two German recruits, go with them, and such part of a body of five hundred British recruits, which is collected at Chatham and Dover, as can get round in time, have orders to join them.

In my letter of the 11th instant, I acquainted you that General Carleton would have orders to send back the Forty-Seventh Regiment, which you had spared him for the relief of Quebeck, or to replace it with some other from the Army under his command; but, upon further consideration, it is thought more expedient to allow the regiments which are already in Canada to remain there, and to replace the Forty-Seventh from hence, by sending you the Prince of Waldeck's Regiment, which was intended to have gone with the second division of the Brunswick troops to Quebeck, and that regiment is accordingly ordered to sail with the Hessians, and General Carleton is informed of this arrangement, and directed to consider the former orders as recalled in consequence of it.

Enclosed you will receive the embarkation returns of the Hessians and Waldeck Regiment, and also of the four hundred and two German recruits; and I have the pleasure to add, that the several corps are in excellent condition, very well appointed, and express the greatest willingness for the service.

As we are to hope you have now got footing in New-York, and that you will be able to draw some part of the supplies for your Army from that Province, the continuance of so large a number of transports as these embarkations will furnish you with cannot be necessary; and as the expense is very great it is highly proper that so many of them as can be spared should be discharged as soon as possible; and as the direction of the transport service is in the Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's ships, you will acquaint him, from time to time, with the number which you find necessary, in order that no more may be continued in pay than the exigencies of the service require.

On all accounts, the foreign ships ought to be the first discharged; and as there is good ground to suspect, from the conduct of the masters, that they have stores of different kinds concealed on board, it will be very proper that their holds be carefully examined so soon as the troops and horses are disembarked, and that when they are discharged, the Admiral should order them to be seen a good distance from the coast by some of his Majesty's ships, and to acquaint them that if they are afterwards met with nearer shore, they will be made prize of.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE GERMAINE.

LORD GEORGE GERMAINE TO GOVERNOUR CARLETON.

Whitehall, June 21, 1776.

SIR: I received on the 10th instant your letter of May 14, together with the copy of a letter which you wrote to General Howe on 12th January.

The impossibility of sending succours to you sooner having occasioned me great and constant anxiety, I could not but derive much pleasure from the perusal of the first paragraph of your letter, wherein you inform me of the arrival of the Surprise frigate, Isis, and sloop Martin, in the basin of Quebeck on the 6th ultimo, as I was confident that even the small reinforcement which those vessels were able to convey to you would be sufficient to raise the siege.

The state of readiness for action in which the succours found your garrison, as well as the ardour and alacrity with which you so directly marched out to attack the Rebels, do you infinite honour. I sincerely congratulate you on the success of the day, and am happy to have it in command from the King to inform you that your Sovereign highly applauds the spirit, discretion, and manly perseverance which you have manifested in the defence of that important place.

His Majesty likewise much approves of the behaviour of the officers, soldiers, sailors, British and Canadian Militia, and the artificers from Halifax and Newfoundland, and orders me to acquaint you that it is his Majesty's pleasure that his approbation be by you signified to them, and also to the Judges, the other officers of Government, and the merchants who have so cheerfully submitted to the inconveniences of a long siege and blockade.

It will give you satisfaction to know that Colonel Hamilton, who, in your absence, with so much spirit stepped out of his line in order to put that garrison into the best state of defence, and who, continuing there, by his example excited the inhabitants to join him in the defence of it, has been honoured with the Royal approbation, as have also Lieutenant-Colonel Maclean and Major Caldwell, and Captains Law and Macdougall.

I must necessarily regret that you have neither specified the actual force of the Rebels, nor communicated the intelligence which you may have received, or the conjectures which you have formed relative to their intentions. Your silence also as to your own intended operations and the present disposition of the Canadians, is much to be lamented, because the ignorance in which you have left me concerning those matters renders it impossible for me to convey to you at present any further instructions. His Majesty, however, trusts that the reinforcement which must have reached you long ago, together with the second division of the Brunswick forces and the Hanau Artillery Company, (which are now arrived at Spithead, and it is hoped will sail in a few days,) will be fully sufficient, not only to reduce the Canadians to lawful obedience, but, being under the command of an officer of your experience, will make such an impression upon his Majesty's rebellious subjects in arms as will influence even distant operations, and enable General Howe more effectually to carry into execution those coercive measures which have unhappily been found necessary for the maintenance of the constitutional authority of this Kingdom over its Colonies.

As General Howe, through his zeal and anxiety for the safety of Quebeck, sent you the Forty-Seventh Regiment of foot without orders from hence, His Majesty has been pleased to direct that the regiment of the Prince of Waldeck, and the artillery thereto belonging, which were intended to make part of the Army under your command, shall be forthwith conveyed to and join the Army under the command of General Howe. It is, therefore, His Majesty's pleasure that you do not return the Forty-Seventh Regiment of foot to General Howe, notwithstanding any request that may be made by him to you for that purpose.

At the time when I transmitted to you the warrant relative to vacancies in the Army under your command, it was understood that Lord Amherst, when he commanded in America, only gave commissions to the rank of Captain, inclusive, and posted to vacant Majorities and Lieutenant-Colonels; but I have now the satisfaction to inform you that his Majesty, always intending that your powers should be as great as those enjoyed by Lord Amherst, has been graciously pleased to order that you should give commissions to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, inclusive; and as many inconveniences might result from your not having power to make and fill up vacancies by sale, his Majesty has also been pleased to consent that in cases of sickness, and where the benefit of the service may warrant it, you permit the officers under your command, to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, inclusive, to sell, and that you give commissions to the succeeding officers; but in other instances His Majesty wishes that requests for leave to sell may, with your observations thereupon, be transmitted to the Secretary at War, for his Majesty's consideration.

I am, &c.,

G. GERMAINE.

P. S. As the foreign ships which make part of this embarkation cannot be employed in any other service in America, as soon as the troops are landed you will give orders for their being discharged; and as, from the behaviour of the masters, there is good ground to suspect that they have stores of different kinds concealed on board, it will be very proper that their holds be carefully examined.

DEPOSITION OF JOHN EMMES, A DELAWARE PILOT.

PHILADELPHIA, ss:

On the 21st day of June, Anno Domini 1776, before George Bryan, one of the Justices, &c., cometh, voluntarily, John Emmes, aged about twenty-six years, Pilot, duly licensed for the Bay and River of Delaware, dwelling in the City of Philadelphia, and, being sworn on the Holy Gospel, doth depose, testify, and say, in manner following, viz:

That on the 9th day of September last this deponent departed from said City in the brigantine Sea-Nymph, of which Joseph Bradford was master, bound for Jamaica, and that on the 17th day of September last the said brigantine, being then off the Capes of Virginia, and beyond soundings, the said vessel was taken by a ship of war called the Mercury, of twenty guns, and sent for Boston, in New-England; that this deponent was on the day of said capture removed from the Sea-Nymph to the Mercury; that the Mercury, in which was this deponent, arrived in Boston harbour within two weeks after; that this deponent was found out to be a Delaware Pilot by means of some of the crew of the Sea-Nymph telling the same to the officers of the Mercury, as he understood and believes; that from the Mercury in Boston harbour this deponent was removed to the Preston ship of war, of fifty guns, on board of which Admiral Graves had his flag hoisted; that this deponent continued in the Preston from the 1st of October last until the 26th of January following, when this deponent went aboard the Chatham, of fifty guns, on which Admiral Shuldam had his flag hoisted, and continued in the Chatham till the last day of March, when the Chatham arriving at Halifax, in Nova-Scotia, this deponent was turned over to the Fowey, of twenty guns; that on the 7th day of April this deponent left Halifax in the Fowey, and arrived on the last of April off Cape-Henlopen, and on the 3d day of May last was put on board the Roebuck, of forty-four guns, commanded by Captain Hammond; that, about two days after, the Roebuck proceeded up Delaware-Bay to the road of Bombay-Hook, and anchored there, sending a barge with ten men in it towards the shore of New-Jersey, in pursuit of two shallops, or small country sloops, which had come down the river; that the barge aforesaid and a boat from the Liverpool frigate, then in company with the Roebuck, forced one of said shallops ashore, and burned the same, seizing the other, and bringing off from the shore twenty-five or thirty cattle in the shallop last mentioned and boats, as he understood; that the Captains of the two ships of war sent assistance in other boats to help their people in the boats first mentioned to bring off the cattle, on perceiving resistance was made by the country people; that the carcasses were delivered and divided to the two frigates, and a brigantine, a sloop, and two pilot boats, which were in company with the frigates; that the shallop last mentioned was soon after dismasted and scuttled; that said frigates proceeded up the Delaware to Morris Listen's land, and there anchored during the following night; that the next day, the wind being at northeast, the said frigates and the other vessels in company turned up with the flood-tide, and, approaching to Reedy-Island, the armed sloop Wasp was seen within said Island, also beating up; that on this Captain Hammond ordered Captain Bellew, of the Liverpool, to stay at the lower end of Reedy-Island till the Wasp was above Reedy-Point, and then to follow him upwards; that the Roebuck arriving in the bite of Newcastle, this deponent saw a brigantine somewhat higher at anchor, but on the approach of the Roebuck, the anchor of said brigantine was lifted, and said brigantine turned upwards, the Roebuck gaining on said brigantine, and firing several guns charged with eighteen-pound shot, to oblige said brigantine to bring to; that the brigantine, nevertheless, escaped into Christine-Creek, where the Wasp had also retired; that a small schooner, laden, outward bound, was seen on shore just below the entrance of said creek by the crew, and that Captain Hammond sent his boat on board the schooner, and dropped his anchor opposite to said creek; that immediately after the Roebuck was thus anchored, being afternoon, the crew were employed in hoisting up the ship's water-casks, and cleaning them in order to fill; that next day a flag of truce was sent ashore, and Captain Budden, a prisoner, was sent away with the flag; that before the flag of truce returned the galleys appeared upwards, coming towards the Roebuck and Liverpool, which lay at anchor near the Roebuck; that thereupon Captain Hammond ordered the ship to be cleared and made ready for fighting; that the water-casks, which had encumbered the deck and guns, were partly stove, partly carried to the brigantine which had accompanied said frigates up the Delaware, and partly placed in the ship's hold, and elsewhere; that about one in the afternoon the galleys had begun to fire on the frigates, at first without the reach of their shot, and continued to fire on them near a dozen shot before the frigates returned any; that at length the Liverpool, which had anchored below the Roebuck, coming up, some stern-chase guns were fired from the Roebuck; that then, the Roebuck's anchor being apeak, both ships got under sail, the Roebuck's head being to the eastward, and the Liverpool's to the westward; that the ships, in this position, and dropping up with a light breeze from the north-northeast, brought their broadsides to bear on some of the galleys, and fired oftentimes, and without intermission, for several hours; that about three-quarters of an hour before the firing from the ships ceased, the Roebuck ran aground about half a mile from the Jersey shore, nearly opposite to Burd's, on the Pennsylvania shore; that the galleys retiring upwards beyond the reach of shot, the fight ended; that the commander of the Liverpool, at the time the Roebuck took the ground, was ordered to come astern of the Roebuck, and cover her; that the Liverpool was at the time of this accident to the westward, and nearer the Pennsylvania shore; that the Liverpool was placed near the Roebuck accordingly, to protect her when she might heel; that the Roebuck ran aground about the time of full tide, and lay aground till about half an hour after three, before day of the following morning; that during the rise of the tide great endeavours were used by Captain Hammond to heave his ship afloat; that at low water the Roebuck lay over so much that the lower deck ports were necessarily shut on the reclined side to keep out the water, and that her cannon were rendered useless by her situation; that the Roebuck, at the time aforesaid, by means of a rope fastened to the Liverpool, was hauled afloat, and the other cables and ropes which had been used for that end were abandoned and let slip; that whilst the ship lay aground, as aforesaid, the Captain, his officers, and crew, were all constantly upon watch, and that no one retired to sleep during the night, and that boats were all the night employed to watch the motions of the galleys and guard the Roebuck; that the officers of the Roebuck had expected that there would be an attempt in the night to burn the Roebuck, but afterwards concluded that it was not done for want of ammunition; that during the fight of the Roebuck and Liverpool with the galleys, only one ball fired from the galleys, as far as this deponent knows, struck the hull of the Roebuck, but some small damage was done to the sails and rigging, great part of the shot of the galleys aimed at the Roebuck not reaching her; that after the Roebuck was hauled off the ground and brought to anchor, the Captain employed his crew at filling water very diligently, two pumps being used for that purpose; that about high water in the afternoon of the day following the day of said fight, the fight was renewed, by the galleys coming down the river, the ships immediately on the approach of the galleys being got under sail; that the wind being pretty fresh at southwest, the ships turned downwards, working to windward, and firing upon the galleys till the ships had proceeded three miles below the town of Newcastle, when, it being near ten in the evening, the galleys ceased to fire, and retired from the ships; that in the second fight the galleys drew nearer to the ships than in the first, though seldom nearer than three-quarters of a mile, or thereabouts; that on the second day's action one shot of eighteen-pound was lodged in the Roebuck's side, about three streaks above the water's edge, and another like it on the opposite side, nearly as low; that one eighteen-pound shot entered an upper port, ruined the carriage, dismounted a nine-pound cannon, killed one man, and wounded two others; that five others were wounded, two of them considerably, by a cartridge taking fire; that another eighteen-pound shot also entered the stern, and lodged on board the ship, and that two other shot also struck the ship, seven in all, as far as this deponent knows; that the rigging, sails, and spars of the Roebuck were often struck, damaged, and cut, particularly one mizzen-shroud, one of the foretopmast shrouds, and two of the back-stays were cut off, the main-stay cut as far as a strand and a half, and much running rigging broken, the mizzen-yard twice wounded, so that the lower end was obliged to be cut off, the main-yard wounded so that it could not be depended upon, the sails pierced several times, not easy to be numbered; the long-boat had been damaged in the first fight; that the ships lay at anchor about three miles below Newcastle all the following night, filling and stowing water, and that the crew continued in the morning to fill and stow water, and began to repair the rigging; that after about two hours' ebb tide the Roebuck's anchor was weighed, and the ships stood down and anchored, at low water, just above Reedy-Island, where the seamen were employed in refitting the ship for three days; that this deponent never heard anything said on board the Roebuck which intimated any design of destroying houses on the shore; that after the stay of three days aforesaid, the frigates returned to Cape-Henlopen, without any unnecessary delay; that this deponent doth not know, and doth not believe, that any persons privately came on board the Roebuck from the shore about said cape during his residence in said ship, but has heard on board that such an incident passed previous to his going aboard her; that the day following the return of the Roebuck to said cape Captain Hammond put to sea, with the Liverpool in company; that the frigate being about seven leagues from the land, the Liverpool was sent to the northeastward, but the destination not known, Captain Hammond in the Roebuck, on the contrary, steering southward till the next day in the morning, when the ship was brought to, the tenders summoned in, particularly a schooner in which Captain Knox had been taken, and which was used as a tender, and had joined the Roebuck the day before from Virginia. This schooner and the rest, three in all, were sent for Chincoteague to procure stock, and the ship proceeded to Hampton-Roads, in the Chesapeake; that the same day he arrived there the Captain went to Norfolk, and the day after the ship Dunmore, the Fowey, and a great number of prize and other vessels came out of Elizabeth River, and the tenders arrived from Chincoteague with eight lean bullocks and no other stock; that the ships of war and vessels aforesaid afterwards lay in Hampton-Road for a week, and then stood up the bay to Gwin's Island, and anchored in Milford-Haven, at the entrance of Pianketank River; that he was on the Island, and understood that about five hundred hogs, sheep, and cattle were found on it by Lord Dunmore, but no good water; that most of the wells there yielded very bad water; that about five hundred or five hundred and fifty men, soldiers, white and black, were landed on said Island by Lord Dunmore, as this deponent heard; that many of these, particularly negroes, died, and many negroes came in and joined him; that the Roebuck was in some measure cleaned, and that Captain Hammond continued at his last-mentioned place till the 6th of June instant, when, about ten of the clock in the evening, this deponent, with John Drury and Alexander Davis, swam to the shore of the main land, about two miles, and escaped; that about six days before this deponent left the Roebuck, a gentleman of the name of Smith, Secretary of Governour Eden, arrived at Gwin's Island, from Annapolis, as this deponent understands; and that on the 5th instant a gentleman in black, from Somerset County, as he heard, came down and went to Lord Dunmore.

Sworn before GEORGE BRYAN.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, June 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am directed by Congress to forward to you the enclosed resolves, by which you will perceive it is their desire that another regiment should be raised in your Colony on the Continental establishment.

The many ill consequences resulting from a short enlistment of troops have induced the Congress to leave the term of their service indefinite. By this means, there will be no danger of losing their services at a time when their discipline and experience have qualified them to be of the greatest use to their country.

With respect to the Field Officers, as soon as I have the honour to receive your recommendations, I will lay them before Congress, and immediately upon their determination transmit you the commissions filled up accordingly.

Major Dubois, by his behaviour in Canada, has justly merited the notice of his country, I am, therefore, to request you will be pleased to return his name as one of the Field Officers of the regiment for the approbation of Congress.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Convention of New-York.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF NEW-YORK.

Philadelphia, June 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I do myself the honour of enclosing, in obedience to the commands of Congress, sundry resolutions, to which I beg leave to request your attention.

I have only time to observe, in general, that it is totally impossible the American troops should be on a respectable footing, or that they should render any very essential services to their country, unless the United Colonies on their part will take care to have them well appointed, and equipped with everything necessary for an army. In this view of the matter, the enclosed resolve respecting the mode of providing proper clothing for our troops is most certainly of the greatest importance, and I make no doubt will appear in the same light to you, and claim your immediate and closest attention.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Convention of New-York.

[Same to the Assembly of Connecticut, to the Assembly of Rhode-Island, to the Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay, and to the Assembly of New-Hampshire.]

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, June 21, 1776.

SIR: The Congress, having the greatest reason to believe there has been very gross misconduct in the management of our affairs in Canada, have come to a resolution to have a general inquiry made into the behaviour of the officers employed on that expedition. The honour of the United Colonies, and a regard for the publick good, call loudly for such an inquiry to be set on foot. I am, therefore, directed to request, after having made the inquiry agreeably to the enclosed resolve, you will transmit the result, together with the proofs, to Congress.

The opinion that an officer cannot be tried by a Court-Martial after his resignation, for offences while he held a commission—so dangerous to the service, and particularly destructive in our Army, where the short inlistment of the troops might furnish temptation to crimes from the prospect of impunity—has been this day reprobated by Congress.

I have written to the Convention of New-York on the subject of the enclosed resolve respecting another regiment to be raised in that Colony. The terms on which the commissions are to be granted are extremely well calculated to excite the officers to exert themselves to fill up their companies.

I have likewise written to the respective Colonies, and have sent copies of the enclosed resolve recommending to them to provide clothes for the troops of their Colonies. These, or such articles of them as you shall want, the Congress have empowered you to draw for on the Assemblies and Conventions, from time to time, as you shall judge necessary. I have represented to them that it is totally impossible the American Army should ever be on a respectable footing, or that they should render such essential services to their country as we expect and desire, unless the United Colonies will, on their part, take care that they are well appointed and equipped with everything necessary for an army.

General Wooster, it is the order of Congress, should be permitted to return to his family.

I have delivered Mr. Visscher his commission as Lieutenant-Colonel in the regiment commanded by Colonel Nicolson, and directed him to wait on you upon his arrival at New-York.

Apprehending that such of the resolves of Congress as respect the conduct of the Army are executed in consequence of orders issued by you, I have omitted sending to General Schuyler such as respect him, concluding that the directions would go from you; but if it will be any way a relief to you, I will continue to forward them.

I have the honour to be, with much esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

22d.—Your letter of the 20th this moment came to hand, and shall be laid before Congress on Monday.

NEW-JERSEY CONVENTION TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Burlington, June 21, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to the resolve of the Continental Congress, we have this day had our late Governour, Mr. Franklin, before us for examination. Enclosed is a copy of the questions we proposed to him. He refused to make any answer, for two reasons: First, because we were an illegal Assembly, which had usurped the Government of the King; Secondly, because we had not treated him as gentlemen; we had resolved that he was an enemy to this country, which we knew to be false; we had made him a prisoner, and had robbed him, having deprived him of part of his salary; and now, do as you please, and make the best of it. This behaviour, gross and insolent as it is, we have thought fit to report. At the same time we are to inform you that, for many reasons, we think it highly proper that Mr. Franklin should be confined. The place and manner of his confinement we most cheerfully submit to the judgment of the Continental Congress, relying upon the assurance of Congress already given that it shall be out of this Colony. Only one thing we beg leave to add, that, in our opinion, the sooner the Continental Congress take him in charge the better.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant.

By order of Congress:

SAMUEL TUCKER, President.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

Questions proposed to Mr. FRANKLIN.

1. Did Mr. Franklin issue the Proclamation of the 30th day of May last for calling the Assembly of New-Jersey, a copy of which is presented in the several newspapers, or one to that effect?

2. Did Mr. Franklin at that time know of the Resolve of the Continental Congress of the 15th day of May last, directing that all authority under the Crown of Great Britain should be totally suppressed?

3. By what authority did Mr. Franklin undertake to call the Assembly?

4. With what view did he undertake to call that Assembly, and what important business had he to lay before them?

5. Did Mr. Franklin write letters to the Ministry of Great Britain, encouraging them to proceed in their designs against this country; and did he undertake to point out to that Ministry the means of distressing this country, particularly on the sea-coast of New-Jersey?

6. The Congress being informed that Mr. Franklin dropped some threatening expressions to Colonel Heard, such as "it is your turn now, but it will be mine another day," they would be glad to know what he meant by them.

In Provincial Congress, New-Jersey, }
Burlington, June 21, 1776. }

William Franklin, Esq., late Governour of this Province, having been brought before this Congress, pursuant to an order for that purpose, to be examined touching such parts of his conduct as were deemed inimical to the liberties of America, Mr. Franklin refused to answer the questions put to him, denying the authority of this body, which he alleged had usurped the King's Government in this Province. As the said William Franklin, by this and his former conduct, in many instances, appears to be a virulent enemy to this country, and a person that may prove dangerous,

Therefore, it is unanimously Resolved, That the said William Franklin be confined in such place and manner as the honourable Continental Congress shall direct.

WILLIAM PATTERSON, Secretary.

COLONEL TUPPER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sandy-Hook, June 21, 1776—10 o'clock A. M.

SIR: I landed here the evening before last, and, by reason of several inconveniences, could not make an attack until this morning at four o'clock, when I advanced within one hundred and fifty yards of the Light-House, in so secret a manner that my party were not discovered. I advanced with an officer, and desired to speak with the commanding officer, and, after a few words, he fired several shot at me, but, as God would have it, he missed me. I returned to my party and ordered the artillery to play, which continued an hour, but found the walls so firm I could make no impression. I retired toward the shipping, not thinking but, as there were two men-of-war arrived yesterday, that they would have been so complaisant as to send a party on shore to have attacked me, but could not provoke them. I occupied the ground about two hours and a half between two smart fires, viz: from two men-of-war on one side, and the Light-House on the other; but, what is remarkable, I had not one man killed, nor one wounded so much as to apply to a surgeon.

I then repaired leisurely to the south end of the cedars, to my camp, and, having refreshed my men, sent off fifty to go and show themselves; and I mean to occupy the ground in like manner to-day by relieving, to let the poor mortals know we are ready to meet them in the field. This manoeuvre cannot be attended with danger, as the land between us and them is a broken thicket of woods. I mean to return by night with my party, that they may not know from whence I came or where I went. It is a little strange I received no assistance from the Jerseys, though earnestly requested. My party are all well and in very high spirits.

It is thought, and it looks probable, that one of the three ships which arrived yesterday was a prize.

I know of nothing further extraordinary, and remain your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

BENJAMIN TUPPER, Lieut. Col. of 21st Reg't.

To His Excellency General Washington.

N. B. It is very certain they got intelligence of our intent by their reinforcement.

[Memorandum by General WASHINGTON, on the back of this Letter:—"22d. Wrote him to desist from the enterprise, as it seemed dangerous, and not to promise success."]

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 24. Referred to the Board of War and Ordnance.]

New-York, June 21, 1776.

SIR: I was this morning honoured with your favour of the 19th instant, with sundry resolves of Congress, which came to hand after I had closed mine of the 20th. I shall appoint a Deputy Mustermaster-General as soon as I can fix upon a proper person for the office, and desire him immediately to repair to Canada.

Mr. Bennett, the bearer of this, delivered me a letter to-day from General Schuyler, enclosing the proceedings of the Commissioners of Indian Affairs at a meeting at Albany, in consequence of the resolution of Congress, (as they say,) which I transmitted the 7th instant, for engaging the Indians in our service. The gentlemen appear to me to have widely mistaken the views of Congress in this instance, and to have formed a plan for engaging such Indians as were not in contemplation. I cannot account upon what principles they have gone, as a part of their proceedings show they are about to hold a conference with the Six Nations. I suppose they esteemed what they have done a necessary measure; a copy of which I have the honour to enclose you.

I shall now beg leave to lay before Congress a proposition made to me by Captain Leary, of this city, in behalf of a body of men who are desirous of being employed in the Continental service as a troop of horse, and at the same time to offer my opinion that such a corps may be extremely useful in many respects. In a march they may be of the utmost service in reconnoitring the enemy and giving intelligence, and have it in their power to render many important benefits. The terms on which they are willing to engage are enclosed, which appear to me moderate and reasonable. I am also informed that another company might be readily made up, and most probably upon the same terms. I would, therefore, submit the propriety and expediency of the measure to the consideration of Congress, and wish their opinion whether it will be agreeable to them that both or either of them should be formed, and incorporated in this Army, in a manner as has been proposed by Captain Leary, if it can be done.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

P. S. General Schuyler in his letter mentions ten dollars paid Mr. Bennett there.

CAPTAIN LEARY'S PROPOSITION.

One Captain, one Lieutenant, one Cornet, one Quarter-master, two Sergeants, two Corporals, thirty Privates, one Trumpeter, one Clarionet—whole amount, forty.

The men will accept of pay at eight shillings a day each, and find themselves every necessary fitting for the service, such as a horse and accoutrements, rations for horses and selves.

JNO. LEARY, Jun., Captain.

PETITION OF WILLIAM GODDARD.

[Read 24th June, 1776; referred to the Board of War. Read before the Board of War, and referred for further consideration.]

To the Honourable Commissioners or Delegates from the several AMERICAN States, now sitting in General Congress in the City of PHILADELPHIA:

The Memorial of WILLIAM GODDARD most respectfully sheweth:

That the intolerable severity of Ministerial oppression having exposed to innumerable hardships your Memorialist, and other Printers who manifested their zeal in defence of the invaded rights of America, and the iron hand of tyranny, having, by means of the Parliamentary Post-Office, pressed upon him more heavily, perhaps, than upon any other,—his own sufferings and an ardent desire of serving his country prompted him to devise a plan for the total abolition of that engine of Ministerial extortion, fraud and revenge, by substituting for it a Post-Office on constitutional principles.

His undertaking was countenanced by all the friends of American freedom, several of whom contributed largely towards raising a fund sufficient to prosecute his plan, which the artificers used by the tools of despotism to discourage it rendered more expensive than it might otherwise have been. He was, however, very near reaping the fruits of his labour, and reimbursing his friends, when your most honourable House appointed one of your colleagues to superintend that important department under your direction; but the worthy officer intrusted with it not having been authorized to indemnify your Memorialist or his friends for the expense incurred by establishing Postmasters, hiring riders, and bringing the temporary establishment, in all its parts, to that state where your officer found it when it was resigned with all those advantages, a great loss is sustained by your Memorialist, as well as the persons who were more intimately connected with him in that voluntary service of the publick.

The Secretary and Comptrollership (the two principal places which the Congress instituted under the Postmaster-General) having been disposed of, it was judged that, as your Memorialist has repeatedly travelled through most of the Colonies for the purpose of carrying on his own projected plan, he was more capable than many others to make a proper choice of inferior officers, and knew many local circumstances that would be essentially useful in the regulation of that Department, should he be invested with the surveyorship in the present establishment.

To serve his country he accepted it, insufficient as the salary was to afford him a decent maintenance, and though he well knew that the greater his exertions should be the sooner the office must be discontinued, all sinecures being inglorious to the incumbents, and burdensome to the State. Having brought the surveyorship to that period, for one year at least he entreats your honourable House to favour him with an opportunity to serve his country in the Army, wherever the scene of action may be, if he be permitted to share in the glorious struggle in which his country is now engaged, and be rendered as serviceable as may be reasonably presumed from his known principles and character.

He is informed, by officers of distinction, that there are three vacancies, one of which, the Mustermaster-General's, being more lucrative, might indemnify him for a part of the pecuniary losses already mentioned; but as it is less liable to those personal dangers which his natural disposition impels him to encounter, he would think himself more happy should you honour him with a commission amongst the gentlemen who shall be appointed Field Officers to supply the consequential vacancies occasioned by the alterations expected to happen in two regiments which have no Colonel.

Your Memorialist would not presume to solicit employment to the prejudice of the officers in any regiment, but he is assured it will give no disgust to the worthy gentlemen of two corps on this station, who, having honourably served in them, might with propriety claim such preferment.

Now that this country is threatened with a most formidable invasion, to assist in defending, at the risk of his life, those sacred rights which, as a citizen, he has asserted on every opportunity that his humble station offered him, is the most fervent wish of your Memorialist, who will strive to render himself worthy of the confidence that may be reposed in him by your honourable House, and to demonstrate that he is ever ready to sacrifice his own advantage to the publick good.

WILLIAM GODDARD.

New-York, June 21, 1776.

COLONEL FLEMING TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, June 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take occasion to express the high sense I entertain of that honourable testimony of your approbation which you were pleased to give by unanimously appointing me Deputy Adjutant-General in the Continental Army, and extremely regret the necessity I am now laid under of making a resignation of the trust committed to me.

I flatter myself that, considering my uniform conduct and my circumstances in life, you will do me the justice to believe that in accepting the office I was influenced by my zeal for, and attachment to, the cause of America; not by any avidity for the emoluments which might thence arise. It is unnecessary to say I left ease and competency, my wife and children, and everything dear to me, to encounter, at the expense of my health as well as at the risk of my life, all the rigours, difficulties, and dangers of a long campaign in Canada. Neither is it my part to determine whether my behaviour in the station I filled has been reprehensible or meritorious.

But this much I will venture to assert, that, however moderate my abilities, my assiduity and attention to the discharge of my duty were unremitted. What share of zeal and perseverance I may pretend to can easily be ascertained by the term of my continuance in Canada, under all the discouragements of an excruciating disorder. At any rate I am not conscious of any such neglect or desertion of my duty as may justly expose me to a manifest indignity, and when it is offered me I cannot forbear feeling it with the sensibility of a man.

As first Deputy I naturally expected to succeed to the Adjutant-Generalship when it became vacant, but to my great surprise I find the Continental Congress have thought proper to give the preference to another. True it is, the Congress have declared a resolution to reserve to themselves a right of dispensing preferments according to the merit of officers, and not to the seniority of commissions; but even on that ground the preference given to another contains an implied censure on my conduct. It is a tacit declaration that I am not competent to the place of Adjutant-General, and of course that I have not acted with propriety in my present character; for no man capable of acquitting himself well in the post of Deputy-Adjutant can be unqualified for that of Adjutant-General. I am, therefore, compelled to suppose that the Continental Congress disapprove of my past conduct, and think me unfit for the place to which I was appointed; otherwise it cannot be imagined they would step aside from the plain path of succession by seniority, and take the pains to place a gentleman not at all within the line of the department, over my head. This would be charging them with a degree of partiality of which I hope they are incapable.

I am now reduced to this dilemma, either to suppose that I have been much injured, and my honour as a soldier wounded in the tenderest part, by being excluded from a station, without sufficient cause, to which I had a good right to aspire; or to close with the opinion of the Continental Congress, and consider myself as inadequate to the office you were pleased to honour me with. In either case it is evidently my duty to resign; in the first, justice to myself requires it; in the last, justice to my country.

On whatever ground I act, be assured, gentlemen, my affection to this country, and my zeal for the preservation of its rights, will always remain unimpaired. As a private citizen, my property, my life, shall be cheerfully hazarded in the defence of America.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servant,

EDWARD FLEMING.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress.

TO THE HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN OF THE PROVINCIAL CONGRESS OF THIS PROVINCE.

Province of New-York, Cumberland County, ss:

Upon the handbills from you sent to us, purporting the expediency of instituting civil Government according to the exigencies of the County, the major part of whom have agreed thereto and elected their Delegates, and empowered them with their authority to agree with you in forming a mode of Government independent of the Crown, in the most mild, just, and equitable manner possible, for the regulating their internal police, and the preservation of the rights, liberty, and property of the people,—all which, subjected, nevertheless, to those regulations, conditions, and restraints herewith transmitted you by the hands of the Delegates of this County, to all which they are by their constituents in the premises limited and restrained in such manner that if they break over and violate those sacred instructions herewith sent you in behalf of, in, and for our constituents, in matters of such infinite importance and delicacy, the County Committee declare, in behalf of the free and patriotick people thereof, that they mean to, and hereby do, reserve to themselves the full liberty of an absolute disavowance thereof, and every clause, article, and paragraph of such an institution.

Also, it is hereby acceded to and fully meant and intended by the good people of the County, that they, notwithstanding this compliance with the requisition of the said handbills above-mentioned, so directed to us for the purposes aforesaid, have fully and absolutely reserved to themselves and their heirs, &c., the full liberty of pursuing their former petition in behalf of the people included and specified therein some years ago, and preferred to the great and General Assembly of the ancient, ever respectable, and most patriotick Government of the Massachusetts-Bay Province, that the whole District described in said petition may be hereafter reunited to that Province, and reserving to themselves also their right of offering their pleas, arguments, and proofs in full to induce to a reunion thereof to that ancient jurisdiction for those important reasons to be adduced when, where, and before whom the parties concerned shall be admitted to offer the same. As in duty bound shall ever pray.

The whole whereof, so as aforesaid, to you, ever respectable gentlemen, submitted with due congratulations of all the good people of said County.

Per order of the County Committee:

Attest: JAMES CLAY, Chairman of said Com.

To the President of the Honourable Congress for the Colony of New-York.

JOHN WATSON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, June 21, 1776.

SIR: I have been requested by the Committee for taking care of the prisoners, to take the charge and oversight of those stationed at Canaan; among whom one John Birchley has shown me a certificate, (signed by the commander of the Brilliant, one of the Royal Navy—his name I have forgotten,) showing that said Birchley was impressed at Quebeck, for his Majesty's service, from on board the Carolina, a merchant ship from Philadelphia, owned by Jeremiah Warder, of that place; that he was brought up to St. Johns, to man out the vessels built there, which were resigned to us with said garrison, and there made prisoner. Said Birchley appears to be a steady, sensible young man, and has behaved himself well since with us. Informs me he sailed from Philadelphia on board said ship, &c.; that, although he is an Englishman by birth, he has been in this country from his childhood; has sailed in the employ of several merchants from that place, in particular Mr. William Morris, (in the Richard Penn.)—who he thinks is the same man who signs the Continental bills,—Mr. Warder, and others, who he thinks would give full satisfaction of his friendly disposition to the American cause, and of the manner of his coming into his Majesty's service, if he might be permitted to go to Philadelphia. Also, one John Barber has shown me a like certificate from the same officer. He appears to be well acquainted with the principal towns in this Colony, viz: Hartford, Weathersfield, Middletown, New-London, Simsbury, &c.; is certainly acquainted with many persons of note in those places; was impressed from a fishing vessel at Quebeck; professes a desire to live in the country, as he undoubtedly has since the last war. I have heard of one or two more in like circumstances, but have not seen their certificates. Those above mentioned are dated at Albany, where they were brought from the northward; they were taken from Quebeck. Captain Somes, the officer who gave the certificate, is not in this Colony.

I trouble your Honour with this, at their earnest request, and desire your advice and direction.

I am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN WATSON.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

JOSEPH HAWLEY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Watertown, June 21, 1776.

GENERAL WASHINGTON: The most important matters are soon to be decided by arms. Unhappy it is for the Massachusetts, and I fear for the whole continent, that at this season we have a large and numerous Assembly. More than one-half of the House are new members. Their decisions are most afflictingly slow, when everything calls for the utmost ardour and despatch. The Lord have mercy on us! This Colony, I imagine, will raise the men required by Congress before snow falls, but in no season for the relief of either New-York or Canada.

Pray, sir, consider what there is to be done. It is my clear opinion that there will not be a single company move in this Colony for either of those places this three weeks. I know, sir, it will vex you; but your Excellency will not be alone in the vexation. My soul at times is ready to die within me at the delays; at others, my blood to press out at the pores of my body. But what shall be the expedients? I never was good at them; but will venture to propose again the same I mentioned in my last, namely, that some, or all, of the five Continental Regiments here be ordered to march, without one moment's delay, to Canada or New-York, as the exigencies require. In such case, they must be paid up their arrears, or nearly. In that way you will, in effect, get succours for New-York or Canada, or both, from this Colony. Our people are so jealous for their own safety (though you know, sir, that I judge them at present in very little danger) that they will raise the Militia for their own defence. I beg your Excellency to advert to the proposal a moment. Our own Militia are as good, for all the intents answered, or to be answered here, by those regiments, as they are. They are much better for Canada or New-York than the Militia. They are officered and organized, and well armed; the Militia to be officered, armed, and equipped. The differences are too many to be enumerated. If I may say it, I am astonished at the policy of Congress in ordering more regiments here, instead of ordering those which are here to parts where they are infinitely more needed. But my opinion is of little worth; but, such as it is, I have given it: it may serve as a suggestion.

I am, may it please your Excellency, most sincerely yours,

JOSEPH HAWLEY.

To His Excellency General Washington.

CAPTAIN GOULD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, June 21, 1776.

SIR: Whereas I received orders from your Excellency to march the guard under my command at General Lee's quarters to guard the magazine at Winter-Hill, and there to stay till further orders; accordingly I did. The powder was moved into Boston; then General Ward gave orders for me to march into Boston, and be his guard. Accordingly, I marched into Boston, and remain his guard. As he expects to leave the service soon, I humbly ask the favour of your Excellency to permit me and guard to stay, as guard for the succeeding General; which favour, I think, cannot be considered unreasonable, or injurious to the service, but will be the means of helping it; and hope it will not appear so to your Excellency, when you hear my reasons: First: Because the men belong to several different regiments. Some of them are gone to Quebeck, and some to New-York, &c.; and the time of their enlistment is half expired. Some are but two or three in a regiment, and will not be likely to do much service to their respective regiments. Secondly: The men have been to the cost of procuring uniforms, and dressing well. Through the scarcity of money, I have lent them a great deal, and must unavoidably lose great part of it. Thirdly: When the men enlisted, General Lee desired me to draw them up, as he had something to say to them. Accordingly, I did; and he told them that he had a great regard for them, and that, if they would enlist into his guard, they should not join the regiments. They desired of General Lee to be an independent company, and not enlist in the regiments. He made this objection, that it could not be, for they must enlist into the regiments in order to draw the pay there; but, said he, that will make no difference, for you shall not join the regiments; and he said that it was no matter what company they were returned under, for they desired to be with me; and he promised them that I should be their officer, as they had a mind to enlist in the company with me. He said they could not all belong to one company in the regiment, but, he said, it would make no odds, for they should not join the regiments. And General Lee went to Colonel Little, and told him that it was no matter what Captain he returned me under, for I should not join the regiments. Likewise, he told him that he would not weaken his regiment of sergeants and corporals, but would appoint them himself; and he told me that he would see them paid himself, as sergeants and corporals. Accordingly, he appointed them, and they have done the duty ever since as such; and for them to be returned into the ranks must be degrading to them, and is contrary to the rules and regulations of the Army. When General Lee went away, he said he expected to return soon; and that, if he was stationed in these parts, he would send for us; but, as he went to the southward, he had not an opportunity. As we are in uniform by ourselves, and have a great mind to be as a company by ourselves, if your Excellency shall see fit to order us to the regiments, not one of the men will join the company with me. I have enlisted about sixty men, and there are about thirty with me; and as there is an opportunity for this purpose, the men will think very hard of it; and I doubt not but it will be a hinderance of the men's re-enlisting when their times are out.

I am determined, if my life is spared, to continue in the service of my country. If my conduct is such that I shall be accepted, I should be glad if the men might be used so that they will stay with me; and, therefore, if your Excellency would grant this favour to us, I shall think myself bound in the strongest obligations to promote your honour, and shall think nothing too much to do for you; and am your most devoted, humble servant,

BENJAMIN GOULD,

Captain of General Ward's Guards.

To His Excellency General Washington.

MESHECH WEARE TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-Hampshire, Exeter, June 21, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to directions from the Continental Congress, received a few weeks past, to collect all the hard money we could, and forward the same to Canada, to be delivered into your hands, we herewith transmit the sum of £1145 15s. 10d., under care of Benjamin Giles and James

Betton, Esquires, Members of the General Assembly, who readily, as good friends to their country, undertake the journey; to whom you will please to give a receipt for the same, and all the despatch the circumstances of the business will permit. We shall still exert ourselves to exchange and collect what further sums of money we can, and do everything in our power for the good of the American cause.

Wishing you the protection of a kind Providence, with the best success to our troops in the Northern Department, I am, in behalf of the Council and Assembly, with all due respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President.

To General Schuyler.

Williamsburgh, Virginia, June 22, 1776.

Last Monday an express arrived at Head-Quarters from General Lee, who left his Excellency the 6th instant, at Little River, on the road to Charlestown, with three battalions of the North-Carolina troops, marching with all possible expedition to the assistance of that place; General Clinton, with upwards of fifty sail of men-of-war and transports, having appeared off their bar the Tuesday before, where they cast anchor. Two other North-Carolina Regiments, and Colonel Muhlenberg's Virginia Battalion, were likewise on their march for Charlestown; with whose assistance, it is not doubted but our brethren in South-Carolina will be able to defeat any attempts of their enemies, and, when under the conduct of so able and experienced a commander, give them that chastisement which they are so richly entitled to.

By the same express, we learn that a sloop arrived at Charlestown the 25th ultimo from St. Eustatia, with ten thousand weight of gunpowder; the master of which informed that a large vessel had arrived at that Island from Holland, deeply laden with arms and ammunition. He also said that all the French ports in the West-Indies were now open to us, and that their ships of war have received orders to protect our vessels in and out of their harbours; that the French are fortifying Dunkirk, which produced a remonstrance from the British Court, but without effect.

Yesterday the honourable Convention made choice of the following gentlemen to represent this Dominion in General Congress for one year, viz: George Wythe, Thomas Nelson, jun., Richard Henry Lee, Thomas Jefferson, and Francis Lightfoot Lee, Esquires.

This morning, Captain James Barron came to town from Jamestown, with the agreeable news that he and his brother, in two small armed vessels, were safe arrived there, with the Oxford transport, from Glasgow, having on board two hundred and seventeen Scotch Highlanders, with a number of women and children, which they took last Wednesday evening, on her way up to Gwin's Island to join Lord Dunmore. The people on board inform that they are part of a body of three thousand troops which sailed from Glasgow for Boston; but, upon hearing that that place was in our possession, they steered their course for Halifax; that they had been taken by the Andrew Doria, one of the Continental fleet, who, after disarming them, and taking out all the principal officers, with such of the transport's crew as were acquainted with navigation, put eight of their own hands on board to bring her into port; but that the carpenter of the transport formed a party, and rescued the vessel from them, and was conducting her into Hampton-Roads, when the two Captain Barrons very fortunately came across them, and moored them safe at Jamestown, where they are now disembarking, and are expected in town this day.

MEETING OF ASSOCIATORS, ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY, MARYLAND.

At a very respectable meeting of the Associators of Anne Arundel County, held at West River, on Saturday, the 22d instant, (June), the following important questions were submitted to their consideration:

First. Whether, in the opinion of the Associators present, the Province of Maryland should, or should not, be bound by the determination of the majority of the United Colonies upon all questions to be agitated in Congress, such only excepted as are calculated to regulate, or in any manner interfere in, the internal government of the Province?

Resolved, unanimously, in the affirmative.

Second. Whether the Instructions that were imposed upon the Delegates of this Province in Congress by the December, and continued by the May Sessions of Convention, should, or should not, be immediately rescinded by the present Convention, and the Delegates in Congress intrusted with discretionary powers of exercising their own judgments upon any question that may come under their consideration?

Resolved, unanimously, in the affirmative—from a thorough conviction that the true interests and substantial happiness of the United Colonies in general, and this in particular, are inseparably interwoven and linked together, and essentially dependant upon a close Union and Continental Confederation. The complexion of the times is such that, in our opinion, unanimity alone can render our opposition to the establishment of a Parliamentary tyranny glorious. By division, the most diabolical wishes of the King, Lords, and Commons, will be effectually realized.

Published by order of the meeting.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE DELEGATES OF CHARLES COUNTY, MARYLAND.

To JOSIAH HAWKINS, THOMAS STONE, ROBERT T. HOOE, JOSEPH H. HARRISON, and WILLIAM HARRISON, Esqs.

We, the subscribers, freemen of Charles County, in the Province of Maryland, taking into our most serious consideration the present state of the unhappy dispute between Great Britain and the United Colonies, and the very great distress and hardships they have brought upon us thereby, think proper to deliver you our sentiments, and to instruct you in certain points relative to your conduct in the next Convention, as Representatives of this County. Reasons for the mode of voting, and determining questions, by a majority of Counties, have not appeared to us to exist since the last general election; therefore, we charge and instruct you to move for, and endeavour to obtain a regulation for voting individually, and determining questions by a majority of members, and not of Counties, in future. And as we know we have a right to hear, or be informed what is transacted in Convention, we instruct you to move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolve for the doors of the House to be kept open in future, and that, on all questions proposed and seconded, the yeas and nays be taken, and, together with every other part of your proceedings, published, except such only as may relate to military operations, questions which ought to be debated with the doors shut, and the determinations thereon kept secret.

The experience we have had of the cruelty and injustice of the British Government, under which we have too long borne oppression and wrongs, and notwithstanding every peaceable endeavour of the United Colonies to get redress of grievances, by decent, dutiful, and sincere petitions and representations to the King and Parliament, giving every assurance of our affection and loyalty, and praying for no more than peace, liberty and safety under the British Government, yet have we received nothing but an increase of insult and injury, by all the Colonies being declared in actual rebellion; savages hired to take up arms against us; slaves proclaimed free, enticed away, trained and armed against their lawful masters; our towns plundered, burnt, and destroyed; our vessels and property seized on the seas, made free plunder to the captors, and our seamen forced to take arms against ourselves; our friends and countrymen, when captivated, confined in dungeons, and, as if criminals, chained down to the earth; our estates confiscated, and our men, women and children robbed and murdered: and as at this time, instead of Commissioners to negotiate a peace, as we have been led to believe were coming out, a formidable fleet of British ships, with a numerous army of foreign soldiers, in British pay, are daily expected on our coast, to force us to yield the property we have honestly acquired, and fairly own, and drudge out the remainder of our days in misery and wretchedness, leaving us nothing better to bequeath to posterity than poverty and slavery:—we must, for these reasons, declare, that our affection for the people, and allegiance to the Crown of Great Britain, so readily and truly acknowledged till of late, is forfeited on their part. And as we are convinced that nothing virtuous, humane, generous, or just, can be expected from the British King or nation, and that they will exert themselves to reduce us to a state of slavery, by every effort and artifice in their power, we are of opinion that the time has fully arrived for the Colonies to adopt the last measure for our common good and safety, and that the sooner they declare themselves separate from, and independent of the Crown and Parliament of Great Britain, the sooner they will be able to make effectual opposition, and establish their liberties on a firm and permanent basis. We, therefore, most earnestly instruct and charge you to move for, without loss of time, and endeavour to obtain, positive instructions from the Convention of Maryland to their Delegates in Congress, immediately to join the other Colonies in declaring that the United Colonies no longer owe allegiance to, nor are they dependant upon, the Crown or Parliament of Great Britain, or any other power on earth, but are, for time to come, free and independent States; provided that the power of forming Government, and regulating the internal concerns of each Colony, be left to their respective Legislatures; and that said Delegates give the assent of this Province to any further confederation of the Colonies for the support of their union, and for forming such foreign commercial connections as may be requisite and necessary for our common good and safety. And as the present Government under the King cannot longer exist with safety to the freemen of this Province, we are of opinion a new form of Government, agreeable to the late recommendation of the honourable Continental Congress to all the United Colonies, ought immediately to be adopted.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THE DELEGATES OF TALBOT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

To the Honourable MATTHEW TILGHMAN, Esq., JAMES LLOYD CHAMBERLAINE, EDWARD LLOYD, NICHOLAS THOMAS, and POLLARD EDMONSON, Esqs., Representatives for TALBOT County, in Convention now sitting:

The Address of part of the freemen of the said County:

GENTLEMEN: The vast importance of the dispute now subsisting between Great Britain and the North-American Colonies, the fatal consequences that must attend the mismanagement of that dispute, and the effects they must inevitably have on us, in common with the neighbouring Governments, sufficiently justify us, your constituents, in laying our sentiments before you, on the present occasion, respecting the measures taken for carrying into execution the plan proposed for the preservation of our liberties, now in the most imminent danger.

We, therefore, in virtue of that right which the constituent hath in his Representative or Deputy, take leave to express to you our great concern and sorrow that we cannot approve the measures pursued in the last session of Convention. We have seen, with grief and astonishment, the Convention of Maryland, in matters of the utmost importance, resolving in direct opposition to the honourable Congress. We have also seen it, in our opinion, profusely lavishing the publick money, at a time when the constituents are labouring under every burden which imagination can conceive, without money, without trade, or any possible means of procuring either. We likewise view its instructions to our Delegates in Congress, of the 18th of January and 21st of May last, as tending, in direct terms, to a breach of that confidential harmony so happily, before that, subsisting among the United Colonies, and which we, in common with every Colonist embarked in the cause of liberty, beheld as our greatest glory, and the only source of our protection. Its resolves in opposition to those in Congress of the 15th of May, declaring it to be necessary that the exercise of any kind of authority under the Crown of Great Britain should be totally suppressed, and all the powers of Government exerted under the authority of the people, we conceive to be a direct breach of the Continental Union, and to have a tendency to introduce anarchy and confusion, by setting up and continuing two separate and opposite authorities at the same time binding on the good people of this Province. We look upon the rule of voting in Convention by Counties to be dangerous, as productive of influence which may be used to rule the determinations and resolves of the House by a minority of twenty-seven members, who, in such case, may have all the effects of a majority. We consider our present mode of Government by Conventions and Committees, as insufficient to accomplish the end for which it was instituted; and dangerous, so far as it unites the Legislative and Executive powers in nearly the same persons, which is the true definition of tyranny. We would by no means insinuate that the Convention hath any intention of using its power to that purpose, and hope we shall not be so understood by you; but it is proper to guard against probable evil, where the liberties of mankind are concerned. We have seen, with sorrow of heart, the King of Great Britain inexorably determined upon the ruin of our liberties. We view the Parliament as lost to all sense of justice and humanity, attached to, and governed by, a corrupt and wicked Ministry, who are intending the ruin of their infatuated master, or determined to make his Government absolute, and erect a tyranny over his dominions, of which they expect to have the direction. We have seen all the petitions of the Congress treated with contempt; an act of Parliament declaring our resistance against actual violence to be rebellion, excluding us from the protection of the Crown, and compelling such of the Colonists as shall be taken prisoners to fight against their country; the treaties of the King of Great Britain with European Princes, for engaging foreign mercenaries to aid the forces of that Kingdom in their attempts to subdue the Americans, or cut their throats; and by his answer to the Address of the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council of the City of London, he manifests such a determined resolution to effect the destruction of American freedom, that we cannot entertain the most distant expectation of a reconciliation on reasonable terms. This being the case, we look on all lukewarm backwardness in the Convention of this Province, in the common cause of America, and every opposition to the resolves of Congress calculated for our safety and general security, (as we are convinced that of the 15th of May, above-mentioned, was,) to be of the most dangerous tendency, and that it will naturally induce the Ministry to look on this Province as friendly to their measures, and, in all probability, bring their forces among us, by which we shall have our country made the seat of war, and experience all its horrors. Possessed with these sentiments, we, in the most earnest terms, request your attention to the following Instructions, viz:

First. That you use your utmost influence that the Instructions given by Convention to our Delegates in Congress, before-mentioned, be rescinded, and that they may be instructed by the present Convention to concur and co-operate with the Delegates of the other United Colonies, in forming such further compacts between the said Colonies, concluding such treaties with foreign kingdoms, and in adopting such other measures as shall be judged necessary for promoting the liberty, safety, and interest of America, and defeating the schemes and machinations of our enemies, the King and Parliament and Ministry of Great Britain.

Second. That you use the same influence to induce the Convention to comply with the resolves of Congress of the 15th of May last, in exerting all the powers of Government under the authority of the people of this Province, by forming a Constitution adequate to that purpose; and in case the present Convention shall decline that task, that you promote and procure a resolve to determine their power at the end of the present session, and order an election for members to compose a new Convention for the purpose of forming such Constitution.

Third. That you use your endeavours to procure a different mode of voting in Convention; that the method may be by the members each voting separately, as was formerly practised in Assembly; that in all questions of importance, when the House divides, the yeas and nays be constantly taken, and published with the proceedings, for the information of the publick respecting the behaviour of their Representatives.

Fourth. That you use your utmost endeavours to put a stop to the executing the writs of election which we understand are already issued in the name of the Proprietary, or by the authority of the King of Great Britain, as no fair elections can be held, or the people legally represented, under the present circumstances of this Province, for reasons too obvious to require being mentioned.

Fifth. That you use your endeavours and influence to have the members of the Council of Safety appointed from among the Delegates in Convention only, they being persons duly elected by the people, who are the source of all power.

Sixth. That you endeavour to procure a resolve of Convention to prevent any undue influence being used at elections by military officers over the men they command, a danger which may possibly arise from the attachment natural enough in the soldier to his commander.

Seventh. That you move for and promote a reasonable regulation to enable debtors to pay off their creditors in country produce, especially in the case of rents and interest due on obligations or otherwise, and also the publick levies now due.

Eighth. That you endeavour to procure a resolve of Convention to exclude all officers, civil or military, from holding seats in Convention or Congress, after appointment to each office, until rechosen; and to exclude all members of Congress from a seat in the Convention.

Ninth. That you endeavour to reduce the enormous allowance of fifteen pounds per week given to each of our Delegates in Congress, this being a time when strict economy is necessary; and also reduce the allowance of members in Convention to a sum adequate to their necessary expense, as we are persuaded you will agree with us in opinion that the present state of this Province will by no means admit of profusion.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO JOSEPH TRUMBULL.

Philadelphia, June 22, 1776.

SIR: I am so extremely hurried at present that I have only time enough to send the enclosed resolves.

By the next post I purpose doing myself the pleasure of writing you fully.

In the mean time I am, sir, your most humble servant,
JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Joseph Trumbull, Esq., Commissary-General, Canada.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO EBENEZER HANCOCK.

Philadelphia, June 22, 1776.

DEAR BROTHER: I do myself the pleasure to enclose you the pay-roll of the Continental Army, it being necessary for you in your new Department.

I have just received a letter from General Washington, in which he very obligingly says he will give you such further directions as you may stand in need of. I have only time to add that I hope to write you fully by the next post.

I am your humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Ebenezer Hancock, Esq., Deputy Paymaster-General, at Boston.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, May 18, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: This only serves to tell you Colonel Bartlett arrived yesterday, and to enclose a resolution of Congress, which I know will not displease you. You see how we come on. A Confederation, permanent and lasting, ought, in my opinion, to be the next thing, and I hope is not far off; if so, then the establishment of foreign agencies, I hope, will fill our ports with ships from all parts of the world. By the enclosed Evening Post you will see the effects of their resolution. May it operate in the same manner through America.

Your sincere friend,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, May 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Last Friday afternoon I arrived here, all well, and on Saturday we received a sad but very imperfect account of affairs at Quebec. According to the account received it seems there was a most shocking and unaccountable misconduct in the whole affair; however, cannot help hoping that affairs are not so bad as has been reported; and if they are, that the Generals and soldiers who had not joined the Army will, in a great measure, retrieve matters, and that things there will soon be in a better situation.

Hard money is very much wanted in Canada; and unless considerable sums are forthwith sent there, our affairs will suffer very much on that account. You will receive directions from the Chairman of the Secret Committee relative to what you have in your hands.

The order of Congress concerning taking up Government under the people, which Colonel Whipple sent forward, has made a great noise in this Province. Enclosed I send you an address to the people of Pennsylvania, and an order for the meeting of the City and Liberties to-morrow: what will be the consequence I know not, but think the Assembly will be dissolved and a Convention called. As to other affairs, I have had no time to be informed myself; and Colonel Whipple tells me he has written you from time to time fully. As to the agency affair, I shall make one more trial when that matter comes on. The order of Congress for raising a regiment for the defence of our Colony, you will receive before this comes to hand. I hope good officers will be recommended, and everything put in the best posture of defence, and the courage and resolution of the people kept up, as I have great reason to think we shall have a severe trial this summer with Britons, Hessians, Hanoverians, Indians, Negroes, and every other butcher the gracious King of Britain can hire against us. If we can stand it out this year, and I have no doubt we can, by Divine assistance, I think there will be a final end of British tyranny, and this country soon enjoy peace, liberty, and safety. Use your best endeavours to keep up the spirit of the people, for our all is at stake—life, liberty, and fortune. We have nothing to hope for, if conquered; and our misfortunes in the war ought to animate us the more to diligence, firmness, and resolution. To conquer is better than life; to be subdued, infinitely worse than death.

I have resolved punctually to answer all letters written to me from any persons in our Colony, but never to write a second to any person who does not answer mine, except what I am obliged to write officially to the Colony or Committee of Safety.

By an express received from General Lee, we are informed a number of transports had arrived at Cape Fear with troops from England, but had not landed when the express came away.

May 21st.—Yesterday the city met, agreeable to notification, in the field before the State-House, a stage being erected for the Moderator, (Colonel Roberdeau,) and the chief speakers Mr. McKean, &c. I am told they unanimously voted that the present House of Assembly are not competent to changing the form of Government, and have given orders for calling a Convention. The Pennsylvania Assembly was to meet yesterday. I fear some convulsions in the Colony. The infamous instructions given by the Assembly to their Delegates, which they at their last meeting refused to alter, is the cause of their losing the confidence of the people.

One of the riflemen taken at Quebec last fall arrived in this city last evening. I am told he has brought letters, sewed up in his clothes, for the Congress; and that he left England the 24th of March last. I saw him last evening, when he first came in the coffee-house. I expect to know more at Congress, as the letters are sent to the President; but the post is now setting off, so must conclude, by assuring you I am your steady and sincere friend,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

P. S. Colonel Whipple has enclosed one of the addresses.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, May 20, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 6th instant is now before me. I am glad the money has got safe to hand. The list of officers you mention, I suppose has reached you before now. I enclosed one some time ago. I also gave you my reasons for disapproving the person you mentioned for First Lieutenant. I have no objection to the Mr. Roche you mention; but am apprehensive his being appointed will make some uneasiness, as there are many masters of vessels, of good character, out of employ, who perhaps will think themselves neglected. I shall nominate Captain Thompson the first opportunity; and think it won't be amiss to appoint such of the warrant or petty officers as you think necessary; as to the other officers, I think you may sound such persons as you may think proper, and know what places they will accept, without engaging them absolutely.

The canvass, I hope, will be soon with you; but I fear it will be some time before you will get the guns; if they are to go from hence, I see no prospect of your having them till July. The furnaces are at work at Providence, and, by what I can learn, have made a considerable number. I think it would be well for you to take a ride there; you will then be able to judge of the probability of getting them from thence; and on the earliest notice from you, I will get an order for the first guns that are made, after the ships that are building there are supplied. I shall lay your proposals for purchasing the powder before the Committee this evening; shall also apply for cash: you don't mention the sum you shall want, but my application shall be for the round sum of ten thousand; if that should not be sufficient, let me know seasonably, and I will endeavour that you shall be supplied.

May 21.—The foregoing was written last evening to save time. I have got an order for the sum above-mentioned, and shall send it forward in a few days. Mr. Morris, Chairman of the Secret Committee, desires you will buy the powder, and your draft shall be duly paid, or the money sent you on the earliest notice. No doubt you will buy it as cheap as you can; the highest price that has been given here is five shillings, this currency. I imagine provisions will be ordered from Cambridge, where a large quantity was left by the Army. I shall let you know more of that shortly. Colonel Barlett arrived the 17th, afternoon; he writes to you this post. By the enclosed alarm you will see the effect the late resolve of Congress has had in this city; no doubt it will have the same in some other places. By next post will endeavour to send you the forms you mention; at present can only send you one.

Yours, sincerely,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, May 28, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Your two favours, of 11th and 12th current, came duly to hand. I rejoice to find your ship the most forward of any except those at Providence; but I very much fear you will still wait for guns if they are not to be had at Providence, as I mentioned in my last. I have still kept off the appointment of an agent, in hopes of fixing the appointment to your mind. I have nominated the Captain, who is unanimously accepted by the Committee, but the sanction of Congress is still wanting, which I think there is no doubt of. The attention of Congress has been taken up for some days in conference with General Washington, as to the plan of operations for this campaign; so soon as that is finished, and the conference with the chiefs of the Six Nations, who are now here, naval matters will be attended to; but I shall be glad of an answer to one of my letters wherein I wrote freely of those you proposed for officers, before I nominate them.

You are much mistaken if you supposed I meant to call in question your patriotism. My only design was to point out to you what might be the opinion of envy. I wrote from the sincerity of my heart, with the freedom of friendship; relying on your confidence and candor, shall say no more on the subject.

I observe there is a number of sand bags on board the prize carried into Boston. Will they not make hammocks? Bread and salt provisions will be furnished from Boston. I intended to have written several letters to my friends, but, as the post goes out earlier than usual this morning, have not time, and am obliged to conclude this in a hurry.

Yours, &c.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO MESHECH WEARE.

Philadelphia, May 28, 1776.

SIR: We have obtained an order for ten thousand five hundred dollars, for defraying the expenses of raising and advancing a month's pay to the regiment to be stationed at Portsmouth, which we are only waiting for an opportunity to send forward. Salt provisions and flour may be supplied from Boston, where a much larger quantity was left by the Commissary-General than will be wanted by the troops stationed there.

We are extremely sorry that the Colony we have the honour to represent, which has had so high a place in the esteem of the whole continent for their forwardness and great exertions in the glorious contest in which we are now engaged, should be lessened by the delays of the regiment ordered last winter into Canada. Our misfortunes in that country are owing to the tardiness of that and two other New-England regiments. If that regiment had marched at the time we expected, and frequently asserted, the evil might have been averted. We hope, for the honour of the Colony, there will be a strict inquiry made, and the causes of the delay fully investigated, that the officers, if they are faulty, may be brought to justice.

The Convention of Virginia have instructed their Delegates to use their endeavours that Congress should declare the Colonies a free and independent state; North-Carolina has signified the same desire; South-Carolina and Georgia will readily accede; and we shall be glad to know the opinion of our Colony on this subject. It is probable the Proprietary Governments will be the last to agree to this necessary step. The disaffected in them are now exerting themselves, but their exertions are no more than the last struggles of expiring faction. We hope in a few months civil Governments will be established in all the United Colonies on a firm and permanent basis.

I am, &c.,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 2, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 20th ultimo came to hand yesterday. I think I mentioned to you in a former letter that I supposed there would be a considerable alteration in the wages of the officers in the naval service: the principal officers higher, and the warrant and petty officers considerably lower. As there is the greatest probability that these alterations will take place, you no doubt will be careful of the encouragement you give those you engage. I told you in my last that Congress was engaged in a conference with the General on the necessary operations for the present campaign. This business is not yet finished, nor do I think will be this week, and Congress have determined to do no other business till that is completed. So soon as that is done naval matters will be attended to. I wish you had talked with some of those gentlemen you proposed for officers. My objection still remains to him you mentioned for First Lieutenant. It is merely on account of his unsteadiness that I object to him, and that must remain until his nature is changed; however, if you are fond of having him appointed, I will give up my opinion. R. Parker I have a very good opinion of, and should be very fond of serving him, but am something doubtful whether he would make a good subordinate officer, even if he would accept. I have a high opinion of Shores, Wheelwright, and Follet, as resolute and enterprising men. I shall be glad if you will talk with them, or such as you think will best answer the purpose. There will be time enough for you to answer this before it will be necessary to fill up the commissions, as there are no guns yet, and I fear they are still to be made. For my part, I have no views whatever in these appointments but the publick good. If there should be any worthy men who would be willing to enter into the service that cannot be provided for in this ship, I will do my endeavour to get such places for them as will be most agreeable in some other, and no doubt some may be provided for in this way. Have not yet had an opportunity to send the money, but have a prospect of one in a few days.

Here is a report that Colonel Bedel, who was posted at a place called the Cedars, some distance above Montreal, is cut off by a party of the Eighth Regiment and Indians that came down the St. Lawrence, also Major Sherburne, who endeavoured to support him. This story comes in so loose a way, and at the same time so different from the accounts we have just before received from Canada, that I do not credit it; however, it may be true. We must expect to meet with some hard rubs.

A brig in the service of the continent arrived a few days since with some powder and arms. Several French vessels have also arrived here lately, with sugar, molasses, coffee, &c. The agent is not yet appointed. I still intend to insist on my first proposal. My regards to your friends, and accept the best wishes of your assured friend,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 3, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Yours of the 21st ultimo is come to hand. I hope you have had good luck in launching the ship.

The circumstances of affairs in Canada, and the certainty of a large body of Hessians, &c., being hired and designed soon to attack the United Colonies, have so engrossed the attention of Congress to be prepared for them, that it is not possible to get them to attend to smaller matters. The affair of the agency lies dormant. Captain Thompson is nominated by the Marine Committee for the command of your ship, but not yet confirmed by Congress. The Generals Washington, Gates, and Mifflin, are here, to consult on the operations of the war for this year. Congress have resolved that eight regiments of Militia, to consist of seven hundred and fifty men each, be forthwith raised and sent into Canada, till the 1st of December, one to be raised in the western part of New-Hampshire, four in Massachusetts, two in Connecticut, and one in New-York. I expect twenty-five thousand men more will be ordered to be raised for the same time for the defence of the sea-coasts from New-Hampshire to Maryland, inclusive. In short, sir, this will be the trying year, and, if possible, they must be hindered from getting any foothold this season. If that can be done, I think the day will be our own, and we be forever delivered from British tyranny.

Yesterday one of the Continental vessels that were sent out for necessaries arrived here. She brought seventy-four hundred pounds of powder, and one hundred and forty-nine arms, being all she could procure; the rest of her cargo, canvass, &c., &c. She had like to have been taken by the Liverpool in this bay; but two of the small Continental vessels took her and a French schooner under their protection, and the Liverpool did not think proper to engage them. Several French vessels from the West-Indies have arrived here with molasses, coffee, linen, &c. One of them was taken by a man-of-war, who examined all the cargo, and, finding no arms or military stores, and not being willing to affront the French, ordered her forthwith to proceed for France, (where she pretended to be bound,) having previously taken out the American master and put him on board the man-of-war. At night she shifted her course, and came in here.

I shall enclose a paper containing the Virginia and North-Carolina resolves concerning independence. This Province, New-Jersey, and the Delaware Counties, will soon take up Government entirely under the people. New-York and Maryland, it is thought, will soon follow. The constitution of Government that South-Carolina has formed for themselves you have no doubt seen. Virginia, North-Carolina, and Georgia were forming theirs when the last accounts left them.

By a St. Kitts newspaper, this moment received, there is the Address of the City of London to the King on American affairs, presented to him the 22d of March; and by his answer we see he will have absolute submission or nothing. You will soon see it in the publick prints.

I am, sir, your friend and servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This goes by express early to-morrow morning. It is determined in Committee this evening to urge the appointment of the Captain for your ship to-morrow; there is no doubt but what Thompson will be the man; if you and he will talk with such persons as you think proper for Lieutenant and Marine officers, and let me know who will accept, I will have them commissioned. It is idle to have the commissions filled up before we know whether they will be accepted or not. You may engage the master and all warrant and petty officers that you think necessary as soon as you please. I know of no objection to the men being shipped, only the uncertainty when the guns will be ready. Just received advice that two small privateers belonging to this place have taken three Jamaicamen with very valuable cargoes—twenty-four thousand dollars in specie; the money has arrived at Egg-Harbour, but the ships are sent to the eastward. I fear they will fall into the hands of the enemy. Now is the time to pick up homeward-bound West-Indiamen. It is now twelve o'clock—high bed time. Good night. I am, &c.,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 10, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 27th May came duly to hand. I heartily condole with you the loss of the brave Mugford; however, we must submit to the Divine will, and rest assured that whatever is ordered by Providence is right.

I have the pleasure to tell you that Captain Thompson's appointment is confirmed by Congress; his commission will be sent him very soon. As he is appointed, he may, with propriety, join with you in conferring with proper persons for Lieutenants and Marine officers, which I hope you will do, and let me know who will accept those commissions. I have some time ago given you my opinion of those you have mentioned. You may engage the master and other officers whenever you think it necessary. As I have before told you, it is very uncertain when you will have the guns, unless you can get them at Providence. I shall send you the blank warrants so soon as I can get them, but I imagine the old forms will undergo a revisal. Congress never were so much engaged as at this time; business presses on them exceedingly. We do not rise sometimes till six or seven o'clock. There are so many irons in the fire, I fear some of them will burn.

I congratulate you on the success you have had in building and launching the Raleigh. I proposed her being called the New-Hampshire, but could not obtain my wish; however, I think this name will do very well—the name of every martyr to liberty ought to be perpetuated; and then this name is in some measure a compliment to Virginia, who, you know, is entitled to compliments from New-England. I have done everything in my power to forward the business of this ship, but I need not tell you how heavily business goes on here.

The matter of agency I have not had an opportunity to urge with a prospect of success; it therefore remains as it did, but hope it will not be long before there will be a fair opportunity; I shall still persist in my first proposal. The uncertainty of guns is the only reason you have not orders to ship men; but as the Committee meet this evening, I will endeavour once more to know their minds on this subject.

We have dismal accounts from Canada—five hundred men taken by the enemy, who consisted of about forty regulars, two hundred and fifty Canadians, and four hundred Indians. How so large a number as five hundred could be taken by about seven hundred is very unaccountable; but so it is, though we have no particular accounts how it happened. When the last express came off General Arnold was near the enemy, with about one thousand men. Some messages had passed between him and a Captain Forster, who commanded the party. Arnold was threatened if he attacked them they would murder all the prisoners. I am fearful his humanity got the better of his judgment. I hope I shall be able to give you a more particular account of this affair before I close this.

One of the Jamaica ships taken by the privateers from this place has arrived here; the other two have not yet been heard of. The money (viz: twenty thousand dollars) is also in this city. Congress did not rise till seven o'clock, which prevented the Committee from meeting last evening. No accounts from Canada since the above. You say you want to be here for a short time. I hope you will let me know about two or three weeks before you set out, that I may meet you half way. I hope my next will give some accounts more pleasing than is in my power at this time.

I am, respectfully, yours,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

I write to Colonel Weare by this post. I shall be much obliged if you will press an immediate answer. Colonel Bartlett sends you newspapers. I have had your carriage cleaned; it was in a dirty pickle; when I can spare time shall exercise it a little. Hope I shall have it in my power to give you some agreeable tidings in two or three weeks.

W. W.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 27th ultimo has come to hand, and am glad to hear you have had so good luck in building and launching the ship; I hope she will prove as good a ship as any of her bigness in the British Navy. Captain Thompson is appointed to the command of her; the other officers are not yet appointed. I hope the Captain will set about raising the men, and that she will be fitted for sea as soon as possible.

I think with you, that the brave Captain Mugford and the men on board the privateers at Boston fought gallantly, and did honour to the country; but what shall we think of five hundred of our men in Canada surrendering themselves prisoners to about the same number of the enemy? The accounts are very vague; but thus much I believe is certain, that almost the whole of Colonel Bedel's Regiment, and one hundred men with Major Sherburne, of Rhode-Island, are prisoners to the enemy; and, what at present appears surprising, surrendered without much resistance, when so large an army of our men were so near to assist them.

It seems as if our men in Canada were struck with a panick. What else could be the reason of their running away from Quebeck, and leaving their cannon and sick and every thing behind, without firing one musket? In short, I could never have believed that our men would be guilty of such conduct; however, I hope and believe that when our Army comes to get settled, and the officers and men reflect on what has passed, they will act with more spirit, and retrieve their credit. The small-pox among them is very frequent and very discouraging, for which we must make proper allowance; but the conduct of the hardy sons of New-Hampshire is truly mysterious.

You have, no doubt, heard of the two privateers from this place taking three large Jamaica ships very richly loaded. One of them is arrived here; the other two are said to be gone for New-England. The cash (amounting to twenty-two thousand four hundred dollars) and the plate (weighing one hundred and eighty pounds, as near as I remember) were taken on board the privateers, and are safe arrived here. The Liverpool man-of-war lies at the Capes of Delaware, and has taken two or three vessels lately—one with dry-goods. I want much to have our ships fitted, to drive her off or take her.

I shall enclose you a paper containing the Bill of Rights drawn up by Virginia. You have seen the Virginia resolves concerning Independence; I wish our Colony would give us instructions on that head, for, whatever may be our private opinions, instructions from the Colony, either requiring, or only authorizing us to vote in favour of it, if we should think it for the best, would carry great weight with it. The Congress has been so taken up with very important business, that the affair of agency has not been mentioned since my arrival. When it does, shall not be wanting in seconding Colonel Whipple.

By one of the enclosed papers, you will see that the Assembly of this Province have given new instructions to their Delegates.

11th.—By a letter just received from Canada, it appears that our men had neither provisions nor ammunition, and that was the cause of their surrendering.

I am, sir, your most humble servant, and, what is more, your sincere friend,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 17, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: The money mentioned in a former letter is gone forward to Boston. Mr. Hancock has desired Mr. Cushing to send it to New-Hampshire; it is in a box directed to Colonel Weare. I am glad you intend for Providence, and heartily wish you may succeed in getting the guns there; if not, I do not know when you will have them, but fear it will be a long time; for though two furnaces in this Province are employed making guns for the ships, there are no more than two twelve-pounders yet brought to town, and but very few of the other sizes; and if they were here, I think there will be great difficulty in getting them to you.

I some time ago mentioned to the Chairman of the Secret Committee what you propose respecting powder, and am in no doubt but you will be supplied in season with that article; in short, I am not concerned about anything but guns and men. The Committee decline giving orders for shipping men, while the prospect of getting guns is at such a distance.

I find there is no possibility of getting you appointed agent while you have a seat in Congress; and if you are not appointed, I am apprehensive the present acting agent will be confirmed. I have already told many of the members that you intended to resign your seat here. It is Colonel Bartlett's opinion that you should come here; I do not know but it would be right for you to come. I should be exceeding glad to be at home for a few months. If this plan is agreeable to you, I shall like to set out about the middle of July; but as there will be time enough for you to answer this before I shall set out, shall let it rest entirely on your determination. If you determine to resign, shall have you appointed as soon as I know of your resignation. I must confess I am loath you should give up your seat; but if it is your choice I hope you will see that a proper person is appointed to supply your place. At all events it is probable I shall set out some time in July, and if I can get a companion shall take your carriage. In that case, should be glad to know if you will have your trunk brought home. I mean to take your carriage unless you direct otherwise. You mention in some of your letters the appointment of two agents; that I think would be unnecessary and improper, as one man could certainly do all the business. I hope your answer will be very explicit about your coming or resigning.

This day fortnight I expect the grand question will be determined in Congress, that being the day assigned to receive the report of a Committee who are preparing the Declaration. There is as great a change here since my arrival, as there was in New-Hampshire between the time that the powder was taken from the fort and the battle of Bunker-Hill.

New-Jersey has called a new Convention, who are now sitting. They have forbidden the meeting of the Assembly who were called by the Governour's proclamation, and I hope my next will advise you of that Governour's being seized, which I think ought to have been done many months ago. Affairs go on here bravely, as you will see by the papers.

I wrote some time ago that blank warrants would be sent to you; but it seems the Committee have changed their minds, and now say the names must be sent here.

I am, &c.,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This accompanies the ten thousand dollars for the Naval service, mentioned in a former letter. I have put it in a box with some other money directed to Colonel Weare, and wish it safe to hand. Am sorry it was not in my power to send it sooner, but hope the service will not suffer.

We have no news here except from Canada, which I suppose has reached you ere now. The Commissioners are returned from that country. It is expected that General Thomas is dead ere this; if so, the command devolves on Sullivan; but there will be another General Officer sent there; believe Gates will be the man.

In haste, yours,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the . . . instant is come to hand, and am sorry the news you mention from Quebeck is not true. Things have taken an extraordinary turn in that country. The behaviour of Colonel Bedel and Major Butterfield is very extraordinary. No doubt you will hear the particulars before this reaches you. Dr. Franklin, Mr. Chase, and Mr. Carroll, are returned from Canada. Their account of the behaviour of our New-England officers and soldiers touches me to the quick. By their account, never men behaved so badly; some regiments not having more than one hundred men, when it was expected there were six times that number; stealing and plundering arms, ammunition, military stores, &c., and taking the batteaus and running off. One man, it is said, stole six guns, and, to conceal them, broke the stocks to pieces, cut up a tent to make a knapsack to carry off the barrels, locks, &c.; and all is said to be owing to the officers. Unless our men behave better, we shall lose all our former credit, and be despised by the whole continent. This is the account here. I pray God it may not be so bad as is represented.

The greatest care must be taken to have good officers. The fate of America depends on it. However, I make no doubt, as soon as the present commanders have time, they will get things in a better regulation, and that some examples will be made to deter others from such conduct. Poor General Thomas is dead, and General Sullivan now commands in Canada. I expect soon General Gates will be ordered there.

As to Marine affairs, brother Whipple will write you. A Board of War is now appointed, consisting of Mr. J. Adams, Mr. Sherman, Colonel Harrison, Mr. Wilson, and E. Rutledge. I have taken every opportunity to mention to the members the affair of the agency, and am surprised to find all of them agreeing that no member of Congress ought to be appointed to any post of profit under the Congress; so that as you are a member, I am sure it will not go down, and I am by no means willing you should resign your seat here. As the affair of the ship will soon be finished, and Colonel Whipple will be for returning to his family, my opinion is that it will be best for you to come here as soon as you and Colonel Whipple can agree on it; and that the affair of the agency be, in the mean time, left open. When you are here, you will be better able to determine on several affairs.

The affair of a Confederation of the Colonies is now unanimously agreed on by all the members of all the Colonies. A Committee of one from each Colony are to draw up the Articles of Confederation, or a Continental Constitution, which, when agreed on by the Congress, will be sent to be confirmed by the Legislatures of the several Colonies. As it is a very important business, and some difficulties have arisen, I fear it will take some time before it will be finally settled.

The affair of voting, whether by Colonies as at present, or otherwise, is not decided, and causes some warm disputes. The appointments of the officers of Militia to be sent to Canada is with our Legislature, and also the nomination of the Field Officers for the regiment stationed in our Colony, so that, unless any objection is made, their nomination will be confirmed. I hope the greatest care will be taken in the appointment to get bold, resolute, intrepid, and experienced persons.

The affair of taking the sugar ships has so animated the people here that they are now fitting out five or six privateers more here.

I should take great pleasure in recommending some active berth for you; but while you continue a member of Congress it will not take effect. If you are absolutely determined to resign, and should do it, I make no doubt some place agreeable to you might be found; and in that case you must see that another is appointed in your stead, to come here in about a month, to supply Colonel Whipple's place, who is determined then to return. But it is my opinion you had better come here yourself, at least once more. It is necessary, however, we should know your absolute determination as soon as possible. I am, sir, your real friend,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

MESHECH WEARE TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

Exeter, June 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed is a copy of a resolve of our General Assembly, showing their sentiments relative to a declaration of the Colonies for throwing off their dependance on Great Britain—a measure the British Administration have long and very unjustly charged the Americans with having in view, but now we conceive are driven thereto by them, as the last probable resource to get rid of their unparalleled tyranny and oppression.

Resolves for raising a Continental battalion, (intended, as we suppose, to be stationed here,) and for sending seven hundred and fifty of our Militia into Canada, to reinforce the Army there, have been received, and are now under consideration of the General Assembly, who are taking such spirited measures thereon as the necessity of the case requires, especially those for Canada.

The business of the season, and great numbers already in the service, will make it difficult to raise the men; but every stimulus to encourage inlisting that can be thought of will be used.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly, I am, with true regard, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
MESHECH WEARE, President.

To Josiah Bartlett and William Whipple, Esqs.

The Committee of both Houses, appointed to prepare a draft declaring the sentiments and opinion of the Council and Assembly of this Colony relative to the United Colonies setting up an independent State, beg leave to report the following:

Whereas it now appears an undoubted fact that, notwithstanding all the dutiful petitions and decent remonstrances from the American Colonies, and the utmost exertions of their best friends in England on their behalf, the British Ministry, arbitrary and vindictive, are yet determined to reduce by fire and sword our bleeding country to their absolute obedience; and, for this purpose, in addition to their own forces, have engaged great numbers of foreign mercenaries, who may now be on their passage here, accompanied by a formidable fleet, to ravage and plunder the sea-coast; from all which we may expect the most dismal scenes of distress the ensuing year, unless we exert ourselves by every means and precaution possible: And whereas we of this Colony of New-Hampshire have the example of several of the most respectable of our sister Colonies before us for entering upon that most important step, of a disunion from Great Britain, and declaring ourselves free and independent of the Crown thereof, being impelled thereto by the most violent and injurious treatment; and it appearing absolutely necessary in this most critical juncture of our publick affairs that the honourable the Continental Congress, who have this important object under their immediate consideration, should be also informed of our resolutions thereon without loss of time:

We do hereby declare, that it is the opinion of this Assembly our Delegates at the Continental Congress should be instructed, and they are hereby instructed, to join with the other Colonies in declaring the thirteen United Colonies a free and independent State, solemnly pledging our faith and honour that we will, on our parts, support the measure with our lives and fortunes; and that, in consequence thereof, they, the Continental Congress, on whose wisdom, fidelity, and integrity, we firmly rely, may enter into and form such alliances with foreign States for aid and assistance as they may judge most conducive to the present safety and future advantage of these American Colonies: Provided the regulation of our internal police be under the direction of our own Assembly.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 15, 1776.—The foregoing Report of the Committee of both Houses, being read and considered, Unanimously Voted, That the same be received and accepted, and that the draft by them brought in be sent to our Delegates at the Continental Congress forthwith, as the sense of this House.

Sent up for concurrence: P. WHITE, Speaker.

IN COUNCIL, eodem die.—Read, and concurred unanimously. E. THOMPSON, Secretary.

A copy, examined by E. THOMPSON, Secretary.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Agreeable to your desire in your favour of the 1st instant, I have applied to the Chairman of the Secret Committee to know if you should pay for the brig that was taken; in answer to which he says the charter party, accounts, &c., must be laid before the Committee ere they can order the payment.

By continual applications and importunities, I have at last prevailed on the Marine Committee to consent to your shipping men: you accordingly have authority from them to enter seamen on board the Raleigh, and get her manned as soon as you can. I shall send you next post a copy of the order from their Minutes; also an order for the provisions. I expected to have sent you blank warrants for the officers; but the Committee have changed their minds about that matter, alleging it will be necessary to have the names entered in the office; therefore the sooner you engage them and send their names here, the sooner the warrants will be filled up and sent you. I am endeavouring to persuade the Committee to order the guns at Providence for your ship, as she is much more forward than any, but am not certain of success. If I do not succeed in this plan, shall endeavour to get the first that are made here; but how to get them from this place to you is a difficulty that I do not know at present how to surmount; however, shall continue to do everything in my power that you may be furnished with guns, the want of which I am fully sensible will be the sole cause of the detention of the ship.

You say you find the Committee at Providence have liberty to appoint Lieutenants, &c. I do not know from whence they got their liberty,—I am sure it was not from the Marine Committee, nor from anybody deriving authority from Congress. I can further say, and with the utmost certainty, that there is not one officer appointed for either of those ships, except the Captains.

The Government of Philadelphia are all afloat, but they are in a fair way to get things all right. The post is just going off, so cannot add, save that I am, with respect, yours,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

QUEEN'S COUNTY COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

In Committee, Flushing, Queen's County, }
June 22, 1776. }

SIR: The under-mentioned is a true copy from the Minutes taken on the 20th of May last:

At a meeting of the inhabitants of Flushing, held at the house of James Bowling, in Flushing, this 20th day of May, 1776, was unanimously chosen Nathaniel Tom, Captain, and Jeffery Hicks, Second Lieutenant, to serve as officers in the Militia of Flushing, under the inspection of Thomas Thorne and Edmund Pinfold, two of the members of this Committee.

A true copy from the Minutes.

By order of the Committee:

Attest: JOSEPH BOWNE, Clerk Com.

To Mr. Robert Benson, Secretary of the Provincial Convention.

EZEKIEL HAWLEY TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Salem, June 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As civil and religious privileges all lie at stake, we that are friends, then, desire to lend a lifting hand in trying to preserve them. The Tories grow more and more disaffected, and are daily going off to Long-Island—four men last week from my neighbourhood; several more from other parts; Captain Theal and his son John, soldier, and Stephen Delancey. Some of them laid under five hundred pounds bonds, and also under the solemnity of an oath; but they regard not anything the Committee does with them, so long as they have their liberty. It is supposed numbers are concealed on Long-Island. Please to take it into your wise consideration, whether or not it will not be best to send and purge Long-Island. And as I wrote to you a little back, by Mr. Chapman, one of the members of Salem Committee, to know what we should do with those that forfeit their bonds, and how we should get pay for the last, (as there are since many more,) we should be glad of an answer.

By order of the Committee:

EZEKIEL HAWLEY, Chairman.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of New-York.

COLONEL JAMES CLINTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Constitution, June 22, about six of the clock, } afternoon, 1776. }

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have just now received your letter by express with the warrant therein enclosed, which I will endeavour to execute with the greatest care, expedition, and exactness, that I possibly can. After it is done I will bring him and his papers to this fort, where I shall keep him prisoner till I receive your Excellency's further directions. I wrote to your Excellency yesterday by Colonel Livingston, who brought down the necessary returns from both forts; you may see by them what a situation my regiment is in for want of arms, and I do not know at present any way to supply them, unless we can be furnished from New-York. I will do my endeavour to get as many arms as I can. I was down at Fort Montgomery yesterday, where I think the work goes on as well as can be expected. I mentioned in the letter I wrote before, that I kept two of the Commissioners, one at each fort; and if we had an Engineer, I think, for several reasons, they would be useful.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
JAMES CLINTON, Colonel.

To His Excellency General Washington.

CORNWALL, ORANGE COUNTY, NEW-YORK, COMMITTEE.

In Committee for the Precinct of Cornwall, in Orange County, at Blooming Grove, June 22, 1776:

James Haff being brought before this Committee, by a warrant from the Chairman, on suspicion of his being combined in a plot against the liberties of America, upon examination, confessed, after some hesitation, that there was a plot on foot for a number of men to join the Ministerial Army as soon as they should arrive at New-York, and that he was sworn to secrecy in the matter by John Clark; and that Richard Collingwood, he supposed, was sworn likewise, and also Thomas Coyne and Hugh Murray; and that John Clark told him (the said James Haff) that every man that joined the Ministerial Army should immediately thereupon enter into full pay, and receive five guineas bounty, and be entitled to two hundred acres of land; and that those who were friends to the Ministerial Army and stayed at home, should, after they were sworn, be entitled to half-pay and save their estates. And further, that the guns at the fortifications in the Highlands would be spiked up by some of the troops stationed there as soon as they should be informed that the King's troops had arrived, and that it was expected a party of them would endeavour to push up the river and land at Verplanck's Point.

The form of the oath that said Haff was sworn to was as follows, viz: That he should keep his own secrets and the secrets of his fellows, and not take up arms against the King.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Hartford, June 22, 1776.

SIR: I have received your favour of the 20th instant. The resolve of Congress for augmenting the Army at New-York and Canada induced me forthwith to send warrants for convening the General Assembly. Yesterday the session was finished. The requisition for the quota of men to be furnished by this Colony is fully complied with. The men are raising, and to march soon. Have given my orders agreeable to your request.

I am, most respectfully, your Excellency's obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

MESHECH WEARE TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Exeter, June 22, 1776.

SIR: We presume you are not unacquainted with our designs of putting this Colony in the best posture of defence we are able; but before matters were grown so ripe to press the measure, we were unluckily deprived of the chief of our cannon by one of our enemy's ships, and, as we thought, were carried to Boston.

In consequence of a resolve of the honourable the Continental Congress for the restoration of them, if to be found there, we despatched our Quartermaster for that purpose, and to request General Ward for their delivery. But his journey was ineffectual, as, after viewing the cannon at or near Boston, none were to be found that we could claim; and being informed you have a large quantity at Boston, induces us to request, with all earnestness, of your General Assembly the loan of any number you can possibly spare, to put into our forts, which are now mostly completed, and but few cannon to mount therein. Your laying our request before your General Court, and transmitting their result thereon, will be esteemed a great favour.

By order of the Council and Assembly.

I am your most humble servant,

MESHECH WEARE, President.

STEPHEN SMITH TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Machias, June 22, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: When your Honours were pleased to appoint me Truckmaster for the Indians, I was not apprised of the task I had to perform, the numbers of them far exceeding my expectations; and the offers they have from the factors of Nova-Scotia causes them to be very troublesome.

The sum of four hundred pounds, lawful money, granted by your Honours to supply at least one thousand men, exclusive of their families, is but small. Your Honours cannot expect that I can satisfy them, and keep them friends, with that sum; and I was obliged to credit near two hundred pounds for their spring hunt, which they have not yet paid. The news of the defeat at Quebeck has reached them: that, with the advice of General Washington, obliges me to put up with many insults.

I have given the bearer, Major Francis Shaw, Jun., a power of attorney to receive any further sum your Honours may be pleased to grant, with directions to purchase such articles as are most wanted. As soon as they come in with their spring hunts, I shall send the fur up; in the mean time I am in much want of many articles for them.

With Major Shaw comes up ten chiefs of the different tribes. Knowing the trouble and expense they would be at, we endeavoured, with all our art, to detain them, without effect; as they had letters from your Honours and his Excellency General Washington, they were determined either to proceed or rely on the assistance of Nova-Scotia. Of the two evils I have endeavoured to choose the least, and have accordingly prevailed on Major Shaw to take the charge of them, which I hope will meet your Honours' approbation.

The Indians that were at Court last winter have received a supply; and one has since refused to pay, as he says his Excellency General Washington told them they should be paid for coming up, as well as for carrying letters to the Mickamack tribe.

I am likewise much troubled with the inhabitants supplying them with rum, &c., as it makes them very troublesome and quarrelsome. I should be glad your Honours should give some order they might not have liberty to sell or give, as they take their furs for much less than their value, and detain them longer than is needful. I have hitherto given eight shillings for beaver, to hinder their trading with Nova-Scotia, and shall do it until I hear from your Honours; this I do, as I am sensible, from the best accounts from Nova-Scotia, that they take every measure to defeat your Honours' plans, and to bring them against the new settlements in this country.

As Major Shaw has been here, and witness to their proceedings, I refer your Honours to him for any further intelligence; and remain, with much respect, your Honours' much obliged humble servant,

STEPHEN SMITH.

To the Honourable Council and House of Representatives for the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay.

DAVID REED TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Boothbay, June 22, 1776.

In obedience to the orders of Congress, the year last past I was appointed by the Committee of this town to go to Damariscotta Island, in my sloop, and bring from thence what cattle and sheep were on said island, which I performed, and delivered the said stock to the owners, who before had removed from said island; after a short space, the said owners, viz: Daniel Knight and John Wheeler, transported a number of sheep to said island, without taking advice of the Committee, where said sheep remained some days, till Captain Mowat, in one of George's ships, with some transports, anchored between Damariscotta and Boothbay, when Joseph Wheeler, son of the abovesaid John, whether by free will or constraint is not in my power to determine, went on board Mowat's ship, and went from thence ashore with the men belonging to the navy of Britain, on the said island, and carried the greater part of the sheep on board the man-of-war; for which sheep, it is reported, said Wheeler received two dollars per head; but of this no certain evidence as yet can be had. The house which was on said island was at the same time burnt. After getting a recruit of fresh provisions, the ship went to Falmouth, carrying with them the said Joseph, who was set at liberty, after the cabin was burnt, though it is no ways likely said Wheeler gave any assistance in the abominable act.

I am informed Daniel Knight is about to send a petition to your Honours for redress; I therefore think it my duty to acquaint you with the true state of the matter, as far as comes within the limits of my penetration.

I am your most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID REED.

To the Honourable the Great and General Court of the Massachusetts-Bay.

N. B. The house, as I suppose, might be worth about thirty pounds. Swine they also carried off, not worth more than five dollars each. It is possible there may be had evidence of the said Joseph Wheeler receiving the money for the said sheep, as information to that purpose is just come to hand.

I remain yours, &c.

WILLIAM LUX TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Snow-Hill, June 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: On my arrival here, I made inquiry after Mr. Brown, and found him an inhabitant of the town. He is a young man under thirty, but very hearty, and was brought up in the train; came to America in that service, with a certificate of his qualifications from General Conway, and was promised preferment, but another being put over his head, he resigned. He is by birth a Hibernian, and related to Captain Thomas Ewing. If, therefore, you could place him there, it would, I presume, be most agreeable; but as he must understand the profession superior to any of that corps, I should think him the fittest for Captain Fulford's First Lieutenant. The people here speak well of him, as a sober, modest man, and being on all occasions ready to give them information.

I am, with due deference, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM LUX.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

CAPTAIN MONTAGU TO GOVERNOUR EDEN.

Fowey, off Annapolis, Maryland, }
June 23, 1776. }

SIR: I have the happiness to acquaint you that last night I arrived here, with his Britannick Majesty's ship the Fowey under my command, agreeable to an order from Captain Hammond, of his Majesty's ship the Roebuck, and senior officer of his Majesty's ships at Virginia. And in consequence of your application to him, I have hoisted the flag of truce at my foretopgallantmast-head, to show that I have not come in a hostile manner, and of which I desire you will be pleased to acquaint the inhabitants, that they may not offer any insult to my officers and boats; and, on my part, I shall hold the truce most sacred.

I have the pleasure to acquaint you that every accommodation the Fowey can afford is at your and your friends' service, and that my boat shall at any time be ready to attend your coming off, and sent for your property.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

GEORGE MONTAGU.

To His Excellency Robert Eden, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JOSEPH MIDDLETON.

[No. 35.]

Annapolis, June 23, 1776.

SIR: You are desired to proceed up the bay, and give intelligence to any outward-bound vessels you may meet with that are coming down, that the man-of-war is at her station at the mouth of the river to receive the Governour, and that we think it prudent that they delay coming down till the man-of-war departs.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Joseph Middleton.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 25, 1776.]

New-York, June 23, 1776.

SIR: I herewith transmit you an extract of a letter from General Ward, which came to hand by last night's post, containing the agreeable intelligence of their having obliged the King's ships to leave Nantasket Road, and of two more transports being taken by our armed vessels, with two hundred and ten Highland troops on board. I sincerely wish the like success had attended our arms in another quarter, but it has not. In Canada the situation of our affairs is truly alarming.

The enclosed copies of Generals Schuyler, Sullivan, and Arnold's letters will inform you that General Thompson has met with a repulse at Three Rivers, and is now a prisoner in the hands of General Burgoyne, who, these accounts say, is arrived with a considerable army; nor do they seem to promise an end of our misfortunes here. It is greatly to be feared that the next advices from thence will be that our scattered, divided, and broken Army, as you will see by the return, have been obliged to abandon the country and retreat, to avoid a greater calamity than that of being cut off or becoming prisoners. I will be done upon the subject, and leave you to draw such conclusions as you conceive, from the state of facts, are most likely to result, only adding my apprehensions that one of the latter events—either that they are cut off or become prisoners—has already happened, if they did not retreat while they had an opportunity. General Schuyler and General Arnold seem to think it extremely probable; and if it has taken place, it will not be easy to describe all the fatal consequences that may flow from it; at least our utmost exertions will be necessary to prevent the advantages they have gained to be turned to our greater misfortunes. General Gates will certainly set out to-morrow, and would have been gone before now had he not expected to receive some particular instructions from Congress, and which Colonel Barton said he imagined would be given and transmitted here.

Enclosed is a copy of a letter from General Arnold respecting some of the Indian tribes to General Schuyler, and of a talk had at Albany with thirteen of the Oneidas. They seemed there to entertain a friendly disposition towards us, which I wish may not be changed by the misfortunes we have sustained in Canada.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the highest esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

[Extract.]

Boston, June 16, 1776.

SIR: The 13th instant, at evening, I ordered five hundred men, with proper officers, a detachment of the train, with a thirteen-inch mortar, two eighteen-pounders, and some small cannon, under the command of Colonel Whitcomb, to take post on Long-Island, to annoy the enemy's ships. The necessary works were thrown up in the night, and the next morning our cannon and mortar began to play upon the pirates, which soon drove them all out of the harbour. The fleet consisted of about thirteen in number—the Renown, of fifty guns, several smaller ships of war, and some transports with Highlanders on board. As near as we could judge, there were about eight hundred troops on board the transports. They blew up the Light-House as they went off, and then put to sea with their fleet. I think it probable they will leave some frigates to cruise in the bay.

A number of the Colony troops and Militia were to have thrown up some works the same night on Pettick's Island and Nantasket Head, but by some unfortunate obstructions, they did not get their cannon ready in time; however, they gave the enemy a number of shot as the ships passed through the channel. Our shot cut away some of their yards and rigging, and several went into the ships' sides, but the shells from the mortar terrified them most. They returned a few shot from the Commodore's ship without any effect, and got under sail with all expedition.

P. S. June 17th.—I have just received information that the Continental privateers have taken and brought into Nantasket, in this harbour, a ship and a brig from Glasgow, with two hundred and ten Highlanders on board, with their baggage. The ship mounted six carriage-guns, and fought the privateers some time before she struck. We had four men wounded; the enemy had three privates killed, and a Major and eight or ten men wounded. The prisoners are coming up to town, among whom is a Colonel. Any further particulars that may be of importance I shall forward as soon as I can learn them.

Sorel, June 8, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: At three quarters after eleven o'clock this forenoon, I received a letter from General Thompson, of which the enclosed is a copy. I find that he has proceeded in the manner proposed, and made his attack on the troops at Three Rivers at daylight; for at that time a very heavy cannonading began, which lasted, with some intervals, to twelve o'clock. It is now near one, P. M., the firing has ceased, except some irregular firing with cannon, at a considerable distance of time one from the other. At eight o'clock, a very heavy firing of small-arms was heard even here, at the distance of forty-five miles; the distance might have rendered it doubtful, had not the boats down the bay, which have since arrived, confirmed it, and declared that they distinctly heard the small-arms for a long time. I am almost certain that victory has declared in our favour, as the irregular firing of the cannon for such a length of time after the small-arms ceased, shows that our men are in possession of the ground. I should immediately set off to join General Thompson, with Colonel De Haas's detachment; but by some strange kind of conduct in General Arnold, directly contrary to repeated orders, he has kept that detachment dancing between this and Montreal ever since my arrival. Some of the officers this moment arrived inform me that he let them come within eighteen miles of this place, and ordered them back again. He has now permitted them to pass to Chambly, and I expect them here this evening, when I shall immediately set off with them to join General Thompson. I am now informed by Mr. McCarty that General Arnold has abandoned Montreal, and gone to Chambly with all the troops. I hope this report is not just, as the step must in every light be imprudent and injudicious; it leaves that quarter entirely without a check, and gives our enemies liberty to assemble and form any mischievous designs they please, without interruption. I hear that the report at Montreal yesterday was, that the enemy had passed us at Sorel, and were passing up the river. This gave them the alarm, and caused them to abandon the city. I wish it may not prove true; but as it is so much of a piece with former conduct, I cannot help giving some degree of credit. Notwithstanding the weakness of this post, occasioned by the strange delay of Colonel De Haas, I have sent Colonel Winds with his regiment to reinforce General Thompson. This I did this morning at eight o'clock. They have joined him before now, I trust. I hope soon to follow, with more force, to maintain the ground which, I dare say, our troops have won. We hear no firing now, except a few cannon at a great distance of time between, sometimes half an hour's space at least. This, with many other circumstances, induces me to believe our troops are victorious. I am anxious to know the event, which God grant may be fortunate. However, if our party have been, or should be defeated, I am determined not to leave Canada, but to make vigilance and industry supply the want of numbers. I am determined to fortify and secure the most important posts, and hold them as long as one stone is left upon another.

It is a serious truth that our Army is extremely weak. Colonel Greaton is with me, without a single man, all under inoculation; Colonel Bond, with all his regiment, in the same situation; Colonel Patterson has six only; Colonel Stark about forty; Colonel Reed's and Colonel Poor's nearly in the same situation. Poor is at St. Johns, Reed at Chambly. Colonel Burrell's return I sent in my last, and the other regiments are most of them in the same situation; for this Colony, it seems, has of late been considered the general hospital of America. The party with General

Thompson, and that with Colonel De Haas, contains the flower of our Army at present. Some regiments are nearly out of the small-pox, and will be fit for duty in a few days. Our numbers will be daily increasing. I should rejoice, however, to see General Greene here, with his brigade, if he can be spared from New-York.

June 12, 1776.—I could not close the foregoing letter till I could get some certain intelligence of General Thompson and his party, most of which, after being unfortunately repulsed, are now returned; but the General himself, with Colonel Irwin, Dr. McKinzie, Mr. Currie, Mr. Burd, Mr. Edy, and Parson Colley, are unluckily fallen into the hands of our enemies. A flag has arrived this night for their baggage, by which he writes that he and the other gentlemen are treated with the greatest politeness by General Burgoyne, who commands at Three Rivers. The officers suppose they had about twenty-five killed, and we find missing in the whole about a hundred and fifty, some of which we expect in yet, as some have arrived this evening, and say more will be in. The General was taken after the retreat by some Canadian Militia, summoned in by Carleton. I have also a number, which I have summoned in to take part with us, under the Baron De Woodtke. Our people say that the Canadians were, in general, very kind to them upon their retreat, and gave them every assistance in their power. The unfortunate defeat of General Thompson and his detachment happened in this manner, viz: The repeated accounts from Three Rivers of the smallness of their numbers induced General Thompson to detach Colonel St. Clair to attack them with seven hundred men, before my arrival. This not being put in execution, and St. Clair remaining at Nicolete, and the account of their weakness being confirmed, the General solicited the liberty of attacking them, which I granted, giving the orders which I enclosed in my last. He crossed from Nicolete to Three Rivers in the night, but being led into a morass by his guides, was obliged to return back near two miles; in which time the day broke, he was discovered, the ships began to cannonade, and continued while he marched through a swamp, which took near an hour and a half. The people came up to the attack, but, unluckily for them, twenty-five vessels had arrived that evening with troops, which they landed, while he marched on, and, being well prepared, gave them so warm a reception that the troops soon broke and quitted the ground. The cannonading and all the firing after that was a mere random firing, which answered very little purpose. When they found our troops began to give way, they detached a party of six hundred by the side of the river, to attack them in flank, and to secure our batteaus. The batteaus were preserved by Major Woods, who brought them off. One batteau only was taken, with four barrels of powder, and nothing else on board, the men escaped.

This, dear General, is a state of this unfortunate enterprise. What you will hear next, I cannot say. I am every moment informed of the vast number of the enemy which have arrived; some, indeed, say that great numbers have arrived from England, and all the troops from Halifax. This I do not believe; but I apprehend their numbers now are very great. I have here only two thousand five hundred and thirty-three rank and file. Most of the officers seemed discouraged, and, of course, their men. I am employed day and night in fortifying and securing my camp, and am determined to hold it as long as a person will stick by me. I have heard nothing of Colonel Dayton's or the residue of Colonel Wayne's regiment, or of the others ordered here; sure I am that they are much wanted. There are some regiments all down with the small-pox—not a single man fit for duty. This will be remedied in time, unless the enemy make a sudden push, which, indeed, we expect every hour. If so, we must, with the numbers we have, sustain their efforts, and I hope repulse them.

Dear General, I am, with much regard, your most devoted, humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

P. S. Our old friend Colonel Louis, of the Caughnawagas, has this moment arrived express from that tribe. He says all the Indians have made peace, even the Canasadagas, and those tribes which joined Captain Forster at the Cedars, except the Roundorks—these have refused in council, and say they will take arms for the King, and have sent to General Carleton to let him know it. This tribe consists of fifty warriors only. The Caughnawagas and other tribes desire we should send up some other tribes, which they will join with, to extirpate them. This they would do themselves, but are apprehensive that some few French, through the influence of their Priests, will join them. Indeed I can but illy spare the force; but it is a matter of too much importance to be neglected. I must therefore send some force under the command of an experienced officer.

I have the honour to be, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

Nicolete, June 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I arrived here at one o'clock this morning, and as the men were much fatigued, their arms wet, and the night so far advanced, it rendered it impossible to get to Three Rivers before light, and must have passed in sight of the enemy's vessels, ten in number, that have got about five miles above Three Rivers.

I have ordered the whole detachment to be in readiness to embark at nine o'clock this evening, and shall pass the river St. Lawrence about three miles above the shipping, and after leaving a guard of two hundred and fifty men with the boats, proceed by land to the Three Rivers, and, if possible, begin the attack at daylight.

No certain accounts of the number of the enemy—the intelligence is from five to fifteen hundred. If I shall find that they are numerous, and that they are strongly intrenched, I shall not risk a battle, as a defeat, at this time, would greatly distress us.

I have not found a proper place near this to fortify, the banks being overflowed at the mouth of the river; nor would I venture to keep troops below the vessels, as they surely have it in their power to prevent our boats from passing, and it is out of our power to keep up a communication by land. I believe, therefore, we must make the best of the banks at or near the Sorel, or fortify the Islands.

I have ordered Captain Stevens to stop above the Lake with the artillery till further orders, as the loss of the few he has with him would be very fatal to us. You will hear from me to-morrow.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,
WILLIAM THOMPSON.

St. Johns, June 13, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I wrote you a few days since from Montreal that I had seized a parcel of goods for the use of the Army by particular orders from the Commissioners of Congress. Our hurry and confusion was so great when the goods were received, it was impossible to take a particular account of them; every man's name was marked on his particular packages, with intention to take particular account of them at Chambly or St. Johns, where the goods were ordered to be stored. Major Scott was sent with them, with orders to have them stored under the care of Colonel Hazen, who commanded at Chambly. On his arrival there he received orders from General Sullivan to repair to Sorel. Colonel Hazen refused taking the goods into store, or taking charge of them; they were heaped in piles on the banks of the river. Colonel Hazen finally received them, and placed sentinels over them; they were, however, neglected in such a manner that great part were stolen or plundered. On receiving this intelligence I repaired to Chambly; the goods were sent to St. Johns by Colonel Hazen, in different parcels, all under the care of a French corporal; and through them I found the goods broken open, plundered, and mixed together in the greatest confusion, and great part missing. Mr. McCarthy has General Sullivan's orders, and is now receiving the goods. I have sent over to Ticonderoga a quantity of nails and goods, the property of Thomas Walker, Esq., and ordered them to be stored there, and delivered to his order.

We have a report that on Sunday last our Army, of about two thousand men, under the command of General Thompson, attacked the enemy near Three Rivers, and were repulsed, with the loss of twenty men and some batteaus. We have received no particular accounts of this matter, though several days have elapsed since the affair happened.

Near one half of our Army are sick, mostly with the small-pox. If the enemy have a force of six or eight, and some say ten thousand men, we shall not be able to oppose them. Sick, ragged, undisciplined, and unofficered, as we are, if we are not soon reinforced, I tremble for the event; a loss of our heavy cannon, which is all ordered to Sorel, must ensue, if not our Army, as our retreat is far from being secured. Not one stroke has been struck to secure our encampment here; I have ordered men out to-morrow morning to enclose our encampment and the two old forts with an abettis and breastwork. Dr. Stringer is in a disagreeable situation—three thousand men are sick here and at Chambly, and no room or convenience for them. I should advise his going to the Isle-aux-Noix, was there any convenience for the sick, or boards to make any. I have written General Sullivan on the occasion. I have ordered the frames of the vessels here taken in pieces and sent to Crown-Point; the timbers are all numbered and easily put together again.

If any more men are ordered for this country, let me entreat you to hurry them on and all the water-craft.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, obedient, humble servant,
B. ARNOLD.

Chambly, June 13, 1776, 10 o'clock P. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Since writing the foregoing, I arrived here, and met Dr. Center, who left Sorel at twelve o'clock this day; he informs me that General Thompson, Colonel Irwin, Doctors McKenney and McCauley, Lieutenants Bird and Curry, are prisoners, and about forty men missing. General Thompson has written for his baggage, which has been sent to him. Burgoyne is with the enemy. Seventy transports, and, by the best accounts, ten thousand troops, are arrived in Quebeck. The whole force we can collect does not exceed four thousand effectives, when they are all collected; and I have written General Sullivan my opinion very freely, which is, to collect our whole force at St. Johns immediately, and secure our retreat. I am told his intention is to remain at Sorel until attacked by the enemy. I believe there will be little danger of it. I make no doubt the enemy will pass Sorel, and as soon as in possession of Montreal, march immediately for St. Johns, and endeavour to cut off our retreat, in which case, if we save our Army, the cannon and heavy baggage must fall into the hands of the enemy. All the craft on your side of the Lake, in my opinion, ought immediately to be sent to St. Johns, and a number of gondolas built as soon as possible to guard the Lake. You may expect soon to hear of our evacuating Canada, or being prisoners. I go to Montreal in the morning, where I shall remain until I have orders to quit it, or am attacked, when it will be too late.

I am, respectfully, dear General, yours, &c.,

B. ARNOLD.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COMMITTEE OF ESSEX COUNTY,
NEW-JERSEY.

New-York, June 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The absolute necessity of preventing all correspondence between the inhabitants of this country and our enemies, obliges me to procure every degree of intelligence that leads to the channel of such intercourse. Dr. William Burnet, of Newark, can inform you of certain insinuations and charges against part of the Army under my command, as if they were liable to bribery and corruption in permitting persons to go from Staten-Island to the men-of-war at or near Sandy-Hook; and as the person from whom he has received his intelligence resides at Newark, within the district of your Committee, I must request it as a matter of great importance that your Committee will, as soon as possible, call on David Ogden, Esq., to declare who the person was who informed him that he had engaged the guard of the Riflemen at Staten-Island to carry him on board the men-of-war, with all the circumstances within his knowledge; and also that you do call on the person whom he points out to be his informant, to declare every circumstance within his knowledge relative to the matter.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To William Burnet, Esq., Chairman, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL JAMES CLINTON.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 23, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 20th and 22d instant are both safe to hand. The person you were to seize by warrant, you are immediately to send, with the papers, to this place, in charge of an officer you can confide in; in this no time is to be lost. It is out of my power to assist you in procuring arms; must, therefore, urge you to make application to the Convention, Committees, &c., who, I hope, will supply you. Your letter of the 20th I shall answer the first opportunity. Am in haste, sir, your most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel James Clinton, at Fort Constitution.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

New-York, June 23, 1776.

SIR: By last night's post I was favoured with yours of the 16th instant, containing the interesting intelligence of your having obliged the King's ships to quit their station, and of the further capture of two vessels from Glasgow with Highland troops on board. These events are extremely pleasing, and I flatter myself the former will be attended with salutary consequences. It will give our little squadron a better opportunity of safely bringing in such prizes as they may have the fortune to take, and be the means of more transports and other of their vessels falling in our hands, in all probability. The scheme of a decoy-ship may answer many good purposes, and if we get a few more of the thirty-two transports, in addition to those we have already, the Highland corps will be pretty well broken and discontinued.

In respect to a Paymaster and payment of the troops, Congress have informed me, in a letter of the 14th inst., that they have appointed Ebenezer Hancock, Esq., to that office, and that the day after money would be sent him for paying the troops in the Eastern Department. I hope it will arrive in a few days, that their claims may be discharged, and the grounds of their dissatisfaction removed.

The invalids you mention may be turned over to other regiments, till further orders, taking notice of the time and a list of their names, and transmitting them to the Colonels or commanding officers of the respective regiments to which they belonged, that they may not be included in their abstracts after that time and double pay be drawn for them.

I have enclosed you copies of sundry resolves of Congress, which I request you to communicate to the persons they respect, that they may govern themselves accordingly. That about vessels taken which sailed from Boston with effects while the King's troops possessed it, you will transmit to the different agents for the Continental armed vessels, and that respecting ordnance stores to Commodore Manly. I have sent the original invoice of them, and do appoint . . . . . to act in behalf of the Continent, in conjunction with such person as the Commodore shall choose, for ascertaining their value; this you will please to notify him of. They must be qualified as the resolve directs, and pursue the mode pointed out by it. When the valuation is made, they will annex the report under their hands to the invoice, and deliver them to you in order to their being forwarded to me. The report may mention that they were sworn, and by whom. I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL GATES TO DR. FRANKLIN.

[Read June 28, 1776, before the Board of War.]

New-York, June 23, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This will be presented you by the Chevalier de Kermovan, who left Old France on the 6th of April, and arrived about fourteen days ago at Stonington, by the way of Cape François. He desires me to acquaint you that his views are truly patriotick, and that he neither seeks reward or honour but as he shall merit. He has letters for you and Doctor Rush; they probably will speak more for him than I can presume to do. He professes being an engineer, and to have served all the last war with the Turks in that line.

I set out to-morrow afternoon or Tuesday morning for Albany, but have not yet received either instructions or the resolves from Congress.

I am, dear sir, your affectionate humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To the Honourable Doctor Benjamin Franklin, Member of the Continental Congress, at Philadelphia.

JOHN ANDREWS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York Jail, June 23, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: The humble petition of John Andrews, now confined in this jail on suspicion of theft: but I take the great God to be my witness I am innocent of the crime laid to my charge; it is only for swapping a pair of breeches with another man. I gave him six shillings to boot; and the same person that I got the breeches from is in prison at this time. May it please your Excellency, I, John Andrews, of the Seventh Regiment, have been confined for ten weeks past, and have no person upon earth to make my address to except your Excellency, hoping you will look down on me with an eye of pity, and have me set at liberty. And I, John Andrews, do further declare, that I am able and willing to serve in the defence of America as long as this disturbance lasts. No more, but remain your unfortunate petitioner,

JOHN ANDREWS.

P. S. May it please your Excellency we, fellow-prisoners, think it a duty incumbent on us to acquaint your Excellency with a conspiracy that is laid against you.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, June 23, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour of your letter of the 16th instant. Agreeable to your directions I have ordered the Court of Inquiry to set for a rehearing of the complaint of Colonel Varnum against Lieutenant Merrill.

The letters to Major Small and Charles Proctor, Esq., I will forward, if any opportunity offers.

By desire of Colonel Campbell I have enclosed his letters, which he desires may be forwarded if there be no objection to them and an opportunity offers.

General Whitcomb does not accept his appointment, therefore I can have no relief by him, and I am so ill that I can attend but very little to any business.

I have just received information from several privateers that eleven sail of transports, under convoy of a frigate, are in the bay, standing in, and supposed to be part of the Scotch fleet; the privateers are all ordered out, and I have taken measures to secure the transports in case they should come into Nantasket Road.

I am your Excellency's obedient, most humble servant,
ARTEMAS WARD.

To General Washington.

WILLIAM GORDON TO GENERAL GATES.

Roxbury, June 23, 1776.

FRIEND GATES: I am settling my literary affairs, and writing myself out of debt, but not taking leave I hope. Notwithstanding all the rumours and handbills that have been published, expect that I shall have more opportunities of corresponding before the storm bursts. Question whether Howe has yet sailed. Watch the wind and weather like an old Roman fortune-teller, and, from the signs in the heavens, infer that he will have a long passage, distance considered. Recollect that the sun has completed his northern tour, and is upon his return to the south; that the light southerly winds are beginning to fan the atmosphere; that the season will be exceeding hot in a few weeks; that the light moony nights will not suffer an enemy to land in the dark; and that the campaign is wearing away. A state of suspense and expectation is irksome; and yet I shall be willing to submit to it for weeks without hearing of an engagement, as the gaining of time is the gaining of advantages. You are sensible that I am a schemer; and though the whole generation seem to make much of their projects for themselves, yet others often profit by their thoughts; you will indulge me therefore. The Germans have no business to interfere in our contest with Great Britain. Let us, by way of retaliation, employ five hundred or a thousand Indians against them. The very appearance of such dark and painted enemies will go near to terrify them. I am, therefore, for providing that number to attack them whenever they shall land, and for keeping them ignorant of our having any, till they feel and hear and see them in the same instant. But how is all this possible? Here comes in the scheme. I am for making them all in a night's time; only let the materials be provided by one that knows not of the design, or that can keep a secret, which quality in a commander is next to courage and conduct, and in some instances may supply the want of both. Separate your number of men, those that can best imitate the war-whoop, &c., of the Indians, without their suspecting any special intention. Let them be brave and daring; the officer be intrepid and enterprising, and that will give the example. Let oiled colours, black and red, with brushes, &c., quantum sufficit, be prepared, not forgetting blankets and earrings. I mention oiled colours, that the sweat and weather may not displace them. All things being in readiness, and the whole a secret from the Army and Yorkers, let the officer propose it as a sudden thought, urge the honour they will gain, and the good they may do, then lead the way, by stripping into buff, giving himself an Indian complexion, fixing on the earrings, &c. I can scarce think but that, if he is beloved, his men will do likewise; and, warmed with the thought and hope of success, be prepared to fall upon the foreigners instantly, before these can gain intelligence. The German soldiers, not knowing English, will not understand our people should they have occasion to speak to each other, and may think they are talking Indian, if they do but hollow it out well to each other. Were I present, and in the military, should be a volunteer in turning Indian. You will possibly smile at my sitting in my study and contriving such a scheme; and may be reminded of what the French General said to the Minister of State, when the latter, looking over the map, and giving his opinion, pointed with his finger and said, "Here you will cross the Rhine and penetrate into the country." "Yes! if it was as easy for me to execute as for you to point out the passage." Well, then, be it as it will, I have gained something—matter to fill up my paper, which, in a time of dearth, is a valuable acquisition. You have already got all the news, excepting an anecdote or two. Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell had the fine new colours of his battalion with him, and finding that they were likely to be taken, he tore or cut them all to pieces and threw them into the sea. What is the proper punishment to be inflicted on him for thus destroying the colours? There was money on board to pay the battalion, which he has secreted, putting it up in paper like pounds of snuff. The Council will go near to be informed of it to-day.

I have been longing for your arrival, but shrewdly suspect that his Excellency will neither spare you nor any man of worth till the blow has been struck. Should the enemy be obliged, as I trust will be the case, to push off again to sea, then I expect to see some worthy officer coming post-haste to take the command.

Don't say that we have done nothing in this quarter since you left us. We have procured seventy-five tons of powder, besides a thousand carbines, &c. We have caught more than four hundred clever fellows called Highlanders, in company with a member of one of the most abandoned houses extant. We have secured their arms, and are going to employ many of them in husbandry and other works. I have got a servant from among them; the other left me, designing, I apprehend, to go on board, but was caught, and is in Boston jail.

You will tell me that, as to what I have mentioned, more thanks to Providence than any exertions of ours. So say I in every instance; and I am more and more convinced that if we are saved, it will be by Providence.

Have you read Price? Hazard should have lent it to you. Adieu, till I have been to the post for my letter, and then I may possibly have somewhat more to add; but whether so or not, you will be sure to present our best respects to Mrs. Gates, &c., &c.; and believe me to be your sincere friend and humble servant,

WILLIAM GORDON.

To Major-General Gates.

Though I have no child, yet I have recollected that you have one, and but one; therefore I pray you, how does he? Was Lee present, he would be ready to say, that's right, for, love me, love my dog! Were I to write to him I would inquire after his dog.

Monday morning, June 24, 1776.—Nothing special; rejoice that our affairs in Canada seem to be mending. Let me hear from you soon.

JOHN BRADFORD TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Boston, June 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As I gave you an account by last post of the indisposition of Captain Harding, I thought it my duty, and it gives me very great pleasure, to acquaint you that he is so well recovered that yesterday morning he quitted my house before any of the family were up, and went on board his brig, then at Nantasket; he had a very strong impulse he should take a prize. Yesterday, ten sail of transports and a frigate appeared off our harbour. Captain Harding is out with all our little navy; and as the transports disappeared to-day, we are apprehensive they got some intelligence, and are put off. I suppose the brig will be in to-night; and so soon as Captain Harding can know the contents of what the three vessels had on board, he designs to return home.

The prize brig being on the rocks, bilged, renders it difficult to get out her cargo. I shall be able to make a return by next post of what the three cargoes consist; in the interim, I have the honour to be, with great truth, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN BRADFORD.

To Hon. Jonathan Trumbull and Committee of Safety.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CUMBERLAND, NOVA-SCOTIA,
JUNE 23, 1776.

The following is a genuine copy of an inlistment presented by Mr. Franklin to the inhabitants of this County, in order, as he said, to wipe off that stain of disaffection which had been represented home by Governour Legge. Yet, notwithstanding the little art and finesse he is so remarkable for, he has not been able to gain that ascendancy over the minds of the inhabitants which he and his friends expected. Were it not other motives which deterred the people from signing, the view which Mr. Franklyn has in doing it, being so obvious to the least impartial penetration acquainted in our Government, would prevent every honest and well-thinking man from complying. Franklin and his friends gain one point, and himself two; first, by getting this inlistment signed, he may prove that Mr. Legge has made a false representation, and, in this convulsed time, must be very pernicious to the interest of Britain. By this, he may throw Mr. Legge out of the Government, and his adherents out of business. This would satisfy the revenge long looked for by Mr. Legge's just administration in bringing many gross and atrocious offenders to justice for embezzling the publick moneys, and using such as they meant for ruling in a partial and despotick sway, to the great detriment of the progress of the settlement ever since Mr. Howe came. Secondly, Mr. Franklyn, who is reduced, in a manner, to a state of beggary, and being too well known for his dissimulation, cannot gain ground in proportion; but, no emolument arising, he by this may show his popularity and interest in favour of Government, (if signed,) and get himself established, with his regiment, on the Government. He has not procured above thirty volunteers, many of them of the most low character, and the others he has frightened, having declared openly that those who would not sign shall forfeit their interest. In this (should he accomplish it) he will get his desire, as he has often declared that he hoped to see the day when an American should not have a foot in Nova-Scotia.

Province of NOVA-SCOTIA, ss:

Whereas this his Majesty's Province has been, and is now, threatened with an invasion from the neighbouring Colonies by certain people now in arms against his Majesty's present Government, for refusing to concur with them in disobedience to the laws of Great Britain, and for affording, agreeable to our duty, supplies and refreshments to his Majesty's troops: we wish it to be known, that, however unwilling we should be to shed the blood of our American countrymen, we must, in discharge of our duty to God and the King, and in support of the Constitution and laws of our country, oppose their entry into this Province, and any and every of their proceedings therein, where their coming must expose us to the ruin and destruction of our property, and to all the ravages and horrors of a civil war; and we do solemnly promise, in the presence of Almighty God, to bear faithfully true allegiance to his sacred Majesty George the Third, and we will, to the utmost of our power and ability, support, maintain, and defend his crown and dignity against all traitorous attempts and conspiracies whatever; and furthermore, we, inhabitants of the township of ———, do, for the purposes aforesaid, voluntarily enrol ourselves in a company of Militia, whereof ——— is to be our Captain, and —— are to be our Lieutenants, in the volunteer regiment of Militia, under the command of the Honourable Michael Franklyn, Esq., on condition, nevertheless, that we are not on any occasion whatever to serve out of this Colony, nor are we to be required to do duty in consequence of this enlistment but in case of an actual invasion of this Province by such a body of forces as may make it necessary to aid and support the King's troops stationed in this Colony.

TRANSYLVANIA LANDS.

In Convention, Virginia, June 24, 1776.

Whereas divers petitions from the inhabitants on the Western frontiers have been presented to this Convention, complaining of exorbitant demands made on them for Lands claimed by persons pretending to derive titles from Indian deeds and purchases:

Resolved, That all persons actually settled on any of the said Lands ought to hold the same, without paying any pecuniary or other consideration whatever to any private person or persons, until the said petitions, as well as the validity of the titles under such Indian deeds and purchases, shall have been considered and determined on by the Legislature of this country; and that all persons who are now actually settled on any unlocated or unappropriated Lands in Virginia, to which there is no other just claim, shall have the pre-emption or preference in the grants of such Lands.

Resolved, That no purchases of Lands within the chartered limits of Virginia shall be made, under any pretence whatever, from any Indian tribe or nation, without the approbation of the Virginia Legislature.

EDMUND PENDLETON, President.

MARYLAND CONVENTION AND GOVERNOUR EDEN.

In Convention, Annapolis, June 24, 1776.

The Letter of Captain Montagu and of Robert Eden, Esq., of this day to the Council of Safety, were laid before the Convention. And in confirmation thereof,

Resolved, unanimously, That the said Captain Montagu, by detaining several servants belonging to the inhabitants of this Province, and by refusing to deliver up a soldier who deserted from the service of this Colony, hath violated the truce, and acted in manifest violation of his promise to preserve the same sacred.

Ordered, That the Commanding Officer do not permit any baggage or effects belonging to Robert Eden, Esq., or any other on board the Fowey, to be carried on board the said ship, and to take care that all communication with the said ship immediately cease.

Ordered, That the Letters of Captain Montagu to Robert Eden, Esq., of yesterday, and the several Letters from the Council of Safety, of this day, to Captain Montagu and Robert Eden, Esq., and their answers, together with the above Resolve and Order, be immediately published.

Extract from the Minutes: G. DUVAL, Clerk.

Fowey, off Annapolis, Maryland, June 23, 1776.

SIR: I have the happiness to acquaint you that last night I arrived here with his Britannick Majesty's ship the Fowey under my command, agreeable to an order from Captain Hammond, of his Majesty's ship the Roebuck, and senior officer of his Majesty's ships at Virginia. And in consequence of your application to him, I have hoisted the flag of truce at my foretopgallantmast-head, to show that I am not come in a hostile manner, and of which I desire you will be pleased to acquaint the inhabitants, that they may not offer any insults to my officers and boats; and on my part I shall hold the truce most sacred.

I have the pleasure to acquaint you that every accommodation the Fowey can afford is at your and your friends' service, and that my boats shall be ready at any time to attend your coming off, and sent for your property.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

GEORGE MONTAGU.

To Robert Eden, Esq.

In Council of Safety, Annapolis, June 24, 1776.

SIR: Representations have been made to the Council of Safety this morning, by Mr. Samuel Galloway and others, inhabitants of this Province, setting forth that a number of white servants, belonging to the several persons so applying, had run away from the service of their masters. We are also informed that a soldier in the service of this Province had deserted from Captain Scott's company.

A flag is sent with a list of the servants, and to request the delivery of them and of the soldier, if they should be found on board; and if they, or any others, should hereafter attempt to get on board, we expect they will not be received. We are authorized by the Convention to say that the people of this Province will strictly observe the truce, in confidence that Captain Montagu will do the same.

By order and on behalf of the Council of Safety.

I am your obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES CARROLL, V. P.

To George Montagu, Esq.

In Council of Safety, Annapolis, June 24, 1776.

SIR: Application having been made this morning by Mr. Samuel Galloway and other inhabitants of this Province to our Board, representing that a number of servants had left their masters, a list of which we send you enclosed, and that they had reason to believe they were gone on board the ship of war or tenders now at anchor in the road, we request the favour of your Excellency to interpose your good offices with Captain Montagu for the delivery of the servants to their respective masters, if they should be found on board. We are authorized by the Convention to say that the people of this Province will strictly observe the truce, in confidence that Captain Montagu will do the same.

By order and in behalf of the Council of Safety.

I am, with respect and regard, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

CHARLES CARROLL, V. P.

To His Excellency Robert Eden, Esq.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety:

The Petition of SAMUEL GALLOWAY, on behalf of himself and JAMES CHESTON, humbly sheweth:

That on Sunday evening, of the 23d instant, Hugh Job, a tailor, James Brooke, a painter, Robert Skinner, carver, John Kelly, a gardener, and Thomas Wilkinson, a waiting-man, made their escape from your petitioners' house at West River, in a batteau; and that your petitioners have great reason to entertain a suspicion that they have, or will endeavour, to get on board the Fowey ship of war, now lying off this city. Your petitioners, therefore, humbly pray this honourable Board that they will immediately take such steps as they shall think most proper for the apprehension of the above-mentioned servants; and your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

SAMUEL GALLOWAY.

June 24, 1776.

Fowey, off Annapolis, June 24, 1776.

SIR: It is my wish, in every respect, inviolably to preserve the truce under which his Majesty's ship Fowey came up this bay for his Excellency your Governour; and as soon as his effects are all on board—which I expect them to be to-morrow morning—the Fowey will return to the fleet, without committing any hostility, if his Majesty's colours receive no insult.

With regard to the servants for whose return you apply, my instructions prohibit my discharging them, to suffer, perhaps, a severe and ignominious servitude; nor is it in my power to deliver up any subjects of his Majesty who embrace his service, and risk their lives in seizing an opportunity for that purpose.

The orders to his Majesty's ships are peremptory, to receive all persons well-affected, and give them every protection. Such boats alongside this ship as are the property of any inhabitants of Maryland shall, under the truce, be immediately restored to the persons claiming them. I intended to have had them landed this evening. I hope that no obstruction will be given to the remainder of Governour Eden's baggage, and that of the gentlemen going down with him being immediately put on board, as I have orders to proceed down the bay as soon as that service, which brought me up, is completed. I am, sir, your humble servant,

GEORGE MONTAGU.

To Charles Carroll, Esq.

His Majesty's Ship Fowey, June 24, 1776.

SIR: In answer to your letter by Captain Stone, which I have just received, relative to the application made by Mr. Galloway and others, on account of some runaway servants, I can only say that Captain Montagu's orders "to receive on board, and give protection to, all British well-affected subjects," are positive, and that he does not consider it in his power, consistently with those orders, to comply with your request.

He says you cannot consider this refusal any violation of the truce; that the Fowey has not, and will not, receive any runaway slaves on board; that he is bound by, and must follow, his instructions; that all vessels belonging to this place now alongside he intends giving up; and that he has never sent ashore to bring servants off, or encourage deserters. I can add no more than that every exertion of my interest or interposition on this subject must prove ineffectual against the King's orders.

I hope we shall get away to-morrow, and not be delayed by any obstruction to the baggage or stock of the gentlemen here as yet not brought off.

Wishing peace and prosperity to the Province on constitutional principles, I am, sir, your obedient humble servant,

ROBERT EDEN.

To Charles Carroll, Esq., Barrister, V. P. of the Council of Safety, Annapolis.

Fowey, off Annapolis, June 25, 1776.

SIR: I have been waiting all this day for the return of the boat with the remainder of the Governour's baggage, but, to my great astonishment, perceive the boat is still alongside of the wharf; and as I yesterday received a letter from Mr. Carroll, on behalf of your Board, am apprehensive she is detained. If that is the case, it will break off the truce that is now subsisting between his Majesty's ship under my command and the Province of Maryland. I desire that you will be pleased to let me know the reason of this delay of the boat, that I may take my measures accordingly; and desire that his Majesty's boat, now sent on shore, will return with an immediate answer.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

GEORGE MONTAGU.

To the President of the Council of Safety.

In Council of Safety, Annapolis, June 25, 1776.

SIR: By command of the Convention I enclose you their resolution of yesterday, which expresses the occasion of discontinuing an intercourse with the Fowey, which was wished and expected to have ended more satisfactorily.* Any measures that may be attempted for the ostensible cause of stopping the Governour's barge, must properly be imputed to your breach of the truce, and will be resented in full proportion to the injury.

For and on behalf of the Council of Safety.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

DAN. OF ST. THOMAS JENIFER, Pres't.

To George Montagu, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN BEALL.

Annapolis, June 24, 1776.

SIR: We are directed by the Convention to inform you that Captain Montagu, of the Fowey ship of war, has broke the truce, that you may be prepared to repel any violence which he may offer on his passage down the bay, or attempts to procure provisions.

We are, &c.

To Captain Rezin Beall.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL MATTHEWS.

[No. 39.]

Annapolis, June 24, 1776.

SIR: Captain Speake, of the schooner John, has informed us that you have been so kind as to appoint a guard over the powder and other articles imported into Accomack County for the use of this Province; for which we return our thanks, and hope you will continue your good offices in the care thereof, until these articles are removed, which we have given orders to be done as soon as possible.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Matthews, of Virginia.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN NICHOLSON.

SIR: Captain Montagu, of the Fowey ship of war, has broke the truce, and we are directed by the Convention, who have information of your being on your passage from Baltimore hither, to apprise you of it, that you may take such measures as you may think prudent and necessary to guard against falling into his hands. We are, &c.

To Captain James Nicholson.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN NICHOLSON.
[No. 41.] Annapolis, June 24, 1776.

SIR: Captain Montagu, of the Fowey ship of war, has broke the truce, and we are directed by the Convention to apprise you of it, and send you the enclosed resolve, which you will conduct yourself agreeable to.

We are, &c.

To Captain James Nicholson.

MARYLAND CONVENTION.

In Convention, June 25, 1776.

This Convention being informed that Writs of Election have been issued in the name of the Proprietary, for the election of Delegates in Assembly:

Resolved, That the said Writs be not obeyed, and that no election be made in consequence thereof.

Extract from the Minutes:

G. DUVAL, Clerk.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The Tories have at length occupied their last post. They now acknowledge that Independence is inevitable, but endeavour to persuade us that a formal declaration of it is unnecessary, and that we are already as independent as we can be of the Crown of Britain. It is in vain to urge the advantages we shall derive in forming foreign alliances from an immediate declaration of independence. The campaign, they tell us, is commenced, and France cannot receive our manifesto time enough to help us before the next year. Be not terrified, ye poor creatures, with a word, nor put off the day any longer that is to exalt you to the rank of men. Your posterity will look upon it as the birth-day of permanent liberty to this country.

Should an immediate declaration of independence take place, we shall then only have crossed the Red Sea of our difficulties. A wilderness will still be before us. We have been enslaved with European ideas, manners, and laws. Hereditary right to power, titles, excise laws, &c., must all be laid in the dust before we can expect to establish or reap the fruits of good Government in the Colonies.

You will be in danger, my dear countrymen, from men who wish and aim to unite the present contending parties in our Province. Where men agree in an object, but differ only in the means of obtaining it, there it is proper to reconcile them to each other; and whether pains are taken or not for this purpose, a coalition will always take place sooner or later between them. Many people who signed the Remonstrance, in a few years will embrace the present advocates for a free and independent Government in their arms, and execrate the men who handed it to them. These people love liberty. They have only committed a mistake in the means of establishing it on a permanent foundation. Avoid only, my countrymen, a union with Tories and Crown-officers, who have shown themselves inimical to the measures of the Congress. Some of them will probably soon begin to bellow for independence. But be not deceived. They have delayed their repentance till the orders were given to drive away the cart. It is now too late for them to hope for a reprieve. They aim only to be continued in office. Remember the conduct of Queen Anne's Tory Ministry, who attempted to bring the Stuart family to the throne near thirty years after they were expelled from it.

I would by no means exclude men of property from the confidence of the people, provided they possess understanding, integrity, and publick spirit. But always remember that they derive no right to power from their wealth; and that a freeman worth only fifty pounds is entitled, by the laws of our Province, to all the privileges of the first nabob in the country. Remember the influence of wealth upon the morals and principles of mankind. Recollect how often you have heard the first principles of Government subverted by the calls of Cato, and other Catalines, to make way for men of fortune to declare their sentiments upon the subject of independence; as if a minority of rich men were to govern the majority of virtuous freeholders in the Province. Honour, liberty, and life, (and these are the common portions of every freeman in Pennsylvania;) are worth all the wealth in the world.

A WATCHMAN.

Philadelphia, June 24, 1776.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF NEW-JERSEY.
Philadelphia, June 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour respecting the proper measures to be taken with your late Governour, William Franklin, Esq., came to hand on Saturday, the 22d instant; but as the Congress did not sit on that day, I could not lay it before them till Monday.

I now do myself the honour of enclosing to you the resolves of Congress, which they have this day passed with regard to the treatment of him. You will there perceive the Congress have directed him to be sent to Connecticut under a guard. I shall write to Governour Trumbull to treat him as a prisoner, should he refuse to give his parole in writing.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient, and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Convention of New-Jersey.

P. S. The other resolves herewith sent are of such a nature that no arguments are necessary to enforce them. You will be pleased to attend to them as soon as possible.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.
Philadelphia, June 24, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: The Convention of New-Jersey having declared their late Governour, William Franklin, Esquire, a virulent enemy to the United Colonies, and that he be confined in such place and manner as the Continental Congress shall direct, I do myself the honour of transmitting you the enclosed resolutions with respect to him.

Should he give his parole in writing, you will in that case be pleased to send him to any part of the Colony which you shall judge most proper; but should he refuse to give his parole in writing, I am to request you will proceed against him agreeably to the resolves of Congress relative to prisoners in that predicament.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Hon. Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

To the Honourable the Board of War appointed by the Honourable Continental Congress at PHILADELPHIA:

The Memorial of Captain ELISHA PAINTER, wherein your Honours' Memorialist begs leave humbly to state and show:

That before the important dispute between England and these Colonies arose so high as to render it necessary to take up arms in defence of American liberty, he examined the nature of the dispute, and thereby found the cause we are now fighting in defence of to be righteous and just; on which your Honours' Memorialist, being fired with a due proportion of zeal, formed a resolution (if occasion should require) to contribute the small mite of his assistance to the utmost of his endeavour to defend the darling rights and liberties of America, rather than to have them fall a prey to the ravages of a cruel and tyrannical Ministry; being thus established, he held himself in readiness to throw by all other affairs and join the friends of America in opposition to the enemies of it; but being from home when the alarm came from Lexington, went not to their assistance. The next call for assistance was to Ticonderoga, on which your Honours' Memorialist immediately set out.

Left home the 16th day of May, 1775; went up with a number of other men as a volunteer; was put directly into command of the working party of mechanicks; was appointed as a captain and commander of all in that business at and about Ticonderoga, for which the commanding officer of that place gave a warrant, dated June 1st, 1775. Your Honours' Memorialist continued in that business until the date of his appointment and warrant to command a company in Colonel James Easton's Regiment, which was the 1st of July then next; the company inlisted for six months from and after the said 1st of July, which time expired the last day of December then following; from which time his appointment as a Captain also in General Wooster's Regiment takes place and to continue to the 15th of April, 1776, at which time the Army being in so weak and precarious a state that your Honours' Memorialist and his company could not be spared, the men were prevailed with to tarry till the recruits came to relieve them, which we did; and then your Honours' Memorialist got a pass, and his men a discharge, to go home, and left Canada since the middle of May; and now your Honours' Memorialist hath arrived at Philadelphia, where he hopes to be heard and considered by your Honours, to whom he begs leave further to observe, that it is now going on fourteen months since your Honours' Memorialist left home; and that he hath been during the whole time wading through the extreme hardships and fatigues of the Northern service, which not being able to describe, shall not mention any, except a few of the fatigues of your Honours' Memorialist, which was attended with success, viz: A long and tedious siege in the cold, the wet, the mud and mire at St. Johns, which your Honours' Memorialist endured until a few days before the garrison gave up; at which time your Honours' Memorialist was ordered off with a small party under the command of Colonel Easton, to go and meet a large party commanded by Colonel Maclean, coming up the river Sorel for the relief of St. Johns: we met them and drove them back; they got on board their vessels lying at the mouth of the river Sorel, viz: one large snow of twenty-six guns, two schooners, and one small sloop, against which we raised a battery in the night and drove them down the river, with the loss of a number of their men and more wounded. All this was not done without much fatigue; but we have not done yet. Now comes an express from General Montgomery, near Montreal, to look out sharp, as General Carleton and General Prescott were coming down the river with a fleet of eleven sail, and three or four hundred men on board; we discovered them, went and met them, raised a battery, and drove them up the river again; we then followed them, dragging our cannon with us; built a battery in a snow-storm, the thicket of which secured us from their sight, and thereby from their shot; we drove them still farther up the river, killed one man, and shattered the vessels; and thus by our fatigues day and night in building batteries, &c., up and down the river, harassed the enemy to that degree that we finally took them, with a large quantity of provision, consisting of several hundred firkins of butter, fifteen hundred barrels of pork and flour, &c., without which our Army must have either abandoned Canada, or perished there before any provision arrived this spring. But not to be tedious with your Honours, will recite no more of the successful fatigues, and entirely omit the unsuccessful ones.

Your Honours' Memorialist begs leave to observe that he hath served during the whole time in the capacity of a Captain, studying the good of the service, and applying diligently to the duties of the same; hath never applied or asked to be raised to a higher station, though many others have come home, applied, and got promotion, younger in office, and, it may be, not more deserving, who left the danger and burden on the shoulders of the small number of those who tarried in Canada, to bear it as they could. Your Honours' Memorialist would not apply for unmerited promotion. If throwing by all concerns at home, entering the Northern climate at such a vast distance, encountering so many, so long and continued a series of hardships, of more than thirteen months' continuance; if taking and keeping those parts of Canada, and the effects thereof, (which your Honours' Memorialist gave his persevering assistance to accomplish,) doth not merit promotion, he asks it not; but if your Honours should think that what your Honours' Memo-rialist hath done and gone through is worthy of notice, he doubts not but your Honours will consider the matter, and hopes your Honours will provide for him in some rank or other, as he is now unprovided for in the Army, and is desirous to continue in the service; and as a considerable number of those men who have returned from the Northern Army are very desirous to engage under the command of your Honours' Memorialist, after they had made a visit to their friends, for which and other reasons your Honours' Memorialist begs leave to move that your Honours would give him orders to inlist two or three hundred men to continue in the service during the war, or for a limited time, as your Honours shall think best; and that the Memorialist have orders to appoint officers for said men, of those who have served in the Northern Department, and are now unprovided for in the Army by any of the Colonies. And your Honours' Memorialist will engage that he will not appoint any more officers than will be necessary for the men who shall actually inlist, and that the wages of your Honours' Memorialist, and the wages of the other officers together, shall not amount to more than a proportion with the regiments already raised, according to the number of men really inlisted under your Honours' Memorialist. And your Honours' Memorialist begs to observe, that if your Honours should give him the small command above-mentioned, that he would be well suited if his detachment should be made independent of any regiment, if your Honours should think it best; but if not, your Honours' Memorialist will stand ready cheerfully to attend your Honours' directions to join any other regiment which your Honours shall order; which your Honours' Memorialist, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

ELISHA PAINTER.

To the Honourable the Board of War sitting in PHILADELPHIA:

The Petition of Captain ELISHA PAINTER:

Who begs leave herein humbly to show, that he was appointed a Captain in a Regiment commanded by Colonel James Easton in the Northern Army; which appointment, with a warrant for a commission, was dated July 1st, 1775, for six months' service, which expired the last day of December then next; which service your Honours' petitioner faithfully performed in the above-said capacity; but being neglected as other officers in general in said army were, hath had no commission. But as he is now returned from said army, and thinks a commission may be of future service to him, prays your Honours that he (your Honours' petitioner) may have a commission given him, bearing equal date with the above-said appointment. Your Honours' petitioner would beg leave further to show, that at the expiration of the above-said term in Colonel Easton's Regiment, his appointment for a Captain in General Wooster's Regiment took place, which bears date January 1st, 1776, and in which station your Honours' petitioner again faithfully served during the continuance of said regiment, for which your Honours' petitioner begs your Honours would give him another commission, bearing equal date with the last said appointment; which, as in duty bound, your Honours' petitioner shall ever pray.

ELISHA PAINTER.

Dated at Philadelphia, June 24, 1776.

CHARLES THOMSON TO RICHARD PETERS, JUN.

Philadelphia, June 24, 1776.

SIR: I have it in command to request you would please to send me what publick letters are in your office, that they may be transmitted. Please to examine whether you have not among the letters one from Brigadier-General Arnold, of the 27th of May, with a cartel for exchange of prisoners entered into between him and Captain Forster.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

CHARLES THOMSON, Sec. of Con.

To Richard Peters, Esq.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, June 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your two favours of the 10th instant, one dated at Boston and the other at Portsmouth, came duly to hand. I informed you in my last, which went by Satur- day's post, that the Marine Committee desire you would ship your men so soon as you can. They also direct me to desire you will provide six months' wet provisions and four months' dry; this stock to be kept good. You will apply to the Commissary at Boston for the provisions (that is, beef, pork, and bread or flour) he has orders to supply you. As for guns, that matter remains as when I wrote you last. I cannot prevail with Governour Hopkins to consent to part with those at Providence. I tell him your ship will make a cruise of three months, if she has guns, before either of the Providence ships can be got to sea; but he insists that those ships are as forward as yours. I believe the guns must go from hence. There is a probability that enough for one ship will be in town in about ten days, and you may depend I shall exert every nerve to get the first for the Raleigh.

I am just come from the Committee, and have once more got their unanimous consent to nominate you for agent. I think there is no doubt but you will be appointed, but believe it will be in expectation that you resign your seat in Congress, which I have assured all the members that I have mentioned the matter to, that you were determined on. In return for my exertions in this matter, I think I have a right to expect that you will use your endeavours to get a good man appointed in your stead to come here. I suppose a list of the officers are on the way here. I shall despatch them as soon as they arrive.

There has been a most hellish conspiracy at New-York. We have not the particulars of it yet; but, by the best information I can get, the plan was to assassinate the General, blow up the magazine, and spike the cannon. This was to be done on the arrival of the enemy, it is supposed; however, there is a full discovery of the whole plot, and a considerable number (say thirty or forty) of the infernal villains seized, and I hope justice will be done to them.

Governour Franklin is seized by the Convention of New-Jersey, and is to be confined in Connecticut. The middle Colonies are getting in a good way. Next Monday being the 1st of July, the grand question is to be debated, and I believe determined unanimously. May God unite our hearts in all things that tend to the well-being of the rising empire.

Yours, very sincerely,

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

To John Langdon, Esq.

Colonel Bartlett desires his regards, but is too lazy to write.

BERGEN COUNTY (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee for the County of Bergen, held at New-Bridge, the 24th day of June, 1776, the Resolutions of the honourable Provincial Congress of New-Jersey, of the 14th instant, directing a mode for raising three thousand three hundred men in this Province for reinforcing the Army at New-York, being under consideration:

1st, Resolved, That this Committee will cheerfully and zealously assist the officers in raising and equipping the quota of men for this County; and we do most earnestly recommend to the several Committees of the County that they exert themselves in aiding and assisting the officers appointed on that detachment, to the utmost of their power.

2d, Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Committees, and especially to the Committee for the Precinct of Bergen, that they be careful and diligent in watching the motions of the enemy by sea and land, and to give notice immediately to his Excellency General Washington, or to the commander of any body of troops who may be stationed in their vicinity.

3dly, Resolved, That it is the duty of this Committee to promote harmony among the people of this country, both by their influence and example, the better to enable us to exert our utmost power in the great cause of America, and in the present dangerous and critical juncture. And we most earnestly recommend to the good people of this County, that they aid and assist the families of those brave men who are necessarily abroad in defence of their country, in getting in their harvest, that their wives and families may not suffer by their absence.

By order of the Committee:

DANIEL SMITH, Chairman.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, June 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 22d instant, enclosing resolves of Congress respecting the supply of the troops in Canada, is just received, and shall be duly attended to. I shall be very glad to hear from you as soon as your leisure will permit.

In the mean time, and ever, I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH TRUMBULL.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MAJOR-GENERAL GATES.

SIR: The honourable the Continental Congress, reposing the greatest confidence in your wisdom and experience, have directed me to appoint you to the very important command of the troops of the United Colonies in Canada, with a power to appoint a Deputy Adjutant-General, a Deputy Quartermaster-General, a Deputy Mustermaster-General, and such other Officers as you shall find necessary for the good of the service. You are also empowered to fill up all vacancies in the Army in Canada, and notify the same to Congress for their approbation. You are also authorized, until the 1st of October next, to suspend any officers and fill up all vacancies, transmitting to the honourable Congress such order and suspension, giving your reasons therefor, and specifying the special charge made against such officer.

You are directed, previous to your departure, to consult with the Commissary-General, and concert with him the most effectual measures for continuing proper supplies of provisions for that department.

You are in like manner to consult with Colonel Knox about the artillery which may be wanted, and what may probably be procured there, and whether any brass or iron field-pieces can be spared from hence for that service.

Upon your arrival at Albany you will consult with General Schuyler with respect to the present state of provisions, stores, &c., and fix upon some certain means of forwarding the regular supplies in future from that place. At the same time endeavour to learn whether supplies heretofore sent have not reached that department, and by what means such failures have happened, that a proper remedy may be provided. From General Schuyler you will also receive such advice and information respecting the operations of the campaign as may be useful and necessary.

You are to direct all the General Officers, Deputy Quartermaster-General, local Commissaries, Paymaster in Canada, and all other persons there or on the communication, without delay to render their accounts, and settle them; no General Officer on such settlement receiving pay as Colonel of a Regiment, or any Field Officer as Captain of a Company.

Upon your taking command of the troops, you will give particular orders, agreeable to a rule of Congress, that no officer suttle or sell to the soldiers, on penalty of being fined one month's pay and dismissed the service with infamy.

That all sales of arms, clothing, ammunition, and accoutrements, made by soldiers, are to be deemed void. That the baggage of officers and soldiers is hereafter to be regulated conformably to the rules of the British Armies.

By a like resolve, no troops in Canada are to be disbanded there; but all soldiers in that country ordered to be disbanded, or whose times of enlistment being expired, shall refuse to reinlist, shall be sent under proper officers to Ticonderoga, or such other posts on the lakes as you shall direct, where they are to be mustered, and the arms, accoutrements, blankets and utensils, which they may have belonging to the publick, shall be delivered up and deposited in the publick store.

You will as soon as possible make as accurate a return as you can procure of the troops, artillery, arms, ammunition, provisions, and stores, which you find in Canada, or upon the communication with Albany, distinguishing where stationed and in what magazines; and if possible transmit such a return to the honourable Continental Congress and to me once a fortnight.

The distance of the scene, and the frequent changes which have happened in the state of our affairs in Canada, do not allow me to be more particular in my instructions.

The command is important, the service difficult but honourable; and I most devoutly pray that Providence may crown your arms with abundant success.

Given under my hand, at Head-Quarters, New-York,
June 24, 1776.

G. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, June 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On the 20th instant I received your two favours of the 15th and 17th, by Bennett, and yesterday evening that of the 19th continued to the 20th, with General Sullivan's letter and return, and the several copies you enclosed.

The accounts transmitted by General Sullivan are truly alarming, and I confess I am not without apprehension lest the next advices should be that the unfortunate defeat and taking of General Thompson has been succeeded by an event still more unfortunate—the destruction of a large part, if not the whole, of our Army in that quarter. The weak, divided, and disheartened state in which General Sullivan represents it to be, does not seem to promise anything much more favourable, and is what General Arnold appears to be suspicious of. From the whole of the accounts, supposing the facts all true, there was nothing left to prevent their ruin but a retreat: that I hope has been made, as the only means of saving themselves and rendering their country the least service. By reason of the succession of ills that has attended us there of late, and this last one, I fear we must give up all hopes of possessing that country, (of such importance in the present controversy,) and that our views and utmost exertions must be turned to prevent the incursions of the enemy into our Colonies. To this end, I must pray your strictest attention, and request that you use all the means in your power to fortify and secure every post and place of importance on the communication. You are as much impressed with the necessity of the measure as any man can be, and with confidence I trust that nothing you can do will be wanting to effect it. If the troops have retreated, they will, in a little time, I am hopeful, complete such works on the passes as to bid defiance to the most vigorous efforts of the enemy to penetrate our country, especially when you are assisted by the Militia, which most probably are on their march ere now. Had this unfortunate defeat not happened, the Militia were designed not only to reinforce the Army in Canada, but to keep up the communication with that Province, as you will see by recurring to the resolve directing them to be employed. Major-General Gates, whom Congress had appointed to command after General Thomas's death, will set out to-morrow, and take with him one hundred barrels of powder, out of which the supplies necessary for the different posts must be drawn. I have also directed Colonel Knox to send up the cannon you wrote for, if they can possibly be spared from hence, with some Artillerists and a proper quantity of ball and other necessaries for them, and will, in every instance, afford you all the assistance I can; at the same time I wish, if there are any cannon at Ticonderoga, or other necessities there or elsewhere that you may want and which can be spared for any other post or purpose, that you would get them in preference to any here, as the number we have is not more than sufficient for the extensive and important works necessary to be maintained for the defence of this place.

In respect to the proceedings of the Commissioners for raising two companies of the Mohekan and Connecticut Indians, they appear to me not to answer the views of Congress, as I presume they live within the Government of Connecticut, and are to be considered in the same light with its inhabitants, and that their design was intended for those who were not livers among us, and were of hostile character or doubtful friendship; but in this I may be mistaken, and there may be a necessity of engaging those you have to secure their interests.

As to your doubts about the officer commanding in Canada his right to punish capitally, I should suppose that necessity, independent of anything else, would justify the exercise of such an authority. But Congress having determined that the commanding officer there should inflict exemplary punishment on those who violate the military regulations established by them, has put the matter out of question, and I apprehend every commander there has such power, and of right may and should exercise it.

As Colonel Parsons has requested you to send down the person who is supposed to have murdered his brother, I have no objection to your doing it if you judge necessary. He, from what I have been told, designs to apply to Congress for instituting some mode of trial for the offence.

I am, dear sir,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED NEW-YORK, JUNE 24, 1776.

My last to you was by Friday's post, since which a most barbarous and infernal plot has been discovered among our Tories, the particulars of which I cannot give you, as the Committee of Examination consists of but three, who are sworn to secrecy. Two of Washington's guards are concerned, the third they tempted to join them made the first discovery. The general report of their design is as follows: Upon the arrival of the troops they were to murder all the staff officers, blow up the magazines, and secure the passes of the town. Gilbert Forbes, gunsmith in the Broadway, was taken between two and three o'clock on Saturday morning, and carried before our Provincial Congress, who were then sitting, but refusing to make any discovery, he was sent to jail and put in irons. Young Mr. Livingston went to see him early in the morning, and told him he was sorry to find he had been concerned, and, as his time was very short, not having above three days to live, advised him to prepare himself. This had the desired effect; he asked to be carried before the Congress again, and he would discover all he knew. Several have been since taken, (between twenty and thirty,) among them our Mayor, who are all now under confinement. It is said their party consisted of about five hundred.

I have just heard the Mayor has confessed bringing money from Tryon to pay for rifle-guns that Forbes had made. Burgoyne is arrived at Quebeck with his fleet.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED NEW-YORK, JUNE 24, 1776.

Yesterday the Mayor was examined twice, and returned prisoner under a strong guard. We have now thirty-four prisoners, and many more, it is expected, will be taken up. A party of our men went over to Long-Island on Saturday last to take up some of the Tories; they returned yesterday, and brought to town one Downing, who is charged with being in the hellish plot. They took six more prisoners, and put them in Jamaica jail on Long-Island. The Tories made some resistance, and fired on our men in the woods. Our people returned the fire, and wounded one man mortally, when they called for quarters. This morning a party of three hundred men is ordered, but on what business is not known. I cannot give you the particulars (but was told, by good authority, it will surprise every honest man) of this hellish plot. I am told the Mayor acknowledges he paid Mr. Forbes, the gunsmith, who is one of the gang now in irons, one hundred and forty pounds, by order of Governour Tryon. Yesterday the General's housekeeper was taken up; it is said she is concerned.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE TO PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Committee-Chamber, June 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The General Committee of this City and County beg leave to represent to the honourable the Provincial Congress now sitting, that immediately upon their first meeting after receiving the resolves of their body respecting the last Association to be tendered to the inhabitants of this City and County, they appointed sub-Committees to go through the different Wards and tender the same to the inhabitants, and also that agreeable to their recommendation of the 21st instant, they immediately sent for William Mucklevaine and Stephen Fountain; that upon Mucklevaine's signing the last Association, acknowledging that he had represented falsehoods to the Congress respecting the Committee, that he was sorry for his past conduct in refusing to sign the Association or deliver up his arms upon oath, and that it proceeded from ignorance and not with any evil intention, the Committee resolved to discharge him from confinement; that with respect to Fountain, they find that he was sent from Blue-Point, on Long-Island, and therefore his case not coming under their cognizance, they have returned him to the charge of the jail-keeper. They would beg leave, also, to mention that no evidence has been, nor can they find that any evidence against him can be, produced to this Committee.

Captain Kendall having just now called upon the Committee respecting the last Association being tendered to John L. C. Roome, Augustus Van Horne, Thomas William Moore, and Vincent Pearce Ashfield, prisoners, committed by this Committee for refusing to deliver up their arms upon oath, &c., the Committee beg leave to observe that their commitment was not founded alone upon their refusing to deliver up their arms upon oath, but upon the resolves of the honourable Continental Congress of the 6th of October last, by which power is given to confine all such persons whose going at large may endanger the safety of the Colony or the liberties of America. The Committee are sorry to acquaint the Congress that as yet not the least evidence in the world has been given them that the discharging those persons from confinement will not endanger the safety of the Colony or the liberties of America.

Gladly, very gladly, would they enlarge those gentlemen from confinement, now grown disagreeable to them, if they could do it consistently with their duty to their country, and any evidence that they were become friendly to its interest. By order of the Committee:

GARRET ABEEL, Chairman.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp on Long-Island, June 24, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The Scotch prisoners,* with their baggage, have arrived at my Quarters. I wait your Excellency's directions to know how to dispose of them. Their baggage has not yet been opened. As the night is fast approaching accommodations will soon be necessary. There are eight men and three women—two of quality.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
N. GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters.

QUEENS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Queens County, June 24, 1776.

A motion was made that all persons under recognizance to the Congress, taken by Colonel Heard, be sent for by the Congress and more safely secured, and that application be made to the Congress for that purpose.

Passed in the affirmative.

A motion was made that five hundred Provincial or Continental Troops be immediately sent into Hempstead, to put the resolves of Congress and of this Committee into execution, and to be billeted at the discretion of the commanding officer of the Second Regiment of Queens County upon the disaffected and deserting persons, until the same be put into execution; and that application be made immediately to the Congress for that purpose.

Passed in the affirmative.

Likewise Ordered, That application be made to the Provincial Congress to prescribe some mode to secure all persons disaffected and dangerous, as well above fifty as under in Queens County.

A true copy from the Minutes:

JOSEPH ROBINSON, Deputy Chairman.

SALEM (WESTCHESTER COUNTY, NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Salem, June 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Whereas sundry persons of note have lately absconded from our part of the country, and we have reason to think, from several circumstances, are (with numbers of others) assembling together on Long-Island, with a view

Forty-Second or Royal Highland Regiment: Captain John Smith, Lieutenant Robert Franklin.

Seventy-First Regiment: Captain Norman McLeod and lady and maid; Lieutenant Roderick McLeod; Ensign Colin Campbell and lady; Surgeon's Mate, Robert Boyce; John McAlister, Master of the Crawford Transport; Norman McCulloch, a passenger; two boys, servants; McDonald, servant to Robert Boyce; Shaw, servant to Captain McLeod. Three boys, servants, came over in the evening.

to join the Ministerial Army; we beg the Congress would take the matter under consideration, and adopt such measures as to you shall appear most proper for the removal of such dangerous assemblages, whom we fear are forming a combination to aid and assist the Ministerial Army when an opportunity shall permit.

Ordered, That the same be forwarded, with all convenient speed, by Mr. Ezekiel Hawley.

By the joint order of the sub-Committees of the Manor of Cortlandt and Salem.

EZEKIEL HAWLEY, }
JOSEPH BENEDICT, } Chairmen.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress.

ABEL BELKNAP TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-Windsor, June 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The alarming situation of our publick affairs in general, and the well-grounded suspicion that our enemies in this country are secretly arming and preparing to surprise and take our lives in case an attack shall be made on this Province, which you will no doubt agree with us is more than probable will soon be the case:

We, the Committees of the Precincts of Newburgh and New-Windsor, in conjunction, attended by Colonel Jonathan Hasbrouck and Colonel James McClaughey, met this day, in order to consult on the important affair of putting ourselves in the best situation for defence; and on examining the state of our Militia, find by the report of the aforesaid gentlemen that we are nearly destitute of both powder and lead. An order of your honourable House (as we understand) hath passed in favour of this County for a supply, and, in consequence of said order, application hath been made by our County Convention agreeable to the same, yet no answer hath been received, the reason why, we cannot account for; therefore, as we are under such very disagreeable circumstances, we have resolved and appointed, that the bearer hereof, Captain Isaac Belknap, do wait on your honourable House with this. And we do most earnestly request and pray that you, gentlemen, will be pleased to furnish us with the quantity already required, with a supply of lead proportioned thereto, by the bearer, or inform us of the reasons why.

We have, gentlemen, the honour to be, your most obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

ABEL BELKNAP, Chairman.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York.

MEETING IN KING'S DISTRICT AND SPENCER TOWN, ALBANY COUNTY.

In a full meeting of the inhabitants of King's District, in Albany County, legally warned by the Committee of said County, at the house of William Warner, in said district, on Monday, the 24th of June, 1776, for the purpose of electing twelve Delegates to represent said County in Provincial Congress, &c., the question was put, whether the said district choose to have the American Colonies independent of Great Britain?

It passed unanimously in the affirmative.

The town of Spencer-Town, in the County of Albany, and Province of New-York, in a full meeting, unanimously agreed, that as soon as the honourable Continental Congress should see fit to declare the American Colonies independent of Great Britain, they would support and defend the same with their lives and fortunes.

COLONEL RITZEMA TO LORD STIRLING.

Monday morning, June, 1776.

MY LORD: Impressed with a high sense of the importance of discipline, and conscious that nothing tends more than it to inspire officers and soldiers with mutual confidence, I behold with concern the want of it in my regiment at this critical juncture. Why I have made no greater proficiency in it your Lordship is well apprized of—the want of arms. The incessant fatigue has also not a little contributed towards it. The first of these is now in some measure removed, and, I trust, will be farther so in the course of a week, from the number of men of my own regiment now employed in putting a parcel of old guns I have in fighting condition; from the latter, my Lord, (so the service will in anywise admit of it,) let me entreat you to use your interest with his Excellency the General to excuse my men for some little time. The regiment is new, and, for many other reasons—such as the want of clothing, the inexperience of the officers, &c.—wants it much.

I flatter myself your Lordship will excuse me in troubling you with this letter, as I am induced to it from no other motive but the good of the country and my own honour. I can expect little of either from undisciplinarians.

I am, my Lord, with respect, your Lordship's very humble servant,

RUDOLPHUS RITZEMA.

To Lord Stirling.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Albany, June 24, 1776.

SIR: The post delivered me your favour of the 15th instant. As my letter to his Excellency General Washington has already taken up most of the time the post is allowed to stay, I shall only observe, that Falkner never was, nor is, a prisoner of mine; that, out of mere compassion to the man, I last winter went out of my sphere to serve and to release him, and treated him, as he frequently confessed, with the highest humanity. His behaviour since has not merited a continuance of the like; but I am incapable of resentment against such a wretch; and, if I had any, it should not be marked with cruelty. But all this is mere assertion, and if I can possibly find time, I will, by next post, furnish you with the charges against him by the Committee of Tryon, which induced them to order his last commitment, with a detail of my conduct towards him.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, President.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, June 24, 1776—4 o'clock P. M.

DEAR SIR: Yesterday, at two o'clock in the afternoon, I received a line from Colonel Wynkoop, by a returning express, extract of which, together with copy of the return alluded to, I do myself the honour to enclose. Colonel Duggan, to whom he refers me for particulars, is not yet arrived. Captain Goforth, who brought the letter across Lake George, informs, as what he got from persons just arrived from Canada, that General Sullivan was making a good retreat, and that he was in no danger of sustaining loss. A report prevails here that the enemy are in possession of Montreal. I cannot trace it to its author.

Just now I had the honour of your Excellency's favour of the 20th, continued to the 21st, covering the resolutions of Congress.

I have been so severely handled by the ague, which has not intermitted at all since Monday last until yesterday, that I have not been able to complete the intended speech to the Indians. I am now much better, and hope in a day or two to find myself perfectly freed from this disagreeable disorder, at least for some time.

I believe the reward offered by Congress to the Indians for taking officers and men in the British pay will have a good effect.

I have not ventured to send anything to Schenectady which is intended for taking post near Fort Stanwix, lest the intention should be guessed; nor will anything go from hence until we open the conference at the German Flats; then it will be pushed forward with the greatest expedition.

The Militia that this County is to furnish for the northern service are to rendezvous twenty miles above this, on Wednesday next, and to march thence to reinforce Fort George, at Ticonderoga. I have not heard a single word of any of the Eastern Militia. No field officer that we know of is yet appointed by the New-York Congress for the Militia I have mentioned.

The communication by the way of Cheshire's and Wood Creek into Lake Champlain appeared to me of such absolute necessity that I ventured on the erection of a saw-mill at the head of the navigation, to furnish plank for the necessary works at Cheshire's, as well as for the fortification at

Ticonderoga, and the vicinity of it; part of the mill is already raised; and I hope it will be at work in ten days, at most.

One gondola is finished at Skenesborough, and a second is already planking; and I hope, if my health permit me, when I return from the westward to build one every six days.

As soon as I can find troops or other men to complete the road from Fort Edward to Cheshire's, I shall set them about it.

There are now as many batteaus employed on Hudson's River as are equal to all the provisions and stores that will be sent up.

I rejoice, my dear General, in the fair prospect I have of getting the better of my disorder, as every man's service is now wanted; and be so good as to assure Congress that I shall do my best endeavours to carry every wish of theirs and yours into execution.

I am, dear sir, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Extract of a Letter from Colonel Wynkoop to General Schuyler, dated Ticonderoga, June 20, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours of the 17th instant, last evening, with a letter for General Sullivan, which I forwarded by express. Enclosed I send a return of part of my regiment and the strength of the garrison. The storehouse is full of provisions, and no men to send it off, the vessels not being come back, and I suppose detained by the commanding officer at St. Johns.

As provision is still coming, and my garrison very weak and lying on their arms at night, I beg the General will please to order up some assistance—shall prefer my own regiment, if convenient. It is very true that Captain Van Sandtvoort has enlisted nine men for three months; three of whom he has enlisted over again; his excuse is, that he did it in order to induce others; he says he discharged a man who found another in his place.

Three o'clock, June 21.—Just this moment arrived Colonel Duggan from Canada, who informs me that General Sullivan, with all his army, had retreated to Chambly, on Saturday last, and is supposed to be on his way to Isle-aux-Noix; and greatly doubt if he can be able to maintain his ground at all, as the enemy was in full pursuit of him. I shall send down all the boats that I can immediately, and Colonel Duggan will be the bearer of this, who will inform you of particulars. I am your humble servant,

CORNELIUS WYNKOOP.

JESSE RAYMOND TO COMMITTEE OF NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Norwalk, June 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour of the 22d instant we received last evening by Mr. Sears. In compliance with which, after the intelligence communicated to us by Mr. Sears, we this day called before us Mr. Bowden, from whom it was expected by Mr. Sears that discoveries of importance with respect to his Excellency General Washington's Life-Guards, and the destruction of the magazine, might be made, and put him under oath for that purpose, who declared he had never heard of any attempt to take away the life of the General, or any officer, or destroy the magazine, nor ever heard any one single word respecting the same. Mr. Bowden further declared, that he had frequently heard in company that some of the General's Life-Guards had deserted, and others were uneasy and weary of the service, and would go on board the men-of-war if they could, and that there were deserters on both sides. These reports he heard principally from those that are called Tories; and he further says these reports he heard in New-York and on Long-Island, openly and publicly, but could not point out any particular person, and never supposed there to be any secret or discovery. Mr. Bowden very willingly and readily answered to every question put to him. This is all the discovery we can make.

By order of the Committee.

Test:

JESSE RAYMOND, Clerk.

To Mr. Philip Livingston, John Jay, and Gouverneur Morris, New-York.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF THE UNITED COLONIES.

The observation is doubtless just, "that we should think twice before we speak once." A second thought and close examination of things and characters prevent many rash conclusions, remove groundless prejudices, and cure a multitude of mistakes. Some, by constitution, believe upon the slightest evidence. They will upon no account inquire into the probability of a fact. They are so unwilling to enter critically into a subject, that it little matters what is reported. Indeed, whether any believes it or not, they will, and spread it everywhere. Others resign themselves absolutely and forever to the judgment of some reputable person or other. Whether they can form an opinion, under the most advantageous circumstances, without assistance; whether, out of modesty, they rely more upon the wisdom of such a one—one, it may be, who never misjudged; or whether complaisance gets the ascendant of every consideration, I shall not inquire. Others, from a sceptical frame, question, dispute, and contradict everything. Let a particular fact be attended with all the marks of probability, they can, without any difficulty, find sufficient reason to disbelieve it. Let the evidence appear to the best advantage, and carry conviction to thousands upon every side, and produce correspondent exercises, they do not in the least perceive its force; or if they do, their stubbornness and obstinacy hinder a publick acknowledgment. Some are of a different cast in many respects. Prejudice operates so strongly, that all which comes from certain quarters they believe without any hesitation, but slow indeed of belief as to anything to the disadvantage of the cause they have espoused. They stand (to use a Latin expression) erectis auribus, to what turns in their favour. They can credit upon the least appearance of truth, without much more than the shadow of proof. They can discover five hundred reasons where no other can discover one; and where multitudes yield a ready assent, they see nothing at all. These observations apply to purpose in our present situation. Sorry I am to say that our union is not perfect. Dissenting voices are heard; secret enemies, in the garb of hearty friends, we meet with, but from time to time are happily discovering themselves. Thanks, in particular, to that Providence which watches over this land, for opening a most unfriendly plot, and preventing its execution. Such events not only awaken our attention, but unavoidably create jealousies and fears in every patriotick breast. When here and there, and all around us, this and that man, of whom we never before entertained the least suspicion, unexpectedly appears promoting the vilest cause; when our enemies prove to be of our own household; when we find them among our Committees of Inspection and Safety, in our Assemblies, in our Congresses, in our Councils and Armies, we are too easily led to question the veracity and integrity of every man. When we have been disappointed in our prospects, hopes, and alliances, in some instances, it is human nature to reprobate all, and withdraw our confidence from every one. Especially is this the case when our prospects are very fine, and our expectations highly promising. Does a General prove himself a villain at a time when the fate of an army was at stake, and the welfare of thousands depended upon a victory, we suspect all the officers at once. Does a member of the Congress become an advocate for oppression, or embarrass publick measures to the utmost of his power, it tends to bring all the Delegates of that particular Province, of which he is an unworthy member, into disrepute. Nor, indeed, does that Province escape the censure of hundreds, so extensive is the influence of a suspicion of publick characters. How necessary, then, that the deportment of our rulers should be unexceptionable. How should they exert themselves to remove prejudices from their constituents, and forever divest their conduct of any ambiguous and deceitful appearances. Not to add thoughts like these, for they are beside our purpose: There are two extremes into which we are always inclined to run in such a situation, to say nothing of other things connected in some measure with them. One is, to be deaf and callous to the best authenticated facts. The other is, to be ready to hear and credit every report to the disadvantage of persons of importance and reputation. Would any one inquire, "Where is the mischief of such behaviour? What undesirable consequence can it involve?" The answer is as obvious, much more so, than the question. We all wish for the approbation and assistance of our fellow creatures. A prospect of it animates and encourages the most vigorous exertions of our powers. Applause, we expect, should be bestowed upon a series of benevolent, useful, and noble actions. We, in short, demand it. If withheld by reason of some root of malice, envy, or falsehood springing up, we consider ourselves deprived of our undoubted right. We consider the unjust deprivation of a good name as a species of publick robbery. Were the publick treasures of a province robbed or embezzled, the Government would not suffer a greater evil than to have her good rulers held up as objects of general detestation and contempt. A further evil is, that it effectually cuts the sinews of diligence and faithfulness, and sometimes determines a person to be guilty of perfidy which before he would have blushed to think of. Another inconvenience is, that it checks many a rising genius, and proves an insuperable objection in the mind of those who are well qualified for some post. These are difficulties which attend one extreme; nor has the other a smaller retinue. When persons are under no restrictions—when they are not answerable for any part of their conduct—when no instances of misbehaviour, however frequent or notorious, are looked into and frowned upon, can we wonder that every species of vice should creep into a Senate and an Army? What can open a more effectual door for all the corrupt principles of the human heart to exert themselves without control? What can sooner put a period to the laudable exertions of the deserving than the undisturbed triumph of wickedness? What can sooner throw upon a bed of ease and of negligence than such inattention and criminal stupidity? These hints clearly show the importance and justify the propriety of avoiding both these extremes. It will be inquired, "Why all this at the present day? Was ever a people more happy, and better satisfied with their civil and military leaders? Was there ever less occasion to blame? Can the instance be produced when so few complaints filled our mouths and ears? Why so many cautions and directions? Wherefore should we erect a beacon for no valuable end?" Can we name the man or woman who is so little acquainted with what passes every day as not to notice and feel this suitability and necessity? Is not this Magistrate and that General suspected and vilified? Is not more than one in the Congress generally mentioned with dislike? Are not our enemies taking unwearied pains to discredit our best officers and Senators? And is this nothing? How long is it, pray, since a Washington and Lee were branded by the soldiery with many marks of disgrace? Happy for them, and not less so for us, their bitterest accusers are put to silence, and sunk into their former baseness. Not long since several Delegates of the Provinces were charged with cowardice, unfaithfulness, and apostacy. If this be true, why has not every one, from publick authority, a catalogue of their names, that he may never intrust sacred privileges in the hands of those who continually bow in the temple of mammon, and offer sacrifices upon the altar of ambition and pride? Until their constituents or the Congress discover and expose their baseness, forbear, my countrymen, to stab the vitals of the wonderful Constitution which the wisdom and piety of this Continent are forming. Forbear, for want of sufficient information, to destroy the influence and character of our ablest statesmen and bravest commanders. When evidence which will warrant a procedure and solid conclusion, appears against any one, let that man possess a station in which we all may be secure. Put it out of his reach to molest or injure us in the future execution of any beneficial plan.

It must be fresh in all our memories to what an unwarrantable height our suspicions and jealousies of the brave Spencer have arisen. Everybody has assumed a right, in every part of his military life, to arraign, judge, and condemn him. Without a hearing, without a summons, and legal proof, he is tried and found guilty. The man that cannot, for a kingdom, spell his own name and write an intelligible word, sustains the no small characters of an evidence, judge, and jury. Not a person we come across but gives his opinion with the same freedom and assurance that he would tell the plainest story in the world. "Had he been at the source of power, or had such a one, we should have seen a great alteration; this expedition would not have miscarried; that loss would never have been gained; supplies of ammunition and provisions would never have been thus neglected; the operations of war would have been carried on with much more despatch; the enemies in that department would have been wholly crushed; in one word, all Canada would have been in our possession, the natives conciliated, and the other inhabitants awed into absolute submission." Thus talk the illiterate crowd at the distance of two or three hundred miles from the seat of the war. And thus they blast the purposes and views of a man who at present bears an unblemished character; who has never failed in any the least article of duty; who won the affection of every worthy officer and uncorrupted friend to his country; and who, in all his letters to our ever-to-be-remembered Governour, breathes in the greatest variety of undisguised expressions a soul as sincere as it is flaming in the cause of America. This is the man we kill by our groundless fears and surmises; one who has sat up late, rose early, eat the bread of carefulness, and almost exhausted his life for our good. Is this a reward for his labours? Will this attach him the more firmly to our system of politicks, and encourage his heart to persevere, and close his days in the field of battle? Will this nerve his arm with strength, inspire his soul with courage, and enliven his addresses with an irresistible pathos? Will he speak and act with that dignity and firmness which an assurance that he lives in the love and esteem of thousands enables one ever to do? These things will never be imagined. In addition to the falsehoods which have been mentioned, our enemies have ranked him among a number of men that are an eternal disgrace to the land that gave them birth; and, as if they could not render him vile enough, he is charged with being the author of a plan to desolate his own country with fire and sword. We rejoice that his conduct is uniform and unexceptionable—that no instance of it affords any evidence of his villany. The heart lies open to omniscience. We must be let into the depth of it by his actions. His connexions, indisposition, and our fruitless attempts to subdue the northern part, opened a door for the remote suspicion, or at least there was room for a corrupt heart to improve them to his disadvantage. The motive in the last instance was obvious. Aware of how much importance it was to plead the authority and assistance of so respectable a person, how beneficial to their design and fatal to his reputation, they had the impudence to enroll him among them. And some, weak as they are bad, have drunk in the report, and talked of it with a pretty deal of freedom. If futurity convicts him, the past time has not, I am certain. I might add to these he who fell upon the Heights of Abraham, and sacrificed numberless blessings for our deliverance. The dead, we should have expected, might sleep undisturbed in their tombs. When "they hear not the voice of their oppressor," forbid it that the tongue of the slanderer should not cease.

I shall close this paper with two observations, which may no trials we may yet pass through obliterate. The first is, never believe and spread reports to the prejudice and ruin of men in any publick office before we have sufficient proof of their unworthy behaviour. It is even dangerous to talk much upon such a subject in private, or to bring it often into the view of the mind. By thinking and speaking frequently upon defamatory stories, we begin, by degrees, to slide into the belief of them. More dangerous is it fully to give in to them and spread them wherever we go. I look upon the man that acts such a part as a worse enemy to society than he that communicates the most infectious disease. A character is good until it legally and rationally appears otherwise. When such evidence is afforded as the nature of the case demands, as our own judgment assures us is convincing, and all nations have deemed satisfactory, then we may with safety prosecute and punish the offenders. The other observation I would make is, that it becomes us to treat the characters of distinguished persons with candour; throw a mantle over trifling foibles; bury in the grave a little mistake; put the most favourable construction upon those instances of conduct which are not in themselves highly barefaced; drop all prejudice while we attend to such delicate points; silence the invidious and malicious; reward liberally the meritorious; and let us act throughout so that we may gain the approbation of conscience, the present age, and posterity.

Newport, June 24, 1776.

Captain Campbell, lately from Antigua, via St. Eustatia, informs that, a little before he left Antigua, a vessel from Georgia, belonging to Mr. Samuel Brenton, of this place, was seized there by a man-of-war, with all her cargo, consisting of lumber, indigo, &c. Mr. Brenton, then present, urged his being a friend to Government as a reason for his being favoured; but the Admiral told him the act of Parliament by which he was seized, made no provision for friends to Government! He then pleaded the same to the Marshal for being indulged in buying the indigo at a moderate price; but the Marshal said it was difficult to determine who were friends to Government, or to that purport, and that he should buy the indigo himself to ship to England. Just so would all American Tories fare, should this country be conquered agreeable to their wishes; but be assured, the sun, moon and stars shall fall, the ocean cease to roll, and all nature change its course, before a few English, Scotch and German slaves shall conquer this vast Continent.

E. W. STANHOPE TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Northampton Jail, June 24, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Tracy, of Newburyport, having wrote to the gentlemen prisoners here, requesting them to write to the Admiral, in hopes that it will have some weight in procuring an exchange of prisoners, (which no doubt it will,) I have therefore written to you, enclosing my letter to the Admiral in one to Mr. Tracy, which I will beg the favour of you to forward to Newbury.

Mr. Tracy likewise says that it was their intent to sail as soon as possible, which makes me anxious for the despatch of my letter, lest I should lose the conveyance, which I esteem a matter of consequence, as well for the weight of procuring an exchange, as for getting myself included in the cartel; and, indeed, I know nothing so conducive to obtaining it as one of us going in the flag of truce; and if that should meet with your concurrence, I believe my rank, particularly in private life as well as publick, would tend greatly to facilitate it; and could I meet with your permission, I would be bound under any bond or security you may be pleased to lay me under on that head, and I shall esteem myself your much obliged and obedient humble servant,

E. W. STANHOPE.

To the Hon. the President of the Council, Watertown.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

The whole strength of Britain and her allies is now employed in the destruction of America. Fleets and armies, and every engine of fraud and violence that the sophistry of hell can invent, are prepared to execute the horrid plan. The work is already begun, and a few days will unfold the infernal design to the weakest sight. The King of England delights in blood, yea, thirsteth for the blood of America. Hessians, Hanoverians, Brunswickers, Canadians, Indians, Negroes, Regulars, and Tories, are invited to the carnage. This is no fiction, but an awful reality; not the production of a delirium, but substantial matter of fact. The tyrant of Britain hath sold himself to work wickedness, and the blood of Naboth must be shed, that the vineyard may be peaceably possessed. The plan is ripe for execution, and begins to operate. Lift up your eyes, my countrymen, and see destruction, like a flood, pouring in upon you from every quarter, even from the north and the south, and from the east and the west. The decree has gone forth, and, as sure as you now exist, death is the portion of all that the power of Britain can overcome. Rouse up, therefore, and arm yourselves for the encounter; gird on the harness, and let him that hath no sword sell his garment and buy one. Remember that the salvation of your country depends on your present exertion; and that this summer will decide the fate of America. Don't boggle at the expense, when your all is at stake. If we conquer, the vacant lands and confiscations will abundantly repay the expense of the war; and if we overcome, our all is gone, and it matters not how much we expend in the contest. Let us, therefore, give every encouragement to those who go forth to battle and jeopard their lives in the high places of the field, being assured that if the ardour of the soldiery is suppressed, the cause will inevitably sink, and that he who, at this season, cavils at the charge, and wastes the precious time in idle harangues on trivial matters, betrays a very weak or wicked mind, and, like Nero, would have fiddled while Rome was burning.

ARMATUS.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL HALL.

[No. 42.]

Annapolis, June 25, 1776.

SIR: Captain Montagu, of the Fowey ship of war, having broken the truce, by receiving a number of servants belonging to the good people of this Province, and refusing to deliver them on demand made by a flag sent for that purpose, we are directed by the Convention to order part of your battalion to keep guard in the most proper places, from the mouth of South River to the mouth of Fishing Creek, to repel any violence which may be offered by the said vessel or her tenders, as also to prevent servants or slaves making their escape from their masters. You will, therefore, take care to station at the most convenient places on that coast such of your Militia, well armed, and provided with ammunition, as can be prudently spared for the said purposes, and that you continue to keep guard on that station until the above vessel shall have sailed down the bay.

We are, &c.

To Colonels Hall and Weems, respectively.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN BEALL.

Annapolis, June 25, 1776.

SIR: As we are apprehensive that the ship of war on her return down the bay may make some attempt to land, either to procure provisions or make depredations, we have, therefore, sent you forty-three muskets and seventeen rifles, in good order, that you may be enabled to defeat any such designs. You will, by the return of the cart, send us such of the arms as you now have that are so defective and bad that cannot be used. We imagine that these muskets and rifles are more than you will want at Drum Point, and that the overplus you will send to Captain Thomas. We expect that arms arrived at Port Tobacco, for the troops stationed there, before this time.

We are, &c.

To Captain Rezin Beall.

ANNAPOLIS (MARYLAND) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Observation, Annapolis, }
June 25, 1776. }

William Wallen, of this city, was brought before this Committee, in consequence of an order given to Captain James Tootell, of this day, for apprehending said Wallen, as having committed an offence of a most dangerous nature:

Resolved, That Captain Tootell do carry said Wallen to the Council of Safety, now sitting; and that the proceedings of the Committee of Calvert County, which were sent to this Committee, and in pursuance whereof the said Wallen was taken into custody, be sent to the said Council.

A true copy of the proceedings:

STEPHEN STEWARD.

ROBERT ALEXANDER TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

Newington, June 25, 1776.

SIR: The express delivered me this morning a letter from Mr. Duwall, requiring my attendance in Convention. Had my health permitted, I should have been at Annapolis the first of the meeting; but the wound in my ankle has hitherto and still continues to disable me. Since last Sunday week I have not been out of my house, and it is with difficulty and great pain I can even walk from one room to another.

In this situation, I trust my absence will be thought excusable, for, credit me, sir, when I assure you, that duty to my constituents and inclination both prompt me to join in the counsels of my country, and more especially at this very interesting period.

With respect for the Convention, and personal esteem for yourself, I am your Honour's most obedient servant,

ROBERT ALEXANDER.

To the President of the Maryland Convention.

JOHN RODGERS TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, June 25, 1776.

SIR: Since writing the enclosed the post arrived from York, and brought a letter from General Sullivan to the Congress, giving a melancholy account of another unfortunate event in Canada. General Thompson, who was ordered, with a party of two thousand men, to dislodge the English forces at the Three Rivers, was attacked by General Burgoyne and totally routed. Thompson, and several others, are taken prisoners, and about one hundred and fifty of our men killed; the rest returned to the Sorel. The letter says further (I think) Arnold had abandoned Montreal; and that, upon the whole, our affairs in Canada bear a most unpromising aspect.

This bad news is, in some measure, counterbalanced by more agreeable intelligence from Boston. The publick papers from thence inform us that the English ships of war are all driven away from the Boston harbour; and private letters say that five transports, with Scotch troops, have been taken lately and carried into the eastern ports. The post is just setting off, and will not allow me to be more particular. We shall, by the next opportunity, transmit to you a more full and satisfactory account.

A report prevails here, which is believed to be true, that a most diabolical plot to assassinate the General at York, blow up the magazine, and spike the cannon, has lately been discovered. Many people, it is said, have been thrown into prison, and some remain under guard; among the rest is the Mayor of the city. What with external and internal enemies, we fancy we shall very shortly have our hands full of business.

We are, sir, with great esteem, your most obedient servant,

J. RODGERS.

To the Honourable Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of the Maryland Convention.

GEORGE CLINTON TO JOHN MCKEESON.

Philadelphia, June 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On Friday last the Congress passed a resolve for raising a regiment of Continental troops in our Colony; and although the augmentation of the Army appeared necessary, yet the raising a whole regiment in the Colony of New-York at this time might not, perhaps, have been ordered, were it not with a view of providing for those officers who have much merit from re-engaging in the service of their country last fall, after the surrender of Montreal, and continuing through a most fatiguing and dangerous campaign in Canada during the winter. Major Dubois is highly recommended to Congress, as well by the General Officers as the Committee who lately returned from Canada, (as I am informed,) and I doubt not he will be appointed Colonel of the regiment, especially as rank as well as merit entitle him to it. The Congress having heretofore left the appointment or recommendation of the officers of new levies with the Provincial Congress in which the same are raised, and being therefore loath now to break through this rule, is (I am informed) the only reason why the officers to this regiment are not appointed here. It will be wise, therefore, to take special care to make the appointments so as to give no just cause of complaint, by appointing the officers according to the rank they bear in the arrangement made by General Montgomery at Montreal, on their re-engaging in the service till the 15th of April ultimo, except where real and extraordinary merit, or the contrary, may warrant a deviation from this general rule. Enclosed I send you the arrangement made by General Montgomery of the officers of my brother's regiment, and have noted such as are already provided for in the regiment to be recruited in Canada by Colonel Nicolson. I also enclose you a list of the officers in Colonel Nicolson's Regiment, as those who are already provided for by appointment in that regiment can have no pretensions to any appointment or promotion in this, they having been provided for while it was uncertain whether any more troops would have been raised. General Montgomery's faith to his officers also re-engaged in the service at Montreal, will not be kept, unless the appointments in this regiment are made agreeable to the arrangement, as thereby many officers acquired new and higher rank in their respective regiments than what they had by the printed arrangement made by Congress, and by taking up the old one might do injustice to those who the Congress have in view more particularly to provide for. Captain Bruyn, I believe, is the next oldest Captain who continued in Canada, and, from my brother's character of him, well deserves the post which his rank will entitle him to. He is a young man of education and fortune, and bears an unblemished character. I wish and believe young Platt may be properly provided for in this regiment. He was with Major Dubois and Captain Bruyn at Point La Caile, at the engagement between our people and a number of Canadians, in which the latter were defeated, and behaved well, as Major Dubois can testify.

We have just received the disagreeable intelligence from Canada of the defeat of part of our Army under General Thompson, and of his being taken, &c., &c., which you must have had before it reached us. We seem unfortunate in that quarter; but we must learn to bear the sound of bad as well as good news. Indeed it would be unreasonable to expect the chance of war always in our favour.

We have nothing new here worth communicating; whenever we have you may expect to hear from me. I mean this scroll for my friends Treadwell and Hubbel, as well as you, not having time to write to either of them. My best compliments to them; and believe me to be yours most affectionately,

GEORGE CLINTON.

To John McKesson, Esq.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, June 25, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 21st instant by Mr. Bennett, with the enclosure, were duly received and laid before Congress, as you will perceive by the enclosed resolves, to which I beg leave to request your attention.

Although the Commissioners have undoubtedly mistaken the intention of Congress, yet the terms in which the resolve is conceived, viz: "That the General be empowered to employ in Canada a number of Indians, not exceeding two thousand," may, at first view, seem to confine their employment to the limits of that Province, and to give a latitude of construction as to the place in which they are to be raised; and in this sense they must have been understood by General Schuyler and the other Commissioners. I am, however, to request you will give orders to have a stop put to raising the Mohegan and Stockbridge Indians as soon as possible. I shall write Governour Trumbull to the same purpose.

The conduct of the Quartermaster-General in detaining the tents sent from this place to Massachusetts-Bay is a stretch of office which, though it may be well meant, is certainly a very extraordinary one. You will, therefore, be pleased to order them to be delivered up, and forwarded to the Massachusetts-Bay as soon as possible.

The other resolves, herewith transmitted, calculated to suppress insurrections and to promote good order and obedience to laws in the United Colonies, are so full and explicit that I need not enlarge. It is sufficient to observe, that internal convulsions do always extremely weaken the force and springs of Government, and must necessarily render its operations against foreign enemies less vigorous and decisive.

Application having been made to Congress with regard to victualling the flying camp, I am directed to request you will inform them what is the cost of a ration as furnished by the Commissary-General.

The several matters in your letters are before a Committee. The proposal respecting a troop of horse is liked; and as soon as the Committee bring in their report, and it is considered, you shall be made acquainted with the result.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Philadelphia, June 25, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: The Congress being informed, by letter from General Washington, that General Schuyler and the other Commissioners for Indian Affairs had come to a determination of taking into Continental pay the Mohegans and Stockbridge Indians, I am directed by Congress to request you will give orders to have a stop put to raising them as soon as possible; and that no proceedings be had by the Commissioners till the further direction of Congress.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Philadelphia, June 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since my last of the 21st instant, I have nothing further in charge from Congress except the enclosed resolves, which are so full and explicit that I need not enlarge. You will perceive they are calculated to prevent insurrections, and to introduce good order and obedience to laws throughout the United Colonies—objects of the greatest importance in our present situation, since all internal convulsions, while they weaken the force and springs of Government, must necessarily render its operations against foreign enemies less vigorous and decisive.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Convention of New-Hampshire.

(Same to the Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay, Assembly of Rhode-Island, the Assembly of Connecticut, and to the Convention of New-York.)

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Philadelphia, June 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress have this day come to the enclosed resolves, which I have the honour of transmitting in obedience to their commands.

You will there find they have come to a resolution to augment the number of men destined for Canada four thousand. I am therefore to request you will send immediately one regiment of your Militia by way of augmentation of the troops destined for that department; and at the same time earnestly to entreat you to be expeditious in raising and equipping your troops, and to provide them with clothes, tents, and other necessary camp equipage, for which the United Colonies will engage to reimburse you.

In my letter of the 4th instant, in which were enclosed sundry resolves of Congress with regard to your sending a part of your Militia into Canada, I took the liberty of suggesting everything that occurred to urge you to a speedy compliance with the same. If the complexion of our affairs in that quarter was disagreeable at that time, it has since altered extremely, and become much more alarming.

The arrival of General Burgoyne with a large reinforcement, the defeat of General Thompson with the troops under his command, and his being made prisoner, are so many striking circumstances that render it absolutely necessary to be more expeditious in our preparations for the defence of that Province, as well as to increase our force there. The present is not a time for delay. Everything we have a right to expect from that quarter depends upon expedition. Without it, we shall inevitably be ruined. Remember your own safety and the security of Canada are exactly one and the same thing. If our enemies are not opposed at a distance, we must engage them in our borders. One idea should be forever on our minds—that, in the conduct of political affairs, every moment is precious. A week, a day, even an hour, has often proved decisive; and by an attention thereto, the liberties of a country have either been established or destroyed forever.

I must repeat again to you that, in all human probability, the fate of America will be determined the ensuing campaign. Much depends on your Colony. I cannot, therefore, help once more pressing you to be expeditious in equipping and sending forward your troops. As an additional encouragement, the Congress have resolved that a bounty of ten dollars be given every soldier who shall enlist for three years.

May the Great Disposer of all human events animate and guide your councils, and enable you so to determine, that you may not only establish your own temporal peace and happiness, but those of your posterity. Forgive this passionate language, I am unable to restrain it, it is the language of the heart.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Convention of New-Hampshire.

(Same to the Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay, and the Assembly of Connecticut.)

ELBRIDGE GERRY TO JAMES WARREN.

Philadelphia, June 25, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: I am favoured with your very agreeable letter of the 10th of June, and am in hopes Congress will soon render it unnecessary to take further measures preparatory to the Declaration of Independence. New-Jersey has appointed five new Delegates, and instructed them to vote in favour of the question; and it appears to me there is not even a doubt of any Colony on the continent, except New-York and Maryland. These will not impede us a moment. I do not affirm that either of these are of the neuter gender; but on the other hand am persuaded the people are in favour of a total and final separation, and will support the measure, even if the Conventions and Delegates of those Colonies vote against it.

Since my first arrival in this city, the New-England Delegates have been in a continual war with the advocates of Proprietary interests in Congress and this Colony. These are they who are most in the way of the measures we have proposed; but I think the contest is pretty nearly at an end, and am persuaded that the people of this and the middle Colonies have a clearer view of their interests, and will use their endeavours to eradicate the Ministerial influence of Governours, Proprietors, and Jacobites, and that they now more confide in the politicks of the New-England Colonies than they ever did in those of their hitherto unequal Governments. Yours, as ever,

ELBRIDGE GERRY.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM PHILADELPHIA, DATED JUNE 25, 1776.

Captain Speake, of Virginia, is arrived at Chincoteague with six thousand pounds of powder, and twelve thousand pounds of brimstone, some fire-arms, &c. The Kingfisher brought a schooner into the road, where she burnt her. By last accounts from the Capes, the enemy's ships were all on a cruise along the coast. Captain Walker, of Wilmington, who was taken in a brig, is sent in the same brig to Halifax. Colonel Miles writes that he imagines he shall have to disarm the Tories in Sussex. The Deputies in Conference, on Sunday last, took the sense of the Members present on Independence, when every man rose to show his assent to the same, and they have since drawn up a declaration of their sentiments in favour of Independence, which they will deliver to Congress. I am just told the schooner which was burnt belonged to Egg-Harbour.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO HENRY BROOMFIELD.

New-York, June 25, 1776.

SIR: The honourable Congress having determined a valuation shall be made of the ordnance stores taken last fall by Captain Manly, and directed me to appoint a person on behalf of the continent to do it in conjunction with one to be chosen by Captain Manly, as you will perceive by the enclosed resolve, I must request the favour of you to undertake the business. I have transmitted the original invoice to Major-General Ward, upon which you are to act. It will be necessary to qualify, as the resolve directs, and after the estimate is made, to annex it to the invoice under your hand. General Ward will forward it to me when it is finished. And praying your excuse for this trouble and liberty, I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Mr. Henry Broomfield.

(A similar letter sent to Commodore Manly.)

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL JAMES CLINTON.

New-York, June 25, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 20th instant, and in answer thereto request you to draw out of your regiment all the armourers in it, and set them immediately to work. They will receive the same pay as the armourers here do under the like circumstances. You must endeavour to engage the one you mention upon the same terms that are given here; but if you cannot do better, you must continue him on those contained in your letter.

In respect to keeping two of the Commissioners, if they are absolutely necessary, it must be done, till you are provided with an Engineer, or so long as they may be wanted. Will not one be sufficient? If it will, two need not be retained.

It being impossible to procure a sufficient number of tents for the whole Army, it will be necessary for you to procure a quantity of thin boards, which you must have put up in a close manner, to answer the purpose. This is now doing for General Scott's Militia brigade, and will do exceedingly well.

I cannot but consider the pay of the carpenters enormous and extravagant; nor can I suggest any good reason why they should receive more than those employed here; some of which (for instance, Captain Bruen's Company, from the Jerseys) are complete workmen, and can execute almost any kind of work in the best manner. I desire you will endeavour to lessen their pay, and to prevail on them to receive no more than what is given here.

The pay-rolls will be settled by the Provincial Congress up to the last of April inclusive, as has been done with the other troops raised in this Colony. The abstracts after that time will be taken in and paid by me as others are.

I observe by the returns, that your regiment is still greatly deficient in arms, which is a circumstance highly distressing at this time. As I have no prospect of getting any that I know of, I request you to place no dependance on me for a supply, and that you will use every possible method you can to procure what you want from the country people, or wheresoever they can be had by purchasing.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel James Clinton, Fort Constitution.

P. S. The powder of the Province in your hands, and which is made up in cartridges, you must not spare by any means; but repay the quantity of it out of the Continental Army.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL BAYLEY.

New-York, June 25, 1776.

SIR: I this morning received yours of the 28th ultimo, and approve the measures you had adopted for opening the road to St. Johns, which may be still proper to pursue; but as our Army in Canada, since their retreat from Quebeck, has met with further misfortunes, and there is the strongest reason to believe they will be obliged to abandon the possession of that country, if they have not already done it, I would advise you to consider well the advantages and disadvantages that will result from completing the work. If the enemy will be thereby afforded an easy pass to make incursions into our Colonies, and to commit depredations, and the advantages we shall derive from it will not greatly overbalance these inconveniences, it will be improper to carry it on.

The change which has taken place in our affairs in that quarter may render what was extremely right to be done some time ago, very inexpedient and unadvisable now. As you are well acquainted with the country through which the communication was designed to be made, and I am not, I shall submit the propriety of completing it to you, under the circumstances I have mentioned, not meaning to direct you to one thing or another.

I presume you received my letter of the 29th of April, and the two hundred and fifty pounds I sent by Mr. Wallace. You have not mentioned it.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Jacob Bayley, Bulls-Head.

DR. MORGAN TO SAMUEL ADAMS.

New-York, June 25, 1776.

SIR: The state of the Army in Canada, according to Dr. Lind's account, (who is just arrived from thence, by order of General Sullivan, for a supply of medicines,) is truly deplorable. I have seen no return of the sick, but he assures me that, in the beginning of this month, there were no less than eighteen hundred men down with the small-pox, and the total of sick and unfit for duty amounted to three thousand three hundred men; and he says they have no medicines. Such a report is scarcely credible; but you may learn the particulars yourself from him, as he intends going to Philadelphia.

General Gates sets out to-morrow to take the command of the Army in Canada. Dr. Potts will accompany him. I have therefore given orders to supply him from the General Hospital with a large chest of such medicines as I can best spare, and which can be got ready to-morrow before his departure. Upon looking into Dr. Potts's commission, I find he is appointed Physician and Surgeon in the Department of Canada; but whether it be of a regiment or in the Hospital, is not specified; nor does it show whether it is the intention of Congress to vest him with the power of a Director in the General Hospital; nor can I learn what appointment Dr. Stringer has, or what is the nature of his commission.

From all I am able to learn, everything in the Medical Department in Canada displays one scene of confusion and anarchy; nor have the Congress taken upon itself to establish, or vested any person whatever with a power sufficient to establish, a General Hospital in Canada.

The Congress cannot, in my humble opinion, be too speedy in determining what steps are to be taken for this purpose, and for settling a due subordination amongst the Surgeons there. It would be of particular use that the intentions of Congress were made known in respect to Dr. Stringer and Dr. Potts, whether either of them is to be considered as Director, by appointment of Congress, and which of them; or whether they are both to be looked upon as Surgeons depending on, and acting by instructions from me. I have never seen Dr. Stringer's commission. In either case they will require more help than they have at present; and in the latter, I suppose I ought to have the appointment of three or four more Hospital Surgeons, an Apothecary, and a sufficiency of mates in that department, without diminishing the number I have allowed me for the Army at New-York, as I have none here that are superfluous. Other officers, as a Storekeeper, Steward, and Matron, are also wanted in Canada, with nurses and occasional labourers. Whatever is determined on in respect to these matters, I should be glad to know immediately; till then, my hands are tied up, and the Army suffering for want of help.

I am not sure that our disgrace and misfortunes in Canada are not owing, in a great measure, to the shameful proceedings of the Surgeons in spreading the small-pox, by inoculation, amongst the soldiery, in the face of the enemy. Instead of inoculating the soldiery under like circumstances before Boston, General Washington, upon my representation, continued to keep in pay a Surgeon and Mate to attend all that fell ill of the small-pox. A Hospital was fixed for their reception only, in a retired place, and a guard set round it, and all communication between it and the Army was cut off; and so soon as any one was seized with the infection, of whatever rank, he was sent to the small-pox Hospital. By this means every inconvenience arising from the appearance of the small-pox was prevented, and the Army effectually secured from danger from that quarter.

Had there been a General Hospital in Canada there would have been better order, and some subordination observed, which is now wholly wanting; and it is to be feared that whilst the Congress, occupied in a multiplicity of weighty concerns, can proceed but slowly on this matter, the opportunity may be lost. Rather than postpone, however, so important a concern, would it not be right to place full confidence and power in a proper person capable to arrange these matters as they ought to be, with ample authority for the purpose, rather than suffer a loss of men, to the discouragement of the whole Army, for want of a due provision being made for the sick and wounded?

If the Congress will fix on the means and manner of establishing a General Hospital at Canada, it will ease me of much trouble; but if they are not at leisure, or not sufficiently acquainted with what is the proper manner, and will order me to do it for them, giving me such power as they think adequate, I will do the best I can to effect this desirable end immediately. Excuse, sir, my dwelling so earnestly on this subject; it is of the utmost consequence to the service, and delays are dangerous. I cannot expect to receive instructions on this matter from General Washington; he supposes that I understand the affairs of this department, and relies wholly on me for everything which relates to it. But I neither durst nor will I presume to meddle in affairs out of my province, or that are beyond the sphere in which I suppose I was designed originally by Congress to move. Such, I imagine, is the arrangement of Hospital affairs in Canada, and the undertaking to supply the Surgeons there with what is necessary for a General Hospital, without fresh instructions or more ample power than I now have, either from the Congress or Commander-in-Chief, as my commission directs me to look to them for orders.

I wait impatiently for an order from Congress to empower me to demand such a proportion of the Continental medicines left in the care of Messrs. De Lancey & Smith, as they may think fit to allot for this department. In determining that proportion, they will please to consider (if we can trust to Dr. Lind's account) that there is not an article of medicine in Canada in the hands of any surgeon on that expedition.

June 26, 1776.—Since writing the above, Dr. Potts having received a supply of medicines from the General Hospital store, Dr. Lind has set off with General Gates and him for Canada.

I remain, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN MORGAN.

To the Honourable Samuel Adams, Esq., Member of the Medical Committee of Congress.

ADRIAN ONDERDONK TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

In Committee for the District of Cow-Neck, Great-Neck, &c., }
June 25, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: Whereas a vacancy has happened in the officers of the Militia Company of this District by the promotion of Captain Sands to the rank of Colonel: This is to certify that the following gentlemen having signed the General Association, and being duly elected as officers of the Militia Company in this District, (in room of those promoted,) agreeable to the recommendation of the honourable Provincial Congress of this Colony, we do hereby return and recommend them accordingly for their commissions, viz: Thomas Mitchell, Captain, Aspenwall Cornwall, First Lieutenant, Oliver Lawrence, Second Lieutenant.

Signed by order of the Committee:

ADRIAN ONDERDONK, Dep. Chairman.

Attest: JOHN HARMER, Clerk.

To the Hon. Provincial Congress of New-York.

DUTCHESS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Dutchess County, }
June 25, 1776. }

Resolved, That William Clark be recommended to the Provincial Congress for the commission of Captain in the stead of Captain Darling, already in the service.

Resolved, That Charles Graham be recommended for the commission of Lieutenant in the First Company, and Theodorus Brett for the commission of Lieutenant in the Third Company in the same corps.

Resolved, That Reuben Hopkins be appointed Muster-master for Captain Smith's Company, and Dr. Carey for Captain Clark's Company.

August 6, 1776.—Lieutenant Graham having resigned his commission in Captain Smith's Company, Resolved, That Stephen Haight be recommended for the above commission.

Extract from the Minutes:

JESSE OAKLEY, Secretary.

COMMITTEE OF HANOVER PRECINCT, ULSTER COUNTY, NEW-YORK.

At a meeting of the Committee of Hanover Precinct, at the house of Widow Crist, on Tuesday, the 25th of this instant, June, 1776, William Cross Chairman :

Resolved, 1st, That John Barkly and James Huston do attend Captain Vancuran's Company on the 27th of this instant, June.

And they attended accordingly, when the Company elected James Munnell, Sen., Second Lieutenant, and John Barber Ensign, agreeably to the orders of the Provincial Congress.

Attest :

WILLIAM CROSS, Chairman.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, June 25, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL : About twelve last night General Arnold arrived here. Our Army has been under the necessity of leaving the inhabited part of Canada and retreating to Isle-aux-Noix, which has been happily effected without loss of men, and only nine batteaus and three pieces of cannon left behind. The sick are coming on to Crown Point. General Sullivan, with the remainder, was at Isle-aux-Noix on the 19th, and intended to remain there until he received orders from General Washington or me to retire further south, although I believe he will be obliged to leave it either by his own Army or that of the enemy. I have recommended a farther retreat to Point-au-Fer or Isle-la-Motte, both because it was the unanimous opinion of a Council of War and the wish of all the officers, who, General Arnold informs me, have addressed him upon the occasion, and because I know it will not be a difficult matter for the enemy to occupy both shores on this side of him, for six miles, and prevent, if not a retreat, at least a supply of provisions.

I wish you to hasten up with all possible despatch, that we may advise together on the most eligible methods to be pursued to prevent an increase of our misfortunes in this unlucky quarter. I have a very confident hope that our naval superiority will prevent the enemy's crossing Lake Champlain; and although they will exert themselves in building vessels of force, yet I think we can outbuild them.

I shall this day send to Connecticut and the Massachusetts for ship-carpenters, as we cannot be supplied with any from New-York.

Adieu, my dear General, and believe me, with every friendly and affectionate wish, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable General Gates.

Be so good as to take a bed with me, that, whilst you remain, we may be as much together as possible.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, June 25, 1776.

SIR: General Sullivan, with our Northern Army, is now at Isle-aux-Noix, to which place he retired on the 18th instant, having conducted his retreat from the Sorel in such a manner as not to lose a man, and only nine batteaus, with three pieces of cannon. For particulars, as I am crowded with business, permit me to refer you to Mr. Trumbull, who will write you by the bearer. We have happily such a naval superiority on Lake Champlain that I have a confident hope the enemy will not appear upon it this campaign, especially as our strength in that way is increasing by the addition of gondolas, two of which are nearly finished. Congress has ordered that we should by all means keep the navigation of that Lake to ourselves; I must, therefore, employ more ship-carpenters, and should be glad if your Honour would order some proper persons to engage two companies of twenty-five each. The wages will be the same as those receive that are now employed in the publick service; and I wish they should enter into a similar agreement, observing that their pay will commence from the time they respectively leave home, and allowing at the rate of one day for every twenty miles for coming to or returning from Albany; from thence the same as those now employed. What that is, your Honour will see by the enclosed, which is a copy of my agreement with one of the companies now employed. As they must necessarily provide themselves with provisions during their march, I will allow them one-third of a dollar per day until they arrive at Albany; and as every species of this allowance cannot at all times be got, the difference will be paid at the end of the campaign; and therefore they will give receipts to the Commissaries for the quantity of each specie they may receive.

Sundry persons are prisoners here—some from Canada, and others from Tryon County. The Committee of this place think it dangerous that they should remain in it, and have requested me to move them elsewhere. I have ordered them to your Colony. They are to leave this to-morrow, by way of Dutchess County, and I have directed their route to Hartford. Permit me to beg your Honour to give the necessary directions for their future residence. A list of the names is enclosed. Sergeant Brown, of the Artillery, I am informed by General Arnold and others, attempted to escape into Quebeck. He, I think, ought to be closely confined for his breach of promise.

Be so good, sir, as to favour me with a line in answer by the bearer, and advise me, if you possibly can, when you guess the carpenters (if any) may reach Albany.

I am, dear sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable Governour Trumbull.

ALBANY COMMITTEE.

Albany Committee-Chamber, June 13, 1776.

Mr. Rensselaer made the following motion, and was seconded :

Whereas our constituents have deemed Abraham C. Cuyler, Henry Cuyler, Stephen De Lancey, John Monier, John Duncan, Lieutenant McDonald, and Benjamin Hilton, notoriously disaffected to the measures pursued by the friends to American liberty, and in consequence thereof imprisoned them, and instructed us to remove them out of this County: As one of their Representatives, I move that the said persons above-mentioned be removed, under guard, to Hartford, in Connecticut; and that a letter be written to his Honour Governour Trumbull, requesting him to dispose of them in his Colony, as he shall think proper; and that the said persons pay all the expenses which have or may be incurred by reason of their confinement, removal, and maintenance.

Upon which debates arising, and the question being put, resolved in the affirmative.

Extract from the Minutes :

MAT. VISSCHER, Secretary.

List of Charges against the persons sent from this City to HARTFORD, in CONNECTICUT.

Abraham C. Cuyler is openly and avowedly countenancing of, and associating with, such persons as were suspected of being unfriendly to the American cause, without having regard to the rank or character of such persons, and frequently speaking in the most violent terms against the cause of America; amongst which he said the King's standard would be hoisted before the 1st day of June last past; it being asked who would hoist it, he answered it would be done, and rather than it should not be done, he would do it himself. At another time he mentioned that if twelve or fourteen of the ringleaders out of the town of Albany were hanged, matters would not be carried as they now are, to deprive the people of their just rights by their arbitrary proceedings; that he was a friend to the Constitution of Great Britain, and good order and Government; and that England never meant to distress America, and that we brought the war upon ourselves; and that the Americans were acting in open rebellion; and that many of the Congress had sinister views, and meant only to make their fortunes; and further he has by artful and insinuating speeches, endeavoured to depreciate the Continental currency. It would be needless to enumerate the many and scandalous speeches he has made use of against his bleeding country, as a further confirmation in our opinion of his unfriendly behaviour. He was apprised of almost every disaster that happened to our troops before the news came by express to us, and made mention of the manœuvres of the British Army, the intention of the Indians in going to Canada, and many other circumstances of a like kind, which have since come to pass. It has also appeared, from an affidavit of one Brando, of Catskill, that one Jansen, of the same place, asked him (Brando) whether he could keep a secret; and on being answered in the affirmative, Jansen asked said Brando to go with him in about five weeks thereafter to New-Windham, with a good gun and five days' provision; that there they would meet the King's troops; and that he (Jansen) had been to the Mayor's, in Albany, for advice; all which is a further evidence against him. The prisoners taken at St. Johns, the rabble from every part of the country, in his house found a safe asylum and welcome reception, provided they called themselves Tories. To recapitulate the many instances of baseness and perfidy practised, would be tiresome to us, as well as you to read.

Stephen De Lancey's continual intercourse with Sir John Johnson, and free and indecent speeches against the Congress, our Army, and America, are part of our charges against him. From the beginning of our troubles, his visiting Sir John Johnson was more frequent than formerly; any movements of our Army, or debates in Committee, (he being a member,) were matters talked in common at Johnson-Hall. Colonel Dayton's Regiment being ordered on a secret expedition, it was imagined they were going to Johnstown; Mr. De Lancey went to Mr. Schuyler's, at the Plats, hired a man to conduct him to Gunsalis, in Nistegaone, importuned said man to convey him to a place called Hermitage, the residence of John Duncan, from whence, it is more than probable, notice was sent Sir John, as an express from General Schuyler at that time to Sir John met young Duncan coming from Johnstown, and before Sir John opened General Schuyler's letter, asked the express how far the troops had advanced. His drinking damnation to the Congress, and calling himself a Tory, is notorious to many. His remarks about the marching and countermarching of our troops in this city in order to make a great show of a few men, is proved against him; his associating with the enemies of our country, paying no regard to circumstances or character, are too evident to need any commenting on. His frequent and ungentlemanlike remarks against the officers, and our Army in general, are well known amongst us. In short, his general conduct was such as rendered him obnoxious to every well-wisher to America in those parts.

John Duncan's dependance on Government in some measure rendered him suspicious. His harbouring Colonel Alan Maclean, when passing through this country, evidently showed his intention. His house appeared to us as a place of rendezvous for all our enemies. Mr. De Lancey's roundabout road of going to his house and communicating the news of Colonel Dayton's march to Sir John, (as appears in charge against Mr. De Lancey.) together with Captain Gray's letter herewith sent, are circumstances too glaring to pass unnoticed.

Benjamin Hilton, since his behaviour as set forth in the copy enclosed, has still persisted in a similar line of conduct, by associating with the enemies of our country, and frequently testifying his disapprobation of the measures we were pursuing; his drinking the King's health the 4th June last, can likewise be proved.

A true Return:

RICHARD VARICK,
Secretary to Major-General Schuyler.

Albany, June 25, 1776.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Albany, June 25, 1776.

SIR: A series of unfortunate events has attended our affairs in Canada. The last unsuccessful attempt of Colonel Thompson on the British troops at Trois Rivières is followed by the evacuation of that country. Our troops are now at Isle-aux-Noix, or perhaps still south of that. I hope, however, that, by increasing our naval strength on Lake Champlain, we shall be in a condition to prevent the enemy from penetrating into the country south and east of the Lake.

As ship-carpenters are not to be had here in sufficient numbers, I take the liberty to address you, entreating your aid to send, with a despatch equal to the necessity of the case, fifty of the best that can be speedily procured. The wages will be the same that is given to those now employed in the publick service, and I wish them to enter into similar agreements, and therefore enclose you a copy of one.* Their pay will commence from the time they respectively leave home, and allowing at the rate of one day for every twenty miles for coming to or returning from Albany; and as they must necessarily provide themselves with provisions on the way, I will allow them one-third of a dollar for every twenty miles, as above, until they arrive here; and as every species of their allowance cannot at all times be got, the difference will be paid at the end of the campaign, or when they are * Memorandum of an Agreement made the 6th day of JANUARY, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, by and between the Hon. PHILIP SCHUYLER, Esq., Major-General in, and commanding the forces of, the United Colonies in the Northern Department, of the first part, and JACOB HILTON, of the City of ALBANY, and the several persons whose names are hereunto subscribed and seals affixed, of the second part.

The said parties of the second part, each for himself, doth hereby promise and agree that they respectively will immediately repair to Fort George, Ticonderoga, and such other places in the Province of New-York or Quebeck as General Schuyler shall direct, and there employ themselves in building and constructing such and so many batteaus, other vessels, or buildings, as by the said General Schuyler, or such person or persons as shall be by him appointed to superintend the said business, shall be directed or required; that they will, during the time they shall be so employed, continue each day at their said work and employment between the time following, to wit: to begin their work at sunrise, and continue at it till sunset, excepting one hour at breakfast, and one and a half hour at dinner; that each of them shall and will find and provide tools and implements for the carrying on the said work; and that if any of the said parties of the second part shall leave the said work and go from the post where he shall be employed without the leave of the commanding officer of such post first obtained, the party so going shall forfeit all the wages which shall then be due to him.

In consideration whereof, General Schuyler promises and agrees that the said parties of the second part shall have and receive the wages following, viz: the said Jacob Hilton at and after the rate of ten shillings, and each and every other of the said parties of the second part after the rate of eight shillings, New-York currency, for each day they shall be in actual employment in and about constructing the said vessels or other buildings, and that over and above those sums they shall severally receive one-and-a-quarter pound of pork or beef, and one-and-a-half pound of flour per day, four pints of peas per week, one pint of molasses per week, and half a pint of rum per day; that the said wages shall commence on the day they leave Albany; that after completing the said work, they shall respectively be allowed two days for returning, if at Fort George, four days if at Ticonderoga, and for any farther distance from Albany at the rate of twenty miles per day. And it is further agreed by the said parties to these presents, that if it shall happen that any of the parties of the second part should be taken sick during the time which they shall be employed as above, they shall not be entitled to wages for the time they abstain from work by reason of sickness, unless the commanding officer of the post where they shall be stationed shall, on application to him made, refuse to discharge the persons taken sick, and then they shall be entitled to wages from the time of such refusal.

Sealed and delivered by the parties of the second part.

discharged. Be pleased, sir, to advise me by the return of the express if I may hope to have these men soon. I could wish the Militia from your Province to be at Skenesborough, or rather Ticonderoga, the soonest possible, as our Army is extremely weak.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your Honours' obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable President of the House of Assembly of the Massachusetts-Bay.

MATTHEW GRISWOLD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fairfield, June 25, 1776.

SIR: I have to acquaint your Excellency that the delay of discharging the pay-roll of the regiment under the command of Colonel G. S. Silliman, sent from this Colony in the late campaign to New-York, greatly obstructs the raising the new levies ordered by the late act of our Assembly. Many of the men in this part of the Colony, proper for the service, decline to enlist till they are paid their former wages. Colonel Talcott was ordered by our Assembly to receive the pay for this regiment, but inadvertently omitting to take the proper credentials, was able to obtain none but for his own regiment. Colonel Silliman has now sent Mr. Davenport, a young gentleman of known fidelity, to make a new application for the money. I suppose he is furnished with the proper credentials for that purpose. Hope he will succeed. Colonel Silliman is a worthy officer; has an appointment for the present service. His attention to give all possible despatch to the service prevents waiting on you personally.

I hope my zeal for the cause and the great distance from Governour Trumbull will excuse this freedom, from your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

MATTHEW GRISWOLD.

To His Excellency General Washington.

THOMAS MUMFORD TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Norwich, June 25, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: The bearer, Captain Nathaniel Peck, of Greenwich, informs me a small sloop he is master of, belonging to Mr. David Bush, of Greenwich, is taken possession of by an officer at Saybrook, for having on board eighteen barrels of pork and a few hogsheads of rum and molasses, for which he had not given bonds, agreeable to the laws of this Colony, but says he went from Lyme to Saybrook for that purpose.

I think it my duty to inform your Honour that in the course of last year Mr. Bush sent me a considerable quantity of flour, &c., by this Captain Peck, and I have ever supposed both Mr. Bush and the bearer are heartily engaged in the American cause. The pork he has on board, (viz: eighteen barrels,) I bought of him, but on examining it at Groton, and finding it rusty, I refused taking it, and I believe he really was returning to Greenwich with it.

I am your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

THOMAS MUMFORD.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull.

P. S. The enclosed I received from Captain Nash respecting Captain Mott.

COLONEL BAYLEY TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Newbury, June 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have proceeded twenty-seven miles on the road to Canada with carts; but by the alarming accounts from St. Johns, and two men I sent by Messerve not returning, I have called in my workmen; and if the accounts we have received are true, we are in great danger on this river, in particular here and at Upper Coos, if we are not supported. Concord is the next place at which a stand can be made. I am of the opinion this river is much in the Regulars' view, as provisions are plenty, and will be a help to them, and strike a fatal blow to our cause.

If our troops have left Canada, no time must be lost to support this country. This is from a servant of the Colonies and yours.

JACOB BAYLEY.

To the Honourable the Council and General Assembly of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY:

From the Committees of the Town of NEWBURY, HAVERHILL, BATH, and MOORETOWN, met at NEWBURY, June 25, 1776, on account of some very alarming news from St. JOHNS, received the evening before by two men from UNION RIVER, of publick notoriety.

That they saw a letter from General Sullivan to Lieutenant Allen to have all the inhabitants of the town on Union River to remove with all possible despatch, not knowing but the enemy would be upon them soon. This they received last Thursday evening, and they removed the next day. That it was feared the enemy would get the upper hand. The sick of our army were sent to Crown Point. In the General's letter it was said that the regular army consisted of about thirty thousand, fifteen hundred Canadians, and five hundred Indians. The Continental Army was retreated to St. Johns, and last Friday a very heavy fire of cannon was heard all the day.

The Committees voted to send Major Jonathan Hale and Captain Robert Johnston with the abovesaid information to head-quarters at Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire, and to inform them of the dangerous situation these parts were in, and that except we are immediately supported we shall be obliged to quit these parts. In our extreme danger, as exposed every day to the enemy, the Committees beg the favour of two hundred fire-arms, and ammunition equal, as so much is necessary for ourselves. And if the above information be true, which we do not dispute, this fertile part of the country must soon be abandoned to the enemy, except timely aid can be had of a sufficient number of men as well as arms and ammunition; the damage of which to the Continental cause is needless for us to represent. We would only further add, that if it be judged best to make a stand here, a few small cannon will be necessary.

We are, gentlemen, your humble servants,

JAMES BAYLEY,

JACOB BAYLEY,

Chairmen for Newbury and Haverhill.*

MAJOR PEABODY TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Exeter, June 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received information from the Secretary that I was appointed Major of the Regiment raising for Canada, and was desired to make speedy answer whether I would accept the service. As I am ever ready to serve my country, and you have been pleased to confer this honour upon me, I shall endeavour to serve you in that station in the best manner I am capable of, wishing my abilities were equal to my desires to serve my country. Your favour is gratefully acknowledged.

Gentlemen, I am, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

STEPHEN PEABODY.

To the Honourable Council and House of Representatives.

JAMES LOVELL TO ARTHUR LEE.

Halifax, Provost's, June 25, 1776.

SIR: Suffering under a most wanton exercise of military power, I am sure it is needless to do anything further than establish that fact as an introduction to your notice and benevolent exertions for me; though I am personally a stranger to you, however strictly intimate with your real character through your most favoured correspondents in New-England, and your political writings.

You know that General Gage, with troops from Great Britain, entered Boston with professions of friendship and of a design to promote good order in the Province. He erected works at the isthmus which joins the town to the main country. He declared himself shocked upon a remonstrance of the County of Suffolk, suggesting apprehended danger to the inhabitants of the capital city, in the month of September, 1774. In April, 1775, a foolish military excursion to the town of Concord brought on the present warlike proceedings of America. In the week after that rupture the inhabitants of my native town were called upon to deliver up their arms, on condition of being at liberty to depart with all their effects, or to tarry under the General's protection.

* June 29, 1776.—The Committee of both Houses appointed to take into consideration the Letter from Newbury and Haverhill, requesting a supply of arms and ammunition in their exposed situation, have attended that service, and beg leave to report that, considering the arms and ammunition, supplied the men in the Continental Army, and the destitute circumstances of the inhabitants of the Colony upon the eastern frontier and upon the sea-coasts, are of opinion that it is not at present in the power of this Court to comply with the request made in said letter. Per order: JER. POWELL.

The papers enclosed to you herewith will discover the series of treatment which I experienced from that time. General Gage left Boston October 10th last year, at which time I sent copies of all my letters and petitions whereby I had aimed to regain freedom by trial, with a copy of General Howe's evasive answer. I wrote also to the Lord Mayor of London, to the Printer of the London Mercury, and to General Gage. I suspect the bearer, Mr. William Powell, deceived me, and did not deliver the packet to Mr. Thomas Broomfield, merchant, or that the latter, through timidity, suppressed the papers.

When I was hurried from Boston jail in March last, I left my pocket-book with my wife, but I recollected the most material passages in my petitions for the information of my friends here, and afterwards gave them in charge to Mr. Michael Joy, who sailed from hence the 12th May. This worthy young man having been the protector of my family after my arrest, can give you a very minute description of its miseries.

General Gage threw me into prison, and left General Howe with only the power of a jailor, as he pretended, in October, though at the same time he offered to exchange me for two military officers.

The present commander, General Massie, declares that his hands are tied. He sent his chaplain to tell the prisoners that he would take upon himself to release us for an equal number, if our friends would discharge such a number. He directed us to write letters to that purport, and said he would forward them immediately: but in two days after, he acquainted a person who offered a vessel for a flag of truce, that if prisoners were actually to arrive here under a flag, he should be obliged to seize them till General Howe's orders. Such is the duplicity with which British heroes conduct, after undertaking the task of kidnapping freeborn citizens!

I have not obtained a sight of General Massie, nor even one of his aids-de-camp. I have no prospect of release from jail, but through your sagacity and humane and generous spirit.

Hancock and Adams are the only names excepted in the lying act of grace of June 12th. But there is a deep rancour against me for having publicly repeated, after Judge Blackstone, what the murderers have now taught me by experience, "that slaves envy the freedom of others, and take a malicious pleasure in contributing to destroy it."

I must not omit to tell you that, on the 2d of February, the General got possession of a billet which I had given that morning to one going to Point Shirley. He thereupon ordered me to be closely locked up, and be debarred the use of pen, ink, and paper. They will plead this as a proof of my just imprisonment; but surely, sir, it cannot have such a retrospective force. I was as innocent as an unborn infant as to the forbidden correspondence, until I had been unjustly distressed in prison. The promised protection of June 12th being taken from me, I slighted the wretches and all their military edicts; and I continue to do it most cordially.

Should you recover the papers referred to as sent in October and May, I am satisfied you will judge that I have maintained a manly spirit under all my past oppressions. I hope you will be induced to believe that no fresh exertions of the scientific barbarity of those who hold me in duress shall bring me to any conduct that can be disgraceful to the patronage which I promise myself you will afford to, sir, your sincere admirer and suffering humble servant,

JAMES LOVELL.

NORTH-CAROLINA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 24, 1776.]

North-Carolina Council of Safety, June 24, 1776.

SIR: We take the liberty through you to represent to your honourable body the distressed and defenceless state of this Colony. The great want of fire-arms, ammunition, and other warlike stores, renders our situation truly alarming: an Army hourly expected to land on our coasts, and apprehensions well founded of an immediate war with the Southern tribe of Indians, and a large body of people disaffected to the American cause, residing in the very heart of our country, ready (although once subdued) to make use of a more favourable opportunity again to throw this country into a scene of blood and confusion.

You will, through our Delegates, be informed of many other circumstances relative to this Colony; to them we beg leave to refer you.

We take the liberty to observe that, by the exertions of this Colony in assisting its neighbours, the fitting armed vessels for the protection of trade, keeping up a number of independent companies to secure the inhabitants from depredations of the enemy on a very extensive sea-coast, the establishing manufactures of arms and gunpowder, salt, saltpetre, iron, and many others, we have involved this Colony in such a load of debt as the inhabitants cannot possibly bear, unless they receive immediate assistance. We cannot help trespassing further on your patience by observing on the immense loss, fatigue, and disappointment suffered by our people who turned out from all quarters of the country, with the greatest alacrity, in the late expedition against the Highlanders and other forces, and upon repeated alarms ever since, fifteen hundred of whom we are now, in the absence of the regular troops, obliged to keep on duty at a season of the year when their presence was absolutely necessary to procure bread for their families.

From these considerations we have, therefore, every reason to expect that your honourable body will grant every assistance to the Colony which has so spiritedly and effectually supported the glorious cause contended for, and grant such necessary requisitions as may be made by our Delegates to enable us to persevere.

We shall, as soon as possible, lay before your honourable body the expense of the late expedition against the Tories; and have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant.

By order of the Committee of Safety:

CORNELIUS HARNETT, President.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL HENDRICKS TO BRIGADIER-GENERAL LEWIS, DATED HAMPTON, JUNE 26, 1776.

I send you four men, under guard, who were taken on Monday on board a brig from Barbadoes bound for Dunmore. Early on Monday morning we had information that a brig was aground off Willoughby's Point. Major Leitch immediately made all possible haste, with twelve men, on board a small pilot-boat which was in the basin, loaded with tobacco for the West-Indies, in order to examine what she was. On coming on board he found she was from Barbadoes, bound for Norfolk, with the supercargo on board, loaded with three hundred and eleven puncheons of rum and a few barrels of limes. On examination the Major found she had got aground about twelve o'clock the preceding night; that she was very fast, and consequently that he had no other way to proceed than to leave his people on board, and come to Hampton for assistance to lighten her. A sloop bound up James River was pitched on for this purpose, being the only vessel in our harbour. Unluckily, however, both wind and tide seemed to conspire against the measure, by putting it out of our power to get her down before a tender of ten carriage-guns appeared in sight of the brig, on which Lieutenant Herbert (of Captain Lilly's armed vessel) thought prudent to send the pilot-boat off, in order to know whether the vessel in sight was an enemy or friend, which was soon discovered to be the former. In the mean time Mr. Herbert threw overboard five hogsheads of rum, and luckily got the people off in a boat from the other shore, (except one, who happened to be down in the hold,) the pilot-boat refusing to come on board to take them off. They got all safe ashore, although the tender kept up a constant fire upon them; two of the brig's crew being on board the pilot-boat, and other two before brought on shore by Major Leitch. The brig belongs to a Mr. Walsh, of Barbadoes, and the whole of the people on board seemed much chagrined at the appearance of our boat, and no doubt as much elated on our being obliged to quit her—a convincing proof of the friendship the West-Indians have for us.

TRANSYLVANIA LANDS.

Whereas disputes have arisen respecting the title of the Proprietors of Transylvania to the soil of that country, and, as some short time will elapse before they may be fully and satisfactorily determined, (being anxious to avoid all cause of complaint,) the said Proprietors earnestly desire that no person may, in the mean time, take possession of any entered or surveyed lands in the said country, with expectation of procuring a title in consequence thereof, as such lands ought of right to be granted to the respective persons in whose names those entries were made; and should the absolute title be adjudged in favour of the subscribers, on the present dispute, (as they have no doubt will be the case,) they hereby declare their intention of granting such lands, on application, to the proper claimants, according to the rules of their office. And as the Proprietors have hitherto reserved the lands below Green River, and as high up Cumberland, on both sides, as Mansker's Lick, for themselves, until they could lay off a small quantity therein for their separate use, they hope that no person will make improvement within the said bounds before such surveys shall be made, as such improvement may possibly interfere with the choice of some of the copartners, and consequently not be granted. And as it is unsafe at this time to settle the country in small detached parties, and the alarming reports with respect to the hostile intention of the Cherokee Indians on the frontiers will no doubt prevent emigration for some time to that country, care will be taken to cause those lands to be laid off as soon as conveniently may be; so that when, from the more pacifick disposition of those people, a removal to that country may be thought safe, every person, on application to the books of the Land Office at Boonsborough may be informed of the entered and reserved lands as aforesaid, and direct their choice accordingly.

JAMES MURDOCK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Frederick County, June 26, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: Enclosed you have a state of the arms in the hands of the Twenty-Ninth battalion of Militia under my command, so far as I have been able to obtain it. It may not be amiss to inform you, that although Captain Samuel Wade Magruder had received my orders to meet in battalion on the day appointed, (which were given out before I received the orders from the Brigadier-General to transmit an account of the arms, &c.,) and had likewise heard of the General's orders, yet neither he nor his company did appear in the field, which has rendered it impossible for me to furnish his list with the rest. I should have been more speedy in transmitting this account had I not, before I heard anything of the matter, given orders for the battalion to meet, as I have told you before; in short I did not receive the General's letter until last Thursday. Near three months ago I employed an Adjutant for the battalion, who is greatly in want of money. Should you think proper to send any for the purpose of paying him, it may be done by the bearer, Mr. Edward Gale, whose receipt shall be good. Captain Edward Burgess has requested me to mention his name as willing to receive a commission for the flying camp. In my opinion he is a proper person, and I think it would be in his power to raise a good company in and near the place where he lives. I have to assure your Honours that it will give me pleasure to further the recruiting service for the camp about to be established; and should it so happen that my name is remembered in Convention or Council of Safety, they may depend on my services in the station which I may be appointed.

With great esteem and respect, I am, may it please your Honours, your obedient servant,

JOHN MURDOCK.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

COLONEL BUCHANAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, June 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Presuming that the appointment of a victualler for the troops of this Province for the flying camp will be referred to you, I take the liberty of offering my services in that department. And lest it may be done in Convention, I have entered on their list for that purpose, where, no doubt, I would wish to have your interest individually.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM BUCHANAN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN BEALL.

Annapolis, June 26, 1776.

SIR: The man-of-war this moment broke ground, and is on her way down the bay. We have despatched a cart, with sixty stand of arms; by it you may return such of your muskets as are not fit for service. We refer you to our letter of 24th, by which you are to govern yourself.

We are, &c.

To Captain Rezin Beall.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

Annapolis, June 26, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby requested to cause the two brigs, Fortune and Rogers, now lying at Baltimore-Town, to be unladen, and have their cargoes, as also the cargoes bought of Adams & Palfrey, carefully examined. Should the flour be in such order that it is likely to be spoiled, you are directed to have the same baked into bread for the use of the Province. Such of it as may be fit to send to market you will send down the bay in proper vessels, and have landed at Pitt's Landing, in Pocomoke, to the care of Captain Speake, or Mr. Beck, of the schooner John, to be thence carried by land to Chincoteague, and put on board the said schooner John, lying there, burden about six hundred and fifty barrels. If that quantity of barrels of flour should fall short, the rest of the schooner John's load you are to send in bread. What flour is likely to spoil and must be baked, you will lodge with Mr. William Spear, and some part with Mr. Cumberland Dugan, which they are to have baked for the publick use. You are to let the owners of the vessels (Messrs. Lux & Bowley and George Woolsey) know that their brigs are discharged from the publick service, and that we will lay their case before the Convention, who, we doubt not, will make them a reasonable allowance for the time they have been employed. If you cannot hire vessels to carry this flour to Pocomoke, without insuring them, we hereby authorize you to insure them at a reasonable value.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth.

GEORGE CLINTON TO JOHN MCKESSON.

Philadelphia, June 26, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The enclosed I wrote yesterday morning; since which the Board of War reported the necessity of sending more troops into Canada, to reinforce our Army there, and among other things the necessity of immediately appointing the officers in the regiment ordered to be raised in New-York, that they might immediately set about recruiting the regiment, and at the same time reported a list of the officers, taking them in rank as arranged by General Montgomery at Montreal, which report the Congress have confirmed, and made the appointments accordingly. I should have had no objections to this had it been done before the resolve of last Friday, directing your Congress to recommend the officers for this new regiment, as in that case it might have saved you from troublesome applications and blame; but as that resolve was transmitted to your Congress some time ago, (at least three days,) and you may have proceeded to the appointment of the officers, as thereby directed, I could not approve of this new step, especially as I cannot think it will much hasten the recruiting the regiment; and, at any rate, I think the recruits yet to be raised cannot be got ready in time to save Canada. However, I did not choose strenuously to oppose a measure which many thought essentially necessary. If it is wrong, we are not to blame. I have not time to add anything further, nor have I any news worth communicating.

Yours, affectionately,
To John McKesson, Esq., New-York.

GENERAL WOOSTER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read June 26, 1776. Referred to the Committee appointed to inquire into the causes of the miscarriages in Canada.]

Philadelphia, June 26, 1776.

SIR: The unjust severity and unmerited abuse with which my character has been treated in the Colonies by persons who are either secret enemies to the glorious cause in which every virtuous American must heartily join, or whose ambition would by every means (however base) remove all obstacles to their advancement and promotion, added to the harsh treatment I have received from some part of the illustrious body over whom you preside, render it indispensably necessary that I should take some steps towards undeceiving them, satisfying the publick, and doing justice to myself and the Army in Canada. If these can be done, it must give satisfaction to every feeling heart. The honour of a soldier being the first thing he should defend, and his honesty the last he should give up, his character must ever be considered as entitled to the protection of the virtuous and the good. I have, therefore, sir, to request that you would move to the honourable Congress that the Committee appointed to examine into the affairs of Canada may be directed to look thoroughly into my conduct while I had the honour of commanding the Continental forces in that country, or that some other may be appointed for that purpose, that I may be acquitted or condemned upon just grounds and sufficient proof.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most humble servant,

DAVID WOOSTER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF NEW-YORK.

Philadelphia, June 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You will perceive from the enclosed resolves which I do myself the honour of transmitting in obedience to the commands of Congress, that they have appointed not only the Field Officers in the regiment to be raised in your Colony, but likewise a number of the subalterns.

The reasons that induced Congress to take this step, as it is a deviation from rule, should be particularly mentioned. I am therefore directed to inform you that, in consequence of their being furnished with a list of the officers who had served in Canada, and the rank to which they were entitled, they have been enabled to appoint, and in fact have only appointed, such as were originally recommended and appointed by the Provincial Congress of your Colony, and have served faithfully both the last summer campaigns and through the winter. It is therefore apprehended the Congress have only prevented you in their appointments, and that the same gentlemen would have met with your approbation for their services to their country. Added to this, the last intelligence from Canada, showing our affairs to be in the most imminent danger, rendered the utmost despatch necessary, that not a moment's time might be lost.

The other officers of the battalion I am to request you will be pleased to appoint, and to exert every nerve to equip the battalion as soon as possible. As an additional encouragement, the Congress have resolved that a bounty of ten dollars be given every soldier who shall enlist for three years.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Convention of New-York.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, June 26, 1776.

SIR: You will perceive by the enclosed resolves, which I do myself the honour of transmitting in obedience to the commands of Congress, and to which I beg leave to request your attention, that they have come to a resolution to augment the number of troops destined for the Northern Department four thousand.

It is scarcely necessary to mention the motives on which they acted, or to explain the propriety of the measure. The arrival of General Burgoyne with a large reinforcement—the known character of that officer for action and enterprise—the defeat of General Thompson with the troops under his command, and his being made prisoner—are so many circumstances that point out the absolute necessity of being more expeditious in our preparations for the defence of that Province, and of increasing our force there. In this light I have represented the matter to the Convention of New-Hampshire and the Assemblies of Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut, to whom I have written by this express in the most pressing language, urging them to send forward their Militia. As an additional encouragement, the Congress have resolved that a bounty of ten dollars be given every soldier who shall enlist for three years.

I have also written to the Convention of New-York on the subject of the enclosed resolve, and have delivered Colonel Dubois, Colonel Bruyn, and Major Goforth, their commissions.

Should you be able, consistent with the safety of New-York, to afford any assistance to the Canada department, I am to request you will do it, and give such directions as you think will promote the publick service.

You will please to give Colonel Dubois the necessary directions respecting the raising his regiment; he will wait on you immediately on his arrival at New-York.

I have the honour to be, with esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

P. S. I must request the favour of you to order a fresh express to proceed with the enclosed letters to the Northern Colonies.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE DELEGATES IN CONGRESS TO MESHECH WEARE.

Philadelphia, June 26, 1776.

SIR: The repeated misfortunes our Army in Canada have met with, make it necessary that a strong reinforcement should be sent there as speedily as possible. The many disadvantages we shall labour under by the enemy's being in possession of that country and the lakes, are so obvious that it is needless to mention them. By the last accounts, General Burgoyne, with a large army, was as high up the St. Lawrence as Three Rivers, where he had defeated a detachment of two thousand men under General Thompson, and taken him prisoner. Sickness and other disasters have much dispirited our men, and unless they are speedily supported by a strong reinforcement, it is uncertain what will be the consequence. The New-England Colonies and New-York will be more immediately affected by our misfortunes there than the other Colonies; and from their situation it is likely will be able to afford the earliest assistance.

For these reasons Congress have come to the resolutions that are transmitted to you by the President, requesting that a regiment, in addition to that which was some time ago requested, be sent with all possible despatch from our Colony to join the Army in Canada. If those troops can be raised soon, it will have a tendency to raise the spirits of those already in that country, and will, in our opinion, be the only method of securing the frontiers of our Colony at the expense of the continent. We shall be exceedingly glad to know from time to time how you succeed in raising these troops. It would also be very agreeable and serviceable could we be informed of other transactions in the Colony. Please to send by first opportunity a copy of President Cutts's commission; also any papers for showing Governour Wentworth's authority for granting land westward of Connecticut River.

We understand Mr. Langdon intends to resign his seat in Congress; if that should be the case, we hope somebody will be immediately appointed in his room.

We have the honour to be, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

To the Hon. Meshech Weare, Esq.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM JOHN ADAMS, DATED PHILADELPHIA, JUNE 26, 1776.

Our misfortunes in Canada are enough to melt a heart of stone. The small-pox is ten times more terrible than Britons, Canadians, and Indians, together. This was the cause of our precipitate retreat from Quebeck; this the cause of our disgraces at the Cedars. I don't mean that this was all: there has been want approaching to famine, as well as pestilence. And these discouragements have so disheartened our officers, that none of them seem to act with prudence and firmness. But these reverses of fortune don't discourage me; it was natural to expect them, and we ought to be prepared in our minds for greater changes and more melancholy scenes still. It is an animating cause, and brave spirits are not subdued with difficulties.

Amidst all our gloomy prospects in Canada, we receive some pleasure from Boston. I congratulate you on your victory over your enemies in the harbour. This has long lain near my heart, and it gives me great pleasure to think that what was so much wished is accomplished. I hope our people will now make the lower harbour impregnable, and never again suffer the flag of a tyrant to fly within any part of it.

The Congress have been pleased to give me more business than I am qualified for, and more than, I fear, I can go through with safety to my health. They have established a Board of War and Ordnance, and made me President of it—an honour to which I never aspired—a trust to which I feel myself vastly unequal. But I am determined to do as well as I can, and make industry supply, in some degree, the place of abilities and experience. The Board sits every morning and every evening. This, with constant attendance in Congress, will so entirely engross my time that I fear I shall not be able to write you so often as I have. But I will steal time to write to you.

The small-pox! the small-pox! What shall we do with it? I could almost wish that an inoculating hospital was opened in every town in New-England. It is some small consolation that the scoundrel savages have taken a large dose of it. They plundered the baggage and stripped off the clothes of our men who had the small-pox out full upon them at the Cedars.

LEBANON (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Lebanon, June 26, 1776.

SIR: We received yours of the 21st instant, and in compliance therewith, hereby inform you that we often insisted on the prisoners of war, in your letter mentioned, to sign the paroles; but they still refused so to do, as they alleged they were fully bound by their former paroles. But our principal reason for not reporting their non-compliance was occasioned by their continually pretending that they would only continue a short time in Lebanon. We also received a letter from the Committee of Safety, dated the 18th day of May last, shortly after they (the said prisoners) were stationed here, which confirmed our opinion that they would be soon moved from this place, as the Committee of Safety "was willing to indulge those gentlemen in any station that will be most convenient and agreeable to them," consistent with the rules of Congress; which, together with our never having the least apprehension of their making an escape, is all the reason that we can advance touching the whole affair. As soon as we found they had made their escape, we despatched expresses to the Committee of Lancaster and Berks Counties, and also parties of men in search of them, but have as yet received no intelligence concerning them.

We are, sir, your humble servants,

PHILIP GRUNEWALT,
JOHN LICHT.

To Richard Peters, Jun., Esq., Sec'y of the War-Office.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

New-York, June 26, 1776.

SIR: Being in the greatest distress here for arms, without the most distant prospect of obtaining a supply, and as several have been lately brought into Boston, belonging to the Highlanders that have been taken, I request that you will immediately forward the remaining two hundred carbines which, in my letter of the 28th ultimo, I directed to be kept at Boston, to the person at Norwich to whose care the others were intrusted, with orders to send them here with all possible despatch, together with the three hundred mentioned in your letter of the 9th instant, remaining part of my former order, which have not yet arrived here. You will direct him to send the whole by land, in wagons, without delay, if, when they arrive there, there shall appear the least risk in their coming by water. The places of these last two hundred can be supplied out of the arms lately taken; an exact account of which, with the amount of the prisoners and stores, if any, I shall be glad to have transmitted me. I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Ward.

JOSEPH REED (ADJUTANT-GENERAL) TO HENRY REMSEN.

Head-Quarters, June 26, 1776.

SIR: The taking proper measures for apprehending a person of dangerous principles and conduct last evening, prevented my writing you as I proposed respecting the prisoners brought in yesterday. I mentioned what passed between us to the General, but, on referring to the resolution of Congress, we found the disposition of prisoners wholly given to the Congresses, Committees, &c., of the respective Colonies. In this view his Excellency did not choose to give any directions about them; but at the same time suggested his wishes that they might be removed out of the city as soon as possible. How far the Colony of Connecticut might choose to take prisoners captivated in other Provinces, unless sent by the Continental Congress, must be left to the wisdom of your own Convention. They now have many under those circumstances. If any further guard is necessary, upon receiving an intimation on that head it shall be immediately complied with.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOSEPH REED.

To Henry Remsen, Esq., New-York.

To the Honourable Brigadier-General HEATH: The Memorial of the Surgeons' Mates of the several Regiments under your Honour's command, humbly sheweth:

That your memorialists meant to be included in a late petition presented to your Honour by the gentlemen Surgeons in the Brigade under your Honour's command, for an augmentation of their wages; but through a mistake of the mate's signature of a particular brigade, or by some other means, no notice has been taken of the said petition in their behalf, and your memorialists find (while employed in the common service of their country, which service they have, and always meant to discharge, with the greatest care and fidelity) that their present pay will not support them in the character of gentlemen, even if used with the utmost frugality and economy. Your memorialists, therefore, earnestly request your Honour to represent their aggrieved state to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and pray him, in their behalf, to lay the same before the honourable the Continental Congress, or take such other measures as shall, in your Honour's wisdom, be most expedient. And your memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

AARON PUTNAM, EBER. BENTON,

JOSEPH ADAMS, JOHN THOMAS.

New-York, June 26, 1776.

Proceedings of a General Court Martial of the Line, held at Head-Quarters, in the City of NEW-YORK, by warrant from his Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the United American Colonies, for the trial of THOMAS HICKEY and others, June 26th, A. D. 1776.

Col. Samuel H. Parsons, President.

Lt. Col. William Sheppard,	Capt. Warham Parks,
Maj. Levi Wells,	Capt. William Reed,
Capt. Joseph Hoyt,	Capt. Joseph Pettingil,
Capt. Abel Pettibone,	Capt. David Lyon,
Capt. Samuel Warren,	Capt. David Sill,
Capt. James Mellin,	Capt. Timothy Purcival.

William Tudor, Judge Advocate.

The warrant being read, and the Court first duly sworn, proceeded to the trial of Thomas Hickey, a private sentinel in his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief's Guard, commanded by Major Gibbs, brought prisoner before the Court, and accused "of exciting and joining in a mutiny and sedition, and of treacherously corresponding with, inlisting among, and receiving pay from the enemies of the United American Colonies."

The prisoner being arraigned on the above charge, pleads not guilty.

William Green sworn, deposes, That, about three weeks ago, I was in company with one Gilbert Forbes, a gunsmith, who lives in Broadway, and we fell into a conversation on politicks. I found Forbes's pulse beat high in the Tory scheme. I had repeated conversations with Forbes afterwards, and he was always introducing politicks, and hinting at the impossibility of this country standing against the power of Great Britain. He invited me to dine with him one day; and a day or two after asked me if I would not inlist into the King's service. I asked him where the money was to come from to pay me for the service; Forbes replied the Mayor would furnish money. I was pleased with the notion of getting some money from the Tories, and agreed to the scheme, with a view to cheat the Tories, and detect their scheme. I mentioned the matter to several, and, among others, to Hickey, the prisoner. I told him the principle I went upon, and that we had a good opportunity of duping the Tories. Hickey agreed to the scheme, but did not receive any money, except two shillings which I gave him. Forbes left it with me to inlist and swear the men. Forbes swore me and one Clark on a Bible to fight for the King; but I swore Hickey to fight for America. After the prisoner was engaged, I proposed to him to reveal the plot to the General, but Hickey said we had better let it alone till we had made further discoveries. All that Forbes proposed to me was, that when the King's forces arrived, we should cut away King's Bridge, and then go on board a ship of war, which would be in the East River to receive us. I inlisted ten or a dozen, and told them all my plan. The prisoner wrote his name upon a piece of paper with five others, which I gave to Forbes, and this was all the inlistment that I knew of the prisoner's signing.

Gilbert Forbes: A night or two after General Washington arrived in New-York from Boston, Green fell into company where I was. We were drinking, and Green toasted the King's health, and I did so too. A day or two afterwards Green called upon me, and said, that as I had drank his Majesty's health, he supposed I was his friend, and immediately proposed to inlist some men into the King's service, and told me he could procure considerable numbers to join him. I put him off, and declined having any hand in the business. But in repeated applications from him, I at last fell into the scheme. Green was to inlist the men, in which I was not to be concerned, nor have my name mentioned. In a day or two Green gave me a list of men who had engaged, among whom was the prisoner, Hickey. Soon after which, Hickey asked me to give him half a dollar, which I did, and this was all the money Hickey ever received from me. Green received eighteen dollars, and was to pay the men who inlisted one dollar apiece, and we were to allow them ten shillings per week subsistence money. I received upwards of a hundred pounds from Mr. Matthews, the Mayor, to pay those who should inlist into the King's service, who, after inlisting, were to go on board the King's ships, but if they could not get there, were to play their proper parts when the King's forces arrived.

William Welch: Between a fortnight and three weeks ago I met the prisoner in the street; he asked me to go with him to a grog-shop. When we got there, he told me he had something to tell me of importance, but insisted on my being sworn before he would communicate it. I accordingly swore on the Bible to keep secret what he should tell me. He then said that this country was sold, that the enemy would soon arrive, and that it was best for us Old Countrymen to make our peace before they came, or they would kill us all. That we Old Countrymen should join together, and we would be known by a particular mark, and if I would agree to be one among them, he would carry me to a man who would let me have a dollar by way of encouragement. I did not relish the project, and we parted.

Isaac Ketchum: Last Saturday week the prisoner was committed to jail, on suspicion of counterfeiting the Continental currency, and seeing me in jail, inquired the reason of it. I told him, because I was a Tory. On this a conversation ensued upon politicks. In different conversations he informed me that the Army was become damnably corrupted; that the fleet was soon expected; and that he and a number of others were in a band to turn against the American Army when the King's troops should arrive, and asked me to be one of them. The plan, he told me, was, some were to be sick, and others were to hire men in their room. That eight of the General's Guard were concerned, but mentioned only Green by name. He further told me that one Forbes, a tavern-keeper, was to be their Captain, but that the inferior officers were not yet appointed, lest the scheme should be discovered.

The prisoner being here called upon to make his defence, produces no evidence; but says, "he engaged in the scheme at first for the sake of cheating the Tories, and getting some money from them, and afterwards consented to have his name sent on board the man-of-war, in order that if the enemy should arrive and defeat the Army here, and he should be taken prisoner, he might be safe."

The Court being cleared, after mature consideration, are unanimously of the opinion that the prisoner is guilty of the charge against him, and of a breach of the fifth and of the thirtieth articles of the Rules and Regulations for the government of the Continental Forces; and the court unanimously sentence and adjudge that the prisoner, Thomas Hickey, suffer death for said crimes by being hanged by the neck till he is dead.

SAMUEL H. PARSONS, President.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, at Lebanon, Wednesday, June 26, A. D. 1776:

Voted, That all the Cannon Powder made at Messrs. Elderkin and Wales's Mill be forthwith sent and delivered to the care of Colonel Jabez Huntington, taking his receipt therefor, and many other matters considered, &c.; and dismissed near night.

COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 2, 1776.]

Watertown, June 26, 1776.

SIR: Your several letters of the 4th and 11th instant, together with the resolutions of Congress for raising a number of men for reinforcing the Army in Canada and New-York, have been communicated to the General Court, and duly attended to. It is the prevailing opinion here that the number required of this Colony was, considering our circumstances and present situation, more than our proportion. Out of the seventeen regiments raised within this Colony, twelve of those most complete were ordered this spring to New-York, together with the very best of our arms; besides which, one regiment was sent the last winter from this Colony to Canada, under the command of Colonel Porter. We have a very great extent of sea-coast, which lays this Government under the necessity of being at a vast expense in keeping a great number of men in pay to defend it. We have a formidable fleet and army in our neighbourhood, which in a day or two may invade the Colony; notwithstanding which, the General Court have been so thoroughly convinced of the necessity of the measure recommended by Congress, that they have with cheerfulness and alacrity voted to raise, from the Militia on the alarm and training-band list of the several towns in the Colony, five thousand men, to reinforce and co-operate with the Continental troops in Canada and New-York; and for encouragement have voted that there shall be paid to each non-commissioned officer and private soldier destined for New-York the sum of three pounds. They are to furnish themselves with a good fire-arm and bayonet, or instead of a bayonet a hatchet or tomahawk, a cartouch-box, knapsack, and blanket; and the Court have voted to allow them the further sum of six shillings for the use of their arms, and twelve shillings to purchase a blanket, and also one month's advance pay on their passing muster and being equipped as aforesaid. The Court were very averse to granting a bounty, but apprehended the men could not be obtained without it, especially as they found the Colonies of Connecticut and New-Hampshire have done the like with regard to the men to be raised by them. In short, the Court have been so solicitous to take effectual measures to obtain the men designed for Canada and New-York, that they have not had the opportunity to take care of themselves, and to pursue the necessary measures for raising the two regiments granted by Congress for the defence of this Government; however, this matter will now immediately be attended to. The money the honourable Congress have sent to be exchanged for silver and gold and to enable us to raise the two regiments designed for the defence of this Government has been received by the Treasurer of this Colony. Your letter accompanying the same is now under the consideration of the House. The General Court had, previous to their reception of the resolution of Congress prohibiting the exportation of provisions, passed a resolve for that purpose, to be in force until the 10th day of November next.

I am, sir, in the name and by order of the Council, your most obedient humble servant,

JEREMIAH POWELL, President.To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

COLONY OF THE MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

To the Honourable the Council and the Honourable House of Representatives in General Court assembled at WATER-TOWN, June 26, 1776:

The Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, for the town of Boston, beg leave to represent to your Honours that they are deeply impressed with a sense of the danger to which the community at large, and this town in particular, are exposed at this truly important crisis, especially as they feel this danger increased by the liberty which many disaffected persons are indulged, who yet walk at large, and some of them, by their daily conversation, declare their fixed enmity to this country, and their attachment to its foes, notwithstanding the proceedings of the justices of inquiry appointed by this honourable Court. This Committee have the highest reason to suppose that a channel of communication and intelligence between the Fleet and Army employed against us and these persons, has been constantly kept open ever since the town has been evacuated by the British troops; and that some of the most important manœuvres which have been projected by your Honours have been by this means in part, if not wholly, defeated. These facts have alarmed the inhabitants of this town, who in general think it unsafe to reside here while these evils remain unremedied. The Committee, therefore, loathing the idea of subjecting any persons to confinement, against whom the common safety may be otherwise secured, would with deference suggest to your Honours whether it would not be essential to the publick peace that these persons be removed from the capital, and dispersed among the inland towns in this Colony, as well to prevent the danger to which we are constantly exposed by their plots and conspiracies, as to ease the apprehensions of the inhabitants of this town.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN BROWNE, Chairman.

WORCESTER COUNTY (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, from a major part of the towns in the County of Worcester, convened at the Court-House in said Worcester, on Wednesday, the 26th day of June, 1776:

Whereas the honourable the American Congress on the 13th of April last, resolved "that Bohea Tea ought not to be sold in the smallest quantities at a higher price in any Colony than the rate of three-fourths of a dollar per pound, and other Teas at such prices as shall be regulated by the Committees of the Town or County where the Tea is sold; and that all persons who shall give or take a greater price for it ought to be considered as enemies to the American cause, and treated accordingly. And it is earnestly recommended to all Committees of Inspection and Observation, as well to be vigilant in carrying this resolve into execution, as those which prohibit the importation of India Tea from any part of the world, it being the desire of Congress to exclude all teas, except such as may make part of the cargoes of prizes taken by the ships of war or privateers belonging to these Colonies."

And whereas this Convention have received intelligence that some persons in this Colony have given and taken a greater price for Bohea Tea than three-fourths of a dollar per pound, in violation of the aforesaid resolve:

Therefore, Resolved, That it is the indispensable duty of the several Committees in this County and others, to be very vigilant to carry said resolve of the American Congress into execution, agreeable to the trust reposed in them. And it is earnestly requested of the good people of this County, that they, and every of them who may be knowing of any person or persons who shall sell or purchase Bohea Tea at a greater price than three-fourths of a dollar per pound, would not delay to give notice thereof to some one of said Committees, that such offenders may be dealt with in the manner set forth in said resolve of Congress.

And also Resolved, as the opinion of this Convention, That exorbitant prices taken or given for any article or commodity imported, or raised, produced, and manufactured among ourselves, is of evil example, and will, at this day of calamity and distress, if generally practised, prove very destructive to the Colonies, not only in lessening the value of our currency, but interrupting that harmony and unity among us which, under God, is our strength; that such disposition indulged, too much savours of the oppression and tyranny we so justly complain of; it is therefore recommended to every virtuous mind, especially to the good people of this County, to do everything in their power to suppress it, and discountenance such persons who shall, by example or otherwise, encourage such exorbitancy and oppression, as they regard their own interest and the salvation of their country.

Per order:

JOSEPH HENSHAW, Chairman.

CAPT. CAMPBELL (PRISONER) TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Reading, June 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Permit me to express my best acknowledgments for the kind indulgence you were pleased to grant to myself and officers, in permitting our servants to accompany us into the country. As they are soldiers and prisoners of war, and from their present distant situation, too far removed from Boston to receive their former daily allowance of provisions from them, may I request the favour of an order for having that article regularly served to them in future at or as near as possible to Captain Parker's house, at Reading, where the greatest part of our officers are quartered?

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL.

To the Honourable the Council of Massachusetts-Bay.

P. S. The number of servants, including a cook, a carpenter, a shoemaker, a tailor, and a piper, amount to 16 men, 4 women, and 2 children; total 22.

MESHECH WEARE TO THOMAS CUSHING.

Exeter, June 26, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 24th current, per Mr. John Odin, we have duly received, with the box of Continental money, agreeable to the letters accompanying the same; the bill of charges we have also paid; and acknowledge ourselves obliged for your care and trouble in forwarding the same.

In behalf of the Council and Assembly, I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

M. WEARE, President of the Council.

To the Honourable Thomas Cushing, Esq.

ADVICES FROM CANADA.

Admiralty Office, London, July 30, 1776.

By letters from Captain Douglas, of his Majesty's ship Isis, dated at Quebeck, the 26th and 27th of last month, it appears that immediately after raising the siege of Quebeck, of which he gave an account in his letters of the 8th and 15th of May, every proper measure was taken to facilitate the further operations against the Rebels, by sending down the river all the pilots which could be procured, to bring up the transports that were daily expected with General Burgoyne from England and Ireland; and that no time might be lost on their arrival, he had provided pilots for the upper river, and placed frigates and armed vessels in proper stations to assist and escort them; and also, lest the transports should be prevented by contrary winds from sailing up the river, he had stationed vessels with provisions, at proper places, for the use of the troops, if they should be obliged to disembark and march by land. By these dispositions, all the transports with troops which had pilots on board, proceeded up the river, without stopping at Quebeck, and arrived at Three-Rivers time enough to defeat the Rebels, and afterwards drive them from St. Johns and all their posts below Lake Champlain. Captain Douglas, in the same letter, says that the prudent and spirited behaviour of Captain Harvey, of the Martin sloop, cannot be too much commended; and that the zeal, vigour and unanimity of his Majesty's servants, on both elements, were scarcely equalled on any other occasion within his remembrance. He also writes that he was, in concert with General Carleton, considering upon a proper establishment for armed vessels to be employed on the Lakes Champlain and Ontario, and in contriving the most expeditious means of getting them, with other craft, on the said Lakes, in order to the better accelerating the passage of the Army; and that Captain Harvey, of the Martin, was returning to Sorel, in order to examine into the means of floating between canals, (as is practised in Russia and Holland,) through the Rapids of Chambly into Lake Champlain, the six armed vessels, one of which was already arrived from England, and the others hourly expected.

COLONEL BULLITT TO CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

[Read June 27, 1776. Referred to Mr. Harrison, Mr. Rutledge, Mr. Goldsborough, Mr. Paine, Mr. Rodney.]

[Philadelphia, June, 1776.]

GENTLEMEN: Allow me, after observing to you that my motives for engaging in the service I am now in were not through lucrative motives of pay or rank, as I flatter myself my conduct will sufficiently satisfy, to observe to you, that when I received your commission as Deputy Adjutant-General, I was at a loss what to understand from the rank you assigned me in it; your giving it at least deprived me of serving in the cause without it; and if you think it necessary for the service I should rank in the service, it was offering great indignity to the service of nine campaigns and seven actions fought for my country with various successes—I believe double the number that any other officer you have in this department, except our General that commands us. There is a delicacy in being commanded by officers that a person formerly has been accustomed to command, which is my situation; for I do not recollect but three officers (except our commandant) in this department of whom I had not the command last war. Under these considerations, I am induced to apply to your able Board to either establish my former rank, or give me a commission without any being mentioned; in this, I would not be understood to be aiming at the increase of my pay, as I shall be always satisfied with such as will be sufficient to subsist on.

I am, with the utmost respect, your honourable Board's most obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS BULLITT, D. A. G.

To the Honourable the President and Continental Congress.

ANDREW BUCHANAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, June 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take leave to offer the enclosed plan of arrangement of the Militia under my direction to your consideration. The obvious utility in furnishing them better arms, and avoiding the inconvenience, as well as expense, of having too great numbers in service at the same time, will, I am persuaded, present itself at first view, and render it unnecessary for me to recommend it. The Baltimore-town Battalion, to whom as yet it has been only proposed, will, I believe, readily adopt it. I shall do nothing further until it has received the sanction of your approbation.

I am, with respect, your humble servant,

ANDREW BUCHANAN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

To Captain A. B.: To avoid calling out too many of the Militia at one time on alarm, I have it in instructions from the General to throw each company of the Battalion in certain divisions; one of which only is to be ordered on duty at the same time, except on an extraordinary emergency. The mode adopted, you have enclosed for your government. The advantages resulting therefrom will, I make no doubt, sufficiently recommend it; however, you are to take the sense of your company therein, and advise me as soon as possible, that the General may be enabled to lay the plan before the Council of Safety for their approbation; without which, it will not perhaps be put in practice. You are to have the effective arms in your company valued by the commissioned officers, or any three of them, and marked B, 1., &c., and so progressively upwards, taking a list thereof, with the owners' names opposite its number, that the same may be replaced or paid for by the publick if lost or rendered useless in the service. It would be advisable to place the best of these arms in the first division, to be delivered over occasionally to the second, third, and fourth. You will be pleased to lose no time in arranging your company and acquainting each person to what division he belongs. If your company should be incomplete, the deficiency should fall in the last division, as it can be easily supplied from those who have been in service before them, &c.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN VEAZEY.

Annapolis, June 27, 1776.

SIR: We have written to the Committee of Observation of Kent County to hire wagons to convey a quantity of powder, sulphur, &c., from Chincoteague, in Acomack County, to Talbot Court-House, or to such place as Brigadier-General Chamberlaine shall order or direct; and as it will be expedient that a guard should attend the carriage of the above articles, we desire you will order one of your Lieutenants, with ten men, on that service; the greatest care and attention is recommended to the officer you intrust on that business. You will direct your officer that when he shall arrive at Talbot Court-House, he immediately give notice of his arrival to General Chamberlaine, and await such orders as he may think proper to give respecting the powder and other articles. We are, &c.

To Captain Edward Veazey.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COMMITTEE OF OBSERVATION FOR KENT COUNTY.

[No. 49.]

Annapolis, June 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Twenty-two barrels of sulphur, sixty barrels of gunpowder, fourteen muskets, ten bayonets, ten swivels, and two blunderbusses, with their furniture, belonging to this Province, are lately arrived in Chincoteague, in Acomack County, in Virginia, and are now under the care of Colonel Matthews, of that County. As wagons cannot be procured in any of the lower Counties, we request you would immediately hire and despatch as many as may be thought necessary, to convey the same from thence to Talbot Court-House, or to such place as Brigadier-General Chamberlaine shall order and direct. We are, &c.

JAMES HINDMAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Oxford, June 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: At one o'clock yesterday your letter came to hand, enclosing a resolve of Convention giving information of Captain Montagu's conduct, with directions to be prepared to repel any violence offered by him, and to prevent his procuring provisions. Should have been very happy to have received your commands three hours sooner; by that means I might have prevented Mr. James Dickinson, William Thomas, John Stevens, and Nicholas Martin, going on board the Fowey man-of-war, with several head of sheep and hogs, some as a present for the Governour, others for sale. Mr. Dickinson informed me, some time before he set out, that the Governour had permission from your Honours to take live stock on board the man-of-war whenever she should come up, and that he was to procure it for him. This step has been taken by those gentlemen without the permission or knowledge of the Committee of the County. Immediately on receipt of your letter I hired a boat, put twenty men on board, sent in pursuit of them, with orders to bring those gentlemen with their sheep and hogs back again. About eight o'clock in the evening my boat met with them on their return, having safely lodged all their stock on board the man-of-war. I informed them of the resolve of Convention, and your orders to me. They have given me their honour to attend at any time and place you may direct, to answer for their conduct.

As I thought it necessary to inform you as soon as possible of this matter, have hired a boat for the purpose, in which Mr. Anderson goes over, and can fully relate to you every particular respecting those gentlemen. Shall be much obliged to you to send me by him an order for one hundred or one hundred and fifty pounds, as am getting the soldiers' clothes made up, and frequently purchasing little necessary articles.

I am, gentlemen, your much obliged and obedient humble servant,

JAMES HINDMAN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

To CHARLES CARROLL, Barrister, SAMUEL CHASE, THOMAS JOHNSON, WILLIAM PACA, and CHARLES CARROLL of CARROLLTON, Esquires, Delegates in Convention for ANNE ARUNDEL County:

GENTLEMEN: We, the freemen of Anne Arundel County, taking into serious consideration the present alarming situation of this Province, have determined to exercise our unquestionable right of instructing our Delegates in Convention. No apology is necessary; neither is any, we presume, expected from us. From the very nature of the trust, and the relation subsisting between constituent and representative, the former is entitled to express his sentiments, and to instruct the latter upon all points that may come under his consideration as representative. We, therefore, instruct you as follows:

1st. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution in Convention that the Instructions given by the Convention in December last, and renewed by the May Convention, to the Deputies of this Province in Congress, be rescinded, and the restrictions therein contained removed.

2dly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution in Convention that this Province be united with the other twelve Colonies represented in Congress, and that the Deputies of this Colony be authorized and directed to concur with the other United Colonies, or a majority of them, in Congress, in declaring the United Colonies free and independent States, and in forming such further compact and confederation between them in making foreign alliances, and in adopting such other measures as shall be adjudged necessary for securing the liberties of America, provided the sole and exclusive right of regulating the internal Government and police of this Province be reserved to the people thereof.

3dly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that the exercise of every kind of authority under the Crown of Great Britain be now totally suppressed, and that a Government be formed for this Province under the authority of the people only.

4thly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that a Government for this Province ought not to be formed and carried into execution by this present Convention.

5thly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that a full and equal representation of the people be appointed, and a new Convention be immediately elected, with full powers to form and establish a new Government; which Convention to continue until the last day of December next, and such Government be subject to such alterations and amendments as the people may judge necessary.

6thly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that a Council of Safety be appointed, to exist during the intermediate time between the dissolution of the present and the meeting of the next Convention, and also Deputies to represent this Province in Congress.

7thly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that all publick and private interest of moneys cease and determine during this time of general distress, such moneys only to be excepted as have been actually lent within the last three months, which shall be proved by the lender to have been lent within the time above-mentioned to the satisfaction of such persons as shall be appointed to determine the same, and that country produce be a lawful tender for the interest of the same, at the market price, to be regulated by two unexceptionable freeholders, upon oath, one to be appointed by each party.

8thly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that the moneys appropriated by act of Assembly for opening, clearing, and straightening the roads in this County, be immediately applied to the payment of the publick charge of this County.

9thly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that all rents may be paid, and shall be received, in country produce, at the same rates which such commodities bore at the time such contract was made or renewed; and the same to be set by the Committees of Observation until other persons are appointed.

10thly. That you move for, and endeavour to obtain, a resolution of Convention that no person be allowed to bring fire-arms, or any other weapons, offensive or defensive, to the ensuing election of Delegates in Convention.

Anne Arundel County, June 26, 1776.

At a meeting of the Deputies of the several Battalions of Militia of this County in conference, at the house of Mr. John Ball, in the City of Annapolis:

It was proposed that the following do pass as a resolve of this Committee: That this Committee do proceed to draw up a sketch of a form of Government for this Province, to be laid before the people of this County for their consideration. A question was put on the passage of the same, and determined in the affirmative.

The following gentlemen declined voting on the above, conceiving that they had no power from their constituents for that purpose: Thomas Dorsey, John Dorsey, E. Howard, Benj. Galloway, John Dorsey, (son of Michael,) Samuel Harrison, Jun., John Thomas, Joseph Ellicot, Richard Stringer, Michael Pue.

The Committee then adjourned until nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

June 27, 1776.—Committee met according to adjournment.

The Committee proceeded to take up the resolve of yesterday respecting the drawing up a form of Government for this Province, to be laid before the people of this County for their consideration; whereupon the following form of Government was approved of by a majority of the Committee, ordered to be published, and laid before the people of this County:

A FORM OF GOVERNMENT PROPOSED FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF THE PEOPLE OF ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY.

The right to legislate is in every member of the community: but, for the sake of convenience, the exercise of such right must be delegated to certain persons to be chosen by the people. When this choice is free, it is the people's fault if they are not happy.

That the Legislative may be so constituted as never to be able to form an interest of its own separate from the interest of the community at large, it is necessary its branches should be independent of, and balance, each other, and all dependent on the people.

1. That there be chosen by the people a Lower House; also, that there be chosen by the people an Upper House. These two bodies to form the Legislative power.

It is essential to liberty that the Legislative, Judicial, and Executive powers of Government be separate from each other; for where they are united in the same person, or number of persons, there would be wanting that mutual check which is the principal security against their making of arbitrary laws, and a wanton exercise of power in the execution of them.

2. That there be a Council of seven persons, appointed by the joint ballot of the two Houses of Legislature from their bodies, to hold the Executive power.

3. That these several bodies, Legislative and Executive, hold their powers for one year, as annual elections are most friendly to liberty, and the oftener power reverts to the people the greater will be the security for a faithful discharge of it.

4. That the vacancies created in either House of Legislature by the appointment of the Council aforesaid, be filled up by the people of such Counties where such persons were sent from, that there may be always a full representation of the people in both Houses of Legislature.

5. That Judges of a Provincial Court be annually appointed by joint ballot of the two Houses; also, a Clerk for the Provincial Office, (having no Secretary for that office as heretofore,) with reasonable fees for their respective services.

6. That Commissioners and Clerk of Loan Office, Attorney-General, Treasurer, Register for Land Office, Judge, Marshal, and Clerk for Court of Admiralty, be annually appointed by the joint ballot of the two Houses of Legislature.

7. That Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Clerks of Counties, and Surveyors, be annually chosen by the people of each County.

8. That the Chancery business be done by the respective County Courts, subject to an appeal to the Council, who shall have power finally to determine on such appeal. The official business to be done by the respective Clerks of each court, with reasonable fees for their respective services.

9. That there be annually chosen by the people of each County a person to serve as a Register of Wills, granting letters of administration, &c., and that the business heretofore done by the Commissary of this Province be done by the County Courts, with an appeal to the Council, with reasonable fees for their respective services.

10. That no fees be allowed to be taken agreeable to the old table, but that a new and equitable table of fees be established.

11. That the trial by Jury be held and kept sacred; also, the habeas corpus preserved.

12. That no person shall be eligible to sit in either House of Legislature, or Council, or Congress, who holds any office of profit, or any pension, or receives any profit or any part of the profit thereof, either directly or indirectly, or who holds any office in the regular military service, or marine service, either Continental or Provincial.

13. That all officers of the regular or marine service be appointed by the joint ballot of both Houses of Legislature.

14. That the present resolves of the Conventions of this Province restricting suits at law, stand and remain during this time of public calamity.

15. That no standing Armies be kept up, only in time of war.

16. That a well-regulated Militia be established in this Province, as being the best security for the preservation of the lives, liberties, and properties of the people.

17. That every Militia company choose its own officers, Battalions their Field Officers, and the District Battalions their Brigadiers-General.

18. That Adjutants, Drummers and Fifers, with drums and fifes and cartouch-boxes, be provided at the publick expense for the different Battalions of Militia; and guns for such unarmed men who are not able to purchase the same. And that the Colonels of each Battalion be empowered to contract for the above and procure the same, and draw on the Treasurer for the amount.

19. That a Congress be appointed annually, and composed of members of each Colony, to convene at any place they may agree on, as occasion may require; to have power to adjust disputes between Colonies, regulate the affairs of trade, war, peace, alliances, &c.; reserving to the people of each Colony the exclusive right of regulating the internal Government and police thereof. That there be seven Deputies appointed by the joint ballot of the two Houses of Legislature of this Province for Congress, annually, out of their bodies; and that the vacancies created in either House by such appointment be forthwith filled up, by election by the people of such Counties where such members were sent from, that there may be always a full representation of the people in Assembly as well as in Congress. The continuance of such persons in Assembly, when publick business requires their continual attendance in Congress, would be nugatory, and serve only as a mark of respect, which could not compensate for the injury done the publick by their absence from either station.

20. That all the votes and proceedings of the Assembly be published, except such parts as relate to military operations and measures taken to procure arms and ammunition; and that they sit open except when particular business requires their being private. Also, that the votes and proceedings of Congress be published, except as aforesaid.

21. That an oath be taken by every person who shall hold an office of profit or trust, to stand true, be faithful, maintain and support the Constitution, and, to the utmost of his power, promote the interest of the people. Such Constitution, however, to be subject to be changed or altered, or amended, from time to time, by the people, as they may judge necessary.

22. That all moneys to be raised on the people be by a fair and equal assessment, in proportion to every person's estate; and that the unjust mode of taxation by the poll, heretofore used, be abolished; and that assessors be chosen by the people of each District in each County annually.

Signed per order of the Committee:

BRICE WORTHINGTON, Chairman.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MARYLAND.

That the People should have a share in the Legislature is the vital principle of every free Government. That the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial powers should be vested in one man, or body of men, is incompatible with and destructive of liberty. If chance or indiscretion should ever consolidate such inconsistent powers, the freedom of the people will be in danger until they are separated. This radical evil in our Colony demands immediate attention, and requires an instant cure. All men, by nature fond of power, are unwilling to part with the possession of it. The desire to command increases every day. The exercise creates affection; and what was granted as a trust, is soon claimed as a right. The affable, courteous, patriotick citizen out of power, frequently degenerates into the haughty, insolent tyrant, when vested with supreme command. No man, or body of men, ought to be intrusted with the united powers of Government, or more command than is absolutely necessary to discharge the particular office committed to him. A rotation of power, a rotation of office, with moderate salaries, are the best and most effectual means to preserve the liberties of the people. Our Convention was introduced as a temporary expedient—a child of necessity—to supply, in some measure, a want of Government. The old and constitutional Government could not be trusted. The present Convention, invested by the people at their election with the whole legislative power, exercise not only the legislative but the judicial and executive authority. This jumble of characters must and will introduce the most palpable errors and confusion into our publick affairs. The justly celebrated Montesquieu observes, that a complete tyranny is established by such a combination of powers. For the want of a proper Government, the greatest crimes to the State may be committed with impunity. Our paper money may be forged, intelligence conveyed to our enemies, and traitors bear arms against us. The first ought to be punished with death, and the two last with the loss of life and estate. The danger to the community from the commission of these crimes is very apparent. The Convention could not declare the penalty for the offence without pointing out some mode for the trial of the criminal. As legislators to make the law, and as judges to determine the breach, in the case of life, would seem too arbitrary, and deprive the people of the great bulwark of their liberty—trial by jury, no courts are established to execute the resolves of the Convention, as the law of the land: a trial by jury, therefore, could not be given, and on the greatest criminals no adequate punishment could be inflicted.

These, and many other reasons, will suggest themselves to every reader, and convince him that the present mode of Government by Conventions ought now to cease. Policy, prudence, and our safety, call for the establishment of a proper, effectual, and well-regulated Government. The writer of this paper would be for an abolition of Governments, if the conduct of the two last was wholly unexceptionable. It has been well observed, “that in the relation of constituent and representative, one principal security of the former is the right he holds to be fully informed of the conduct of the latter; and no case can exist in which it would be of more importance to exercise the right than the present, nor any in which the Representative would more willingly acquiesce in the exercise of it.” The late Convention was pleased to declare “that they had no intention or desire to prevent any person from freely examining into their conduct, or to exercise his judgment, or to communicate his sentiments, as to the abilities or fitness of any man to fill the office to which he is appointed; and that it is necessary, for the purposes of filling the places of highest trust with the best and most approved characters in the community, and for the preservation of publick liberty, that there should be such free investigations: the right of examining into the publick conduct of their rulers is inherent in the people.” The Convention have given their publick testimony of the propriety of the exercise of it, without the caution annexed. I would not wantonly and licentiously traduce, by misrepresentations, the conduct of any publick body or of any individual. The conduct of the December Convention, in appointing about fifty out of their number (eighty) to be Brigadiers and Field Officers of the Militia, has given great offence. A monopoly in trade or power will not be tolerated in a free Government. I am sorry to mention the mode of appointing officers of the regular troops. Merit should be the only recommendation to office. To truck, to bargain for each other's votes, without any inquiry into the pretensions or abilities of the person proposed, and with no other condition than if you will vote for my friend, I will give my voice for yours, was mean, dishonourable, and disgraceful. The refusal to vote individually, by which the conduct of each member might be known to his constituents, was very exceptionable. That eighteen members should make the law for this Province, is impolitic and unjust. (a) An equal representation of the people is the best and greatest security for their liberty; and the publick cannot conceive the reasons for the Convention's rejecting a motion to that purpose. The charter of this Province has been deemed sacred by our Conventions. The Charter to the City of Annapolis grants the citizens a right to send two Delegates to Assembly, and an act of our Assembly confirms that right. The Convention disregarded the petition of the citizens to send Delegates to the Convention. The instructions given by the Convention to their Deputies in Congress discovered a want of confidence in their members or the Congress, and had a dangerous tendency to withdraw this Province from their union with the other Colonies. The draft of the instructions, as reported by the Committee, will be published, with a few strictures. The first Council of Safety consisted of sixteen gentlemen; (b) to prevent an abuse of power, from a continuance thereof in the same persons, the Convention resolved, that at each Convention one-half of the members should be ineligible to the succeeding Council. At the December Convention, seven gentlemen were constituted a Council of Safety, with power to any four or more of them to elect another in case of death. (c) At the last Convention, in May, nine gentlemen were elected a Council of Safety. (d) The December Convention left out of the Council of Safety gentlemen of abilities, and of known and approved attachment to the American cause. The last Convention continued the gentlemen appointed in December. Why did not the rule to prevent an abuse of power, from a continuance thereof in the same persons, take place at the last as well as at the December Convention? Were the gentlemen worthy of more trust or confidence than their predecessors? It is well known that one of the gentlemen in the Council has uniformly opposed every measure adopted by this Province for their defence; and that another gentleman exerted all his influence to rivet the forty per poll, and to establish a proclamation for officers' fees as the law of the land; this conduct could be no recommendation to sit in our Councils, and direct the military force of this Province. The transactions of the Convention relative to Governor Eden have given great disgust in this and our sister Colonies. Governor Eden (among other pieces of ill-behaviour) issued his proclamation to regulate and establish the fees of office; this conduct was stigmatized by the unanimous voice of the Delegates of Maryland, as arbitrary and tyrannical, and the advisers of the measure were voted enemies of this country: is it not remarkable that a Convention, composed of many of the same Delegates, should now, without any change in their Governor's conduct, express “their real wishes for his return to resume the Government of this Province?”

The times are full of danger, jealousy, and fear. The publick, it is hoped, will not be offended with the author for giving them information, and expressing his opinion of the publick conduct of their rulers;

— For he has no wish above
His country's welfare and his country's love.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MARYLAND.

There never was a time in which it was more necessary for you to inquire into the conduct of your Representatives. If, on examination and a strict scrutiny, you approve, let your honour and confidence be given to your present Delegates. If you find good cause to suspect their political principles or probity, discard, without hesitation, such men from your service with contempt, disgrace, and infamy. If you discover a want of judgment and fortitude, if their conduct is weak, timid, and irresolute, dismiss them with silence, as unfit to advise or govern in the present state of your affairs, which demands wisdom to plan and firmness to execute. If only an error in judgment can be imputed to them, correct it by your advice and instructions.

(a) e. g. Three Delegates attend from nine Counties; two from each of them concur in opinion. The Province would be bound by eighteen members, though there should be forty-four dissentients.

The December Convention appointed a Committee* to prepare a draft of Instructions for the Deputies in Congress, who reported the following, as unanimously agreed to by them:

“To the Honourable M. TILGHMAN, Esq., T. JOHNSON, Jun., S. CHASE, ROBERT GOLDSBOROUGH, W. PACA, T. STONE, ROBERT ALEXANDER, and JOHN ROGERS, Esquires:

“The Convention, taking into their most serious consideration the present state of the unhappy dispute between Great Britain and the United Colonies, think it proper to deliver you their sentiments, and to instruct you in certain points relative to your conduct in Congress as Representatives of this Province.

“The experience we and our ancestors have had of the mildness and equity of the English Government, under which we have grown up to, and enjoyed a state of felicity not exceeded by any people we know of, until the grounds of the present controversy were laid by the Ministry and Parliament of Great Britain, it has most strongly endeared to us that Constitution from whence these blessings have been derived, and makes us ardently wish for a reconciliation with the mother country, upon terms that may ensure to these Colonies an equal and permanent freedom. To this Constitution we are attached, not only by habit but by principle, being, in our judgments, persuaded it is, of all known systems, best calculated to secure the liberty of the subject, to guard against despotism on the one hand, and licentiousness on the other.

“Impressed with these sentiments, we warmly recommend to you to keep constantly in your view the avowed end and purpose for which these Colonies originally associated—the redress of American grievances and securing the rights of the Colonists.

“The remarkable success which has attended the American arms afford so happy an opportunity of evincing to our Sovereign, to our brethren of Great Britain, and to the world, the sincerity of our frequent declarations of our strong desire of reconciliation, that, as Representatives of this Province, we think it our duty to instruct you to take the first opportunity to move for in Congress, and use your utmost endeavours to have prepared and transmitted, an humble Petition to the Throne, disavowing, in the most solemn manner, all design in these Colonies of independence, and declaring, in explicit terms, that they have nothing more in view than the establishment of their just rights, expressing their ardent desire to be restored to the confidence of their Sovereign, and to that happy connection which subsisted between them and the parent State before their present troubles began, and praying the Royal interposition with Parliament for the speedy restoration of peace and tranquillity to the divided empire. As upon the obtention of these great objects we shall think it our greatest happiness to be firmly united to Great Britain, in a constitutional dependance upon the imperial Crown and Parliament thereof, we think proper to instruct you, that should any proposition be happily made by the Crown or Parliament that may lead to, or lay a rational and probable ground for, reconciliation, you use your utmost endeavours to cultivate and improve it into a happy settlement and lasting amity; taking care to secure the United Colonies against the exercise of the right assumed by Parliament to tax America, and to alter and change the Charters and Constitutions of the said Colonies; which cannot be admitted without destroying the essential security of the lives, liberties, and properties of the Colonists.

“We further instruct you, that you do not, without the previous knowledge and approbation of the Convention of this Province, assent to any proposition to declare these Colonies independent of the Crown of Great Britain; nor to any proposition for making or entering into alliance with any foreign power; nor to any union or confederation of these Colonies which may necessarily lead to a separation from the mother country. Desirous as we are of peace with Great Britain upon safe and honourable terms, we wish you, nevertheless, and instruct you, to join with the other Colonies in such military operations as you shall judge proper and necessary for the common defence, until such a peace can be happily obtained. At the same time that we assure you we have an entire confidence in your abilities and integrity in the discharge of the great trust reposed in you, we must observe to you, as our opinion, that in the relation of constituent and Representative, one principal security of the former is, the right he holds to be fully informed of the conduct of the latter. We can conceive no case to exist in which it would be of more importance to exercise this right than the present, nor any in which we can suppose the Representative would more willingly acquiesce in the exercise of it; we therefore instruct you, that you, from time to time, as occasions may offer, lay before the Convention of this Province the proceedings, and the part you take in the general deliberations of the Congress, except such military operations as may be judged necessary to be kept secret.”

To determine the propriety of this Province urging the Congress to petition the King of Great Britain in January last, it may be proper to observe, that the Petition proposed was, in substance, and almost in words, the same with the one sent by the Congress and then lying before the Throne. The Proclamation declaring all the Colonies in rebellion, was issued a few days after the arrival and knowledge of our Petition, and was published in all the newspapers. It was also well known that the Parliament was called and expected to meet in October. The Petition proposed would not probably arrive in England before the month of March, before which time the measures of Parliament must have been taken,* and would not be in the least influenced by the Petition. To send a second Petition of the same nature, before a knowledge of the fate of the first, could answer no other purpose but to discover an unreasonable fondness for peace, and encourage a wicked and implacable tyrant in the pursuit of his diabolical schemes. This part of the instructions was agreed to by the Convention, and struck out on the next day, after the receipt of the King's speech.

The instruction not to assent to any proposition of independency, for a foreign alliance, nor to any union of the Colonies which might necessarily lead to a separation, without the previous knowledge and approbation of the Convention, might have produced the most fatal consequences to all America. Cases might have happened in which it would have been expedient to form foreign alliances without any delay; if they could not be entered into without the consent of Maryland, though a very great majority of the Colonies should esteem such measure wise and absolutely necessary, the opportunity of saving America might have been lost. The Congress alone could have the best intelligence and comprehensive view of our affairs, and would be the most capable judges when this step ought to be taken. Interest, policy, and necessity would induce this Province not to separate from her sister Colonies. Why, then, discover a distrust and want of confidence in the Congress, that is a majority of the Colonies? Why disclose to the world that this Province would not be bound to unite with a majority of them?

NEW-YORK DELEGATES TO PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, June 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We doubt not but before this you have received our President's letter, informing you that this Congress have appointed the officers for the regiment directed to be raised in our Colony by the resolve passed on Friday last, and then transmitted you. But as we conceive the appointment of officers by this Congress for new levies to be raised in a particular Colony, is contrary to the ordinary practice, and may therefore be considered as in some measure infringing on the rights of the Colony, we beg leave, as far as we are able, to explain the reasons of Congress for taking this step, and our conduct thereon.

On receiving the late intelligence from Canada respecting the repulse of the detachment of our Army commanded by General Thompson, at Three Rivers, &c., the despatches containing this account, with the state of our Army in Canada, were referred to the Board of War, who, the same day, reported the necessity of reinforcing our Army there with four regiments, &c. That to be raised in our Colony to be one. To expedite the raising of which, an arrangement of the officers was also reported, and agreed to by Congress. We objected to this measure, and thought it our duty to withhold our assent, not only because it was (as we conceived) introducing a new precedent which might give offence, but might interfere with appointments which you might probably have made for the same regiment in consequence of the former resolve. The present occasion and necessity of despatch were urged to support the measure, and it was alleged that, as these appointments were of particular persons who had merited by former service, it interfered with no former rule; and even should the appointments be continued to the Provincial Congress, it would, in this case, only create unnecessary delay, as the same persons must be appointed by them, to answer the design and meaning of this Congress expressed in their former resolve. We were persuaded, nay, we are morally certain, considering the busy season of the year, which will enhance the wages of labourers and the numbers of Militia now in the service, that this regiment cannot possibly be raised in time to answer the end for which it is more particularly designed; and should our affairs in Canada grow worse, as we have reason to apprehend from present appearances, we feared lest delay, and every unavoidable misfortune which may befall our Army in Canada for want of a proper reinforcement, might by some be imputed to our Colony, notwithstanding your utmost exertions to carry into execution this impracticable and (as we conceive) ineffectual measure, we judged it, therefore, most prudent only to mention our reasons for withholding our assent, without making a more pointed and strenuous opposition to this measure, thereby leaving the Colony in such a situation as not to incur any blame on this occasion.

We are, gentlemen, with highest respect, your most obedient servants,

GEORGE CLINTON,
FRANCIS LEWIS,
WILLIAM FLOYD,
HENRY WISNER,
JOHN ALSOP.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of New-York.

PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, June 27, 1776.

The Committee having reason to believe that wicked and ill-disposed persons have seduced and enticed some of the men belonging to the boats to desert the service, and go into other employ, have thought it necessary to publish the following Resolve of Assembly:

“Resolved, That any person or persons whatsoever, within this Colony, who shall harbour and conceal any deserter (knowing him to be such) from the Continental forces, or any other forces raised within this or any other of the United Colonies for the defence of America, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding fifty, nor less than thirty dollars, or suffer three months’ imprisonment, for each offence, being convicted thereof by the testimony of one or more witnesses before any two Justices of the Peace of the City, Borough, or County respectively, where such offence shall be committed, who are hereby authorized to hear and determine all offences contrary to the above resolve; which fine shall be deposited in the hands of the Overseers of the Poor of the City, Borough, or Township, where the offence is committed, for the use of the poor of such place.”

And the Committee give this publick notice that they are determined to prosecute with the utmost rigour any person who shall harbour, conceal, or in any manner employ any deserter from the service of this Colony.

By order of the Committee:

GEORGE ROSS, Chairman.

GOVERNOUR FRANKLIN TO THE MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL AND ASSEMBLY OF NEW-JERSEY.

Perth-Amboy, June 27, 1776.

The occasion of my calling you together at this time was not only to give you an opportunity of considering the present distracted state of the Province, and of defending your own and the people’s constitutional rights, if you should choose it, but to communicate to you and to consult you upon some intelligence I have received from his Majesty’s Secretaries of State respecting the business to be transacted by the Commissioners which his Majesty has graciously condescended to appoint for the purpose (among others) of “confering with proper persons upon such points as may be necessary for effecting a restoration of the publick tranquillity.” These Commissioners, I had great reason to expect, would be arrived by the time of your meeting, and I know of no persons of this Province so proper to receive and confer with them as yourselves.

On the whole, gentlemen, much positive good would, in my opinion, have resulted to the Province had a meeting of the General Assembly been held at this juncture. But as that now seems not likely to happen, I shall take my leave of you and the good people you represent, perhaps for the last time. Permit me, before we part, to recommend it to you to defend your Constitution in all its branches. Let me exhort you to avoid, above all things, the traps of independency and republicanism now set for you, however temptingly they may be baited. Depend upon it, you can never place yourselves in a happier situation than in your ancient constitutional dependency on Great Britain. No independent State ever was, or ever can be, so happy as we have been, and might still be, under that Government. I have early and often warned you of the pernicious designs of many pretended patriots, who, under the mask of zeal for reconciliation, have been, from the first, insidiously promoting a system of measures purposely calculated for widening the breach between the two countries, so as to let in an independent republican tyranny—the worst and most debasing of all possible tyrannies. They well know that this has not even a chance of being accomplished but at the expense of the lives and properties of many thousands of the honest people of this country; yet these, it seems, are as nothing in the eyes of such desperate gamblers! But remember, gentlemen, I now tell you, that should they (contrary to all probability) accomplish their baneful purpose, yet their Government will not be lasting. It will never suit a people who have tasted the sweets of British liberty under a British Constitution. When the present high fever shall abate of its warmth, and the people are once more able coolly to survey and compare their past with their present situation, they will, as naturally as the sparks fly upwards, wreak their vengeance on the heads of those who, taking advantages of their delirium, had plunged them into such difficulties and distress.

This, gentlemen, I well know is not language suited to the times; but it is better—it is honest truth, flowing from a heart that is ready to shed its best blood for this country. A real patriot can seldom or ever speak popular language. A false one will suffer himself to speak nothing else. The last will often be popular, because he will always conform himself to the present humours and passions of the people, that he may the better gratify his private ambition and promote his own sinister designs. The first will most generally be unpopular, because his conscience will not permit him to be guilty of such base compliances, and because he will ever serve the people, if in his power, against their own inclinations, though he be sure that he thereby risks his ruin or destruction. I am not insensible of the dangers I am likely to incur, but I do not regard them. It is the part of an ignoble mind to decline doing good for fear of the evil that might follow. I bear no enmity to any man that means well, however we may differ in political sentiments. I most heartily wish you, gentlemen, and the people of this once happy Province, may again enjoy peace and prosperity, and I shall ever particularly honour and esteem such of you and them as have dared, with an honest and manly firmness, in these worst of times, to avow their loyalty to the best of Sovereigns, and manifest their attachment to their legal Constitution. As to my own part, I have no scruple to repeat at this time what I formerly declared to the Assembly, “that no office nor honour in the power of the Crown to bestow, will ever influence me to forget or neglect the duty I owe to my country; nor the most furious rage of the intemperate zealots induce me to swerve from the duty I owe his Majesty.”

WILLIAM FRANKLIN.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN NEW-YORK
TO HIS FRIEND IN HARTFORD, DATED JUNE 27, 1776.

You have no doubt heard of a most horrid conspiracy lately discovered in this place. I have had no opportunity to examine the evidences in support of the fact; but from the weight of the persons who have appeared to prosecute the inquiry, and the circumstances that have been mentioned, I have no doubt of the truth of the general charge. The substance of it I take to be this, that Governour Tryon in this, and other similar emissaries in all the other Governments, have been for a long time using all the influence that the command of the Ministry and Treasury in England could give them, to bribe and cajole our principal people in all the Colonies to act in concert with their plans; that by degrees they have brought numbers fully to co-operate with them; and, after being led on too far to recede, stick at nothing, however villanous and horrible, to accomplish their designs; that the principal emissaries have, by pursuing the same methods that were successfully practised upon themselves, drawn in those beneath them, so as to take in all degrees, from the prince to the scavenger; that a distribution of money and arms has been secretly made from the greater to the least branches; that there were schemes to distinguish who were in the plot, without speaking; that when all was ready for execution, the most vigorous efforts were to be made in different parts at once to land the troops and push their operations; at the same time all our most important posts were to be seized by the conspirators on shore; among ourselves all our important men were to be seized or murdered, together with all that were friendly attached to the cause of American rights and liberty, and might be likely to obstruct their views or give them trouble. General Washington was among the first that were to be sacrificed, and the rest in succession, according to their importance. A number of the General's Guard have already been taken up, were bribed to murder him, and have for some time received double pay for that purpose, one of whom was yesterday condemned to be hanged.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK TO A GENTLEMAN
IN BOSTON, DATED JUNE 27, 1776.

Our Mayor, who has been till lately confined in a private house, has been removed to the common jail. This looks badly.

The Jersey Convention have voted for a new Government; elected new Delegates for the Continental Congress, whereof Dr. Witherspoon and Judge Stockton are two; given them (I am informed) warm instructions; made it death for any of the inhabitants of the United Colonies to be found in arms against them, &c. New-Jersey, it was thought, would be among the last to alter their Government—nothing more than a bare majority was expected in favour of it; but the plot against the General has wrought wonders—there were but four dissenting voices.

The Committee of Frederick County, in Maryland, have published some resolves which bear a little hard upon their Provincial Convention for the part they have acted respecting a change of Government. I think it likely that that Convention will be dissolved.

Some vessels arrived at the Hook yesterday and the day before. Do not learn how many, what they are, nor from whence.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

New-York, June 27, 1776.

SIR: I this morning received, by express, letters from Generals Schuyler and Arnold, with a copy of one from General Sullivan to the former, and also of others to General Sullivan, of all which I do myself the honour to transmit you copies. They will give a further account of the melancholy situation of our affairs in Canada, and show that there is nothing left to save our Army there but evacuating the country. I am hopeful General Sullivan would retreat from the Isle-aux-Noix without waiting for previous orders for that purpose, as, from Generals Schuyler and Arnold's letters, it is much to be feared, by remaining there any considerable time, his retreat would be cut off, or be a matter of extreme difficulty. I would observe to Congress that it is not in my power to send any carpenters from hence to build the gondolas and galleys General Arnold mentions, without taking them from a work equally necessary, if not more so, here of the same kind; and submit it to them whether it may not be advisable, as it is of great importance to us to have a number of these vessels on the Lake to prevent the enemy passing, to withdraw the carpenters for the present from the frigates building upon the North River, and detach them immediately, with all that can be got at Philadelphia, for that purpose, and carrying on these here.

I have the pleasure to inform you of another capture made by our armed vessels, of a transport, on the 19th instant, with a company of Highland Grenadiers, on board. The enclosed extract of a letter from General Ward, by last night's post, contains the particulars, to which I beg leave to refer you.

I have been honoured with your favour of the 21st and 25th instant, in due order, with their important enclosures, to which I shall particularly attend. I have transmitted General Schuyler a copy of the resolve of Congress respecting the Mohegan and Stockbridge Indians, and directed him to put an immediate stop to the raising the two companies.

The Quartermaster-General has been called upon for stopping the tents designed for Massachusetts-Bay, and ordered to forward them immediately. He means to write Congress upon the subject, and hopes his conduct will not appear to deserve their reprehension. Of this they will judge from his relation of the matter.

Being extremely desirous to forward the intelligence from Canada to Congress, well knowing their anxiety about our affairs there, I must defer writing upon some other matters I want to lay before them till the next opportunity, which I hope will be to-morrow, when I will inform them fully upon the subject of rations, having desired the Commissary-General to furnish me with some things necessary in that instance.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

Albany, June 25, 1776—1 o'clock A. M.

DEAR GENERAL: About an hour ago General Arnold, who is arrived here from Canada, sent me a letter from General Sullivan, enclosing one from General Arnold to him, another of Colonel Hazen, and a third from Lieutenant-Colonel Antill; copies of all which I do myself the honour to enclose. The grief I feel on the evacuation of Canada by our troops is greatly alleviated by the little loss sustained in the retreat, and the hope I have that we shall maintain a superiority on the Lakes.

Your Excellency will observe that General Schuyler intimates that farther than the Isle-aux-Noix he could not retreat without your Excellency's or my orders; previous to which he observes that the Council of War were unanimous for coming to Crown Point. I do not hesitate to say that I wish he had retreated, at least as far south as Point-au-Fer or Isle-la-Motte, as I am afraid the enemy will throw themselves between him and the broad part of Lake Champlain, and render it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to send on a supply of provisions, as they can, with light cannon, and even with wall-pieces, command the waters from shore to shore in most places, for six miles south of Isle-aux-Noix, and in many even with musketry.

Did not the danger of remaining there, especially with an Army broken and spiritless, and who wish so much to come further south, that the officers (as General Arnold informs me) have already in a body entreated him to come away, appear to me too great to admit of the delay of waiting your Excellency's orders, I should not send mine for a further retreat until your pleasure could be known; but I trust I shall be justified in doing it, and yet I believe the order will meet the Army on this side of Isle-aux-Noix.

Be pleased to order up six anchors and cables for the gondolas that are constructing, of the size of what is called the small anchor and cable of an Albany sloop.

I shall immediately write to Governour Trumbull to procure fifty ship carpenters, if he can, and send for a like number to the Massachusetts-Bay.

If any Dutch mill-saws can be procured at New-York, be pleased to order up four dozen, with six dozen of files for them. Having learned that General Gates is upon his way up, I have ordered a boat down to meet him.

I am, dear General, with every sentiment of esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To General Washington.

Isle-aux-Noix, June 19, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: By a strange reverse of fortune we are driven to the sad necessity of abandoning Canada. I had the most sanguine hopes of collecting our Army together and driving the enemy below Deschambault, in which I doubt not I should have succeeded, had not Burgoyne, with a strong party, arrived in Canada, and reached the Three Rivers the night before our people made the unfortunate attack upon that place under General Thompson; the particulars of this engagement I have not before had in my power to give you. I find our loss to amount to about one hundred and fifty. Colonel Wayne sustained the greatest, as his men began the attack, and behaved with great bravery, as did the Colonel himself; in short, all the officers behaved with great spirit, except some few of low rank; and had not the number of the enemy been so superior I doubt not the point would have been carried, in which case I should have pushed for Deschambault, which, if secured, would have given us the command of the country. But this defeat convinced us that we came too late for the important purpose. I was determined, however, to hold Sorel, as it seemed the pleasure of Congress; but after taking unwearied pains to fortify that post, and to collect the main body of the Army to defend it, I found but two thousand five hundred at that place, and about a thousand more at the other garrisons, most of the latter being under inoculation, and those regiments which had not the small-pox expecting every day to be taken down with it; at the same time the British fleet, to the amount of thirty-six sail, had advanced into the Lake near us, and sixty-six lay at Three Rivers. The encampment of the enemy was to appearance very large, and every account proved their number to be exceedingly superior to ours. The Canadians, too, as far as the enemy advanced, were obliged to take arms or be destroyed. In this state of affairs I was much embarrassed, yet was determined to hold my ground at all hazards, but, to my great mortification, I found myself at the head of a dispirited Army, filled with horror at the thought of seeing their enemy. Indeed I was much surprised to see the scattered remains of this Army, when I had collected them together; the small-pox, famine and disorder, had rendered them almost lifeless: the flight from before Quebeck, the fate of those from the Cedars, and the total loss of Sherburne's party had, before my arrival with my brigade, destroyed all spirit among these troops. But upon our arrival their spirits seemed to return; but when they found this party defeated, and the number of the enemy increasing, I found a great panick again taking place among both officers and soldiers. I had no less, I believe, than forty officers who begged leave to resign their commissions upon the most trivial pretences, and this even extended to Field Officers. The prevailing opinion was, that the enemy, instead of attacking our works, would get round us and cut off our communication with the upper country, and destroy our retreat; this, indeed, they had completely in their power, as we had not force to dislodge them. I soon found that, however strongly I might fortify Sorel, my men would in general leave me upon appearance of the enemy. In this state of affairs I called a Council of all the Field Officers, with the Baron de Woedike, and they were almost unanimously for quitting the ground. General Arnold was not present, but his opinion you have, as well as that of Colonel Hazen and Colonel Antill, in the enclosed letters.

I then immediately decamped, taking with us every article, even to a spade. The enemy, having a fair wind, was at our works in an hour after we left them. Our guard at Bertier not coming in at the time they were ordered, were met by the enemy, forced to leave nine batteaus, and take to Chambly by land. This was all the loss we sustained. We retreated as far as Chambly. This post not being tenable, we removed our batteaus over the rapids, with all the baggage and stores, except three pieces of cannon, which were too heavy to bring over the rapids; and, indeed, they were but bad pieces of ordnance at best. I then proceeded to St. Johns, where everything arrived in safety. We burned the garrison at Chambly, with the gondolas and vessels there, leaving nothing but ruin behind us in the fort. We pulled up all the bridges in our way to St. Johns. General Arnold did the same in the other road from Montreal, from which place he made a very prudent and judicious retreat, with an enemy close at his heels. When we got to St. Johns, another Council was held, where it was unanimously agreed, that to attempt holding St. Johns, would be to expose the whole Army to inevitable ruin, as our communication might easily be cut off, and the whole Army fall a sacrifice. Previous to this, I received the resolves of Congress for six thousand Militia, which I laid before the Council; they were all of opinion that this would rather weaken than strengthen our Army; and further, that they could not possibly arrive in season to save us from a powerful Army close at our heels. They were fully of opinion that (in the present unhealthy state of the Army) it would be best to remove to Crown Point, fortify that post, and build armed vessels to secure the navigation of the Lake. Upon this we immediately stripped the garrison of every article, took our batteaus, and retreated to this Island. Further than this I could not go, without your or General Washington's orders, or the directions of Congress. I therefore send on the sick, the looks and numbers of whom will present you with the most dismal spectacle ever furnished from our Army in this quarter of the globe. I have sent on General Arnold to give directions at Crown Point to receive your orders. The men who are fit for duty I shall retain here, ready to execute any orders you will please to communicate.

Thus, dear General, I have given you a correct account of my unfortunate campaign, claiming no merit, except in making a safe and regular retreat; and although driven to it by inevitable necessity, (as the grand post was lost before my arrival, and put beyond my power to regain,) and although it was before an army much more powerful than mine, yet I am sufficiently mortified, and since wish I had never seen this fatal country, unless I had arrived in season to have done some good to my country, and insured the expectation of Congress.

Dear General, believe me to be, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To the Hon. General Schuyler.

P. S. I beg you to write to me where the remainder of Wayne's regiment is. As I don't write to General Washington or the Congress, I beg you to forward a copy of this letter.

JOHN SULLIVAN.

Chambly, June 13, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I went to St. Johns yesterday, where I found everything in the greatest confusion; not one stroke done to fortify the camp—the engineer a perfect sot—at that and this place near three thousand sick. I have given orders that the sick draw only half rations in future. I have ordered Colonel Antill to St. Johns, and an abattis and lines to be immediately begun, to enclose the two old forts, and an encampment sufficient to hold six thousand men. I am fully of opinion not one minute ought to be lost in securing our retreat, and saving our heavy cannon, baggage, and provisions. The enemy will never attack you at Sorel. Their force is doubtless much superior to ours, and we have no advice of any reinforcement. Shall we sacrifice the few men we have by endeavouring to keep possession of a small part of the country which can be of little or no service to us? The junction of the Canadians with the Colonies—an object which brought us into this country—is now at an end. Let us quit them, and secure our own country before it is too late. There will be more honour in making a safe retreat than hazarding a battle against such superiority, which will doubtless be attended with the loss of men, artillery, &c., and the only pass to our country. These arguments are not urged by fear for my personal safety: I am content to be the last man who quits this country, and fall, so that my country rise. But let us not fall all together.

The goods I seized in Montreal, and sent to Chambly, under the care of Major Scott, have been broken open, plundered, and huddled together in the greatest confusion. They were taken in such a hurry it was impossible to take a particular account of them. Each man's name was marked on his packages. When Major Scott arrived at Chambly, he received your positive orders to repair to Sorel; the guard was ordered to return, and the goods to be delivered Colonel Hazen, to be stored. He refused receiving or taking any care of them; by which means, and Major Scott's being ordered away, the goods have been opened and plundered, I believe to a large amount. It is impossible for me to distinguish each man's goods, or ever settle with the proprietors. The goods are delivered to Mr. McCarthy. This is not the first or last order Colonel Hazen has disobeyed. I think him a man of too much consequence for the post he is in. I have given him orders to send directly to St. Johns all the heavy cannon, shot, powder, and batteaus, valuable stores, and the sick. I go to Montreal immediately, and beg to have your orders as soon as possible for my future conduct.

I am, with respect and esteem, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

P. S. If you should think proper to retire to St. Johns, will it not be best to order a number of carts to be ready from all the neighbouring parishes, and to enforce your order by sending a number of armed men to secure them?

Chambly, June 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed you have a copy of a letter which I have received from General Arnold. It contains, as I conceive, an undeserved reflection, as I am very conscious of having done my duty in every respect; but if otherwise, I am equally unworthy the honour which the Congress conferred on me, as unfit for the service of my country. I must, therefore, beg you will order, as soon as the service will admit, a Court of Inquiry, or a Court-Martial, as you may think fit, to determine this matter.

Enclosed you have also the copy of an order of yesterday, which I have put into execution. The officers in general think it cruel, and the soldiers murmur greatly. There has been, within these few days, a considerable desertion from St. Johns, Chambly, and, I believe, some from your camp; they go off, as I am told, through the woods, on each side of the Lake; and it is not possible for us to prevent those who choose to undertake so fatiguing a journey.

I am sorry to see the disagreeable situation we are now in; a safe retreat to the other side of Lake Champlain is the only point to be attended to, in my opinion, as we have irrecoverably lost the only chance we had of maintaining our ground in Canada, and that by our neglect, viz: fortifying the pass at Deschambault in the proper time, which would have secured to us the navigation of the river St. Lawrence down to that place; an advantage—added to the protection we should have given, and, in consequence, the assistance we might have had from at least seven-eighths of Canada—which would have enabled us to withstand any force the British Ministry might have sent against us. Sorel is calculated by nature as a proper place, in our situation, for the encampment of your main body, in order to watch the motions of our enemy only. Art will scarcely make any difference in the place; for if you fortify, the enemy will know it, and, in that case, leave you in your fortification, go past your post, and proceed directly to Chambly and St. Johns. You must not consider them as being in an enemy's country; but, on the contrary, suppose it to be our own case. Do not rely on any real assistance from the Canadians whom you are collecting together—I know them well; be assured that, in our present situation, they will leave us in the hour of difficulty. Look into your own distressed, dissatisfied, and undisciplined Army. The Congress has promised them what is out of your power to perform. What are we to expect from a handful of such men, against the well-known best troops in the world? I dread the consequence of their delay: you will find it is not without a plan, which they will by and by attempt to execute; if they succeed, your Army will be cut to pieces. For God's sake order the necessary precaution to be immediately taken to secure your retreat. There is no time to lose, as this is not to be done in a moment. I was yesterday at St. Johns; not a batteau at that place—only half a dozen fit for service here. St. Johns is almost naked of artillery; we have at last got some pieces here fit for service; shall they be sent on to you, or back to St. Johns? Please to order.

I beg you will pardon the freedom which I have taken on this occasion in transmitting to you my opinion in the present critical situation of publick affairs in Canada, which I should not have ventured had I not first obtained your leave for that purpose.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient humble servant,

M. HAZEN.

To General Sullivan.

Chambly, June 13, 1776.

WORTHY SIR: You have doubtless ere this received a line from General Arnold, acquainting you of his having sent me on a tour to Chambly, (this place,) to endeavour to collect a proper return of the troops at each post. I have done my utmost, but have not yet finished, owing to the scattered situation of our men, for twenty miles in length; as soon as done, I shall wait upon you. There are about fifteen hundred at St. Johns, and upwards of twelve hundred here; very few indeed fit for duty.

The loss of Deschambault, I am clear, has lost us the Province. A prudent retreat, I presume, under our present situation, is our only plan. If they should get possession of our boats, of which I am apprehensive, I think they may be at Crown Point before us. This, General, is a bold observation—excuse my freedom. I have lived ten years in the country of their operations, and have seen their manœuvres: depend upon it they don't retard their operations for nothing; they are meditating a plan they will soon attempt to put into execution. Secure our water-carriage on Lake Champlain, and we turn the tables upon them, and I think we can meet them there upon advantageous terms. I once more beg your excuse, in a hurry. Accept my simple opinion; if it serves you I am happy; if not, throw them by; yet still believe me, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

E. ANTILL.

To General Sullivan.

Albany, June 20, 1776—10 o'clock P. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Your despatches arrived at a quarter past eleven this morning.

I very seriously deplore the disagreeable situation of you and our Army in Canada; and although I applaud your magnanimous spirit, yet I cannot by any means approve that you should think only of a glorious death or a victory obtained against superior numbers. These sentiments should take place when every other resource is cut off, and when a defeat may not be attended with decisive consequences against us. The evacuation of Canada will certainly be attended with many disagreeable ones; but will not the total destruction of our Army, and a consequent loss of the country, be attended with those infinitely more fatal? Surely it will. I only mention that the enemy will, in that case, be able to penetrate into the Colonies by the way of the Lakes: not so if our Army retreat in safety. Every effort of theirs to accomplish it, at least for this campaign, will prove ineffectual; but should they even be able to advance to the most southern extreme of the Lake, our Army, with reinforcements from the Militia, will there stop their progress. I am, therefore, of opinion, if it should be still in your power when you receive this, that you ought not to remain any longer at Sorel than you have a prospect of retreating with safety; and that the better to secure your retreat, every batteau, as I have formerly observed, which you can possibly spare, ought to be sent without the least delay to St. Johns. I think I am fully authorized to give this opinion, from what you say of the strength of the enemy in your letter to his Excellency General Washington and me, and I have informed his Excellency that I would give you the above advice.

Colonel Dayton is in Tryon County; we shall, I believe have our hands full in that quarter. I am preparing everything to take post at Fort Stanwix, and to repel the threatened invasion of the Mohawk River.

No part of Colonel Wayne's is as yet arrived here, nor any of the Militia ordered by the resolutions of Congress which I transmitted you on the 12th instant.

I have ordered Colonel Wynkoop to send all the batteaus he can to St. Johns, agreeable to General Arnold's and Colonel Poor's request, signified in their letters of the 13th instant; this will deprive me from forwarding the Militia; but if you should not want the batteaus, I entreat you to order them back to Ticonderoga, under the command of an active officer, and as many others as you can spare, that the Militia may be sent without delay.

Please to make my compliments to Major Scammell. The few blank commissions I have are at Fort George, and I will order one to be forwarded to you to be filled up for him. The ague, which now attacks me every day with the utmost violence, has considerably reduced me; and a few fits more, unless they become more moderate, will render me equally unfit to think or act. God bless you, and may Heaven smile propitious on your endeavours.

I am, dear sir, with the best wishes for your health and happiness, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Brigadier-General Sullivan.

Albany, June 25, 1776—5 o'clock A. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Near twelve last night I was favoured with your letter of the 19th by General Arnold. Painful as the evacuation of Canada is to me, yet a retreat without loss greatly alleviates that pain, not only because it reflects honour upon you, but that I have now a confident hope that, by recruiting your Army, and keeping up a naval superiority on the Lake, we shall be able to prevent the enemy from penetrating into the inhabited parts of these Colonies.

I have written his Excellency General Washington that I wish you had complied with the opinion of your Council of War, and retreated as far south as Crown Point; because I fear the greatest embarrassments in sending supplies, as the enemy may throw themselves between you and the broad part of the Lake, and greatly incommode, if not totally obstruct, the passage of batteaus, or any vessels we have, by batteries of small cannon, by wall-pieces, and even musketry; that, if I had not thought the danger of remaining at Isle-aux-Noix too great to admit of the delay of knowing his pleasure with regard to a further retreat, I should not have presumed to order it. I am, dear General, so far at least in sentiment with your Council of War, that I think and wish you to retire at least into the broad part of Lake Champlain. Perhaps Point-au-Fer or Isle-la-Motte might be thought eligible places, until General Washington's pleasure can be known; but should you retire to Crown Point it may be proper to keep all the armed vessels and some batteaus, with swivels fixed upon them, to cruise about Isle-la-Motte, and prevent any attempts the enemy may make to harass the settlements on the east side of the Lake.

I momentarily expect some despatches from General Washington, when I shall write you again.

I am, dear General, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Brigadier-General Sullivan.

Albany, June 25, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: By this express you will receive advice from General Schuyler of our evacuating Canada; an event which, I make no doubt, (from our distressed situation,) you have some time expected. The particulars of General Thompson's repulse and captivity, as nearly as could be ascertained, have been transmitted you; on advice of which, and very direct intelligence that the enemy were greatly superior to us in numbers, I advised General Sullivan to secure his retreat, by retiring to St. Johns. He was determined to keep his post at Sorel, if possible, and did not retire until the 14th instant, at which time the enemy were as high up with their ships as the Sorel. The 15th, at night, when the enemy were at twelve miles distance from me, I quitted Montreal, with my little garrison of three hundred men. The whole Army, with their baggage and cannon, (except three heavy pieces left at Chambly,) arrived at St. Johns the 17th, and at the Isle-aux-Noix the 18th; previous to which it was determined by a Council of War at St. Johns, that, in our distressed situation, (one-half of the Army sick, and almost the whole destitute of clothing and every necessary of life except salt pork and flour,) it was not only imprudent but impracticable to keep possession of St. Johns. Crown Point was judged the only place of health and safety to which the Army could retire and oppose the enemy. It was found necessary to remain at the Isle-aux-Noix for some few days, until the sick, heavy cannon, &c., could be removed. General Sullivan did not choose to leave the Isle-aux-Noix until he received positive orders for that purpose, and thought it necessary for me to repair to this place and wait on General Schuyler. I arrived here last night, and am happy to find him of our sentiments in quitting the Isle-aux-Noix, which, from its low situation, is rendered very unhealthy, and, from the narrow channel leading to it from the south part of Lake Champlain, of six miles in length and from three to eight hundred yards in breadth, is rendered very insecure, as the enemy, by light pieces of cannon and small-arms, might render all access to it dangerous, if not impracticable. It now appears to me of the utmost importance that the Lakes be immediately secured by a large number (at least twenty or thirty) of gondolas, row-galleys, and floating-batteries. The enemy, from undoubted intelligence, have brought over a large number (it is said one hundred) of frames for flat-bottom boats, designed to be made use of on Lake Champlain; and, from their industry and strength, will doubtless become masters of the Lake, unless every nerve on our part is strained to exceed them in a naval armament. I think it absolutely necessary that at least three hundred carpenters be immediately employed. Fifty sent from Philadelphia, who are acquainted with building that kind of craft, would greatly facilitate the matter. A particular return of the Army could not be obtained in our hurry and confusion; it will be transmitted you in a few days. I believe the whole to be about seven thousand, and at least one-half of them are sick and unfit for duty, but daily recovering. Upwards of one thousand more are yet to have the small-pox. The enemy, from the best intelligence that can be obtained, are near ten thousand, exclusive of Canadians and savages, few of the latter having joined them as yet.

I make no doubt it will be thought necessary to repair Crown Point, or build a new fort near that place; the former, from the advantage of its situation and the fine barracks nearly completed, will, I believe, be thought most proper. I make no doubt but General Gates, whom I am happy to hear is on his way here, will pay immediate attention to it.

I flatter myself our arms under your immediate direction will meet with more success than they have done in this quarter. I make not the least doubt our struggles will be crowned with success.

I am, with every friendly wish, most respectfully, dear General, your affectionate and obedient humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

New-York, June 27, 1776.

SIR: Upon information that Major Rogers was travelling through the country under suspicious circumstances, I thought it necessary to have him secured; I therefore sent after him. He was taken at South-Amboy, and brought up to New-York. Upon examination, he informed me that he came from New-Hampshire, the country of his usual abode, where he had left his family, and pretended he was destined to Philadelphia, on business with Congress.

As, by his own confession, he had crossed Hudson's River at New-Windsor, and was taken so far out of his proper and direct route to Philadelphia, this consideration, added to the length of time he had taken to perform his journey; his being found in so suspicious a place as Amboy; his unnecessary stay there, on pretence of getting some baggage from New-York and an expectation of receiving money from a person here of bad character, and in no circumstances to furnish him out of his own stock; the Major's reputation, and his being a half-pay officer,—have increased my jealousies about him. The business which he informs me he has with Congress, is a secret offer of his services, to the end that, in case it should be rejected, he might have his way left open to an employment in the East-Indies, to which he is assigned; and in that case he flatters himself he will obtain leave of Congress to go to Great Britain.

As he had been put upon his parole by Congress, I thought it would be improper to stay his progress to Philadelphia, should he be in fact destined thither. I therefore send him forward, but (to prevent imposition) under the care of an officer, with letters found upon him, which, from their tenour, seem calculated to recommend him to Congress. I submit it to their consideration, whether it would not be dangerous to accept of the offer of his services.

I am, with the greatest respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the President of Congress.

At a Council of General Officers, held at Head-Quarters, June 27, 1776:

Present: His Excellency General Washington; Brigadier-Generals Heath, Spencer, Greene, Lord Stirling, Mifflin, and Scott.

The General communicated to the Council the Proceedings of the Court-Martial on Thomas Hickey; when he was unanimously advised to confirm the sentence, and that it be put in execution to-morrow, at eleven o'clock; for which purpose the General to issue his warrant.

Major Rogers having been brought before this Council of officers, from Amboy, where he has been for several days, the members are unanimously of opinion that he should proceed to Philadelphia, under an escort, and that at the same time a letter be written to Congress, informing them that, under all circumstances, he is not to be sufficiently relied on.

The General read a letter received from Colonel Crarey and Captain Livingston, informing that the Committee took surety for the good behaviour of the prisoners, and discharged them. Unanimously agreed, that the General write to the Provincial Congress, informing them of the transactions there, and that they will order therein; and also, that all persons apprehended, be detained until such information be obtained.

Advised unanimously, that all the Stock and Horses, except what are absolutely necessary for the support of the inhabitants, be removed from Long-Island, Staten-Island, and the adjoining coasts; and that application be made to the Provincial Congress to assist in carrying this measure into execution.

Determination of the Brigadier-Generals, in regard to removal of the Stock from the Islands.

In considering the several matters which your Excellency has been pleased to refer to us, we do, with regard to Long-Island and Staten-Island, think it absolutely necessary, for the safety and defence of this Colony, that all the stock of cattle and sheep (except such as may be requisite for the present subsistence of the inhabitants) be removed to a distance from the sea-coast, and that this be done immediately, as on the arrival of the enemy it will be impossible to give attention to this matter; and also, that all the horses be either removed, or put under such regulations as that they may be removed, on the first approach of the enemy; and with regard to the disaffected inhabitants who have lately been apprehended, we think that the method, at present, by the County Committee, of discharging them on their giving bonds as a security for their good behaviour, is very improper and ineffectual, and therefore recommend it to your Excellency to apply to the Congress of this Province to take some more effectual method of securing the good behaviour of those people; and, in the mean time, that your Excellency will order the officer, in whose custody they are, to discharge no more of them until the sense of the Congress be had thereon.

W. HEATH, STIRLING,
J. SPENCER, NATH. GREENE

June 27, 1776.

COLONEL MOYLAN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

New-York, June 27, 1776.

SIR: General Washington showed me the resolve of Congress, that the tents which came here from Philadelphia should be forwarded to Boston, which shall, with all possible despatch, be complied with. He was also pleased to communicate to me the paragraph of your letter to him respecting the detention of those tents, which, I must own, both surprised and alarmed me much. It really, sir, was not a stretch of power exercised by me, for I knew nothing of them until General Mifflin sent me word that a parcel of tents were arrived, being part of a larger number he had contracted with Mr. Barrell, of Philadelphia, for. I ordered them into the store, and never inquired further about them. To remove any unjust aspersion which my conduct in this affair may subject me to, is my motive for troubling you with this letter; and believe me, sir, the Congress will never find me exercising any power inconsistent with my duty to them, and to the department they have been pleased to honour me with the direction of.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 27, 1776.

SIR: The necessity of the most vigorous and decisive measures in our present circumstances will, I doubt not, justify to your honourable body the removal of the stock of cattle and horses from those parts of the coast most exposed to the enemy. After a long and fatiguing voyage they will need refreshment of this nature, and there is no doubt they will have them, if possible, on any terms. Common prudence, therefore, and a regard to our own safety, strongly evince the necessity of depriving them of such supplies as will enable them to act with more vigour and spirit against us; though painful and disagreeable, it seems to be a measure which the great law of self-preservation now requires.

Enclosed I transmit the unanimous resolution of a council of General Officers, advising such removal, without delay; in which it is proposed to pay a suitable regard to the necessities of the people. I flatter myself that, in a matter of such importance and difficulty, the honourable body over which you preside will approve of the proposal, and carry it into execution, or co-operate with me in the most effectual steps for the purpose.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WADSWORTH.

New-York, June 27, 1776.

SIR: Having received information of your being appointed to command the Militia to be furnished by your Colony for the defence of this place, I entreat you to give notice to the officers who are principally concerned in raising them, that their march be expedited as much as possible, or the assistance they are meant to afford may come too late, as, in all probability, the enemy, immediately on their arrival, will make their grand push, especially if they are apprized of our weak state.

It will be indispensably necessary for the men to come provided with arms, as it will not be in my power to furnish them with one, having many here already unarmed; nor will it contribute to the service in the least degree if they do not; I therefore request the utmost attention to this matter of the last importance, and that none come without.

As it will be proper that an arrangement should be formed, and regular orders given as to their disposition, previous to their coming, to prevent disorder and confusion I desire, as soon as you have notified your principal officers of what I have said about forwarding the troops and bringing arms, that you repair here yourself to receive your instructions, and to be in readiness to give such directions to them as may be necessary for these purposes. I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Brig. Gen. James Wadsworth, com. Militia.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, June 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Congress having disapproved the proceedings of the Commissioners at Albany, on the 13th instant, transmitted them in my letter of the 21st, so far as they relate to raising two companies of Mohegan and Stockbridge Indians; in compliance with their resolve, (a copy of which is enclosed,) I am to request you to put the most early and speedy stop to the same. The honourable President observes in his letter, that the resolve for employing Indians is conceived in such terms as to give, at first view, a latitude of construction as to the place in which they are to be raised, and the Commissioners must have understood it so, which led to the mistake. I am, dear sir, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To General Schuyler.

LIEUTENANT DAVISON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Armed Sloop Schuyler, June 27, 1776.

Since our last, we have, in company with Captain Rogers, of the armed sloop Montgomery, retaken four prizes, which were taken by the Greyhound man-of-war, bound for Sandy-Hook—two brigs, belonging to Nantucket, with oil, one with near five hundred barrels on board, and the other one hundred and fifty; also, a schooner and a sloop, the schooner belonging to Cape-Ann, loaded with molasses and some sugar; the sloop outward bound, belonging to Rhode-Island, loaded with flour and lumber.

We have intelligence by one of the prisoners, that a fleet of one hundred and thirty sail sailed from Halifax the 9th instant for Sandy-Hook, and that General Howe is on board the Greyhound, which we supposed passed us three days ago, we having observed a ship to the westward of us about that time standing for Sandy-Hook. Captain Rogers has applied to the Committee for a guard, which they have supplied us with, and shall send the prisoners as soon as possible.

JOSEPH DAVISON, Lieutenant.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COLONEL JAMES CLINTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Constitution, June 27, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Since I wrote to you I received the within letter, but I think it necessary to have your orders before I comply with the within request. I hear the Committees have taken Colonel Cadwallader Colden, on suspicion of being an enemy to the liberties of America; but what they will do with him I cannot tell. Lawer Cranney, who left Poughkeepsie sometime ago and has been advertised there, is likewise taken by the Committees and sent back by a guard to Poughkeepsie.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON, Colonel.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

At a meeting of the Committees for the Precincts of Newburgh } and New-Windsor, on the 26th of June, 1776. }

DEAR SIR: As complaints have been made before these Committees of sundry persons in the Precinct of Newburgh as being very dangerous to the cause in which we are engaged, we, the said Committees, in conjunction, do request and pray that you will be pleased to grant us Lieutenant Israel Smith, with twenty-five good men, for the space of one week, in order that we may get some of these rascals apprehended and secured. If you shall think well of this matter, and it be consistent with your duty, we beg our request may be complied with without delay. If you are scarce of arms we will furnish them; ammunition we are destitute of at present, therefore beg they will bring a supply with them. We propose to send Major Samuel Logan in company with Lieutenant Smith; also, a good pilot, who understands the woods well. We need not say much to you, sir, on this occasion, as you know our situation; and being in much haste, you will please to pardon any inaccuracies that may appear.

We have the honour to be, with all due esteem, your most obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Committees:

ABEL BELKNAP, Chairman.

To Colonel James Clinton, commanding officer at Fort Constitution.

CADWALLADER COLDEN, JR., TO ULSTER COUNTY COMMITTEE.

Hanover Precinct, June 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: On Monday night last, between the hours of eleven and twelve, a number of armed men surrounded my house, then raising me out of bed, told me they were sent by order of the Joint Committee of Newburgh and New-Windsor to search my house, which I readily submitted to, and used the company in every respect with the greatest good humour and civility. The next morning they told me the Committee desired me to appear before them the day following. I told them I should wait on them, but they replied they were ordered to keep me in custody until that time. I then desired I might be kept under guard at my own house; that I would maintain and pay the guard. This was also refused, and I was threatened to be rode upon a rail if I would not go otherwise; so I was compelled to go with a guard out of the party to Mr. Jackson, of New-Windsor, when I was confined for twenty-four hours; and, though Colonel Ellison offered to become bail for my appearance, I was not permitted to go to his house to lodge. The next day being Saturday, I was carried before the Committee, where, waiting till near sunset, I was called in by the Committee, and asked if I would choose to be tried by the County Convention or before that Board. I desired to know the charge against me, and was answered, nothing but a grand suspicion of my being inimical to the American cause. I said I had made no secret of my principles and opinions on these matters, while I thought they might in the least contribute to ward off the calamities I foresaw must attend the publick measures then adopted, and which is now too unhappily come to pass; that when I found I could do no good that way, I had entirely avoided interfering in any shape in publick affairs; and further said, if there was any charge against me of any kind, I thought, by the rule of the Congress, it was to be made to the Committee of the Precinct in which I resided, so chose to have the affair referred to them; and was answered that that would be appealing to a Board of no greater authority than their own; besides that, they had reason to think the Committee of Hanover too remiss in their duty, and under some undue influence. I then said I was willing to have a hearing or trial before the County Committee, and so was discharged upon my parole to appear before your Board on notice by letter from the Chairman, and which I now desire may be as soon as possible; for since I came home I have been informed that some of the party who came to my house in the night, the next day went through the neighbourhood and reported that they had found a man in my house charged with messages and papers from on board the man-of-war; that he had made his escape, and that they were in pursuit of him; and that one of their own body actually personated such a one, who appeared to be flying before the party.

As I am daily threatened with destruction both to my person and property, and this seems to be calculated to raise the resentment of some mad mob against me, I think it highly necessary for my safety to have this matter cleared up to the publick; and as at present there is no other way but by a hearing before you, I do hereby request you will cause this matter, and any complaint against me, to come before you as soon as may be; and you will oblige, gentlemen, your obedient humble servant,

CADWALLADER COLDEN, JUN.

To the General Committee for the County of Ulster.

In County Committee, New-Paltz, June 28, 1776.

Ordered, That Cadwallader Colden, Esq., be notified to appear at the house of Ann Dubois, on Thursday next, the 4th July, by ten o'clock, in the forenoon, there to answer the charges that then may appear against him touching his being an enemy to the American cause.

Ordered, That Cadwallader Colden, Jun., Esq., be served with a copy of the above.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT BOYD, Jun., Chairman.

N. B. The Chairman of the County Committee is the same that was the Chairman of the Joint Committees of Newburgh and New-Windsor, or at least one of that Committee, which I did not know when I addressed my letter to their County Committee.

CADWALLADER COLDEN, Jun.

In Committee for the County of Ulster, at the Paltz, }
July 4, 1776. }

To Captain JOHANNES A. HARDENBURGH:

You are hereby requested and commanded by this Committee, on sight hereof, to take Cadwallader Colden, Jun., Esq., in your custody, as it appears to this Committee that Mr. Colden is inimical to the American cause, and that you, with a sufficient guard of the men under your command, convey said Cadwallader Colden, Jun., Esq., to the common jail of this county, and that you deliver him to the keeper of said jail; and the keeper of said jail is hereby strictly required and commanded to receive said Cadwallader Colden, Jun., Esq., and him to keep in safe custody, at his own expenses, until from thence discharged by the Provincial Congress or this Convention; and for your so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT BOYD, Jun., Chairman.

CAPTAIN HARDING TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Boston, June 27, 1776.

SIR: In your favour of the 21st instant, your Honour was pleased to order me to continue here till further orders. At that time it appeared with some little chance of success; since, I look on the chance to be small. There have been ever since Sunday last ten ships cruising off Boston harbour; two of them men-of-war, eight with Highlander troops. By the best accounts it appears that the troops at Halifax sailed on the 10th instant for New-York—in number one hundred and fifty sail. Shall give your Honour an account of my captures in a few days. At present think there is but little chance here. Hope your Honour will think proper to give me orders to proceed to New-London, by the next post. Your Honour's orders shall punctually follow. The statement of this action is not in print, for wise reasons. The Captains of the four schooners dispute with each other; one says, You did not fight, and, You did not fight; and so they go on. I have thought proper to libel for three-fourths of the ship George and three-fourths of the brig Annabella, and my proportion of the ship Lord Howe.* What I shall recover

JAMES SMITH TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

St. Eustatius, June 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Although an entire stranger, the critical situation of the times necessitates me to address and trouble you with the disposal of five hundred weight of gunpowder, as per bill of lading enclosed,* requesting that the net proceeds may be remitted immediately, if any opportunity offers, of either of the articles annexed for your government. Should this not be the case, I desire the proceeds may be remitted to Mr. Joseph Donaldson, merchant in Philadelphia, with a letter intrusted to the care of the Captain for that gentleman. This is not the first shipment of the article or the last I intend, therefore flatter myself you will, as the guardians of the publick, pay some attention to this small shipment.

Proposals of ELISHA TYSON, with respect to erecting a Mill for manufacturing Gunpowder at LITTLE FALLS of GUNPOWDER RIVER, in BALTIMORE County, in the Province of MARYLAND, about eighteen miles from BALTIMORE-TOWN, and three from JOPPA, in HARFORD County.

The said Elisha Tyson having already made a dam over the said stream, and dug a race for the purpose of building a Water Grist Mill, proposes, instead thereof, to erect a Powder Mill, and retain the property in the premises, on the sum of one thousand pounds, Convention money, being advanced to him, without interest, for the space of four years, to be repaid in the following manner: One-fourth part thereof in gunpowder at the price given by the Continental Congress at the expiration of one year from this date; one-fourth part thereof in the same commodity at the expiration of two years from the date thereof; one other fourth part thereof in the same commodity at the expiration of three years from the date hereof; and the other fourth part thereof in the same commodity at the expiration of four years from the date hereof.

The said Elisha Tyson proposes to appropriate a large part of the above one thousand pounds to the purchase of saltpetre and other materials from private hands in this and other Colonies; he also proposes the Province shall furnish him with one-half of the saltpetre imported into or manufactured in this Province; as also one-half of the sulphur that shall become their property.

He will engage to manufacture powder at as cheap a rate as it is in the Province of Pennsylvania, and in equal quantities, in proportion to the quantity of materials found him, for the use of the Province of Maryland. He will give bond, with good security, for the performance of the above propositions.

ELISHA TYSON.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

WILLIAM LUX TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Snow-Hill, June 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have already written you that I had made inquiry after and seen Mr. Brown. He is willing to wait on you, and this will be delivered you by him. The members of the Convention from this County have orders, as I am told by one of the Committee, to recommend him to you: he seems to have been active and spirited on the present occasion. The swivels that came in Captain Speake, and small-arms, lie at Colonel Watts's. If you will please to give orders to me, I will carry them to Annapolis in our schooner, and one cask of powder, that, in case of an attack from some of the little tenders, we may defend her. She will have twenty men on board. I am sorry they have committed depredations, as it is contrary to the Governour's promise, consequently the Convention will be justified in making him amenable. I saw two of Captain Nicholson's men that had been taken by them on Friday, on board a sloop belonging to one Mr. Smith.

I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM LUX.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO WILLIAM SELBY.

Annapolis, June 28, 1776.

SIR: The Council of Safety has agreed with Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth to send a quantity of flour from Baltimore town to Pitt's Landing, to be carted across from thence to Chincoteague-Inlet, to be put on board the schooner John, Captain Speake, now lying there. We therefore request the favour of you to give Captain Speake or Mr. Beck every friendly assistance in your power to convey the said flour from the landing across to his vessel. The favour will be acknowledged, and any reasonable expense which you may incur therein will be paid by us, as this vessel is loading on account of the Province. We are, &c.

To William Selby, near Pitt's Landing, Accomack County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CALVERT COUNTY COMMITTEE.

[No. 50.]

Annapolis, June 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When we wrote to you on the 4th instant we did not intend to engage your County in the expense of building the barracks desired in our letter for lodging men. We were of opinion they should be built at the expense of the Province. Shall be obliged if you will, as soon as you can, set about erecting them, and the expense shall be paid you. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Calvert County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COUNTY COMMITTEES.

Annapolis, June 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We enclose you a resolution of Congress, desiring a complete list of the number of inhabitants in each Colony. We request you will appoint some persons in your County for taking the number of inhabitants, both whites and blacks, distinguishing, respectively, the age and sex of each, and shall be obliged if you will transmit it to us as soon as it is returned to you. We will pay any expense that may arise on employing persons to comply with this request.

We are, &c.

JOHN PENN TO SAMUEL JOHNSTON.

Philadelphia, June 28, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I arrived here several days ago in good health, and found Mr. Hewes well. I am truly sorry to inform you that our affairs are in a bad situation in Canada. I fear by the time you receive this, our Army will have left that country.

Unfortunately for us the small-pox has gone through our troops there, which has, in some measure, occasioned our misfortunes. I expect we shall be able to make a stand at the Lakes. General Burgoyne, with a very considerable force, arrived in Canada some time ago. He lately made prisoners Brigadier-General Thompson and several other officers; though we had but few men killed or taken at the time.

A dangerous plot has lately been discovered at New-York; the design was to blow up the magazine and kill General Washington. A large number are under confinement, some of note. Governour Tryon is at the bottom; several of the General's Guards were bribed. It seems, when the whole is made known, we shall be much surprised. The famous Rogers, who was so active last war, is one of the number, and now confined.

The first day of July will be made remarkable; then the question relative to Independence will be agitated, and there is no doubt but a total separation from Britain will take place. This Province is for it; indeed, so are all, except Maryland, and her people are coming over fast.

I shall be much obliged to you to give the enclosed letters passes, and when you have an opportunity, to let me know what is doing in the busy world your way.

I am, with great respect, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN PENN.

To Samuel Johnston, Esq., North-Carolina.

CUMBERLAND COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Inspection and Observation for Cumberland County, at Carlisle, June 28, 1776. }

Whereas complaints were made to this Committee that the conduct and sentiments of John Clark, of Allen Township, in this County, miller, have been, and still are, unfriendly to the liberties of the United Colonies: And whereas, in pursuance of notice, the said John Clark appeared twice before this Committee, when sundry witnesses were examined upon oath, by whose testimony the charges exhibited against him are fully proved: And whereas the said John Clark declined making any acknowledgments to his injured country, and in manifest contempt of this Committee, thought fit to set out for his own habitation whilst the Committee had his case under their consideration:

Resolved, That the said John Clark is an enemy to the rights and liberties of the United Colonies; and it is recommended to all the friends of liberty that they have no dealings nor connections with the said John Clark in future, as they regard the welfare of their injured country.

Resolved, That the above Resolution be published in the newspapers of this Province.

Signed by order of the Committee :

JOHN MONTGOMERY, Chairman.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

New-York, June 28, 1776.

SIR: In compliance with the request of Congress contained in your favour of the 25th instant, and my promise of yesterday, I do myself the honour to inform you that the cost of a ration, according to the Commissary-General's estimate, from the 1st of July to the 1st of December, will be from eight to eight-and-a-half pence, York currency.

Having discharged the obligation I was under in this instance, and finding that many applications have been made for victualling the flying-camp, I would, with all possible deference, wish Congress to consider the matter well before they come to any determination upon it. Who the gentlemen are that have made offers upon this occasion I know not, consequently my objections to their appointment cannot proceed from personal dislike; nor have I it in view to serve Mr. Trumbull, the Commissary-General, wishing to have the directions of the whole supplies for his emolument, because whatever rations are taken from him save him the trouble of supplying provisions to the amount, without diminishing his pay, that being fixed and certain; but what influences me is in regard to the publick good. I am morally certain, if the business is taken out of Mr. Trumbull's hands and put into another's, that it may, and will, in all probability, be attended with great and many inconveniences.

It is likely, during the continuance of the war between us and Great Britain, that the Army here, or part of it, and the troops composing the flying-camp, will be frequently joined, and under the necessity of affording each other mutual aid. If this event is probable—and most certainly it is—the same confusion and disorder will result from having two Commissaries, or one Commissary and one contractor, in the same Army in the same department, as did between Mr. Trumbull and Mr. Livingston on the coming of the former to New-York. I cannot discriminate the two cases; and not foreseeing that any good consequences will flow from the measure, but that many bad ones will—such as clashing of interests, a contention for horses, carriages, and many other causes that might be mentioned if hurry of business would permit—I confess I cannot perceive the propriety of appointing a different person, or any but the Commissary. I would also add, that few armies, if any, have been better supplied than the troops under Mr. Trumbull's care in this instance, which I should suppose ought to have considerable weight, especially as we have strong reasons to believe that a large share of the misfortunes our arms have sustained in Canada sprang from want of proper and necessary supplies of provisions. Mr. Trumbull, too, I am informed, has already made provision in New-Jersey for the flying-camp which will be stationed there, and employed proper persons in that Colony to transact the business incident to his department, in obedience to my orders, and his full confidence that it was to come under his management. My great desire to see the affairs of this important post, on which so much depends, go on in an easy, smooth, and uninterrupted course, has led me to say thus much upon the subject, and will, I hope, if I am unhappy enough to differ in opinion with Congress, plead my excuse for the liberty I have taken.

I would also beg leave to mention to Congress the necessity there is of some new regulations being entered into respecting the Chaplains of this Army. They will remember that applications were made to increase their pay, which was conceived too low for their support; and that it was proposed, if it could not be done for the whole, that the number should be lessened, and one be appointed to two regiments, with an additional allowance. This latter expedient was adopted, and while the Army continued altogether at one encampment, answered well, or at least did not produce many inconveniences; but the Army now being differently circumstanced from what it then was—part here, part at Boston, and a third part detached to Canada—has introduced much confusion and disorder in this instance; nor do I know how it is possible to remedy the evil but by affixing one to each regiment, with salaries competent to their support. No shifting, no changing from one regiment to another, can answer the purpose; and in many cases it could not be done, though the regiments should consent—as when detachments are composed of unequal numbers, or ordered from different posts. Many more inconveniences might be pointed out; but these, it is presumed, will sufficiently show the defect of the present establishment, and the propriety of an alteration. What that alteration shall be Congress will please to determine.

Congress, I doubt not, will have heard of the plot that was forming among many disaffected persons in this city and Government for aiding the King's troops upon their arrival. No regular plan seems to have been digested, but several persons have enlisted and sworn to join them. The matter, I am in hopes, by a timely discovery, will be suppressed and put a stop to. Many citizens and others, among whom is the Mayor, are now in confinement. The matter has been traced up to Governour Tryon, and the Mayor appears to have been a principal agent, or go-between him and the persons concerned in it. The plot had been communicated to some of the Army, and part of my Guard engaged in it. Thomas Hickey, one of them, has been tried, and, by the unanimous opinion of a Court-Martial, is sentenced to die, having enlisted himself and engaged others. The sentence, by the advice of the whole Council of General Officers, will be put in execution to-day at eleven o'clock. The others are not tried. I am hopeful this example will produce many salutary consequences, and deter others from entering into the like traitorous practices.

The enclosed copy of a resolve of the Provincial Congress will show that some of the disaffected on Long-Island have taken up arms. I have, agreeable to their request, sent a party after them, but have not as yet been able to apprehend them, having concealed themselves in difficult woods and morasses.

General Gates set out on Tuesday with a fine wind, which has been fair ever since, and would soon arrive at Albany.

I this moment received a letter from Lieutenant Davison, of the Schuyler armed sloop, a copy of which I have enclosed, and to which I beg leave to refer you, for the intelligence communicated by him. I could wish General Howe and his armament not to arrive yet, as not more than a thousand Militia have yet come in, and our whole force, including the troops at all the detached posts, and on board the armed vessels which are comprehended in our returns, is but small and inconsiderable when compared with the extensive lines they are to defend, and most probably the army that he brings. I have no further intelligence about him than what the Lieutenant mentions, but it is extremely probable his accounts and conjectures are true.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. I have enclosed a general return; and it may be certainly depended on that General Howe and fleet have sailed from Halifax. Some of the men on board the prizes mentioned in the Lieutenant's letter were on board the Greyhound, and saw General Howe.

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 24, 1776.

Whereas information has been given to this Congress that sundry persons on Nassau-Island, disaffected and inimical to the American cause, are now in arms in opposition to the civil authority of this Colony, and with a view of aiding the enemies of America:

Resolved, unanimously, That his Excellency General Washington be, and he hereby is, requested to take the most speedy and effectual measures to disarm and secure all such persons.

Ordered, That one of the Secretaries wait upon his said Excellency with a certified copy of the foregoing Resolution.

Extract from the Minutes:

ROBERT BENSON, Sec'y.

Armed sloop Schuyler, off Fire-Island, June 27, 1776.

Since our last we have, in company with Captain Rogers, of the armed sloop Montgomery, retaken four prizes, which were taken by the Greyhound man-of-war, bound for Sandy-Hook: two brigs belonging to Nantucket, with oil—one has near five hundred barrels on board, and the other one hundred and fifty—also a schooner and a sloop, the schooner belonging to Cape-Ann, laden with molasses and some sugar; the sloop outward bound, belonging to Rhode-Island, laden with flour and lumber. We have intelligence by one of the prisoners that a fleet of one hundred and thirty sail sailed from Halifax the 9th instant for Sandy-Hook, and that General Howe is on board the Greyhound, which we supposed passed us three days ago, we having observed a ship to the westward of us about that time standing for Sandy-Hook. Captain Rogers has applied to the Committee for a guard, which they have supplied us with, and shall send the prisoners as soon as possible.

JOSEPH DAVISON, Lieutenant.

By His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United Colonies:

To the Provost-Marshal of the said Army:

Whereas Thomas Hickey, a soldier enlisted in the service of the said United Colonies, has been duly convicted by a General Court-Martial of mutiny and sedition, and also of holding a treacherous correspondence with the enemies of said Colonies, contrary to the Rules and Regulations established for the government of the said troops; and the said Thomas Hickey, being so convicted, has been sentenced to death, by being hanged by the neck till he shall be dead; which sentence, by the unanimous advice of the General Officers of the said Army, I have thought proper to confirm: These are, therefore, to will and require you to execute the said sentence upon the said Thomas Hickey this day, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, upon the ground between the encampments of the Brigades of Brigadier-General Spencer and Lord Stirling; and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand this twenty-eighth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 28, 1776.

New-York, June 28, 1776.

By virtue of, and in obedience to, the foregoing warrant, I have this day, at the time and place therein ordered and directed, caused Thomas Hickey, the prisoner within mentioned, to suffer death in the way and manner therein prescribed, and accordingly return this warrant fully executed.*

WILLIAM MORONY,

Provost-Marshal in the Army of the United Colonies.

* New-York, July 1, 1776.—Last Friday, in the forenoon, was executed in a field between the Colonels McDougall and Huntington's camp, near the Bowery Lane, (in the presence of near twenty thousand spectators,) a soldier belonging to his Excellency General Washington's Guards, for mutiny and conspiracy; being one of those who formed, and was soon to have put in execution, that horrid plot of assassinating the Staff-Officers, blowing up the magazines, and securing the passes of the town, on the arrival of the hungry Ministerial myrmidons. It is hoped the remainder of those miscreants, now in our possession, will meet with a punishment adequate to their crimes.

EDWARD FLEMING, Deputy Adjutant-General.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, June 28, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 25th, and its enclosures, with General Arnold's of the same date, I received by yesterday morning's express. That of the 24th came by this day's post.

I am sorry General Sullivan, in the situation our affairs are in, should have stopped at the Isle-aux-Noix till he could obtain orders for retreating further, thereby hazarding his Army without a prospect of success, and rendering his retreat liable to an interruption, or at least difficult, in case the enemy were in a condition to pursue their victory. For these reasons I cannot but approve your directions, and am hopeful they would arrive in time, if he had not before left the Isle-aux-Noix by the advice of his Council of War and joint intercession of his officers. My letter of the 24th would show you, had it been received, that, from his representation of matters, I thought a retreat the only means left for the security of his Army, and doing the least essential service to their country. If he gets off, I shall be happy that our loss was so inconsiderable in numbers, though I regret much the captivity of General Thompson.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

I have written Congress about carpenters on General Arnold's letter, and, having none to spare from hence, have pointed out the necessity of their sending some from Philadelphia; if not there, withdrawing, for the present, those employed up the North River, deeming it a matter of infinite importance to have a considerable number of gondolas on the Lakes, to prevent the enemy from passing.

I have directed the Quartermaster-General to procure and forward you the anchors and cables, mill-saws and files, if to be had. I have also requested Colonel Knox to examine whether some more field-pieces cannot be sent up; and I design to order a further quantity of powder to be forwarded you, to answer two purposes—one, that you may have proper supplies for the several posts and every contingency, the other, because I do not wish to keep a larger stock here than may be necessary, lest any unfortunate event should cast up, and we be deprived of more than we are yet able to lose.

I would have you make ready everything necessary for taking post at Fort Stanwix, and, when you are prepared, to use your utmost industry for erecting and completing the work. Our most vigorous exertions will be required in every instance. I am convinced our enemies will strain their every nerve against us this campaign, and try to injure us wherever we may be unprovided.

It will be extremely proper to forward on the Militia for reinforcing the several garrisons on the communication, and securing the different passes. I wish they were not so slow in repairing to the places of rendezvous; but I would fain apprehend they will be in time to prevent any attempts our enemies may have in view.

I am extremely sorry for your indisposition, and that you should be so harassed by the ague and fever; and wishing you a perfect recovery from it, and a speedy one, I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

P. S. Congress, by a letter I received from the President last night, have resolved upon four thousand men more to augment the Army in the Northern Department, and recommended the Colony of New-Hampshire immediately to send one regiment of Militia, Massachusetts two, and Connecticut one. They have also resolved on a bounty of ten dollars for every soldier who will enlist for three years, and requested the several Governments who are to furnish Militia to do it with all possible expedition.

Our armed vessels at the eastward have taken some valuable prizes, and also three more transports safely brought in, with about three hundred and twenty or thirty Highland troops well accoutred. Captain Biddle, one of Commodore Hopkins's fleet, took two also, with about one hundred and fifty more. He put all the prisoners on board one of the prizes—we fear she is retaken; the arms he took into his own vessel. The other prize was retaken, and again taken by another of our vessels.

Yesterday I received a letter from Lieutenant Davison, of the Schuyler armed sloop, advising that he, with another of our cruisers, had retaken four prizes which had been taken by the Greyhound man-of-war. The persons on board the prizes informed the Lieutenant that General Howe was on board the Greyhound, and sailed from Halifax the 9th instant, with one hundred and thirty-two transports; that they saw a vessel, the evening before, standing towards the Hook, which they imagined was the Greyhound. There is reason to conclude he is now there.

The Militia ordered for the defence of this place come in slowly: not more than a thousand have yet arrived. Our force by no means so strong as it should be.

It is said, and I believe with authority, that twenty tons of powder and two thousand pounds sterling worth of goods, have got into Providence.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

New-York, June 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By certain advices just received, I am informed that a fleet, consisting of one hundred and thirty sail, left Halifax the 9th instant, bound for this place, and am well assured that General Howe is already arrived at the Hook in the Greyhound. I do, therefore, in the most pressing manner, request that you would not lose a moment's time in sending forward the Militia of your Province, as the enemy will undoubtedly attack us in our weak state as soon as a sufficient force arrives to enable them to attempt it with the least probability of success. And although I cannot expect, by reason of the distance, that your quota of troops will reach this so seasonably as to afford us assistance upon the first attack of the enemy, yet I promise myself it will not occasion any delay in their march. Relying on your using all possible despatch in this business, I remain, with much respect, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable Provincial Convention of Massachusetts-Bay.*

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-York, June 28, 1776.

SIR: By certain advices just received, I am informed that a fleet, consisting of one hundred and thirty sail, left Halifax the 9th instant, bound for this place; and am well assured that General Howe is already arrived at the Hook, in the Greyhound. I do, therefore, in the most pressing manner, request that you would not lose a moment's time in sending forward the Militia of your Province, as the enemy will undoubtedly attack us in our weak state as soon as a sufficient force arrives to enable them to attempt it with the least probability of success, and our safety, in a great measure, depends on the seasonable arrival of the Militia from the several Colonies who are to furnish them. Relying on your using all possible despatch in this business, I remain, with much respect and esteem, sir, your very humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of Connecticut.

(A similar letter to the above was forwarded by the same express to Brigadier-General Wadsworth, at Durham.)

COLONEL REED TO NEW-JERSEY CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 28, 1776.

SIR: At the request of General Washington I enclose you a copy of a letter received this morning, from which, and other advices, there is no doubt General Howe is arrived at the Hook, with a very large force. It would be too dangerous a secret to trust to a letter to mention how inadequate our Army is to encounter it. Let it suffice to say that, unless the most speedy and effectual measures are taken to throw a body of men, well-armed, into this city, the most fatal consequences are to be apprehended. I am, therefore, to enjoin the honourable body over whom you preside to exert their utmost efforts at this critical juncture, when, in all human probability, the fate of our country, our lives, liberties, and property, depend upon the spirit and activity that will be shown in a very short time.

Agreeable to your resolve, empowering the General to call in the Militia, he has written General Livingston for that purpose, unless it appears clearly to him that troops, under the new establishment, and those well-armed, can be sooner procured.

It is a most melancholy truth that of our little Army at least two thousand are wholly destitute of arms, and near as many with arms in such condition as to be rather calculated to discourage than animate the user.

No further arguments can be necessary to gentlemen of discernment and lovers of their country, and such have appeared to direct the publick affairs of New-Jersey during this tempestuous scene; depending, therefore, on your utmost * July 2, 1776.—The Committee of both Houses, to whom was committed the above letter, have attended that service, and beg leave to report, that letters be written immediately, according to the form herewith reported, to the several Committees appointed to expedite the raising of the men destined for New-York, desiring them to forward their march with all possible expedition; that an answer be also written to General Washington, informing him of the measures the Court have taken to raise the men and forward their march to New-York; and that these letters be sent by express, and signed by the President of the Council.

All which is humbly submitted.

efforts, I am to present his Excellency's most respectful compliments.

I have the honour to be, your most obedient servant,

COLONEL REED TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 28, 1776.

SIR: By his Excellency's directions, I enclose you a copy of a letter he received this morning. The importance of the intelligence, and the critical situation of affairs, will doubtless suggest to your honourable body the necessity of paying immediate attention to those matters contained in his letter of yesterday; and if any further measures can be taken to forward the Militia expected for the defence of this post, that they be immediately procured. To gentlemen so zealous in the publick cause, and well apprized of all circumstances, arguments are unnecessary.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient and very humble servant,

J. REED.

To the Hon. Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President, &c.

An humble Petition to the Honourable Provincial Congress.

GENTLEMEN: As I have this day received a copy of my mittimus to this Jail, I come now to supplicate your Honours with this prayer, that your Honours would give me leave to ascend into your presence, that I may be inquired of, and that I may have a right understanding of the crime alleged against me, as I suppose there is a suspicion of my being unfriendly to my country; but as for the evidences brought against me, I have never heard, and what the crime is I know not; but I was taken in the South Bay of Long-Island by the Riflemen, and brought to the Provost guard, and from thence to this Jail, and have been confined ever since. And now gentlemen may it be your pleasures to grant me the favour of a hearing. And as my son was taken with me in my vessel, and a passenger named Ebenezer Scribner, we all beg that your Honours would be pleased to give all of us the favour of ascending into your honourable presence, to be inquired of. As I myself am very poorly, and the passenger is under the Doctor's hands now, and as we are in a very unhealthy place, we rest very uneasy, but still subscribe ourselves your humble petitioners.

With submission, your most humble servants,

NATHAN GUYER,
LAZARUS GUYER,
EBENEZER SCRIBNER.

In New City-Hall, New-York, June 28, 1776.

THOMAS ROCHE TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, June 28, 1776.

HONOURED GENTLEMEN: Hope your Honours will be kind enough to see that your petitioner will not starve for want of victuals; and being ignorant of the crime laid to his charge, begs of your Honours either to discharge him from his confinement or to find him some provision; and in so doing you will lay him under the utmost obligation and duty to serve.

THOMAS ROCHE.

To the Members of the Congress.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York:

The Petition of CHARLES MORSE, of the City of New-York, Conveyancer and Scrivener, sheweth:

That since the commencement of hostilities by the British forces in the American Colonies, your petitioner's business hath been so greatly reduced as not to afford a competent livelihood for himself and family, and now is entirely stopped: Your petitioner therefore, and inasmuch as he has always been a staunch Whig and a sincere friend to the cause of American liberty, humbly prays that your Honours will be pleased to appoint him a Commissary or a Clerk, or any other station under your Honours, as to you shall seem meet; and your petitioner will ever pray, &c.

CHARLES MORSE.

ALBANY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

Albany Committee-Chamber, June 28, 1776.

Pursuant to a resolve of the last general meeting, the polls of the several elections held in the respective Districts in this County for Deputies to represent this City and County in Provincial Congress, with full power to form a new Government, and the names of the several voters, and the Deputies they had voted for, being carefully counted, a majority of votes appeared for Abraham Yates, Jun., Robert Yates, Robert Van Rensselaer, Abraham Ten Broeck, Christopher Yates, Peter R. Livingston, John James Bleecker, Jacob Cuyler, Leonard Gansevoort, John Ten Broeck, Matthew Adgate, and John Taylor. This Committee do thereupon declare the said persons to be duly elected; and that they, or any three of them, represent this City and County in Provincial Congress, for the purposes mentioned in the resolves of said Congress.

MATTHEW VISSCHER, Secretary.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, June 28, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 17th instant, enclosing copies of the doings of the Commissioners for transacting Indian affairs, and my son's, of the 21st, by your leave, enclosing General Sullivan's letter, and several of Colonel Arnold's, are received. The contents of the letters from the Generals, though melancholy, ought, however, to be received with that steadiness and fortitude which becomes the soldier and the Christian, who believes that Heaven will never forsake the cause that is just. I firmly believe our cause is righteous, and that we shall be protected from ruin, though we may be severely rebuked and corrected. The liberty taken by the honourable Commissioners is acceptable, and their requisition will be cheerfully attended to; but apprehend that the inlistments already made from the small remains of Indian tribes in this Colony will render it difficult to raise a company of those people. You will have further accounts from me of what can be done in that respect as soon as can, on inquiry, be satisfied what number may be raised. The two battalions raising here for your department are ordered to be equipped, mustered, and marched, with all possible despatch, and no time will be lost in this preparation. I shall, agreeable to your request, order their march on the most direct road to Bennington, and so on to Skenesborough, and give notice in season that you may take measures accordingly. Their baggage will also be sent agreeable to your instructions. But few of the troops raised in this Colony have had the small-pox, which tends to retard the inlistments. I wish to have proper precautions taken to preserve the Army from the infection, and the New-England troops from the danger thereof; and that notice may be given me of the measures used for this end.

Yours to the Presidents of the Conventions in the Massachusetts and New-Hampshire were forwarded as desired.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To Major-General Schuyler.

P. S. Have just received intelligence that propitious Heaven hath revealed a most hellish plot to assassinate our General and destroy the magazine of ammunition at New-York. Such wickedness will never be suffered to go unpunished.

CAPTAIN BIDDLE TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

New-London, June 28, 1776.

SIR: I arrived here the 26th of June, in company with Captain Hacker, in the Fly, who sailed for New-York with a fair wind yesterday morning. There are several vessels here outward bound. Captain Kennedy, who commands one of them, showed me a paper signed by one of the Committee of Congress, directed to the commanders of Continental or Provincial vessels of war, desiring they would assist them in getting clear of the land; and another to the same purpose, signed by General Putnam. As soon as a favourable opportunity offers, I propose going out ahead of them, and to give them a signal to return in case I see danger. Captain Jones has, according to your orders, gone to Boston. I shall send you, with this, the account of stores, &c., on board the Doria, and have ordered Captain Jones and Captain Hacker to transmit you theirs as soon as possible.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

NICHOLAS BIDDLE.

To Esek Hopkins, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Navy, in Philadelphia.

THADDEUS BURR TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Fairfield, June 28, 1776.

HONoured SIR: By desire of the Authority and Selectmen I write you this, to request that your Honour and Council of Safety would give us an order for some powder for the use of the battery, and to supply our town stock. They are of opinion that four hundred weight will do for the use of the battery at present, and would be very glad of three hundred weight for the town. We have taken great pains to supply the stock since it has been drained for publick use, but it is out of our power, except about seventy weight, for which we gave a dollar a pound. We would willingly purchase for the town, or receive it in any other way that your Honour and Council may think proper. We are very solicitous to be supplied with some as soon as may be, as we are very destitute.

I am, with due respect and esteem, in behalf of the Authorities and Selectmen, your Honour's most humble servant,

THADDEUS BURR.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull.

P. S. Since my return from the Assembly, I have received a letter from Mr. Broome, who informs me that he has purchased a permit to transport stores to any of the French West-Indies. I therefore, agreeable to the conversation I had with your Honour when at Hartford, now beg you would grant us a permit to import from New-York one hundred barrels of flour, and to export it to some of the Dutch or French West-Indies in the brig Liberty, owned by Burr & Abel, Broome & Company, and Samuel Bradley, Esquire; also forty thousand red and black oak staves, and twenty thousand hoops, the staves to be exported agreeable to the rules of Congress; and forward it to me per first post. I also request of your Honour a permit for Captain Stephen Thorp, of this town, master and owner of the sloop Sally, burdened about fifty tons, to transport from this place to Taunton or Providence, five hundred bushels of Indian corn, five hundred bushels of rye, fifty barrels of wheat-flour, and fifty barrels of rye-flour, as I am informed the people up Taunton River, and round about that place, are in great want of provisions, and from the situation there is but little danger of falling into the hands of the enemy; and as we have a great deal of corn, rye and wheat on hand, I cannot think it will be any disadvantage to permit it to go to our distressed brethren. Should your Honour think proper to grant the permit, shall take it as a favour if you would send it per post.

Your Honour's compliance will greatly oblige yours, ut ante,

THADDEUS BURR.

SAMUEL SMEDLEY TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Brig Defence, Boston-Harbour, June 28, 1776.

HONoured SIR: After my respects to your Honour and family, I think it my duty, as a friend to my country, to acquaint your Honour of our battle with the Scotch ship and brig. My neglecting this until now, was by expecting something of truth of the matter would have been mentioned in the publick prints by some gentleman of this place, to acquaint this continent of the calm and brave conduct of our worthy Captain Harding. We sailed from Plymouth on Sunday, the 10th instant, in the morning. After we got out of the harbour, we heard a brisk and continual cannonading towards Boston; but it being very foggy, could not discover what it was; but expecting the fog soon to clear off, we made the best of our way towards the firing, and at two P. M. the weather cleared off. Soon after, we discovered from the mast-head one large ship, a brig, and four schooners, the latter making the best of their way from the two. We immediately took them to be what we since found they are. The wind being small, we did not come up with the schooners until sunset, when, by signals, we let them know we were a friend. One of the Captains came on board of us immediately, and told us the two vessels we saw to windward were two Scotch transports, with at least three hundred men on board, and that the four eight-gun schooners had been attacking them ever since eight o'clock in the morning, and found them too warm for them. Captain Harding inquired of him how many men they had all lost. He answered not one. He told them they had not been near enough. Well, says the Captain, do you try. Captain Harding answered him that he had already determined that, and we made the best of our way towards them, and at eleven at night found them at anchor a small distance above where the Light-House formerly stood. We likewise ran close to them and anchored. Hailed them from whence they came. They answered from England. Captain Harding ordered them immediately to strike. They, like brave soldiers, refused, and immediately a very heavy fire began, and at the end of near two hours we made them surrender, without the loss of one man on our side; while, according to the best accounts, we killed twenty, besides many wounded. The schooners all this while were at anchor, some one mile off, and some half a mile; but none so near as to draw one shot from either ship or brig, whilst our brig was within twelve or fifteen rods of the enemy, and received all the fire. I believe our being so near was a great advantage to us, they being so very high that almost all their cannon shot went over us.

I conclude by begging your Honour's pardon for troubling you with this long, though very true epistle. From your Honour's humble servant,

SAMUEL SMEDLEY.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull.

N. B. There is now in the bay eight transports, with two frigates, supposed to be part of the same fleet from Scotland. My reason for mentioning so particularly about the above schooners is, because they want to share equally with us in the prizes; when it is the voice of almost all the people here that they, according to right, should have but small part, if anything, which I suppose will be soon judged. Our wounded are all likely to recover soon.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL GATES.

Charlestown, June 29, 1776.

MY DEAR GATES: I have just read that the General and your Excellency are arrived at Philadelphia. My love and respects to the General, that I shall send an express to him in a few days, with a minute account of our situation and of the double repulse the tyrant mercenaries have met with. Their squadron has been roughly handled—the Commodore and the Roebuck dismasted of their mizzens; one frigate lost its bowsprit, and another (the Acteon) blown up. Rush will give you a compendious detail of it. Our troops, though raw, behaved most nobly; the fire was extremely hot and incessant. Their troops attempted to land twice, and were twice repulsed by the South-Carolina Rangers. Our loss in the fort was ten killed, thirty-two wounded, seven of whom lost their limbs, but they encouraged their comrades, after the loss of their limbs, to stand to the cause of liberty. My two young aids-de-camp, Byrd and A. Morris, stand fire most nobly. Young old Jenifer and little Nourse strutted like crows in a gutter. The fire was, I assure you, very hot. I am much pleased with the troops, men and officers, and really believe them braver than the enemy. But I would not be understood that this affair was decisive; it was, most probably, only the prelude to a more serious one; the event of which the Great God of Battles only knows—I mean the only great and universal God; not the partial God of the Jews.

Enclosed is a return (I dare not say the most perfect) of our strength: apropos, I cannot send it just now, for the Adjutant-General (who is in love) has forgotten a whole regiment; you shall have it in a few days. We have about five thousand men. If I had a thousand lighthorse, I could protect these Colonies completely. Urge the General to urge it—I am tired of writing on the subject.

Yours, my dear Gates,

C. LEE.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM GENERAL LEE TO EDMUND PENDLETON, DATED CHARLESTOWN, SOUTH-CAROLINA, JUNE 29, 1776.

Yesterday, about eleven o'clock, the enemy's squadron, consisting of one forty-gun ship and six frigates, came to anchor before Fort Sullivan, and began one of the most furious cannonades ever heard or seen. Their project was, apparently, at the same time to land their troops on the east end of the Island. Twice they attempted it, and as often were gallantly repulsed. The ships continued their fire on the fort till eleven o'clock at night. The behaviour of the garrison, both men and officers, with Colonel Moultrie at their head, I confess astonished me. It was brave to the last degree. I had no idea that so much coolness and intrepidity could be displayed by a collection of raw recruits as I was witness to in this garrison. Had we been better supplied with ammunition, it is most probable this squadron would have been utterly destroyed. However, they have no reason to triumph; one of their frigates is now in flames, another lost her bowsprit, the Commodore and a forty-gun ship had their mizzen shot away, and are otherwise much damaged. In short, they may be said, in this their essay on South-Carolina, to have been worsted; but I presume they will make another attempt.

Our loss is ten killed and twenty-two wounded; seven of whom have lost their legs or arms. The defences of the fort have received no injury, only one gun dismounted. I shall write, when the affair is finished, a more accurate relation to your Convention, and to the Congress. In the mean time, I think it but justice to publish the merits of Colonel Moultrie and his brave garrison. Colonel Thompson, of the South-Carolina Rangers, acquitted himself most nobly in repulsing the troops who attempted to land at the other end of the Island. I know not which corps I have the greatest reason to be pleased with, Muhlenberg's Virginians or the North-Carolina troops; they are both equally alert, zealous, and spirited.

I shall not write to the Congress till the operations of the enemy are brought to something more like a decision. If you, sir, think this short relation of sufficient importance, you will, of course, transmit it. The frigate that was on fire is this moment blown up.

Williamsburgh, Saturday, June 29, 1776.

This day Patrick Henry, Esq., was chosen Governour of this country, and a Committee appointed to acquaint him therewith. To which he returned the following Answer to the Convention:

TO THE HONOURABLE THE PRESIDENT AND HOUSE OF CONVENTION:

GENTLEMEN: The vote of this day, appointing me Governour of this Commonwealth, has been notified to me in the most polite and obliging manner by George Mason, Henry Lee, Dudley Digges, John Blair, and Bartholomew Dandridge, Esquires.

A sense of the high and unmerited honour conferred upon me by the Convention fills my heart with gratitude, which I trust my whole life will manifest. I take this earliest opportunity to express my thanks, which I wish to convey to you, gentlemen, in the strongest terms of acknowledgment.

When I reflect that the tyranny of the British King and Parliament hath kindled a formidable war, now raging throughout the wide-extended continent, and in the operations of which this Commonwealth must bear so great a part; and that from the events of this war the lasting happiness or misery of a great proportion of the human species will finally result; that, in order to preserve this Commonwealth from anarchy, and its attendant ruin, and to give vigour to our councils and effect to all our measures, Government hath been necessarily assumed and new modelled; that it is exposed to numberless hazards and perils in its infantine state; that it can never attain to maturity or ripen into firmness, unless it is guarded by affectionate assiduity, and managed by great abilities,—I lament my want of talents; I feel my mind filled with anxiety and uneasiness to find myself so unequal to the duties of that important station to which I am called by favour of my fellow-citizens at this truly critical conjuncture. The errors of my conduct shall be atoned for, so far as I am able, by unwearied endeavours to secure the freedom and happiness of our common country.

I shall enter upon the duties of my office whenever you, gentlemen, shall be pleased to direct, relying upon the known wisdom and virtue of your honourable House to supply my defects, and to give permanency and success to that system of Government which you have formed, and which is so wisely calculated to secure equal liberty and advance human happiness.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

P. HENRY, Jun.

Williamsburgh, June 29, 1776.

Upper District of Frederick County, June 29, 1776.

Whereas Legislative, Executive, and Judicial powers in this Province are at present exercised by the same body of men, the administration of justice confused and unfixed, the places of the most important trust held by persons disaffected to the common cause of America, the transactions of the Convention carried on in a secret manner, and such parts only published as they may think proper, the recommendations of the honourable Continental Congress unregarded, and propositions of the utmost importance determined without consulting the people, and an adulatory address presented Governour Eden, supplicating his interposition with a people that has hitherto treated our just petitions with the greatest contempt; all which matters have very much alarmed the good people of this District, and filled their minds with deep concern for the honour and welfare of this Province in particular, and the United Colonies in general, and induced them to publish the following Resolutions, entered into by the two Battalions of this District, and many other respectable inhabitants thereof, on the 28th and 29th of June, 1776, and which are as follows:

Resolved, unanimously, That the present mode of Government in this Province is incompetent to the exigencies thereof, and dangerous to our liberties.

Resolved, unanimously, That we are of opinion that the present Convention ought to be immediately dissolved, and a new one elected for the express purpose of carrying the Resolves of the Continental Congress of the 15th of May into execution.

Resolved, unanimously, That we will support the union of the Colonies with our lives and fortunes.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN HINDMAN.

Annapolis, June 29, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 27th instant, per Mr. Ander-son, the Council has laid before the Convention, and, therefore, as far as respects Mr. Dickinson and others, requires no answer from them. We have enclosed you an order on the Eastern Shore Treasurer for one hundred pounds, which we hope will be sufficient for the present. The Council desire you will furnish them with an account of the expenditure of the money they have already advanced you towards clothing the troops, &c. They have determined not to advance any more money without accounts being produced to them. We are, &c.

To Captain James Hindman.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN HINDMAN.

Annapolis, June 29, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed we send you the resolve of the Convention requiring the appearance of Messrs. James Dickinson, Nicholas Martin, William Thomas, and John Stevens, before them on Tuesday next, with which you are desired to acquaint them. You will also be pleased to send any persons whose testimony you may think material against them, and also to order up any witnesses whose attendance they may desire. We are, &c.

To Captain James Hindman.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO LIEUTENANT BRACCO.

[No. 54.]

Annapolis, June 29, 1776.

SIR: We have this minute received your favour of the 26th instant, per Sergeant Smith, and are much concerned to hear the small-pox has broken out among the party under your command. We think it most advisable that all the men under your command who have not had the small-pox should be immediately inoculated, and desire you would apply to Doctor Craig for that purpose. You will make the best bargain you can with the Doctor. All necessary expenses will be paid by the Council in behalf of the Province. We are, &c.

To Lieutenant Bennett Bracco.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

Annapolis, June 29, 1776.

SIR: As the former request made by the Council was disagreeable, as you mention to us, to Messrs. Lux & Bowley and Captain Woolsey, we thought it most proper to refer the consideration of their claims and proposals, with all the papers and letters relative to that transaction, to the Convention, who have concurred with the report of their Committee of Claims, which we send you enclosed. You will therefore make known to those gentlemen this resolution of the Convention, and you will proceed agreeable to the instructions we have given you respecting those cargoes, and you will please to inform those gentlemen we will pay the particular sums to their order.

Lieutenant Moore has made known to us that there are wanting for the artillery here two hundred four-pound balls, two hundred six-pound ditto, and four hundred three-pound ditto. These are cast at the Kingsbury Furnace, and we request the favour of you to expedite them as soon as they possibly can be done. We are, &c.

To Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Every moment that I reflect on our affairs, the more am I convinced of the necessity of a formal declaration of independence. Reconciliation is thought of now by none but knaves, fools, and madmen; and as we cannot offer terms of peace to Great Britain until (as other nations have done before us) we agree to call ourselves by some name, I shall rejoice to hear the title of the United States of America, in order that we may be on a proper footing to negotiate a peace.

Besides, the condition of those brave fellows who have fallen into the enemy's hands as prisoners, and the risk which every man runs who bears arms, either by land or sea, in the American cause, makes a declaration of independence absolutely necessary, because no proper cartel for an exchange of prisoners can take place while we remain dependants. It is some degree of comfort to a man taken prisoner that he belongs to some national power—is the subject of some State that will see after him. Oliver Cromwell would have sent a memorial as powerful as thunder to any King on earth who dared to have used prisoners in the manner which ours have been. What is it that we have done in this matter? Nothing. We were subjects of Great Britain, and must not do these things. Shame on your cowardly souls that do them not! You are not fit to govern.

Were Britain to make a conquest of America, I would, for my own part, choose rather to be conquered as an independent State than as an acknowledged rebel. Some foreign powers might interpose for us in the first case, but they cannot in the latter, because the law of all nations is against us. Besides, the foreign European powers will not be long neutral, and unless we declare an independence and send embassies to seek their friendship, Britain will be beforehand with us; for the moment she finds that she cannot make a conquest of America by her own strength, she will endeavour to make a European affair of it. Upon the whole, we may be benefited by independence, but we cannot be hurt by it, and every man that is against it is a traitor.

REPUBLICUS.

Philadelphia, June 29, 1776.

Philadelphia, June 29, 1776.

The brig Nancy, Captain Montgomery, of six three-pounders and eleven men, from St. Croix and St. Thomas for this port, with three hundred and eighty-six barrels of gunpowder, fifty fire-locks, one hundred and one hogsheds of rum, and sixty-two hogsheds of sugar, &c., on board, in the morning of the 29th of June, when standing for Cape May, discovered six sail of men-of-war, tenders, &c., making towards him, as also a row-boat. The boat and tenders he soon after engaged and beat off, stood close along shore, and got assistance from Captain Wickes and Barry, when it was agreed to run the brig ashore, which was done; and, under favour of a fog, they saved two hundred and sixty-eight barrels of powder, fifty arms, and some dry-goods; when the fog clearing away, Captain Montgomery discovered the enemy's ships very near him, and five boats coming to board the brig, on which he started a quantity of powder in the cabin, and fifty pounds in the mainsail, in the folds of which he put fire, and then quitted her. The men-of-war's boats (some say two, some three) boarded the brig, and took possession of her with three cheers; soon after which the fire took the desired effect, and blew the pirates forty or fifty yards into the air, and much shattered one of their boats under her stern. Eleven dead bodies have since come on shore, with two gold-laced hats and a leg with a garter. From the great number of limbs floating and driven ashore, it is supposed thirty or forty of them were destroyed by the explosion. A number of people from on board our ships of war, and a number of the inhabitants of Cape May, mounted a gun on shore, with which they kept up a fire at the barges, which the men-of-war, &c., returned, and killed Mr. Wickes, Third Lieutenant of the Continental ship Reprisal, and wounded a boy in the thigh.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, June 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I do myself the honour to enclose sundry resolves respecting the further augmentation of the Continental forces. The Congress have thought it expedient to order a German Battalion to be raised, as soon as possible, in the Colonies of Pennsylvania and Maryland, to be employed in such manner as will be most likely to defeat the designs of our enemies, and to promote the cause of American liberty. I am, therefore, to request you will exert yourselves to carry the enclosed resolves into effect as speedily as possible.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO CONVENTION OF MARYLAND.

Philadelphia, June 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You will perceive by the enclosed resolves, which I do myself the honour of transmitting in obedience to the commands of Congress, that they have judged it necessary to augment the Continental forces with a battalion composed of Germans, to be raised in your Colony and Pennsylvania, and to be employed in such manner as will be most likely to defeat the designs of our enemies, and to promote the cause of American liberty.

In order to complete the Rifle regiment at New-York, the Congress have likewise determined that six companies be raised for that purpose—two in your Colony and four in Virginia. I am, therefore, to request, by order of Congress, you will be pleased to appoint the officers, and forward with all possible expedition the raising the companies, agreeable to the enclosed resolves.

The five thousand dollars your Delegates have received of me; and enclosed you have their receipt.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable the Convention of Maryland, and, in their recess, to the Honourable Council of Safety.

(Same to the Honourable Convention of Virginia.)

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, June 29, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour of transmitting sundry resolves respecting the further augmentation of the Continental forces. The Congress have thought it expedient to order a German Battalion to be raised as soon as possible in the Colonies of Pennsylvania and Maryland, to be employed in such manner as will be most likely to defeat the designs of our enemies, and to promote the cause of American liberty.

Your favour of the 27th instant, with its several enclosures, came to hand yesterday. As the Congress will not sit this day, I shall take the earliest opportunity, on Monday, of laying their important contents before them.

The loss of Canada is undoubtedly, on some accounts, to be viewed in the light of a misfortune. The continent has been put to great expense in endeavouring to get possession of it. It is highly probable, too, that our enemies will receive additional strength of both men and supplies from it. Yet, on the other hand, there is a mixture of good fortune attending it: that our Army should make so prudent a retreat as to save their baggage, cannon, ammunition, sick, &c., from falling into the hands of the enemy, will afford a partial consolation, and reflect honour upon the officers who conducted it.

Considering the superior force of the British troops, and a retreat as unavoidable, everything has been done which in such a situation would be expected. In short, I am extremely glad our Army is likely to get safe out of Canada.

I am to request you will please to order Colonel Stephenson, and one other Field Officer of that corps, to repair to this city to confer with the Delegates of Virginia and Maryland on the most proper steps to fill up the companies as expeditiously as possible. If there are any subaltern officers of that corps whom you can recommend, it is the desire of Congress they should be promoted in preference to those now to be taken into pay.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Eleven o'clock.—I have this moment received your favour of 28th, which shall be laid before Congress.

I have also received, by post, a letter from Brigadier-General Whitcomb, returning his commission, and desiring to be excused on account of age and a diffidence of not being able to answer the expectation of Congress.

The enclosed copy of a letter came to my hands, which I thought best to transmit to you.

I am yours,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

THE PROVINCIAL CONGRESS OF NEW-JERSEY TO PRESIDENT HANCOCK.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

In Provincial Congress, Burlington, }
June 29, 1776. }

SIR: This forenoon we received from the Adjutant-General at New-York a letter informing of the arrival of General Howe at Sandy-Hook with a large force.

Enclosed is a copy of a letter we have this moment received from Colonel Taylor, of Middletown.

We have taken steps to send forward a considerable number of our Militia to New-York. Our shores are chiefly unguarded, and we are much in want of arms and ammunition, lead as well as powder.

When we first ordered out our Militia we expected some aid from the flying-camp, on this side of the North River. We rely, however, upon your care and protection of every part of the continent, and doubt not the most vigorous steps have been taken for our general safety.

The bearer, Mr. Hugg, waits upon Congress for the purpose of learning what assistance we may expect from the general plan, and in order to procure ammunition. The two tons of gunpowder, which we learn was ordered for us, we hope will be sufficient for the present; but if lead can be added it will be of particular use, as we know not where to collect a quantity of a sudden.

We are, sir, your most humble servants.

By order of Congress:

JOHN COVENHOVEN, Vice President.

To the Honourable President Hancock.

Saturday, 10 o'clock A. M.

GENTLEMEN: I have this moment received an account that a fleet of forty-five sail is now in sight, and nineteen sail lies at the Hook, and a party of men and some lighthouse, which I make no doubt will pay us a visit as soon as convenient to them. Our guard is very weak, and not sufficient to make any stand; we therefore must beg your directions in this case, as no doubt many of your House know our situation.

I am, in haste, gentlemen, your humble servant,

GEORGE TAYLOR.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress, at Burlington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

New-York, June 29, 1776.

SIR: I was last night honoured with your favour of the 26th instant; and, agreeable to your request, shall pay proper attention to the resolves it enclosed.

I observe the augmentation Congress have resolved to make to the forces destined for the Northern Department, and the bounty to be allowed such soldiers as will enlist for three years. I hope many good consequences will result from these measures; and that from the latter a considerable number of men may be induced to engage in the service.

I should esteem myself extremely happy to afford the least assistance to the Canada department, in compliance with the desire of Congress and your requisition, were it in my power, but it is not. The return which I transmitted yesterday will but too well convince Congress of my incapacity in this instance, and point out to them that the force I now have is trifling, considering the many and important posts that are necessary and must be supported if possible. But few Militia have yet come in; the whole being about twelve hundred, including the two battalions of this city and one company from the Jerseys. I wish the delay may not be attended with disagreeable circumstances, and their aid may not come too late, or when it may not be wanted. I have written, I have done everything I could to call them in, but they have not come, though I am told they are generally willing.

The accounts communicated yesterday, through Lieutenant Davison's letter, are partly confirmed, and, I dare say, will turn out to be true in the whole. For two or three days past, three or four ships have been dropping in; and I just now received an express from an officer appointed to keep a look-out on Staten-Island, that forty-five arrived at the Hook to-day—some say more; and I suppose the whole fleet will be in within a day or two. I am hopeful, before they are prepared to attack, that I shall get some reinforcements; be that as it may, I shall attempt to make the best disposition of our troops, in order to give them a proper reception, and to prevent the ruin and destruction they are meditating against us.

As soon as the express arrived last night, I sent the letters for the northern Colonies to the Quartermaster-General, with orders to forward them immediately.

When Monsieur Wiebert comes (I have not seen him yet) I shall employ him as Congress have directed. The terms upon which he offers his services seem to promise something from him. I wish he may answer, and be skilled in the business he says he is acquainted with.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GENERAL HEARD.

New-York, June 29, 1776.

SIR: It being a matter of much consequence to prevent the Ministerial fleet and army from obtaining supplies of fresh provisions, as was experienced during the blockade of Boston by our Army, I am commanded by his Excellency General Washington to inform you that he conceives it indispensably necessary that all the cattle and stock along the Jersey and Staten-Island shores, and within their vicinity, should be immediately removed out of reach of the shipping and their tenders.

His Excellency, sensible of the advantages that will arise from it, requests you to use your exertions to impress the people whom it will affect, and your Government, with proper ideas of its expediency and importance, and that you will take every step in your power to have it carried into execution.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

To Brig. General Nathaniel Heard, New-Jersey Militia.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL LIVINGSTON.

New-York, June 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Since Colonel Reed left this, I have received certain information from the Hook that about forty of the enemy's fleet have arrived there, and others now in sight; that there cannot be a doubt but the whole fleet will be in this day and to-morrow. I beg not a moment's time may be lost in sending forward such parts of the Militia as Colonel Reed shall mention. We are so very weak at this post that I must beg you to order the three companies which I mentioned in my last for Staten-Island, immediately to this city. If Colonel Heard is the commanding officer, I must request you will lay my several letters written to you before him without delay.

I am, sir, with esteem, your most, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General William Livingston.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL JAMES CLINTON.

New-York, June 29, 1776.

SIR: The Committee inform me that no evidence has appeared against Fletcher Mathews, and direct his papers may be delivered to him, which I would have you comply with; likewise the request of the Committees of Newburgh and New-Windsor. I have to inform you of the arrival of about fifty sail this day at the Hook; this is part of a fleet of one hundred and thirty, which left Halifax under General Hove the 9th instant. Would have you make all possible preparation, in case the enemy should have in view to push some of their frigates up the North-River, to give them a proper reception.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Colonel James Clinton.

To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in the service of the UNITED COLONIES:

The most respectful Address of the Officers and Soldiers of the several Regiments in the Second Brigade, stationed in and near the City of NEW-YORK:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: When the duty of your station impelled you to vindicate the rights of humanity, which you charitably conceived could not be entirely extinguished, even in that detestable parricide who had directed the hands of those assassins, by whom our brethren, their own brethren, were wantonly massacred at Lexington, we felt with your Excellency the struggle you must have undergone. The necessity of thus exhibiting to the view of mankind the crimes of British chiefs was exquisitely painful to us, for we still were Britons, and most sincerely wished for a reconciliation to take place, remote as it appeared.

The early established fame of Britons for generosity made us believe that the horrors we beheld were but the crimes of individuals; and we fondly hoped that a people who had the same origin, and for whom we entertained a kind of superstitious reverence, never would be suddenly transformed into monsters. Such were the illusions we cherished with singular complacency, even at the time that the British General, sporting with virtue, and the national character of Britons, which his enormities were loading with infamy, boasted to your Excellency, in language of triumph, that "Britons, ever pre-eminent in mercy, have out-gone common examples, and overlooked the criminal in the captive."

We mourn, the national prejudices we have imbibed will ever make us mourn, that those men have, as a nation, far "out-gone," in the Northern and Southern Colonies, such examples as have been given frequently by the most wicked States; and the execrable conspiracy, wherein the murderer and the incendiary were engaged to destroy your Excellency and the whole Army, of which Providence has led you to obtain a seasonable discovery, inspires us with an inveterate abhorrence of the measures of that people, from whom we never wished to be separated, until the multiplied injuries of our parent State compelled us to seek refuge in a separate Government.

We are, fortunately, exempt, as yet, from those refinements which, in nations corrupted by luxury, expel a just sense of true honour, and give birth to a disagreeable circulation of the foul incense of adulation. Sensible that it does not become us, the humble companions of your military toils, to praise the abilities of our Commander, yet we obey with pleasure the strong impulse of duty and affection which now urge us to engage to live or die by you, whom our common enemies have marked out as one of the principal obstacles which retard their progress towards despotism, an acknowledgment than which none can more incontrovertibly prove the just sense they have of your virtue and military abilities.

We assure your Excellency of our firm attachment to the rights of our country, and the person of our General, and our abhorrence and detestation of those methods to subvert the one and destroy the other, to which the villany of our enemies have descended, which would disgrace the annals of the most barbarous nations. The wisdom and justice of your Excellency's government induces us to place the highest confidence in your measures to bring to condign punishment the authors of this horrid combination, and restore the peace of our country on a permanent basis; for which purpose, nothing in our stations proper to be done shall be omitted which your Excellency may see fit to order.

By desire, and in behalf of the several Regiments in the Second Brigade,

SAMUEL H. PARSONS,	JOHN DURKEE,
JED. HUNTINGTON,	SAMUEL PRENTICE,

JACOB BLACKWELL TO QUEENS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

New-York, June 29, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed we send you some resolutions, by which you will see that it is determined that all the stock in those parts of your County which lie to the southward of the ridge of hills on the north side of the plains, except as is therein excepted, be immediately removed, either into Suffolk County or to the northward of said ridge of hills. The matter admits of no delay, as the enemy are at the Hook, and will, in all probability, make a push for them immediately. We would, therefore, earnestly request you, with the advice of as many Committee-men as you can conveniently consult upon the occasion, to cause the said resolutions to be carried into immediate execution.

We are, sir, with respect, your very humble servant,

JACOB BLACKWELL.

P. S. The commanding officer of the Militia, or the Committee of Queens County, is requested to take effectual measures, at the publick expense, to keep the said stock within the limits above-mentioned.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress of NEW-YORK:
The humble Petition of the General Committee of TRYON County, humbly sheweth:

That the extent of this County is very great, and the Militia of necessity divided into four battalions; that we are a frontier, large, weak, and greatly exposed to the enemy. We lie open to the Indian nations, and through us is the passage to Oswego, Niagara, Oswegatchie, and other parts possessed by the enemy. If our Militia are to be of any effectual service to us in this critical situation, it is necessary we should be under the command of a General Officer in the County. Against the Brigadier-General who is appointed over this County, we have no objection but his distance.

We do, therefore, earnestly request you will hear our Delegates upon this subject, and appoint some General Officer with as much despatch as our circumstances require. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

JOHN FREY, Chairman.

Tryon County Committee-Chamber, June 29, 1776.

COMMITTEE ON PRISONERS TO JOHANNES SLEIGHT.

New-York, June 29, 1776.

SIR: The Provincial Congress having appointed us a Committee to superintend the prisoners of the Continental Congress in this Colony and of the Congress of this Colony, and that we be authorized to employ proper persons to furnish the said prisoners with rations, agreeable to certain resolves of the Continental Congress of the 21st of May last, and generally to take care that the said prisoners be properly secured and disposed of, and treated with justice and humanity,—we beg leave to inform you that, by this conveyance, we send to your care, the following officers, taken on board a transport from Scotland, bound to Boston, who are prisoners on parole, a copy of which we enclose you, viz: Captain John Smith and Lieutenant Robert Franklin, of the Forty-Second Regiment, or Royal Highlanders, (Lord John Murray, Colonel;) Captain Norman McLeod, his lady, and maid; Lieutenant Roderick McLeod; Ensign Colin Campbell and his lady; Robert Boyd, Surgeon's Mate; and John McAlister, master of the Crawford transport.

By the resolutions of the Continental Congress of the 21st May last, all officers, as prisoners, are to supply themselves, and are allowed to draw bills to pay for their subsistence and clothing; and if officers cannot draw or sell their bills, the Congress (Continental) will allow for each of them two dollars a week for board and lodgings, to be repaid by said officers before they are released from their captivity. No tavern-keepers are to supply any officers who are prisoners on the credit of the continent.

Having informed you of the resolutions of the Continental Congress relative to officers, we doubt not those who are sent to your care will conduct themselves strictly agreeable to the engagements they have entered into on parole. Notwithstanding this confidence, we request that you will be particularly careful that they do not in the least violate them. You will be pleased to procure for them, at their own expense, good and sufficient board and lodgings, and see that they be treated with humanity. By the parole, the officers are not at liberty to correspond directly or indirectly with, or give any intelligence whatsoever to, the enemies of the United Colonies; therefore, all letters which they may be disposed to write must be delivered to you open, to be forwarded to us.

We are, sir, your most humble servants,

J. BROOME,
ROBERT VAN RENSSELAER.

Johannes Sleght, Esq., Chairman Committee, Kingston.

P. S. There are with the officers the following persons, their servants: Daniel McCollan, James McDonald, Donald Martin and Norman Shaw, servants of Captain McLeod, and Elizabeth Tullow.

Hartford, June 29, 1776.

Colony of CONNECTICUT, ss.

In Committee for superintending Prisoners stationed in this Colony:

Resolved, That no Prisoner stationed in this Colony, under the care of this Committee, whether officer, soldier, or others, may be absent from their respective lodgings or homes after it is dark in the evening, on pain of imprisonment. That all the prisoners of war who are now boarded or billeted out in the several towns in this Colony (commission officers excepted) be permitted to go to labour at their respective trades, &c., and to receive wages therefor, and likewise the billeting allowed by the Continental Congress; and that all such as are able and shall not choose labour as aforesaid, shall be reduced to the proper state of prisoners, by being confined and subsisted upon the billeting allowed by Congress. And that every person who shall contravene or endeavour to prevent the execution of the above resolves, shall be dealt with and punished by imprisonment or otherwise, according to the demerit of his offence.

The above Resolves were passed, and are published by order of the Committee:

JESSE ROOT, Chairman.

DANIEL TILLINGHAST TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, June 29, 1776.

SIR: By Captain Lippit, of this town, who is just arrived at Boston from Halifax, we have certain accounts that General Howe, with his troops and fleet, sailed from Halifax the 10th instant. No person was allowed to leave the town till four days after. He says the fleet consists of about one hundred and fifty sail, and that they left near twelve hundred sick at Halifax.

As there is a boat just about to push off from here for New-York, I thought it would not be improper to inform your Excellency of the above, as possibly this may reach you before you have any other accounts.

I am, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

DANIEL TILLINGHAST, Agent.

To His Excellency General Washington.

BOSTON (MASSACHUSETTS) COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety,
Boston, June 29, 1776.

Whereas the keeping up a correspondence with our inveterate enemies (particularly the Fleet and Army now employed against the United Colonies, or those open and avowed opposers of our rights, who have forfeited all title to our confidence and protection by seeking refuge under the power which has been long engaged in the destruction of this country) is in direct violation of the laws of this Colony, and may be attended with the most fatal consequences to the publick safety:

All persons, therefore, who may arrive in this town from Halifax, or any port or place in possession of, or infested by our said enemies, are hereby directed to leave their names, with all the letters they may bring with them, and a memorandum of their places of abode, with some member of this Committee, or at the office of Nathaniel Barber, Esq., as soon as may be after their arrival here. A non-compliance with this requisition will be deemed evidence of an unfriendly design in such person or persons against the interest of the United Colonies, and they will be proceeded against accordingly.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN BROWN, Chairman.

MESHECH WEARE TO JAMES WARREN.

Exeter, June 29, 1776.

SIR: By order of the Council and Assembly of this Colony, I am directed to make application to your General Court for the loan of a few cannon and thirty or forty barrels of gunpowder, and set forth our distressing circumstances for want of those articles.

The late alarming accounts from Canada have so threatening an aspect, that our settlers on the western frontiers (extending one hundred and fifty miles on Connecticut River) have, in many places, packed up their most valuable articles of furniture, &c., ready to leave their settlements, and perhaps some have actually removed. Many expresses have arrived, and are now waiting for gunpowder, but we are not able to supply them, having lent the greatest part we were possessed of last summer to the Continental Army; and unless we can speedily supply them, that fertile country will be evacuated by the settlers, and your and our lower towns left open to the ravages of Canadians and Indians. In pursuance of a resolve of the Continental Congress we sent our Quartermaster to Boston and the environs, to look after the cannon, amounting to fifty heavy pieces, carried from us by the Ministerial troops; but, by his report, none could be found that he could challenge. Our fortifications are extensive and esteemed strong on the sea-coast and harbour, but have not cannon anywise sufficient to defend them against a considerable force.

When our powder-mill, which we hope will be completed in a short time, can furnish us, we will repay the powder, as we have considerable saltpetre on hand. Wherefore I desire you to lay this before your General Court, and most earnestly request their assistance in the premises.

Mr. Richard Champney, the bearer hereof, who goes express on this occasion, will wait the result of your Assembly thereon.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servant,

MESHECH WEARE, Pres't of Council.

To the Hon. James Warren, Esq., Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Massachusetts Colony.

MESHECH WEARE TO GENERAL WARD.

Exeter, June 29, 1776.

SIR: I am directed to make application to you, and set forth the distressing situation of this Colony for want of gunpowder. The western frontiers (extending one hundred and fifty miles on Connecticut River) are destitute thereof, and being greatly alarmed at the present accounts from Canada, have sent express after express, who are now waiting therefor. Last summer, to assist the Continental Army in their necessity for that article, we sent them fifty-two barrels, which left us but sixteen barrels. Three vessels, sent by the Colony to the foreign Islands, brought back but fifty-two barrels, part of which stock has been delivered our soldiers gone to Canada, and is considerably lessened. The time necessary to obtain an order from General Washington to deliver us the powder lent may decide the fate of our frontiers, and leave open the town settlements of your and our Colonies to the devastations of Canadians and savages. Therefore we entreat you (in this time of imminent danger) so far to dispense with the common method or rule in such cases as to order the delivery of fifty-two barrels of gunpowder to the bearer, Mr. Champney, to be forwarded by him to us, and we will, without delay, send to General Washington for his order to you for that purpose, which we are sensible will greatly recover the almost despairing spirits of our brethren in the frontiers, and be esteemed a favour to the common cause, and this Colony in particular.

By order of the Council and Assembly:

I am, &amp;c.,

MESHECH WEARE.

SELECTMEN OF WALPOLE TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Walpole, June 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The alarming news from our northern Army (which will doubtless reach you before this) excites in us ideas big with concern, when we consider the defenceless state of this part of the Colony. We behold our wives and our more helpless offspring as an easy prey (shocking thought!) to savages, whose tender mercies are cruelty, and this the rather because we have not the necessary means of defence. We of this town have endeavoured, in the course of the last year, to procure a stock of ammunition against the critical moment, besides what the law had ordered for individuals, neither of which could be purchased. We apprehend there is not, in this town, one round of powder and ball to a man; besides, we are deficient in regard of arms. Last year the Selectmen, upon a recommendation from the honourable Congress for this Colony, furnished the soldiers with arms, which were detained in the service; that we are under worse circumstances than when the war began; our guns are gone and we have nothing paid us to purchase more, if they could be procured. Not knowing where to purchase these necessary articles, we apply to you, as the guardians of this Colony, entreating of you, by all that is near and dear, to inform the bearer, Mr. Amos Babcock, where and by what means he can be furnished with a sufficiency of arms and ammunition, at least for this town.

We are, gentlemen, in behalf of the town of Walpole, your very humble servants,

THOMAS SPARHAWK,
EBEN. SWAN,
BENJAMIN BELLOWES, Jun., } Selectmen.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety for New-Hampshire Colony.

P. S. We expect other towns will send for military stores by Mr. Babcock.

CAPTAIN SMITH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, June 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I wrote you the 18th instant, by Mr. Powell, requesting you would appoint him my Third Lieutenant, but understand that he is to have a higher station in the troop now to be raised, at which I am very well pleased, as I think him a very deserving young man. I now beg leave to recommend the bearer, Mr. Robert Porteus, as a young man the most fit to fill the station of any one I know, and assure you I shall esteem it as a particular favour if you will appoint him my Third Lieutenant. I must still beg that you would allow Mr. Samuel Chesters, one of my Sergeants, who is appointed Adjutant to Colonel Buchanan's Battalion, to act still as Sergeant of my company.

I am, gentlemen, your most obliged, humble servant,
NATHANIEL SMITH.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

AMOS GARRETT TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

List of the Companies on the north side of Deer Creek, in Harford County, formed and returned to this Committee, viz:

William Webb Captain, Ignatius Wheeler First Lieutenant, William Fisher Second Lieutenant, Samuel Webb, Jun., Ensign, and seventy-four privates. Date of enrolment, 14th day of October, 1775.

John Patrick Captain, Winston Dallam First Lieutenant, Samuel Barley Second Lieutenant, Richard Ward Ensign, and fifty-five privates. Date of enrolment the 1st day of April, 1776.

John Jolley Captain, John Montgomery First Lieutenant, James Wilson Second Lieutenant, James Thomas Ensign, and fifty-seven privates. Date of enrolment the 10th day of March, 1776.

SIRS: The foregoing companies are the only ones formed since the last returns. We expect a company or two more will be formed, which, with one or two more already enrolled, but not yet formed in battalion, will make six independent companies, situated so as they may be formed in battalion, which we will report as soon as they are all enrolled.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

AMOS GARRETT, Chairman of the Com.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

Memorandum of Militia Officers who have not their commissions.

Samuel Calwell Captain, Thomas Hutchins First Lieutenant, Joseph Lewis Second Lieutenant.

James McComas Captain, Benjamin Scott First Lieutenant, Martin Preston Second Lieutenant, James Steel Ensign.

Robert Harris Captain, William Coale First Lieutenant, William Downs Second Lieutenant, Joseph Renshaw Ensign.

Bennet Bussey Captain, Joshua Miles First Lieutenant, Azeal Hitchcock, Jun., Second Lieutenant, Joshua Amos of James, Ensign.

Alexander Cowen Captain, John Beale Howard First Lieutenant, Samuel Groome Osborne Second Lieutenant, Lambert Wilmer, Ensign.

In Captain William McComas's Company James Sinclair is appointed Second Lieutenant.

WILLIAM ADAMS TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

Windsor, June 30, 1776.

SIR: I wrote two letters to the honourable Convention, acquainting them that I had received a bad fall from a horse, which had bruised and sprained my shoulder so much that I have not been able to ride these three weeks, and still continue so painful that I can scarce rest of nights, and if I were able I do not think it would be prudent to leave home at this time of immediate danger, when all the country is in such confusion, and expects to be plundered by a large number of tenders now in our Sound, piloted and conducted, as we believe, by our own people, who are gone to them in great numbers, and from whom worse treatment is expected than from the tender-men—as one Wallace, in Dan Quarter, has revenged himself on Mr. William Roberts, by plundering him, and then carrying him off on board the tenders, tied hand and foot, as I hear from authority; and this morning I hear they are landing on Nanticoke Point, and that they have burnt Mr. Samuel McChestor's house.

I hope, under these circumstances, the honourable Convention will excuse me.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

WILLIAM ADAMS.

To the Hon. President of Convention of Maryland.

SAMUEL TUCKER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 1, 1776.]

Trenton, New-Jersey, June 30, 1776.

SIR: At the repeated solicitation of Captain Thompson and Mr. Alexander MacCulloch, I beg leave to trouble you with their letter as enclosed, open, as from their particular circumstances they call up the feelings of humanity.

Mr. Thompson is an infirm old man, has a wife and four children, and, as far as I can judge, has but little to support them.

Mr. MacCulloch lost his wife at Quebeck, has two daughters left, and his all is in Quebeck, as he informs me. All they seem to desire is, that if an exchange of prisoners should take place, that, from their particular circumstances, they may be among the first.

Our Convention continue sitting at Burlington, and propose rising this week, unless something of importance should occur to prevent. I came from thence this morning; and have the honour to be your most obedient, humble servant,

SAMUEL TUCKER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

Burlington, New-Jersey, June 29, 1776.

SIR: A current report prevails here that, in consequence of the cartel entered into between General Arnold and Captain Forster, an exchange of prisoners is like to take place; and as we are in another channel than that of the Army, we are under some apprehensions that we may be forgotten; we therefore have taken this early method of troubling you, entreating you would be pleased to direct that our names may be inserted amongst those who are to be exchanged, should such a thing take place. Our families, property, &c., being within the garrison of Quebeck, we hope your general well-known humanity will gain us your powerful weight on this occasion.

Please excuse this liberty, and we are, most respectfully, sir, your most humble servants,

ZACH. THOMPSON, Captain Naval Dept.
and Master Ship-builder at St. Johns.

ALEX. MACCULLOCH, *D'y Com'y General*for the Province of Quebeck, made prisoner at Chamby.To the Honourable John Hancock.

EDWARD THOMAS TO GENERAL WILLIAM LIVINGSTON.

[Extract.]

Lebanon Township, Hunterdon County, 2
June 30, 1776. }

DEAR GENERAL: Being called into this part of the country upon some private business of my own, and having the general good always at heart, I have taken some pains to inquire as to the state of the new levies, and, from what I can collect, I believe the companies in this County are not above half full, although some of the companies have augmented the bounty to eight pounds Proclamation money. In Somerset I believe it is not much better.

There are numbers of tenants that say if they are taken away at this season of the year, they may as well knock their families in the head, for that they will be ruined. At a muster some time past in order to recruit men, one-half of two companies came with clubs. Colonel Johnson was knocked down by them, and was afterwards obliged to retreat. The same day one of the Captains was much beaten by them. — has been to Congress, and has obtained an order for taking them up. When the Militia collected they dispersed, and several that were called Tories have since appeared to be staunch Whigs, and as long as they are kept in fear, I suppose will continue such.

EDWARD THOMAS.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO WILLIAM BURNET.

New-York, June 30, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour by Mr. Treat, and cannot but consider the officer of Mr. Franklin's guard extremely blameable for his conduct. It is certainly his indispensable duty to conduct Mr. Franklin to the place the Convention have ordered without delay. The circumstances you represent, his letter to his lady, and the whole complexion of the case, afford a strong presumption, nay, much more, full evidence, that he means to escape, if possible. He says in his letter "that during his respite, the time between his writing and getting an answer from Congress, something may turn up to make his removal improper, and at any rate to gain time will be of advantage." I have written to the Captain of his guard upon the subject; and as Mr. Franklin has evidenced a most unfriendly disposition to our cause; as the Colony Convention have ordered him to Connecticut for refusing to comply with such terms as they deemed necessary and proper for him to enter into to procure his liberty; as he does not propose to sign the parole which they formed, but has proposed several alterations,—I am of opinion your Committee should interfere in the matter and give immediate orders to the officer of the guard to proceed with him in execution of the duty wherewith he is charged; and further, if you apprehend there is the least danger of his being rescued, or of the guard appointed to escort him being remiss in their duty, that your Committee should appoint a strong escort for the purpose, and direct them to assist in performing the views of the Convention, and conduct him securely to the place fixed upon to receive him.

I have enclosed the letter for the officer of the guard, which, having read, you will seal and transmit him.

I am, &amp;c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Dr. William Burnet, Chairman of Committee of Essex County, New-Jersey.

P. S. I am of opinion that if Mr. Franklin should consent to give the parole required by Convention, the officer has no power to take it unless he has been instructed by them to do it, and should not delay proceeding with him if that proposition was made, much more on account of what has been. The letter he designed for Mrs. Franklin should be taken care of; it may be of service.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 30, 1776.

SIR: I understand that the Convention of New-Jersey did resolve that Governour Franklin was an enemy to the liberties of America, and that he should be conducted, under a safe guard, into Connecticut; and for that purpose he was committed to your charge. I have this morning received information that you have halted with him at Hackensack. I would enjoin it upon you to set off immediately, and carry the resolve of the Convention into execution. Delays are dangerous, and should any accident happen, you never could answer your neglect to our much injured country. I would, therefore, again repeat to you, that it is my advice, immediately on receipt of this, to set forward on your journey with Governour Franklin, and make all possible despatch for the place you are ordered to. Governour Franklin once had his choice, and chose Connecticut, and it is not for you to hesitate on frivolous pretences, but do your utmost to execute the orders you have received in every particular.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Captain of Governour Franklin's guard.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 2, 1776.]

New-York, June 30, 1776.

SIR: I had the pleasure of receiving your favour of the 29th early this morning, with which you have been pleased to honour me, together with the resolves for a further augmentation of our Army.

The battalion of Germans which Congress have ordered to be raised will be a corps of much service, and I am hopeful that such persons will be appointed officers as will complete their inlistments with all possible expedition.

I shall communicate to Colonel Stephenson and one of his Field Officers what you have requested, and direct them to repair immediately to Philadelphia. It is an unlucky circumstance that the term of inlistment of these three companies, and of the Rifle battalion, should expire at this time, when a hot campaign is, in all probability, about to commence.

Canada, it is certain, would have been an important acquisition, and well worth the expenses incurred in the pursuit of it. But as we could not reduce it to our possession, the retreat of our Army with so little loss, under such a variety of distresses, must be esteemed a most fortunate event.

It is true, the accounts we have received do not fully authorize us to say that we have sustained no loss, but they hold forth a probable ground for such conclusion. I am anxious to hear it confirmed.

I have the honour of transmitting you an extract of a letter received last night from General Ward. If the scheme the privateers had in view and the measures he had planned, have been carried into execution, the Highland corps will be ably and well disposed of, but I fear the fortunate event has not taken place.

In General Ward's letter was enclosed one from Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, who was made prisoner with the Highland troops. I have transmitted you a copy. This will give you a full and exact account of the number of prisoners that were on board the four transports, and will prove, beyond a possibility of doubt, that the evacuation of Boston by the British troops was a matter neither known nor expected when he received his orders. Indeed, so many facts had concurred before to settle the matter, that no additional proofs were necessary.

When I had the honour of addressing you yesterday, I had only been informed of the arrival of forty-five of the fleet in the morning; since that I have received authentick intelligence from sundry persons—among them from General Greene—that one hundred and ten sail came in before night that were counted, and that more were seen about dusk in the offing. I have no doubt but the whole that sailed from Halifax are now at the Hook.

Just as I was about to conclude my letter, I received one from a gentleman upon the subject of calling the five regiments from Boston to the defence of Canada or New-York, and to have Militia raised in their lieu. I have sent you a copy, and shall only observe that I know the author well; his handwriting is quite familiar to me. He is a member of the General Court, very sensible, of great influence, and a warm and zealous friend to the cause of America. The expedient proposed by him is submitted to Congress.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the highest esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Extract of a letter from General Ward, dated Boston, June 23, 1776.

SIR: I have just received information from several privateers that eleven sail of transports, under convoy of a frigate, are in the Bay, standing in, and supposed to be part of the Scotch fleet. The privateers are all ordered out, and I have taken measures to secure the transports in case they should come into Nantasket Road.

Watertown, June 21, 1776.

GENERAL WASHINGTON: The most important matters are soon to be decided by arms. Unhappy it is for the Massachusetts, and I fear for the whole continent, that at this season we have a large and numerous Assembly. More than one-half of the House are new members. Their decisions are most afflictingly slow, when everything calls for the utmost ardour and despatch. The Lord have mercy on us! This Colony, I imagine, will raise the men required by Congress before snow falls, but in no season for the relief of either New-York or Canada. Pray, sir, consider what there is to be done. It is my clear opinion that there will not a single company move in this Colony for either of those places this three weeks. I know, sir, it will vex you, but your Excellency will not be alone in the vexation. My soul at times is ready to die within me at the delays; at others, my blood to press out of the pores of my body. But what shall be the expedients? I never was good at them, but will venture to propose again the same I mentioned in my last: namely, that some or all of the five Continental Regiments here be ordered to march, without one moment's delay, to Canada or New-York, as the exigencies may require. In such case they must be paid up their arrears, or nearly. In that way you will, in effect, get succours for New-York or Canada, or both, from this Colony. Our people are so jealous of their own safety (though you know, sir, that I judge them at present in very little danger) that they will raise the Militia for their own defence. I beg your Excellency to advert to the proposal a moment. Our own Militia are as good for all the intents answered, or to be answered here, by these regiments, as they are. They are much better for Canada or New-York than the Militia. They are officered and well armed; the Militia to be officered, armed, and equipped. The differences are too many to be enumerated. If I may say it, I am astonished at the policy of Congress in ordering more regiments here, instead of ordering those which are here to parts where they are infinitely more needed. But my opinion is little worth; but such as it is, I have given it: it may serve as a suggestion.

I am, may it please your Excellency, yours sincerely.

GENERAL ORDERS.

(Countersign, Halifax.)

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 16, 1776.

(Parole, Hanover.)

(Countersign, Ireland.)

The Continental Congress have been pleased to come to the following Resolution:

"IN CONGRESS, June 10, 1776.—Resolved, That the pay of the Continental Troops in the Middle Department be henceforth the same as that of the Troops in the Eastern Department."

The General, therefore, directs that when the pay abstracts for any of the corps of the Middle Department are made out, the Colonels, or Commanding Officers thereof, will take care that the pay of the men, from the 10th of June, be the same as those of the Eastern Regiments.

The Brigadiers are to make themselves well acquainted with the nature and situation of the grounds on the North and East Rivers, for some considerable distance about the city, with the best approaches to them, that they may know how to occupy these grounds to the best advantage if occasion should require; and they are to cause the same to be done by their respective officers in turn.

Great and crying complaints being made against the Armourers, not only for their idleness but the deceitful manner in which their work is executed, the General does, in explicit terms, assure them, that if any further complaint of either should be exhibited, he will punish them in a most exemplary manner; of this the superintendant of that branch of business is desired to make them fully acquainted.

Lieutenant Walker, of Colonel Nixon's Regiment, tried at the General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Parsons is President, on a charge exhibited against him by Captain Butler, of said regiment, for "maliciously and falsely accusing him of high crimes and misdemeanours, and, in consequence of which, procuring him, the said Captain Butler, to be arrested and tried at a late General Court-Martial, by which he was honourably acquitted;" the Court, after mature consideration, are of opinion that Lieutenant Walker had sufficient grounds for exhibiting a complaint against Captain Butler, and that he is not guilty of maliciously and falsely accusing Captain Butler, and therefore do acquit the prisoner of the charge against him.

The General approves of the above sentence passed against Lieutenant Walker, and orders him released from his arrest.

Bowers Laybourn and Thomas Perry, both of Captain Van Wyck's Company and Colonel McDougall's Regiment, tried at the above Court-Martial for "desertion," are found guilty, and sentenced severally to be whipped thirty-nine lashes each, on his bare back, for their respective offences.

Henry Davis, of Captain Johnson's Company, Colonel McDougall's Regiment, tried at the above Court-Martial, for "desertion," is found guilty of the same, and sentenced to be whipped thirty lashes on his bare back for said offence.

The General approves of the above sentences, and orders the corporal punishment to be executed at the usual time and place.

Lieutenant Elijah Oakley, of Captain Stenrod's Company, in Colonel McDougall's Regiment, tried at the General Court-Martial whereof Colonel Nixon was President, for "assaulting and beating, without provocation, one Miss Patterson, an inhabitant of the City of New-York." The Court are of opinion that Lieutenant Oakley is guilty of the charge brought against him, and that he has behaved unworthy the character of a gentleman and officer; and the Court adjudge that he (Lieutenant Oakley) be cashiered for said offence; and further order, that twenty dollars be stopped out of the prisoner's (Lieutenant Oakley) pay, (if so much be due to him,) and be paid, by way of damage, to Miss Patterson.

The General approves of the sentence of the Court, and orders that the late Lieutenant Oakley do immediately depart the camp.

Lieutenant Chapman, of Captain Hale's Company and Colonel Webb's Regiment, tried at the General Court-Martial whereof Colonel Parsons is President, for "disobedience of orders and refusing to do his duty." The Court are of opinion that the charge is fully supported against the prisoner, Lieutenant Chapman, and adjudge that he be dismissed the Continental Army for said offence.

The General approves of the sentence of the Court-Martial against Lieutenant Chapman, and orders that he be dismissed the service, and depart the camp.

A detachment consisting of one Major, three Captains, six Subalterns, nine Sergeants, nine Corporals, three Drummers and Fifers, and one hundred and twenty Privates, to parade this evening, at six o'clock, at the Bowling-Green, there to receive further orders from Major Brooks, of Colonel Webb's Regiment, who is to take the command of this party.

Especial care is to be taken that the men's Arms and Ammunition are in good order; each man to have his twenty-four rounds of Powder and Ball, and to be furnished with seven days' Provisions.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 18, 1776.

(Parole, Hancock.)

(Countersign, Johnson.)

Joseph Reed, Esq., is appointed Adjutant-General of all the Continental forces, with the rank of Colonel, and is to be regarded and obeyed accordingly.

Captains Post and Pollard are to make Returns every evening to Colonel Putnam of the service of the men under their command, showing where and how they are employed, and on Saturday to make a weekly Return of their Companies to the Adjutant-General.

The Colonels of every Regiment are to see that their Drums are put in good order, at the publick expense, after which they are to be kept so at the charge of the Drummers, who have extra pay on that account, from which deductions will be made if necessary; but in case of unavoidable accidents, the charge of repair will be borne as heretofore.

Peter Meredith and Peter Bickerstaff, of Captain Ledyard's Company, in Colonel McDougall's Regiment, having been tried by a General Court-Martial whereof Colonel Parsons was President, for "desertion," are found guilty, and sentenced to receive thirty lashes each; which sentence the General confirms, and orders to be executed at the usual time and place.

In addition to the orders of the 14th instant made to prevent the embezzlement of the publick tools, the Quartermaster-General shall cause all the tools, of every kind, belonging to the United Colonies, or at any time purchased for them, to be marked with the following brand or stamp:

C X I I I.

The Engineers to provide stores for securing the tools under their care, and such sentries placed over them as they shall find necessary. All Officers commanding a party or detachment from any Regiment on the works, to be accountable for the tools he receives from the overseers, as he will be obliged to pay for all lost while under his care; and the soldier who shall lose or purposely destroy any of the tools delivered him to work with, shall not only have the price thereof stopped out of his next pay, but be punished according to the nature of his offence. And in order that the publick works may not be retarded by the several overseers attending to deliver the tools to every Regiment before they set any of them to work, (which may be the case in some instances,) therefore, the Chief Engineer has leave, when he finds the case requisite, to take suitable persons from any of the Battalions to attend the stores, and deliver and receive the tools; and when any tools are out of repair, or become useless, they may be changed at the Quartermaster-General's store for others which are good; and in case other tools are not wanted, or not to be had in the store, the Quartermaster-General shall receive the defective tools and discharge the Engineer of so many tools as they do receive.

A working party, consisting of nine hundred men, properly officered, to parade to-morrow morning at six o'clock, near the Artillery Park. Those of Bailey's and Reed's Regiments to go to Paulus Hook; Wylly's to Governour's Island; all of the other Regiments to parade at the Laboratory, and there receive orders from the Chief Engineer.

The whole of the above men to be furnished with one day's provision, except Parsons's and Arnold's, who will return to their respective encampments to dinner.

Brigadier-General Greene and Colonel Prescott will furnish one hundred and fifty men each, as a working party on Governour's Island.

On the present emergency, all working parties to work till six o'clock in the afternoon, except such as go by water, who will be allowed to leave work sooner, if the wind and tide make it necessary.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 20, 1776.

(Parole, Gates.)

(Countersign, Canada.)

Fifty men, one Captain, two Subalterns, three Sergeants, three Corporals, and one Drummer, to parade to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock, at the Assistant Quartermaster Hughes's, with one week's provision, and there receive their orders from him.

Five Carpenters, to be nominated by the Quartermaster-General, out of Colonel Reed's, Colonel Bailey's, and Colonel Larned's Regiments, to be sent to assist the Wheelwrights.

Nathaniel Powers, of Captain Bowltan's Company and Colonel Sheppard's Regiment, having been tried by a Court-Martial whereof Colonel Parsons was President, for "desertion," was found guilty, and sentenced to thirty-nine lashes. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be put in execution at the usual time and place.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 21, 1776.

(Parole, Albany.)

(Countersign, Bedford.)

All Officers or Soldiers belonging to either of the Regiments serving in Canada are to apply immediately to Major-General Gates, who will give them orders for repairing to their respective detachments.

The General has been pleased to appoint Richard Cary and Samuel Webb, Esquires, his Aids-de-Camp, and Alexander Contee Harrison, Esquire, Assistant Secretary, who are to be obeyed and regarded as such.

The honourable Continental Congress have been pleased to give the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel to the Aids-de-Camp of the Commander-in-Chief and to his principal Secretary; also the rank of Major to the Aids-de-Camp of the Majors-General.

The honourable Continental Congress have resolved, that no Officer shall suttle or sell to the Soldiers, on penalty of being fined one month's pay, and dismissed the service with infamy.

The same honourable body have also resolved, that all sales of Arms, Ammunition, Clothing, and Accoutrements, made by any Soldier of the Continental Army, shall be void; also, that the Baggage of Officers and Soldiers shall be regulated conformably to the rules and customs of the British Army.

The General requires and expects a most exact and punctual obedience to each of the above Resolves.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 22, 1776.

(Parole, Brunswick.)

(Countersign, Cumberland.)

Aaron Burr, Esq., is appointed Aid-de-Camp to General Putnam, in the room of Major Webb, promoted. He is to be obeyed and regarded as such.

The Quartermasters having, in many late instances, neglected to see detachments and working parties furnished with the necessary quantity of Provisions, the General requires greater punctuality in future; and if any further neglect appears in this respect, such Quartermaster will be severely punished.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 23, 1776.

(Parole, Cambridge.)

(Countersign, Dorchester.)

Mutual complaints having been made by the Armourers and Soldiers respecting the repairing of Arms, the Officers of the several Regiments are earnestly called upon to examine their men, and turn out all those who can work to any advantage in the Armourer's shop, though they should not be complete workmen; and to prevent further uneasiness, the several Captains are to inspect the Arms of their Companies, and either themselves, or by some persons for whom they will be answerable, have the defective Arms sent to the Armourers, when the master-workman will give a receipt for them, the same Officer in like manner attending to the return of the Arms, and to make report if the Armourers fail in their work. The honour and safety of the Army depends so much upon a strict attention to the state of the Arms, that the General hopes no pains will be spared upon this head.

A detachment, consisting of one Lieutenant-Colonel, one Major, six Captains, twelve Subalterns, eighteen Sergeants, eighteen Corporals, six Drums and Fifes, and three hundred Privates, to parade to-morrow morning, at the Grand Parade, at eight o'clock, with their Arms, Ammunition, and Blankets, to have four days' Provisions, there to receive their orders from General Putnam. Lieutenant-Colonel Jacobs and Major Colbourne to be the Field Officers of the above detachment.

The Sentries at the Laboratory and Artillery Park to be doubled every night until further orders. The Brigade Majors will strengthen these Guards with an addition of men for that purpose.

Major Trumbull being promoted, Adjutant Peck, of Colonel Huntington's Regiment, to act as the Brigade-Major to General Spencer's Brigade till further appointment is made.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 24, 1776.

(Parole, Dedham.)

(Countersign, Essex.)

The Guard on the Prisoners at the City-Hall is to be strengthened every night as the last, so as to make up one hundred men, forty being required from the several Brigades.

The General Court-Martial now sitting to assemble at the house where the Provost is kept, till further orders.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 25, 1776.

(Parole, Epsom.)

(Countersign, Falkland.)

The Militia Officers of the adjoining Provinces who are to reinforce this Army are, upon their arrival with their Troops, to make report immediately to the Brigadier-General, or the Officer commanding their respective Corps, who is to make report once in two days to the Commander-in-Chief.

The Adjutant-General's Office will be removed this afternoon to a small brick house, one of the Offices belonging to Head-Quarters. The Brigade Majors are requested to attend there punctually hereafter, at eleven o'clock, except those at a distance, who may send an Adjutant; but the orders will not be given to any person of less rank in future.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 26, 1776.

(Parole, Falmouth.)

(Countersign, Georgia.)

Agreeable to a Resolve of the honourable the Continental Congress, no certificates of expenses are to be given in future by any but Brigadiers, Quartermasters and their Deputies, or a Field Officer on a march, or Officer commanding at a detached post.

The remainder of Colonel Wayne's Regiment under command of Lieutenant Colonel Johnston, are to embark for Albany on Saturday next. The Quartermaster is to provide Vessels and the Commissary-General Provisions for their passage. Colonel Johnston will apply to the Adjutant-General for particular instructions, and for an order on General Schuyler for Arms when he arrives at Albany.

Colonel Johnston is to appoint one or more (as the case may require) diligent Officers of his Corps, to take charge of such men as are now here belonging to the Regiment in Canada, and deliver them to their several Colonels or Commanding Officers; passage and provisions to be furnished as above.

The Commanding Officers of the several Regiments, whether in camp or detached posts, are as soon as possible to return into the Adjutant-General's Office the names of their several Officers, their ranks, and the dates of their respective Commissions, in order that the same may be forwarded to Congress.

Joseph Hulbert, of Captain Park's Company, and late Colonel Larned's Regiment, and Nathaniel Thompson, of Captain Peters's Company, Colonel Read's Regiment, having been tried by a Court-Martial whereof Colonel Parsons was President, and found guilty of desertion, are sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes each on their bare backs, which sentence the General confirms, and orders to be executed at the usual time and place.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 27, 1776.

(Parole, Halifax.)

(Countersign, Ireland.)

Several persons having been detained by Sentries, notwithstanding their having given the countersign at night, and others in the day time on the wharves, on a pretence of their not having passes, the General forbids such practices; and any Soldier convicted of them in future will be punished. Officers of Guards to be careful, in posting their Sentries, to make them acquainted with this Order.

After Orders.—Thomas Hickey, belonging to the General's Guard, having been convicted by a General Court-Martial whereof Colonel Parsons was the President, of the crimes of "sedition and mutiny, and also of holding a treacherous correspondence with the enemy, for the most horrid and detestable purposes," is sentenced to suffer death. The General approves the sentence, and orders that he be hanged to-morrow at eleven o'clock.

All the Officers and men off duty belonging to General Heath's, Spencer's, Lord Stirling's, and General Scott's Brigades, to be under arms on their respective parades, at ten o'clock to-morrow morning, to march from thence to the ground between General Spencer's and Lord Stirling's encampment, to attend the execution of the above sentence. The Provost-Marshal immediately to make the necessary preparations, and to attend on that duty to-morrow.

After Orders.—Each of the Brigade-Majors to furnish the Provost-Marshal with twenty men from each Brigade, with good Arms and Bayonets, as a guard on the prisoner to and at the place of execution.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 28, 1776.

(Parole, Kendall.)

(Countersign, Lebanon.)

The unhappy fate of Thomas Hickey, executed this day for mutiny, sedition, and treachery, the General hopes will be a warning to every soldier in the Army to avoid those crimes, and all others, so disgraceful to the character of a soldier, and pernicious to his country, whose pay he receives and bread he eats. And in order to avoid those crimes, the most certain method is to keep out of the temptation of them, and particularly to avoid lewd women, who, by the dying confession of this poor criminal, first led him into practices which ended in an untimely and ignominious death.

Officers are, without delay, to inspect the state of the Ammunition which the men have, and get their Arms in good order for service, and strongly to inculcate upon all Sentries, especially on night duty, the greatest vigilance and attention; the Soldiers, on their part, to be very attentive and obedient to these orders, as a carelessness and neglect may be of the most fatal consequence.

No persons to be permitted to inspect the Works without leave in writing.

The General requests the Colonels of the several Regiments not to depend wholly upon their Officers in complying with the above order respecting the Arms and Ammunition of the Soldiers, but to pay particular attention to the matter themselves, it being at this juncture of the greatest importance.

After Orders.—It is not from any distrust of the vigilance or spirit of the inferior officers (as he has the greatest confidence in them) that the General recommends to the Colonels an attention to the Arms and Ammunition of their respective Regiments, but that every Officer, from the highest to the lowest, when the hour of attack seems fast approaching, may exert himself in this necessary duty; and it is particularly recommended, from the Brigadier-Generals to the Ensigns, to give it the utmost attention.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 29, 1776.

(Parole, Manchester.)

(Countersign, Norfolk.)

Ensign Miller, of Colonel Wyllis's Regiment, under arrest for leaving his Guard at the City-Hall, and suffering a prisoner to be absent from thence, to be immediately tried by a General Court-Martial. Notice to be given to the witnesses to attend.

After Orders.—Till the reinforcement intended for this department arrives, and some general regulations take place, Brigadier-General Mifflin is to take charge of the two Battalions from Pennsylvania, commanded by Colonels Shea and Magaw, but is to remain in the City of New-York till further orders. Before him all prisoners and all deserters are to be carried for examination; the former he will order to be escorted to such place as the Provincial Congress or Committee of Safety of New-York shall assign, and the latter to have removed to a distance from the Army, reporting to the General all extraordinaries. General Mifflin will also turn his attention, in a particular manner, to the Gondolas, Fire-Rafts, &c., causing the work to advance with all possible despatch, and seeing that nothing is omitted which can complete and forward them.

Jonathan Mifflin, Esq., is appointed Brigade-Major to General Mifflin, and is to be obeyed as such.

The Commanding Officers of the Militia from the several Counties are to see that each Private is furnished with twenty-four rounds of Powder and Ball, by applying to Commissary Cheever, as fast as they arrive, and to form them into Battalions as early as possible.

Evening Orders.—As many useful men belonging to the Army have been drafted, and others have been hired, for the different works of the Camp, and as their assistance may be wanted to repel the enemy, such Carpenters, Armourers, Smiths, and other Artificers as are now under the directions of Captains Post, Pollard, Bruin, Ford, and Bacon, are forthwith to be formed in a distinct Corps, under the command of Colonel Jonathan Brewer and Mr. Parke, Assistant Quartermaster-General, who are to act (pro tempore) as their Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel. Mr. Parke to parade them on the Common, near the Park of Artillery, at ten o'clock to-morrow morning. He is to order an account to be taken of their Arms and Accoutrements, and to form them into Companies of fifty, and then report to the General, who will nominate such temporary Officers as will be necessary to complete the several Companies. This Corps to continue during the present exigency, after which they will return to their former employments. At the same time they are not to be exempted from their ordinary duty while under the present arrangement, except while they are arranging or called out to action.

The Quartermaster-General to deliver to General Putnam's order all the Sandbags in his possession. He is also to engage such a number of Cart-Horses in the City as Colonel Knox shall think sufficient, for the use of the Train of Artillery, and, with the assistance of Colonel Knox, to arrange them in such a manner as to prevent confusion in time of service, and best answer the design of employing them. He is to procure as many sound empty Hogsheads as he can, and deliver them to General Putnam's order. He is to procure all the Row-Boats and light Pettiaugers in and near this City, and is to station them, with all other boats belonging to the Army, and not in use, in the dock, between the Exchange Slip and Albany Pier.

The Commissary-General to lodge a fortnight's Provision on Governour's Island, Paulus Hook, and in all the detached posts. To enable him to do this with precision, General Putnam will furnish him with a list of the men in the several posts.

The General expects that all Soldiers, who are intrusted with the defence of any work, will behave with great coolness and bravery, and will be particularly careful not to throw away their fire; he recommends to them to load for their first fire, with one musket-ball and four or eight buck-shot, according to the size and strength of their pieces. If the enemy is received with such a fire, at not more than twenty or thirty yards distance, he has no doubt of their being repulsed.

The Brigadier-Generals to order Chevaux-de-frise and Fascines, sufficient to shut up the sally ports of their respective works, to be immediately provided and lodged near the works.

Head-Quarters, New-York, June 30, 1776.

(Parole, Philadelphia.)

(Countersign, Holland.)

The Brigadiers are to order the officers and men belonging to their several Brigades (not on duty) to march from their respective regimental parade to their alarm posts at least once every day, that they may become well acquainted therewith. They are to march by such routes as are least exposed to a fire from the shipping; and it is expected that all officers, from the highest to the lowest, will make themselves well acquainted with the grounds, that they may at any time be able to make advantage of it.

Upon the signal for the enemy's approach, or upon any alarm, all fatigue parties are immediately to repair to their respective corps, with their arms, ammunition, and accoutrements ready for instant action. The working parties in no other instance are to be interrupted. The finishing of our lines of defence, and other works expeditiously, is a matter of so much consequence, that the General is persuaded, from the known zeal of the troops, that officers and men will stand in no need of arguments to stimulate them to uncommon exertion upon the occasion. His anxiety for the honour of the American arms, and the noble cause we are engaged in—not a distrust in the officer's care—induces him once more, and while time will allow it, to recommend a thorough inspection to the men's arms and ammunition; to see that every soldier is completed to twenty-four rounds, and has a good flint well fixed into the lock; in short, to be well prepared for an engagement, is, under God, (whose divine aid it behooves us to supplicate,) more than one-half the battle.

The General desires that each Colonel, or Commanding Officer, of the established Regiments, will furnish him with a list of the vacancies therein; and that the Field Officers of those Regiments would recommend proper persons to fill them. The Commanding Officer, for the time being, of such Militia as shall arrive in this city from New-Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts-Bay, is to give in Returns thereof to the Adjutant-General of the parties as they arrive. He is immediately to discharge every man who comes without arms; and is to see that all the others are completed with their twenty-four rounds per man; and that they do their proportion of all duties, as will fatigue as other duty.

Captain Josiah Fay, of Colonel Ward's Regiment, to act as Major of the said Regiment, till further orders; he is to be obeyed as such.

After Orders.—Twenty-six thousand Musket Cartridge to be sent Colonel Prescott on Governour's Island, with some Flints.

The Brigadiers to order a circle to be marked round the several Redoubts, by which their officers are to be directed in giving orders for the first discharge. Small brush may be set up to make the line more distinct and familiar to the men, who are by no means to be ordered to fire before the enemy arrive at the circle.

The Countersign, in future, to be delivered by the Adjutant-General to the Brigade-Majors and Adjutant of Artillery, at six o'clock P. M., who are to send the same, sealed, to their respective Brigades, and to the Field Officers of their respective Brigades, if required by the latter, and to no others.

Captain Stephen Brown, of Colonel Durkee's Regiment, to go immediately to Newark, and apply for assistance in procuring and fixing Boats near the Ferries for facilitating the passage of the Troops from New-Jersey to New-York.

General Heath to order the House and Barn on Governour's Island to be consumed.

CAPTAIN SMITH (PRISONER) TO ROBERT VAN RENSSELAER.

New-York, June 30, 1776.

SIR: I mentioned to you yesterday evening that, as I heard there were to be some British officers, who are now prisoners in this or the neighbouring Governments, to be sent to Canada, in exchange for some officers of the Continental Army, who are now prisoners there, I would be extremely obliged to you if you will be so kind as to mention to the Congress that the officers of the Forty-Second or Royal Highland Regiment, who are prisoners in this Government and Rhode-Island Government, would be much obliged to the Congress if they could be amongst the number of officers that may be exchanged. Lieutenant Robert

Franklin and I are the two officers of that regiment that are prisoners in this Government, and Lieutenant Harry Monroe and Ensign John Campbell are the two officers that were carried prisoners of that regiment into Rhode-Island, by Captain Biddle, of the brigantine armed vessel Andrew Doria. I hope you will be good enough to excuse this; and if you will be kind enough to let me know the result or answer of the Congress, I will be much obliged to you.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN SMITH,

Capt. 42d or Royal Highland Regiment.

To Robert Van Rensselaer, Esq., or any of the gentlemen appointed by Congress for the disposition of Continental prisoners.

WILLIAM DUTCHER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Phillipsborough, June 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Having understood that there was a number of men to be raised in Westchester County for County duty; and whereas there are a number of men under my command that are as well equipped as any company in the country, and I think I can say with safety the best, and the men in general are all willing to enter in their country's service if the gentlemen of the Provincial Congress think fit to employ them, as we have heretofore done a great deal of County duty when other companies have been left at home, and have never had any satisfaction for it, which also we never intend to make any demand of; however, we have, notwithstanding, been very illy used, for all the other companies have had powder and ball delivered to them, when we are left without any; so gentlemen, if you should be in want of us, you may let me know by the earliest opportunity, and you may depend upon it the men will be ready almost on the shortest notice; therefore, you must send up recruiting orders immediately. From your humble servant,

WILLIAM DUTCHER.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, June 30, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 23d instant I received last evening, and shall carry your orders into execution as soon as possible.

The General Assembly of New-Hampshire some time since applied to me for the powder which that Colony lent the continent last summer, and I referred them to your Excellency for an order; but since the retreat of General Sullivan, they have urged the great necessity of having the powder immediately for the defence of their frontiers, before they can have an answer from your Excellency; I therefore gave them an order for fifty-two barrels powder, (the quantity they say they lent the continent,) the Council of said Colony being answerable for the same.

The man-of-war and transports which have been in the bay some days past disappeared yesterday; since which I have not heard anything of them.

I have enclosed the judgment of the Court of Inquiry respecting Lieutenant Merril.

There are near twenty vacant commissions in this division of the Army. I have ordered the vacancies to be filled, from time to time, by such men as were thought most suitable to do the duty, until your pleasure should be signified. I mention this now, because Congress have directed a return to be made to the "Board of War and Ordnance" of this division of the Army, with the dates of the commissions; but I hope to be relieved before this return can be made, as my illness increases upon me.

I am, your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,
ARTEMAS WARD.

DAVID GALUSHA TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-Hampshire Grants, Bennington, }
June 30, 1776. }

SIR: By the bearer, Captain Samuel Herrick, who has this hour returned from Crown Point as an express from this Committee, you will learn from his own mouth, to the best of his knowledge, the wretched situation the Northern frontiers on the New-Hampshire Grants are at present in.

We would acquaint your Honour that we view our present situation to be distressing, and our present hopes of relief very uncertain. We have no orders for raising any number of troops for our own defence. We are much concerned for the preservation of the lives of the inhabitants in particular, and the safety of the country in general. We are not willing to breed any confusion by proposing a method contrary to rule; but are willing to furnish any number of troops in our power on application. Should your Honour condescend to suffer these matters to take place in your mind, and examine more particularly into them, it is hoped your Honour may give such advice and encouragement in the premises as the nature of the case may justify, and the favour shall ever be gratefully acknowledged by, honoured sir, your most obedient and very humble servant.

Per order of Committee:

DAVID GALUSHA, Chairman.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

The Court-room in the City-Hall of the City of New-York, }
the 19th day of June, 1776. }

Mr. Morris offered to the Committee a draft of a Warrant to be issued against dangerous persons described and named in the Resolutions of the Provincial Congress of the 5th of June instant; which, being read and considered, was agreed to, and is in the words following, viz:

In pursuance of certain Resolutions of the Congress of the Colony of New-York of the 5th day of June instant, we do authorize and require you forthwith to arrest and bring before us, at the City-Hall of the City of New-York, . . . . ., whose conduct hath been represented to the said Congress as inimical to the cause and rights of America, and who, if summoned, would probably, in the opinion of the said Congress, not appear, but secrete himself; to the end that we, being the Committee of the said Congress, for that purpose, by the resolutions aforesaid, duly appointed and authorized, may inquire and determine in the premises. And bring with you then there this warrant.

Given at New-York, the . . . day of June, 1776.

Form of Summons for suspected Persons.

SIR: By virtue of the authority vested in us by certain resolutions of the Congress of the Colony of New-York of the 5th day of June, in the year of our Lord seventeen hundred and seventy-six, reciting that whereas there are in this Colony divers persons who, by reason of their holding offices from the King of Great Britain—from their having neglected or refused to associate with their fellow-citizens for the defence of their common rights—from their having never manifested, by their conduct, a zeal for, and an attachment to, the American cause—or from their having maintained an equivocal neutrality, have been considered by their countrymen in a suspicious light,—whereby it hath become necessary, as well for the safety as for the satisfaction of the people, (who, in times so dangerous and critical, are naturally led to consider those as their enemies who withhold from them their aid and influence,) that certain persons in the said resolutions named, (of whom you are one,) who are generally supposed to come under the above description, should be summoned by a certain Committee, to show cause, if any they have, why they should be considered as friends to the American cause, and as of the number of those who are ready to risk their lives and fortunes in defence of the rights and liberties of America against the usurpation, unjust claims, and cruel oppressions of the British Parliament; which rights and liberties, and which unjust claims and cruel oppressions, are specified and stated in divers Addresses, Petitions, and Remonstrances of the present and late Continental Congresses; and directing certain proceedings in the said resolutions specified to be by the said Committee had against such of the said persons as the said Committee shall not adjudge and determine to be friends to the American cause:

We do, therefore, in pursuance of the said Resolutions, summon you to appear before us at . . . . ., on the . . . . . day of . . . . ., at . . . . . o'clock in the . . . . . noon of the said day, to show cause (if any you have) why you should be considered as a friend to the American cause, and of the number of those who are ready to risk their lives and fortunes in defence of the rights and liberties of America, against the usurpation, unjust claims, and cruel oppressions of the British Parliament; which rights and liberties, and which unjust claims and cruel oppressions, are, as aforesaid, specified and stated in divers Addresses, Petitions and Resolutions of the present and late Continental Congresses.

Dated the . . . . . day of . . . . ., 1776.

To the Hon. John Harris Cruger.

The Committee adjourned till to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, to meet at the same place.

The Court-room in the City-Hall of the City of New-York, }
the 20th day of June, 1776. }

Certain Members of the Committee being obliged to attend to other business imposed on them by the House, the Committee did not meet, but several of the Members agreed to meet to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the same place.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

The Court-room in the City-Hall of the City of New-York, }
the 21st day of June, 1776. }

The Committee met pursuant to the agreement of yesterday.

Present—John Jay, Esq., Chairman, Mr. Livingston, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Gansevoort, Mr. Morris, Colonel Graham.

The Secretary reported that, pursuant to the order of this Committee of the 19th instant, he had on that day duly sworn Sampson Dyckman, the Messenger of this Committee, faithfully to execute the duties and office of Messenger to this Committee.

The Secretary further reported that, pursuant to another order of this Committee of the same day, he forthwith delivered the summonses, made out this day, to the Messenger, to be served; and that he delivered the other summonses to the Messenger yesterday morning, when the said Messenger informed him that William McAdam, to whom one of the first-mentioned summonses was directed, was absent from home, and, as the Messenger was informed by Mrs. McAdam, gone to a distant part of New-Jersey, from whence it was uncertain when he would return; and that he delivered the said summons to Mrs. McAdam.

That the Messenger further informed him that he had delivered the summons directed to Oliver De Lancey, Esq., to his wife, Mr. D. L. being, as she informed him, gone from home; and that he had delivered the summons directed to Mr. Apthorpe and Mr. Robert Bayard to themselves, respectively.

That he had not served the summons directed to George Brewerton, he being (with his family) out of town.

Ordered, That the Secretary make out a number of blank Warrants, in the form directed by this Committee on the 19th day of June instant.

Ordered, That Mr. Hubbard and Colonel Graham prepare the draft of a Warrant proper to be issued against such persons of equivocal character as may neglect or refuse to appear on summons; and also of a summons proper to be issued to persons supposed to be inimical and dangerous to the cause of America.

The Committee adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning, to meet at the same place.

Examination of WILLIAM LEARY.

William Leary says that he came hither last Monday, about ten o'clock, in pursuit of William Benjamin, a workman of Mr. Erskine, who had run away from Bigwood Iron-works. He found the said Benjamin at the house of one Forbes, at the sign of Robin Hood. After taking him, Forbes ran and got a pistol for Benjamin to defend himself, and examinant took hold of Benjamin and prevented him from using the said pistol. Examinant carried the said Benjamin to Paulus-Hook Ferry, who was there rescued by Sergeant Cornet, of Captain Roosevelt's Company, and by the said Captain inlisted. Examinant then met James Mason, one of the workmen of Mr. Erskine, who had some time ago been discharged. James Mason asked examinant if he did not want to see James Ramsay, Christopher Wyley, and George Gammel. Examinant said yes. James Mason said examinant might see them if he would take an oath that he did not come to take them up; which examinant refused, saying he would, nevertheless, be glad to see them. Mason asked examinant if he had run away; who answered in the affirmative. Mason then asked what examinant would do with himself, and whether he would do as he and the rest of them had done. Examinant asked what that was. Mason said he must go and be qualified, and then he would tell him. Examinant agreed to be qualified; but asked on what foundation? Mason told him he was to swear before a gentleman in this town to go on board of the man-of-war; that he (Mason) and his companions had so sworn, and were to receive wages and provisions until they should be able to get there. Examinant asked who the gentleman was that swore them. Mason replied it was a gentleman employed by the Mayor or Governour of the town; but the examinant thinks it was the Mayor who swore them and found provisions for them until they had an opportunity to get on board the man-of-war. Mason then conducted examinant to the house where George Gammel, James Ramsay, and Christopher Wyley lived. This house is a

Scotchman's, just below the Jews' Synagogue, a private house; does not know the man's name. When examinant came in, George Gammel asked him if he was in pursuit of them; who answered in the negative. George Gammel then said, Did you come away in the same manner as we did? Examinant said yes. Gammel then said, we will have a drink together. Gammel said he would divulge his mind to examinant if examinant would be true to him. Examinant answered, 'I will be as true to you as you are to me.' Gammel then took examinant aside, and asked when he would go on board of the man-of-war. Examinant said he did not know, but would take the first good opportunity. Asked examinant if he wanted a pass. Examinant said he had a pass sufficient for him to go as far as he wanted. Gammel brought to examinant a person to give him a pass, whom examinant does not know, but believes he should know him again if he were to see him. Examinant said he wanted to see the New-England encampment, to see one Amos Hutchins, a Captain; intending to decoy them thither, and have them apprehended. When examinant had got about half way up the Broadway, they discovered his pistols, and would have fled, thinking, as examinant supposes, that he meant to take them up. James Ramsay and Christopher Wyley ran off. Examinant pursued and caught James Ramsay. They then gathered together, and asked examinant why he carried pistols; who replied that they were for his defence, until with them he could get on board of the man-of-war. They being then suspicious, turned back; but examinant first asked George Gammel when he intended to go on board of the man-of-war, and how. Gammel answered, 'I intend to leave town this night, and go to Long-Island, and get from thence to the man-of-war;' but whether to get a person to put him on board, or to steal a boat or canoe, this examinant is not certain. Gammel then said the gentleman who was employed by the Mayor had desired them not to be seen more than two together. The gentleman had further told him the Riflemen were so thick on Long-Island as to prevent him from getting on board until a more convenient opportunity; and perhaps they might not get on board until General Howe arrived with his fleet. They expected a large body of men to join them from Goshen, and they were to get on board with the utmost despatch after General Howe's arrival.

WILLIAM LEARY.

JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Examination of JAMES MASON.

James Mason says: About two weeks and a half ago a man took his qualification that he would not divulge anything about the business he was then upon. When he went up to Goshen from Kingswood, about five weeks ago, to look for a place as a miller, he saw a man who had been four days on board the man-of-war, by name William Forbes, a tanner and currier by trade; that as you go up the Broadway you come to the street in which is the Oswego market, opposite to the south side of which, four doors from the corner of the Broadway, lives one Lowrie, a tavern-keeper, a fat man, who wears a blue coat, and that he hath frequently met the said William Forbes in that house; that he told examinant he never lodged twice in the same house, being afraid; examinant asked where he did lodge, Forbes would not tell him; that Forbes hath a house of his own, five miles from Goshen, at which he saw him when examinant was looking for a place. Forbes told examinant he had been four days on board the man-of-war last April, when the ship Savage fired on Staten-Island; that Governour Tryon would give five guineas bounty and two hundred acres of land for each man, one hundred for his wife, and fifty for each child, upon condition they would enlist in his Majesty's service. Examinant bore Forbes's expenses to town, Forbes undertaking to repay him in hard cash when they got on board; that Forbes was to have a bounty from the Governour for every man he could get, and had been sent home for that purpose; that the Governour had desired him to go up and get as many men as he could; that the recruits were to assist the King's troops when they came; that recruits were not to go on board, because they could do more good on shore, and besides they were on short allowance in the ship and crowded, as Forbes told examinant. Forbes and examinant came to New-York by way of Elizabethtown, and in their way, at Warwick, Forbes enticed William Benjamin to go along with him, and at Elizabethtown Forbes inquired at Deacon Ogden's, where he used to work, and told examinant, after the inquiry, that they could not get on board from Bergen-Point or Staten-Island, as there were Riflemen stationed there, but must go to New-York, for that there was a man there, one McLean, a shoemaker, near the Royal Exchange, who was employed by the Governour to carry recruits on board; that Forbes and examinant came to New-York in an Elizabethtown boat, and went first to Thomas Mason's, at the corner of Beaver street and Broadway, at the sign of the Highlander, where they left their baggage, and William Benjamin to take care of it, and went thence to McLean's, to inquire for a passage; that McLean and Forbes whispered together, and then Forbes told examinant that McLean said there was no opportunity of getting on board in two or three nights; that McLean recommended them to one James Houlding, a tavern-keeper in Tryon Row, opposite the gate of the upper barracks, for lodging; that they went up to Houlding's, leaving Benjamin still at Mason's, and, after dusk, examinant went for Benjamin, and he and Benjamin carried the baggage up, and all three lodged at Houlding's that night, telling Houlding Mr. McLean had sent and recommended them there as a safe house; next morning Forbes went to see for an opportunity to get on board, and did the like for two or three days; Forbes and Benjamin staid at Houlding's one week without being able to get on board of the man-of-war; William Benjamin agreed to go on board of the man-of-war also, and accept the Governour's bounty; after the first week, as they could not get on board, Houlding observed that they ought to be spread about, for that keeping them together would occasion suspicion in his house; that one Corbie, who lives near General Washington's, used to resort to the house of Houlding, where he was introduced to Forbes, and this examinant also got acquainted with Corbie; that many Tories resorted to Houlding's, amongst whom were two brothers, of the name of Fortune, the one a tanner, living in the Swamp, and the other a saddler, whom he hath seen working at Cook's, in the Broadway; also, one Fueter, a silversmith, who was ridden about town for a Tory, and another of the same name, whom he takes to be his brother; also, a man without an arm, whom he believes to be an old pensioner, and Gilbert Foster, a gunsmith, living opposite to Mr. Hull's tavern, a short thick man who wears a white coat; that these persons, as he believes, knew of the examinant's intention, but did not care to trust him, as he had not taken his qualification; that examinant was qualified before the said Gilbert Forbes and the said William Forbes, at the house of the said Corbie; that William Forbes gave him the book, and that they made him swear not to divulge anything of what the examinant now tells; that when examinant was at Houlding's, Gilbert Forbes, William Forbes, and Corbie, advised examinant to go to Corbie's house and work a little in the garden to prevent suspicion. Gilbert Forbes promised examinant ten shillings per week subsistence money, of which this examinant hath, at different times, received twenty-six shillings and eight pence; that the examinant complained ten shillings was too little; Forbes said he could not help it, but he would write to the Governour to try to get it increased to twelve; that he afterwards told examinant he could not get an answer because a boat coming from the Governour was near being taken, and had thrown the letters overboard; that William Benjamin and William Forbes have also received money from the said Gilbert; that, according to the advice of the Forbeses and Corbie, went to Corbie's, and continued there until last Saturday; that while examinant lived at Houlding's, Corbie came there between nine and ten o'clock at night, and brought with him a mulatto-coloured negro, dressed in blue clothes, about five feet eight inches high, well-set, but knows not his name or to whom he belongs, but is informed that he hath since been taken up and put in jail; when Corbie and the negro came in there was a great deal of whispering round between Corbie, William Forbes, the negro, and another man who had been waiting to get on board and did go on board that evening; that afterwards the examinant and William Forbes had some conversation about the negro; Forbes told him the negro was going on board the man-of-war with that man and two or three more, but the craft was so small it would not carry them all for fear of discovery, wherefore he, Benjamin, and William Forbes, were obliged to stay behind; that when this examinant was qualified, there was present one Clarke, who had been a school-master about eight or nine miles from Goshen, and with whom the said William Forbes was acquainted; that the said Clarke said in the examinant's hearing that he had inlisted about sixty men, of whom he had a list, and who were ready to assist when the troops came; that examinant believes the list was given to Gilbert Forbes to be sent to the Governour, for that the name of the examinant, William Forbes, and William Benjamin, were taken down by the said Gilbert, as this examinant supposes, to be sent to the Governour; that one Hickey, of the General's Guards, he believes to be concerned, who is now in confinement; that one Greene, of the General's Guards, a drummer, is concerned, for that examinant saw Gilbert Forbes in conversation with said Greene, but could not hear them, and since that time Greene hath administered an oath to this Hickey and some other soldiers of the General's Guards, and, as examinant is informed, is to have one dollar per man from Forbes for every man he shall inlist; one Barnes, of the General's Guards, one Johnson, a fifer of the Guards, who, as well as Greene and Hickey, have been in the regular service, are qualified for the same purpose; that William Benjamin told examinant he heard Gilbert Forbes say that he would go to the Mayor and get one hundred pounds which he must have; that examinant and William Forbes, in their way from William Forbes's house, came to a fine house; that examinant asked what fine house that was; that Forbes said it belonged to the brother of the Mayor of New-York; that he knew him very well, and had been there several times and must go there now to tell him what he was going about, to know if he had any word to send to his brother, and that the examinant must walk on slowly and he would overtake him; that at the door of the house examinant saw an old, short, thick, fat man; that Forbes stayed there about a quarter of an hour, and then followed and overtook the examinant, who asked Forbes if the Mayor's brother had given him any letter; Forbes said no, he had only desired him to tell his brother that he was well; that the Mayor's brother asked who the examinant was, and Forbes told him it was a young man going upon the same errand that he was. Examinant believes Gilbert Forbes is at the head here, and the Mayor and the Governour.

To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General:

SIR: Whereas David Matthews, Esquire, stands charged with dangerous designs and treasonable conspiracies against the rights and liberties of the United Colonies of America: We do, in pursuance of a certain resolve of the Congress of the Colony of the 20th of June instant, authorize and request you to cause the said David Matthews to be, with all his papers, forthwith apprehended and secured, and that return be made to us of the manner in which the warrant shall be executed, in order that the same may be made known to the said Congress.

Given under our hands, this 21st day of June, 1776.

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

General Greene is desired to have the within warrant executed with precision, and exactly by one o'clock the ensuing morning, by a careful officer.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Friday afternoon, June 21, 1776.

Long-Island, June 22, 1776.

In obedience to the within order and warrant, I sent a detachment of my brigade, under the command of Colonel Vernon, to the house of the within-named David Matthews, Esq., at Flatbush, who surrounded his house and seized his person precisely at the hour of one this morning. After having made him a prisoner, diligent search was made after his papers, but none could be found, notwithstanding great care was taken that none of the family should have the least opportunity to remove or destroy them.

NATHANAEL GREENE.

Flatlands, Friday, June 21, 1776.

Mrs. BREWERTON presents her compliments to Captain Thomas Randall, and begs to acquaint him that when she returned from the city to her family at Flatlands, she found a summons left at the house by a person from the Congress for Mr. Brewerton to attend on them at ten o'clock this day. She begs it as a favour of Captain Randall to acquaint the gentlemen of the Congress that it has not been in her power to make Mr. Brewerton acquainted with it, as he went out yesterday morning fishing and does not expect to return till this evening or to-morrow. On his return she will acquaint him with the summons, and makes no doubt but he will immediately attend the Congress.

To Captain Thomas Randall.

Scott's Tavern, in Wall street, [June 22, 1776.]

The Committee met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Mr. Hobart, Mr. Tredwell, Colonel Graham, Mr. Randall, Mr. Gansevoort.

The Committee unanimously chose Mr. Hobart Chairman pro tempore.

Whitehead Hicks, Esq., attending on a summons returnable this day, was called in. The Chairman read to him part of the Resolutions of the Congress of this Colony relative to persons of equivocal character, and desired him to show cause to this Committee why he should be considered as a friend to the cause and rights of America.

Mr. Hicks says the cause he can show is only negative; that he defies envy itself to show anything in his conduct that is against his country; that he has for many years held honourable and lucrative Crown offices, unsolicited, and repeatedly sworn allegiance to the Crown; that in this situation, were his nerves stronger, he would not willingly personally take up arms on the part of the country; that his father and brothers are strongly attached to, and engaged in, the American cause; that he therefore, as well as from principle, will never be induced to take up arms against his country; that some of his near relations are in the Continental Army; that he never advised or dissuaded any person, not even his servants or domesticks, in these measures; that his servant has been engaged in this country's service from the first of these troubles, and is now actually serving in the troops raised in this Colony, without the least contradiction or dissuasion on his part.

Mr. Hicks was then asked by the Chairman whether, in his opinion, the British Parliament has a right to tax America? He replied that he would be very unwilling to be taxed by the British Parliament.

The Chairman then asked him whether he was willing to subscribe the Association made by the Provincial Congress on the 20th instant; to which he replied that he could not sign it because he could not take up arms, and that, as an honest man, he could not sign anything which he did not mean to perform.

Mr. Hicks was then asked by the Chairman whether he thought the present measures of the Colonies in defending by arms justifiable. To this he replied that arms were the last resort, and justifiable where necessary as the last resort; but that he has not fully examined or considered whether every other necessary expedient had been previously used.

Mr. Hicks withdrew.

Resolved, unanimously, That Whitehead Hicks, Esq., is not such a friend to the cause and rights of America as is mentioned in the Resolutions of the Congress of 5th day of June instant.

Resolved, unanimously, That it is not necessary to remove Mr. Hicks from his present place of residence.

Resolved, unanimously, That Mr. Hicks's Parole be taken that he will not oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony, and that his Parole is sufficient security.

Mr. Hicks was called in and informed of the determinations of the Committee, and a copy of the Parole delivered to him.

Mr. Hicks read the copy of the Parole, and declared that he would wish to consider whether this Parole might in any manner interfere with his oath and office of a Judge, but had not any other objection to it.

The Committee informed Mr. Hicks that he might take time to consider of it.

Mr. Hicks requested, and the Committee consented, that Mr. Hicks consider thereof until Monday next, then to return the said Parole signed or to call on this Committee.

An Order of the Congress of this Colony of the 21st instant, relative to Samuel Whitten, referring his case to this Committee, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:*

*A Letter from Robert H. Harrison, General Washington's Secretary, enclosing a Letter from General Hand, relative to a suspected dangerous man named Samuel Whitten, was received and read.

Ordered, That the said Letter be referred to the Secret Committee.

The Letter from Colonel Hand, exhibiting the charges against the said Samuel Whitten, was also read, and taken into consideration.

The said Samuel Whitten was called in. He says he crossed the ferry in a boat with some officers on Thursday last; that he was something in liquor, and spoke something too free. He then related the conversation with the officers during his passage across the ferry. He further says that he has been drafted for in Captain Buchanan's Company, in which company he is a Sergeant; that he voluntarily offered to take a chance of being drafted; that had he not been in the state he was he would not have said what he did at that time. Whitten further says that he thinks the Americans are right in their resistance by arms, and that he is willing to take up arms and defend the country; that he only mentioned it as his opinion that the troops would land at Long-Island; that he never had any information of that kind.

The said Samuel Whitten subscribed the Association made by the Congress of this Colony on the 20th instant.

Thereupon, Resolved, That Samuel Whitten be discharged, and permitted to go at large.

Mr. Samuel Martin, attending pursuant to a summons from this Committee returnable this day, was called in. He says he attends in pursuance of a summons received last week.

The Chairman read to him the Resolutions of the Congress of this Colony of 20th instant, relative to persons of equivocal character, and desired him to show cause, if any he had, why he should be considered as a friend to the American cause.

Mr. Martin says he has never done anything against the country, and is not an enemy to the country; that he always meant to remain as peaceable and inactive as he could.

The Chairman asked Mr. Martin if he chose to be considered as a friend to the American cause, and as one of those who are willing to risk their lives and fortunes in defence of America.

Mr. Martin declared he should be sorry to be considered as an enemy to the country, and never meant to lift an arm against America.

The Chairman informed him that he now had an opportunity to distinguish himself as the friend of America.

He replied that he was ready to give any assurances that he would not take any active part against America; that he never meant to take up arms.

Mr. Martin being asked whether, in his opinion, the British Parliament has a right to tax America, he replied that, in his opinion, the Parliament has not a right to lay internal taxes on the Colonies. Being asked what he understood by internal taxation, replied that he would consider a land tax as an internal tax. Being asked whether he did not think a tax on personal estates was equally unconstitutional, he replied that he did not, if it was for the regulation of trade; but that he is not a politician, and has confined his studies to his own profession.

Mr. Martin was then asked whether he would give security that he would not oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of this Colony. He replied that he would, but that he did not know of any person in this city to apply to to be his security; that he would apply to his father, who resides on Long-Island, who would be his security.

Mr. Martin withdrew.

Resolved, unanimously, That Samuel Martin is not a friend to the American cause.

The Chairman then put the question, whether it is necessary to remove Samuel Martin from his present place of residence?

The Committee unanimously agreed that they have not sufficient information to determine that question at present, and therefore agreed to defer the further consideration thereof till to-morrow morning.

Mr. Martin was called in and informed thereof, and desired to attend at the City-Hall to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock.

Robert Fenton, of the City of New-York, Brass-founder, being sworn, saith: That five or six weeks ago, at his own house, one Jacob Losee, master of a periagua of John Ra- palys, asked him if there was any such thing as getting rifles in town. Deponent answered that he did not believe there was one. Losce said he believed there were many, for that he had been applied to to carry a considerable number of them on board the Asia. Deponent asked him by whom. He replied that he would not tell, but that he had refused to take them. That deponent has heard since that the said rifles were afterwards carried on board, but did not understand by whom.

ROBERT FENTON.

Sworn the 22d June, before us:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY.

Thomas Fletcher, a Private in Captain Newel's Company of Artillery, being sworn, saith: That this deponent was lately a private in Colonel Huntington's Regiment, in Captain Truebridge's Company; that about a month ago one John Campbell, a shoemaker, living next door to the sign of the Buck, opposite to the western side of the Fly Market, employed him to work as a journeyman with him at such times as he was not on duty; that after deponent had worked with him a while, he was pleased with deponent's work, and endeavoured to persuade him to enlist, saying, 'Damn the Congress; who gave them liberty to raise soldiers? Come with me, I will conceal you, or send you off, as I have done with two or three others;' that deponent consented, and was concealed by him for two weeks and a half, and finding that he could not clear his conscience in what he had done, he sent for his comrade and delivered himself up, and hath ever since done his duty as a soldier; that he has frequently heard the said Campbell in conversation curse the Congress—say he wished the whole town were all Tories, and that the Mayor was as big a one as any in it. And further this deponent saith not.

THOMAS FLETCHER.

Sworn the 22d June, 1776, before us:

JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Daniel Gray, of Stamford, in Connecticut, being sworn, saith: That Nathaniel Williams, of Huntington, told him the day before yesterday that a gentleman had reported there that as he was by a fence by the road, Hugh Wallace, Theophilact Bache, Charles McEvers, and three others, whose names this deponent hath forgotten, passed by, and he overheard them saying that the enemy were to land at Rapalye's Mills, take possession of the forts on Long-Island, and thence play on the town, and that they were to be joined by the forces on Long-Island. And further saith not.

DANIEL GRAY.

Sworn the 22d day of June, 1776:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Hugh Stevenson, being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelist of Almighty God, deposeth and saith: That on the 18th of this instant June he bought fifteen pounds of powder of Mr. Nicholas Conery, at the sign of the Red Lion, between Bateman's and Burling's slip, in New-York, and that some time past he (this deponent) bought ten pounds of the said Conery, and that he supposed it came from on board the Asia. And further this deponent saith not.

Sworn before me this 22d day of June, 1776.

ABEL BELKNAP,

Chair'n Com. Insp'n for Precinct of Newburgh.

Cornelius Platt, being sworn, deposeth and saith: That he came from New-York with Mr. Hugh Stevenson in his boat last Wednesday; that on his passage Mr. Stevenson told him he had something on board, that if it was found out it would be as much as his neck and his whole sloop were worth. This deponent asked Mr. Stevenson what it was. Stevenson answered it was fifteen pounds of powder; who was asked if it was our country powder. He said not; it came from the Asia man-of-war. He further asked him what he expected to do with it. His answer was, that he expected to sell it at one dollar per pound; that fifteen pounds of powder would fetch him fifteen dollars. The deponent further saith that he and Mr. Stevenson had some discourse about the times, when Mr. Stevenson told him that he expected that all these officers would soon be swung up, and the deponent took it that he meant all these Continental officers. At the last of the time this deponent asked Stevenson whether he intended to sell this powder to the Tories. He told him he did not. And further this deponent saith not.

Sworn before me this 22d day of June, 1776.

ABEL BELKNAP,

Chair'n Com. Insp'n for Precinct of Newburgh.

Camp Long-Island, June 22, 1776.

Captain JEREMIAH ALNEY:

You will take such a party out of the brigade as will be necessary to carry the within order of Congress into execution, and serve Brewerton with this warrant, seize his person, and secure his papers, agreeable to the within warrant, as soon as may be, and bring him and them to me, and report your doings herein.

NATHANAEL GREENE.

June 25th.—Captain Alney has made two attempts, agreeable to the report accompanying this, to take Alderman Brewerton prisoner, but was not successful. This day he came and delivered himself up. Have sent him under the care of Captain Bowen.

NATHANAEL GREENE.

June 23, 1776.

Sampson Dyckman now present, returns, that he left the summons directed to James Jauncey, Jun., Esq., on Thursday last, with the master of the house where Mr. Jauncey lodges, who then informed him that Mr. Jauncey was gone abroad with his wife, and had been absent some days, but was expected to return on that or the next day.

That he delivered the summonses directed to William Artell, David Matthews, Charles McEvers, and Whitehead Hicks, Esquires, to themselves respectively, Thursday last, and on the same day left the summons directed to George Brewerton, Esq., at his lodgings at Flatlands, with a woman there, said to be his housekeeper.

That on Friday last he delivered the summons directed to Thomas Jones, Samuel Martin, and George D. Ludlow, Esquires, to themselves respectively; that on that day he delivered the summons directed to Gabriel Ludlow to a woman in his house, said to be Mrs. Ludlow, his wife, who informed him that Mr. Gabriel Ludlow was not at home; and that he also left the summons directed to Samuel Clowes at his house, with his wife, who said he was not at home.

That on Saturday morning last he delivered the summonses directed to Archibald Hamilton, David Colden, and John Willett, Esquires, to themselves respectively; that the summons directed to Richard Colden, he delivered to a woman at his house, whom he supposed to be his wife; that each summons which he did not serve personally, he desired the person to whom he delivered it to send or deliver it to the person to whom it was directed as soon as possible. That the summons directed to Thomas Hicks, at Rockaway, he delivered to the Secretary after his return to New-York, as the said Thomas Hicks is deceased upwards of four months ago, from the best information which he could obtain.

New-York, June 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: According to your orders of the 22d instant to me, I have taken all the prisoners mentioned in them, to wit: William Forbes, John Clark, Anthony Clark, and John Campbell, whom I have delivered to the guard, and am ready to execute any further commands I shall receive, having the guard for this day.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JAMES ABEEL.

David Matthews, Esq., Mayor of the City of New-York, being examined, saith: That about six or seven weeks ago the examinant went on board the Dutchess-of-Gordon, by permission of General Putnam, to obtain from the Governour permission for Lord Drummond to go to Bermuda; that as the examinant was about to leave the Dutchess, the Governour took him into his private room, and put a bundle of paper money into his hands, telling examinant to take out five pounds and give it to the prisoners in the Jail, and pay the remainder to Gilbert Forbes, for some rifles and round-bored guns which he had made for him, and for others which the said Forbes was to make, and to tell Forbes that he did not want any more rifles; that this examinant was surprised to hear that the said Forbes was engaged in that business, and at the same time thought that Governour Tryon had put a matter on his shoulders which might bring him into some difficulty; that the examinant, on his return to this city, consulted a friend of his, telling him that he would mention a matter to him which he believed would surprise him; and then informed him that Gilbert Forbes had supplied the Governour with a number of arms, and was employed in that business; and that examinant had brought up the money to pay him, at the same time mentioning that he thought the Governour had put a hard task on his shoulders; that examinant then advised with him what he should do, and asked him whether he would take the money and endeavour to convey it to him privately, which he declined doing, and said that he would mention the matter so to Gilbert Forbes as that he would be able to determine by his answer whether he was the man; that to this, examinant consented; that examinant, after leaving his friend, concluded it would be best not to pay the said money to Forbes, but to delay it as long as possible, that, in case of a discovery, the examinant might avail himself of not having paid, although he had received the said money; that shortly after Forbes called on this examinant, and told him that he had been desired by the gentleman to whom this examinant had mentioned it, to call on him for the money examinant had received for him of Governour Tryon; that examinant then asked him if it were possible that he had been sending guns on board the Governour's ship; to which he answered in the affirmative; that examinant then told him he would be hanged if he was found out, and requested him, if he regarded his safety, that he would not go on with such schemes; that he said he could send them on board in such a way that nobody could find it out; that he had sent them on board in a canoe or boat, covered with a straw bed, and two or three old chairs upon it; that he then asked examinant to pay him the money; to which examinant answered, that he was to receive money, and as soon as he got it, he would pay it to him; on which they parted; that a few days after he called on examinant again to know whether examinant had received the money, for that he wanted it very much; examinant told him he had not; and the better to account for delays, the examinant had recourse to this subterfuge, that the Governour had given him positive orders not to receive any payments for him but in York or Jersey money; that with this he seemed pleased, and requested examinant to pay him in that money, because with it he could purchase certain articles necessary in his business cheaper than with any other; that he then informed examinant that he had a number of men whom he wanted to send down to the Governour; that examinant told him that he might save himself that trouble, for that the Governour had told this examinant that he had been obliged to turn many on shore, and could not receive any more; on which Forbes expressed some concern as to what he should do with them; on which examinant desired him to tell the men to go to their homes and drop any such schemes; that shortly after the said Forbes again called on this examinant for the money, and mentioned a scheme of raising a company, and requested to know whether he could have a commission; that examinant, on this, begged of him to desist from such a scheme, for that he would certainly be discovered, and the gallows would be his lot, and that it would be time enough for him to enlist men or act when he got his commission; that he said he could carry it on so as not to be found out, and that he could enlist a number of the General's Guards; that on this they parted; that this examinant then found that Mr. Forbes became so troublesome to him that, in order to get out of his way and stave off the payment aforesaid, this examinant kept more in the country than he would otherwise have done; then, on Forbes finding this, he pursued examinant up to Flatbush, and not finding him there, pursued him to Polhemus, about four miles from Jamaica, in order to get his money; that this examinant, finding there was no way to get rid of him, told him that on Monday examinant would come to town and pay him his money, which was accordingly done, viz: one hundred and fourteen pounds eight shillings, and examinant then hoped that he should not be plagued with him any more; that the next day examinant again came to town, and had been in his house but a few minutes when Forbes came into examinant's office; that examinant told him he must never come into examinant's office any more, on which he went away without saying a word; that John Young, the examinant's clerk, was present and then in the said office, and that examinant has not seen the said Forbes since; that at the times when the said Forbes called on the examinant as aforesaid, he mentioned to this examinant a scheme he had of taking possession of one of the batteries when the fleet arrived, and another scheme of cutting down King's bridge; that this examinant desired his friend above-mentioned to advise and beg the said Forbes to desist from the said measures and give them over; that this examinant has never since or before received from Governour Tryon any other sum whatever for any such purposes whatever. That shortly before the time when this examinant paid the aforesaid money to the said Forbes, this examinant was at Waldron's Ferry, standing near John Carpenter's sloop, and that the said Forbes, being in company with one Sergeant Graham, turned off from the said Graham and came up to this examinant; that this examinant asked him where he had been; he answered that he had been to look at all the fortifications; examinant asked him whether he was not afraid of being taken up by the sentries, to which he replied that he was not, for that he could go there whenever he pleased. That about the time when this examinant paid the money aforesaid to Forbes, this examinant being in his office, a man in regimentals came in, which alarmed this examinant; that he asked him whether he wanted this examinant; he asked examinant whether he was the Mayor, to which examinant replied he was, and asked him what he wanted; he observed to this examinant, that examinant did not know him, for that he had never seen him before; examinant said he did not know him; he told examinant he was one of General Washington's Guards, and meant to serve the King; examinant told him he had nothing to do with inlisting men for the King; he said he had inlisted some that morning himself, and was about to pull a paper out of his pocket, in order to show examinant their names; that examinant told him he did not want to know their names, and had nothing to do with them, and advised him to return to his quarters, for that if he was discovered he would be brought to the gallows; on which he went away, and examinant has neither seen nor heard of him since. That another man, a little before the time last-mentioned, who said he came from the country, and knew examinant's father and brother, came to this examinant to see if he could not get on board the ship; examinant asked him why he left his home; he said he had been so persecuted he could not stay; examinant advised him to return and keep himself quiet, and that examinant imagined nobody would hurt him; that he replied he must and would get on board some how or other, for that he did not dare to go back; examinant then asked his name, which he told him was Forbes; examinant told him then that he did not know of a likelier person to serve him than a namesake of his that was in town; he asked examinant if he meant Gilbert Forbes, to which he replied yes; he said he knew him, and went in quest of him; and that examinant has never seen him since. That several other persons, unknown to this examinant, have at different times called on this examinant to inquire how they might get on board the ship, and that examinant always advised them to return home; and since examinant's interview aforesaid with the Governour, he told such as called upon him for the purpose aforesaid that there was no room for them on board; that many had been turned away, and that they had better go home. That this examinant has no further knowledge than what he has as aforesaid declared relative to any persons being engaged in the business of inlisting men for the King's service, or in keeping up a communication between the city and the Governour's ship or men-of-war at the Narrows. That this examinant does not know otherwise than by sight, and has never spoken or written a line to Peter McLean, a shoemaker in the town, on any subject whatever.

D. MATTHEWS.

New-York, June 23, 1776.—Examined by
PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

William Forbes, of Goshen Precinct, in Orange County, Tanner and Currier, being examined, saith: That he knows Gilbert Forbes, of the city of New-York, gunsmith; that the first time he saw him was in this city, between the Brick Meeting and the Jail; that he heard somebody call him Mr. Forbes; this examinant accosted him and told him that his name was Forbes also; that thereupon they went into Houlding's tavern and drank together; that he has been at the house of the said Gilbert Forbes, on an invitation from him. That he knows a Sergeant in General Washington's Guards, but cannot recollect his name; that he became acquainted with him at Corby's, (an inn-keeper,) near General Washington's; that this examinant went to Corby's in company with one James Mason, of Ringwood, who was at work in Corby's garden; that the Sergeant was a middle-sized, fresh complexioned man—an Englishman; that examinant became acquainted with James Mason at Dutchess County; afterwards saw him at Goshen, and from thence came in company with him to this town; that he told Mason he had been on board the man-of-war last winter, while she lay in the East River; that he never was on board the Dutchess-of-Gordon; that he never said he was on board the Savage when she fired on Staten-Island. That he had heard, and, among others, from the said Mason, that two hundred acres of land were offered by Governour Tryon to each man who would go in the King's service, and one hundred to the wife, and fifty to each child. That examinant borrowed twenty odd shillings of Mason, and promised to repay him when examinant got money from on board the man-of-war, where he had two brothers-in-law, who had promised to send him money to pay his debts. That he never engaged with Governour Tryon, or with any other person whatever to undertake the business of inlisting soldiers for the King, nor of enticing the Continental soldiers to leave that service. That he and Mason came to town by way of Elizabethtown, and that at Warwick Mason persuaded one William Benjamin to go along with them. That he knows Peter McLean, a shoemaker, near the Exchange; that examinant applied to him to put him on board the man-of-war; that McLean answered he could not do it at all, the sentries were so strict; that examinant then said to McLean that then he would enlist in the Continental service, which he has since done, in Captain Beekman's Company, of Lasher's Battalion. That examinant, Mason and Benjamin lodged, the first night they came to town, at Houlding's; that while they were there Corby was introduced to Benjamin and Mason by Gilbert Forbes; Corby took them to his house, where this examinant has seen them, in company with Gilbert Forbes and the aforesaid Sergeant of the Guards. This examinant saw the said Sergeant and Gilbert Forbes administer oaths of secrecy to Mason and two or three soldiers; that Corby was present when the said soldiers were sworn as aforesaid. That after McLean had, as aforesaid, told this examinant that he knew not how to get on board the man-of-war, McLean recommended him to David Matthews, Esq., as a proper person to direct him how to get on board the man-of-war; that examinant accordingly went to Mr. Matthews and told him that McLean had directed examinant to him as a proper person to tell him how he should get on board the man-of-war, and that there was a lad (meaning Mason) who had come down from Ringwood, that wanted to go along; that Mr. Matthews told him it was too dangerous for him to say anything about it, but that he would direct him to one that could get him on board, and sent this examinant for that purpose to Gilbert Forbes; that this examinant accordingly applied to the said Gilbert Forbes, and that Forbes said he could not do anything in it till he had seen Corby; that shortly after the said Gilbert Forbes told this examinant that he had seen Corby, and that Corby said he would get examinant on board in a few days; that examinant afterwards saw Corby, and that he made the like promise to examinant, but Corby afterwards told him he could not; and that he had been able to send only one on board, by a mulatto fellow. That this examinant knows John Clarke; and that he told this examinant that he had fifty or sixty men to go in the King's service, and that he had prevailed upon his brother, Anthony Clarke, to consent to go with them; that John Clarke was to be a Captain, and that one Seely, of Chester, in Orange County, was also to be one of the officers.

JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

City of NEW-YORK, ss:

James Savage, being examined, saith, That he hath not, during the present troubles, inlisted or engaged any men in the service of the King, or kept up or held any correspondence with any persons on board the Dutchess-of-Gordon, or the ships or vessels of war at the Narrows.

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

New-York, June 23, 1776.

John Clarke, of Blooming-Grove, in Orange County, Painter and Glazier, saith, That he never hath inlisted any men for the King, nor engaged any; nor hath he ever said so. That he hath seen Gilbert Forbes at his shop; went there with William Forbes to see if said Gilbert would subscribe for a perspective view of Quebeck; that he did not tell William Forbes that he was concerned in inlisting men, nor that he was employed by Governour Tryon; that he did not tell said William Forbes, or any other person, that he had inlisted any men, that he did not desire Gilbert Forbes to get him a passage on board the Governour's ship, and that he never hath been on board the Governour's ship, nor attempted to go there.

JOHN CLARKE.

Examination taken the 23d June, 1776, before us:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

John Kearn, of the City of New-York, Shoemaker, being sworn, saith, That he has for some time past worked as a journeyman with Peter McLean, near the Exchange; that the said McLean has worked, and both made and mended shoes for people on board the Asia since she has been down at the Narrows, as the said McLean informed this deponent; but this deponent knows not in what manner the said shoes were conveyed on board, or by whom. That this deponent has seen a countryman, of the name of Forbes, frequently at McLean's, also one Houlding, an Inn-keeper near the Barracks, and Edward Nicolls, confectioner; and further saith not.

JOHN KEARN.

Sworn and examined the 23d June, 1776, before us:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

John Craig, late a soldier of the Eighteenth Regiment, being duly sworn upon the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, depose and saith, That being now a prisoner in the common jail of the City and County of New-York, he hath frequently observed that Captain Savage, a prisoner now in the said jail, hath received sundry letters from persons on board the King's ship and the Dutchess-of-Gordon, as he believes, by means of one James, a tall man, with lightish coloured clothes, marked with the small-pox, light hair, about forty years of age; and another of the name of Matthews, a person about five feet six inches high, well set and a dark complexion; that the last of the two on Wednesday last was in the jail, and this deponent heard Captain Savage say, 'Matthews, stay a few minutes and I will have them all ready,' meaning certain letters which he was then writing, to go on board the said ships. And this deponent further saith, that the said Captain Savage hath inveigled a number of the Continental troops to inlist in his Majesty's service, among whom are one Irwin, belonging to Captain Hardenbergh's Company, and late of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment of Foot; Peter McCloskey, of the same company, a fifer, and late of the same regiment; Richard Smith, of the same company, late of the Seventh Regiment of Foot; and James Johnson, a fifer of the General's Guards. And this deponent further saith, that Gilbert Forbes, who is, as he is informed, committed by order of a Committee of the Congress, is confined in the room opposite to him; that a sentry was placed on the outside of the door of the room in which said Forbes is confined; that the outer and inner doors were shut; and, about ten o'clock at night, Peter Chiles, at the request of said Forbes, and of the Tories in the jail, opened the inner door, that said Forbes might, as he said, have air; that Chiles opened the inner door by pushing the bolts back with the rammingrod of the sentry, who was placed at the door. That, after the door was opened, the said Forbes, by means of a hole in the outer door, conversed freely with the Tories in the passage; that Harris, the midshipman taken by the Riflemen from on board the Savage, and Mr. Medcalf, spoke to him; and the said Forbes gave two half pints of liquor to the women to sing Tory songs. And further this deponent saith, that Mr. Harris hath written sundry letters, as well as the said Captain Savage, to go on board the said ships; and that Mr. Harris and Mr. Elder are, as this deponent believes, concerned with the said Captain Savage in inlisting the men; and further this deponent saith not.

JOHN CRAIG.

City of NEW-YORK, ss:

John Andrews, a Corporal of Captain Dewit's Minute Company at Rhinebeck, and now a prisoner in the same room with the above-named John Craig, being duly sworn, depose and saith, That the several matters and facts in the above deposition contained are, to the best of his knowledge and belief, true, the said John Andrew, from being confined in the same room with the said John Craig, being in the like manner with the said John Craig privy to the several matters and things contained in the said affidavit.

Sworn the 23d day of June, 1776, before us:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Monday, ten o'clock A. M., June 24, 1776.

The Committee met in the Council-Chamber in the City-Hall of the City of New-York, pursuant to the agreement of yesterday, the Court-Room being occupied by prisoners and guard.

Present: John Jay, Esq., Chairman, Mr. Philip Livingston, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Randall, Colonel Graham, Mr. Morris, Mr. Gansevoort.

Mr. Axtell attended in pursuance of the summons from this Committee, and returnable this day.

The Chairman informed Mr. Axtell of the Resolutions of the Congress relative to persons of equivocal character, and told him the Committee hoped he would give them evidence of his being a friend to the American cause.

Mr. Axtell appealed to the uniform tenour of his conduct, which, he said, had never been unfriendly to this country.

The Chairman then asked him whether he approved of the American opposition. He replied that he did not of the whole, and signified his disapprobation of the Canada expedition.

The Chairman asked him whether he thought the Parliament of Great Britain had a right to bind these Colonies in all cases whatsoever. To which he replied that, in his opinion, they had not.

The Chairman then asked him whether resistance by arms to the hostile attempts of the British fleets and armies, to execute and enforce those claims to this question, was justifiable.

Mr. Axtell declined to give an answer, declaring that he did not mean to take an active part on either side—that the bulk of his fortune was in Britain and the West-Indies.

Mr. Axtell was then desired to withdraw.

And the Committee went into a consideration of Mr. Axtell's case, in the course of which the following questions were put by the Chairman: Whether Mr. Axtell is such a friend to the country as is described in the said resolutions? Carried unanimously in the negative.

2d. Whether it is necessary to remove Mr. Axtell from his present place of residence? On which Mr. Morris moved that the question be deferred for consideration. Which was carried in the negative.

The question being then put, Whether he shall be removed from his present place of residence? Agreed unanimously in the negative.

The question was then put, Whether any other security should be demanded of Mr. Axtell than his parole? Agreed unanimously that his parole is sufficient, and that no other security be required.

Mr. Axtell was then called in, and desired to give his parole that he would not, directly or indirectly, oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of this Colony. Mr. Axtell objected that the parole is so broad that it may admit of disagreeable constructions of such part of his conduct as he may think the most innocent, and offered to give his parole not to take an active part against the American cause.

A copy of the parole was then given unto him, and he was desired to consider the same, and attend this Committee again on Thursday next.

John Willett, Esq., attending on a summons returnable here this day, was called in; and the resolutions of the Congress of this Colony as to persons of equivocal character, read to him by the Chairman.

The said John Willett was then asked by the Chairman whether he had any evidence to give, or could show cause why he should be considered as a friend to America, &c. To which he replied that he had no other reason but his opinion that the Parliament have no right to lay internal taxes on America.

Said John Willett was then asked if he would sign the Association by the Provincial Congress made on the 20th instant. To which he replied that he had no other objection to it but that he did not choose to take up arms.

Said John Willett was then asked whether he thought the cause of America just or unjust. To which he replied he was not a proper judge of the matter.

Said John Willett was then asked whether he was for the Congress or against it. To which he replied he was not against it.

Said John Willett was then asked if he was for the Congress. To which he replied he should never disturb them.

Said John Willett was then asked to whom he wished success—General Washington or General Howe. To which he replied he wished those might succeed who had justice on their side.

Said John Willett was then asked on which side he thought justice was. To which he replied that he was no judge, but wished that justice might take place.

The said John Willett was then requested to withdraw.

Resolved, unanimously, That the said John Willett is not a friend to the cause and rights of America.

Resolved, unanimously, That it is not necessary to remove the said John Willett from his stated place of residence.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

Resolved, unanimously, That the said John Willett give bond to the President of the Congress of this Colony for the time being, by name, in the sum of two thousand pounds, that he will neither directly nor indirectly contravene or oppose the measures of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of this Colony.

The said John Willett was then called in, and did consent to give such bond; wherefore, Ordered, That Mr. McKesson prepare and get the same executed by the said John Willett.

Know all men by these presents, that I, John Willett, of the Township of Jamaica, in Queens County, of the Colony of New-York, Esquire, am held and firmly bound unto John Haring, Esq., President of the Congress of the Colony of New-York, in the sum of two thousand pounds, lawful moneys of New-York, to be paid to the said John Haring or to his certain attorney, executors, administrators and assigns; for which payment well and truly to be made and done, I bind myself, my heirs, executors and administrators, firmly by these presents. Sealed with my seal, and dated this twenty-fourth day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six.

The condition of the above obligation is such, that if the above-bound John Willett shall neither directly nor indirectly oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony, then the above obligation to be void; otherwise to remain in full force and virtue.

JOHN WILLETT.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of us:

ROBERT BENSON,
JOHN MCKESSON.

Captain Archibald Hamilton, attending on the summons returnable here this day, was called in.

The Chairman informed Captain Hamilton of the reasons of his being so summoned, and read to him the resolutions of Congress relative to persons of equivocal character, and told him that he was considered as of that number; and that the Committee hoped he would give them satisfactory evidence of his being a friend to America.

Captain Hamilton thereupon observed that he loved America; that he had fought and bled and been in irons for her; that he wishes her free and happy; and that no promises or offers of reward or preferment could tempt him to draw his sword against her; that he has refused such offers, and that he holds no office or commission whatever under the King of Great Britain; that he has a brother and other near relations now serving in the King's armies, and that he could not think of unsheathing his sword against them or the King.

Captain Hamilton, on being asked by the Chairman whether, in his opinion, the Parliament of Great Britain have a right to bind these Colonies in all cases whatsoever; said he was not sufficiently acquainted with subjects of that kind to answer the question; but that if he had twenty hearts, he would sooner lose the blood in them all than lose his liberty.

The Chairman then asked him whether he would give his parole of honour neither directly nor indirectly to oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony; to which he answered that he would very readily, for that he never would injure America in word, thought, or deed.

Captain Hamilton was then desired to withdraw, and the Committee proceeded to take his case into consideration. The result of which was, that they

Resolved, That Captain Hamilton was not such a friend to the American cause as is described in the said resolutions of the Congress; that it was unnecessary that he should be removed from the place of his present residence; that confidence might be reposed in him as a man of honour; and therefore that his parole was sufficient security for his not opposing or contravening the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony.

Captain Hamilton was then called in, and on his agreeing to give such parole, it was reduced to writing, and, on his signing it, was discharged.

New-York, June 24, 1776.

I, Archibald Hamilton, Esq., do declare upon my honour that I will not, directly or indirectly, oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of this Colony.

ARCH. HAMILTON.

John Yates, of the Wallkill Precinct, in Ulster County, labourer, being sworn, saith: That early in this last spring Absalom Bull, one of deponent's neighbours, came to him and told him he was but a poor man, and that, if he would go with the said Bull, he would make a gentleman of this deponent. That this deponent asked him how. He replied that if this deponent would go and serve the King for three years, or to the end of the American war if that should sooner happen, this deponent should have two hundred acres of land on the frontiers. That deponent said it was very uncertain, for he did not see how he was to get a warranty deed for it; but if he could get a warranty deed for two hundred acres of land, he did not know but he might engage. On this they parted. That for many days repeatedly after that, the said Absalom Bull, together with Isaac Waugh and Richard Bull, came to this deponent and pressed him to enter into the King's service, but the deponent put them off. That they afterwards went, as they informed this deponent, on board the man-of-war, and when they returned, brought him a letter from Governour Tryon, informing this deponent that if he would come on board his ship and pilot the men-of-war up the North River, he would give this deponent a dollar a day and five pounds a foot for every foot that the vessel he piloted drew more than twenty feet, and should have two hundred acres of land at the determination of the American war; and that Ireland, Scotland and Wales had all united with England to subdue America. That this deponent had, till within a few years last past, been a seafaring man, and was well acquainted with the navigation of the North River, which was well known to his said neighbours, and, as this deponent believes, was by them made known to Governour Tryon. That this deponent afterwards received two other letters, of the like import, from Governour Tryon. That about six weeks ago this deponent, together with the said Absalom Bull, Richard Bull, and Isaac Waugh, travelled from their homes down through Westchester County to White-Stone Ferry, where they crossed over to Long-Island, and thence to Hempstead, and went to the house of one Simonson, a tavern-keeper, in that town; that they went from thence to the house of Captain Hulet, where they all lodged; that the next morning this deponent's companions went off from Rockaway in an oyster-boat that plied between that coast and the ships, and supplied them with provisions, as he was informed and believed; that they desired this deponent to go with them, but this deponent being sick, and not much inclined to go on board, said he would wait at Captain Hulet's till their return; that after three days they all returned to this deponent at Captain Hulet's, aforesaid, and that Colonel Fanning, the Governour's Secretary, came with them; that the said Colonel Fanning was well known to this deponent, he having often seen him, and this deponent having been a mariner in Captain Hunter's ship, which brought the Colonel from England; that at present this deponent did not know Colonel Fanning, he being disguised in the dress of a common labouring man, but on taking this deponent aside he made himself known to him, whereupon this deponent immediately recollected his face and person; that he asked this deponent to go on board with him; this deponent answered that he was too sick to go; that then the Colonel told him that if he could not go then, he must come down when the fleet arrived, and that they would send this deponent a letter to inform him of it, to which this deponent agreed. That Colonel Fanning told him New-York was to be the seat of war; that some of the fleet would run round into the Sound, and land troops on Long-Island; that another division would land on the south side and hoist the King's standard; and that all the men that engaged to serve the King should come to Long-Island and join them, and that cannon was already provided in different parts of Long-Island, and that there were then three field-pieces and a mortar-piece under the floor of the barn of the said Simonson. The said Colonel Fanning also told this deponent that they should want him to pilot vessels of war up the North River, and that the Savage, Phoenix, and Shuldan (which, he believes, was formerly the Rhode-Island packet) were designed for that service. That the Colonel desired this deponent to bring all the provisions he could on board the ships, and that he should receive the following prices for them, viz: five pounds a barrel for salt pork, one shilling per pound for gammons, eighteen pence per pound for butter, and a good price for fowls, eggs, &c., and then gave this deponent a paper (now delivered) with a seal on it, and the letters W. T. on the back of it, and told this deponent that it would serve him as a pass to go by all the men-of-war and cruisers unmolested. That Colonel Fanning further told this deponent that Absalom Bull, aforesaid, had enlisted a great many men, and desired this deponent to do the like, but this deponent declined it. That this deponent knows John Clarke, a painter; that he saw him in this town about a fortnight ago; that he told this deponent he was going on board the ships, and requested this deponent to go with him, which this deponent refused; that he advised this deponent to engage to fight for the King, and said the Americans would be beat. That the aforesaid Absalom Bull this spring showed this deponent a list of persons whom he had enlisted for the King's service; that the said Absalom told this deponent that there were two hundred names on it, which this deponent really believes to be true, but this deponent does not remember the names of any of them, except Richard Bull, Alexander Scadden, James Scadden, Isaac Waugh, John Clarke, (the painter aforesaid,) Jewel Smith, and one Seely, of a place in Orange County called Oxford. That Absalom Bull aforesaid was to be a Captain, and had a commission for it from Governour Tryon, which he showed to this deponent, and that it was written on parchment, and a great seal hanging to it, but that this deponent did not read it. The said Absalom Bull further said, that all the men so enlisted for the King's service were to join the fleet when it arrived, and that all who did not, would be treated as deserters from the King's service.

Sworn the 24th June, 1776, before us:

JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

To Captain ABEL, of Colonel LASHER's Battalion:

SIR: Whereas ——— Simerson, of the Township of Hempstead, in Queen's County, Inn-keeper, stands charged with dangerous designs and treasonable conspiracies against the rights and liberties of America, and that for the perpetration of such wicked designs and conspiracies he hath divers cannon and other implements of war now concealed: We therefore, by virtue of the power and authority unto us given by a resolve of the Congress of this Colony of the 20th of June instant, do authorize and require you to cause to be apprehended and secured the said ——— Simerson, with all his papers, and to make search for and take all cannon and other implements of war whatsoever in his house, barn, and outhouses; and that return be made to us of the manner in which this warrant shall be executed, in order that the same may be made known to the said Congress.

Given under our hands this 24th day of June, 1776.

In the Council-Chamber of the City-Hall of the City of New-York, }
June 25, 1776. }

The Committee met pursuant to adjournment.

Present—John Jay, Esq., Chairman; Mr. Philip Livingston, Mr. Hobart, Colonel Graham, Mr. Tredwell, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Gansevoort.

Mr. Hobart and Colonel Graham reported a draft of a Warrant to be issued against such persons of equivocal character as may neglect or refuse to appear on summons; which being read, amended, and agreed to, is in the words following, to wit:

To . . . . . :

Whereas the Congress of the Colony of New-York, on the 5th day of June instant, did pass certain resolutions, reciting, among other things, that 'whereas there are in this Colony divers persons who, by reason of their holding offices from the King of Great Britain—from their having neglected or refused to associate with their fellow-citizens for the defence of their common rights—from their having never manifested, by their conduct, a zeal for, and an attachment to, the American cause—or from their having maintained an equivocal neutrality, have been considered by their countrymen in a suspicious light,—whereby it hath become necessary, as well for the safety as for the satisfaction of the people, (who, in times so dangerous and critical, are naturally led to consider those as their enemies who withhold from them their aid and influence,) that sundry persons in the said resolution named, of which number . . . . . is one, and also all such other persons of the like character as we, a Committee of the said Congress for that purpose by the resolutions aforesaid duly appointed and authorized, may think proper, be summoned to appear before us at such time and place as we should appoint, then and there to show cause, if any they have, why they should be considered as friends to the American cause, and as of the number of those who are ready to risk their lives and fortunes in defence of the rights and liberties of America against the usurpation, unjust claims, and cruel oppressions of the British Parliament—which rights and liberties, and which unjust claims and cruel oppressions, are specified and stated in divers addresses, petitions, and resolutions, of the present and late Continental Congresses; and in default of appearance, we, the Committee aforesaid, on proof made of the service of the said summons, are authorized and directed to cause them to be arrested and brought before us by warrant under our hands, directed to any Militia officer in this Colony, who is, by the said resolves, required to execute the same; and whereas, in pursuance of the resolutions aforesaid of the said Congress, we, the Committee aforesaid, did, on the . . . . day of June instant, issue our summons to the above-mentioned . . . . ., to appear before us at the City-Hall of the City of New-York, on . . . . . the . . . . day of . . . . ., at . . . . o'clock in the . . . . . noon of the said day, to show cause, if any he had, why he should be considered as a friend to the common cause; and which summons was duly served on the said . . . . ., as appears by the return of . . . . ., the Messenger of this Congress, thereto duly appointed and sworn; and whereas said . . . . . did not appear in pursuance of the summons aforesaid, but hath made default: We, therefore, the Committee aforesaid, in pursuance of the trust reposed in us by the resolves aforesaid, do authorize and require you forthwith to arrest and bring before us, at the City-Hall of the City of New-York, the above-named . . . . ., for the purpose aforesaid, and to abide such order in the premises as by us may be made; and bring with you then there this warrant.

Given at New-York.

Mr. Hobart and Colonel Graham reported a draft of a Summons to persons inimical to the cause and rights of America; which being read, was agreed to, and is in the words following, to wit:

Whereas by certain Resolutions of the Congress of the Colony of New-York, of the 5th day of June instant, we, a Committee of the said Congress, were authorized and required to summon certain persons, whose conduct had been represented to the said Congress as inimical to the cause and rights of America, of which number you are one, to appear before us at such time and place as we might think proper, then and there to answer to such matters and things as shall be alleged against them, and show cause (if any they have) why they should be considered as friends to the American cause: We do, therefore, in pursuance of the trust reposed in us by the said resolutions, summon you to appear before us for the purposes aforesaid, at the City-Hall of the City of New-York, on . . . . . the . . . . day of . . . . ., at . . . . o'clock in the forenoon of the same day.

Ordered, That the Secretary prepare all the Summonses directed to be issued to the persons named in the said resolutions of Congress by to-morrow morning.

Ordered, also, That a number of Warrants aforesaid be prepared.

The Committee then adjourned for an hour to meet again at Scott's Tavern, in Wall Street.

George Brewerton, of the City of New-York, Esquire, being examined, saith: That he never was engaged in any design of inlisting men to serve the King against the Americans; nor was he otherwise acquainted with the existence of any such design, except in the following manner: Captain Benson, about three weeks ago, told this examinant he had heard that Gilbert Forbes was employed in inlisting men for the King's service, and asked this examinant whether he knew anything of it. That examinant told him he knew nothing of the matter, and that if Forbes had engaged in that business, he was a fool. That this examinant afterwards asked Forbes about it, and told him if he inlisted any men in that way he did wrong. That Forbes replied that there was nothing in it, and that he was not engaged in any such business. That this deponent, instead of aiding the Ministerial armies, has advised and persuaded men to inlist in the Continental service; and without being applied to by the Committee for that purpose, did dispose of seven or eight firelocks to be employed in the defence of the American cause, and would have remained in this city and assisted in defending it had it not been for the late riotous proceedings against persons suspected of being Tories, under which suspicion this examinant had fallen, as he supposes, from his refusing to sign the Association of the Committee of Safety, to which he, as well as many other good friends to the cause, refused to subscribe. That this examinant has signed the first Association, and has no objection to signing the last, in common with his fellow-citizens. That about five weeks ago, David Matthews, Esq., asked this examinant whether he knew Forbes. That this deponent said he knew most of the Forbeses; and asked Mr. Matthews why. He said that he had an account against Governour Tryon, and that the Governour had sent money by him to pay Forbes. That the examinant then asked Mr. Matthews how the Governour came to owe him money. He replied that he believed it was for rifle-guns that he had sent him. On which this examinant observed that it must be Gilbert Forbes, the gunsmith; and that this examinant said he did not take him for such a fellow. Mr. Matthews said that he was also much surprised. Examinant said he would speak to Forbes. That examinant afterwards saw Forbes, and asked him whether he had an account against Governour Tryon; to which he answered no. That examinant asked him if he had not sent things to the Governour; to which he said no. That examinant then said he thought he had heard the Mayor say he had received money for him from Governour Tryon. Forbes then confessed that the Governour owed him money. Examinant then left him without further questions. That some time afterwards examinant received a few lines from Mr. Mayor, with some money, informing this examinant that he was going out of town, and requesting him to deliver it to Forbes, which examinant did. That this examinant does not remember that the Mayor desired him to dissuade Forbes from the prosecution of any designs against America; but that this examinant did, as aforesaid, of his own accord, call upon Forbes, and so dissuade him as above related. This examinant most solemnly declares that he never entertained or was concerned in any design whatever against the interest and safety of America.

GEORGE BREWERTON.

Taken before us the 25th of June, 1776:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Know all men by these presents, that we, George Brewerton and Jacob Brewerton, of the City of New-York, Esquires, are held and firmly bound unto John Haring, Esq., President of the Congress of the Colony of New-York, in the sum of five hundred pounds, lawful money of the Colony of New-York, to be paid to the said John Haring, his executors, administrators, or assigns; for the payment whereof we, do bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators, jointly and severally, by these presents. Sealed with our seals, and dated the 25th day of June, 1776.

The condition of this obligation is such, that if the above bounden George Brewerton shall, upon reasonable notice unto him given, or left at the usual place of his abode, attend the Provincial Congress, or a Committee of the said Congress, at such time and place as he shall be required, then the above obligation to be void, else to remain in force.

GEORGE BREWERTON,
JACOB BREWERTON.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Whereas George Brewerton, Esquire, stood charged before us with being privy to certain dangerous designs and treasonable conspiracies against the rights and liberties of America; and whereas, after strict inquiry into the several allegations against the said George Brewerton, we are of opinion that the said charge is not well founded: We, therefore, in justice to the said George Brewerton, do hereby certify the same. And as the said George Brewerton, together with Jacob Brewerton, have given bond to the President of the Congress of this Colony for the appearance of him, the said George Brewerton, before the Congress of this Colony whenever called upon, for his good behaviour as a friend to the American cause, do dismiss him from all further attendance upon us.

Given under our hands the 25th day of June, 1776.

To Mr. WYNANT VAN ZANDT, a Lieutenant in Colonel LASHER'S Battalion:

Whereas Nicholas Connery, of the City of New-York, Inn-keeper, stands charged before us, by the oath of Hugh Stevenson, with having sold to the said Hugh certain quantities of gunpowder, which there is great reason to suspect the said Nicholas obtained from the enemies of America, and for the purpose of injuring its cause; and whereas it is represented to us that the said Nicholas is notoriously disaffected to the American cause: We do, therefore, in pursuance of a certain resolve of the Congress of the Colony of New-York, authorize and require you to apprehend the said Nicholas Connery, and make diligent search in his dwelling-house and other buildings for gunpowder, and other implements of war, and the same in safe custody to keep, and the said Nicholas forthwith to bring before us, to the end that we may inquire into the premises, and make such order in the premises as may be necessary; and make your returns to us of the manner in which you shall execute this warrant.

Given under our hands this 25th day of June, 1776.

JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

City of NEW-YORK, ss:

James Campbell and Alexander Anderson being duly sworn upon the Holy Evangelists, do depose, that they, together with Michael Tromper and Abraham Brower, somewhere about the 2d or 3d day of May, were in company at the house of Mr. Ellsworth, at Paulus-Hook; that while there, John Taylor came in, and after calling for wine, and pressing them to drink, pulled out a good many bills, declaring that he had then five hundred pounds about him, which he had received for lands sold by him in Morris County; that he had been up there twice before, and received in all upwards of seventeen hundred pounds, and that he expected to go up again and receive more. That these deponents were much surprised to hear the said Taylor make such declarations, as they took him to be in low circumstances, and knew him to be a man of infamous character. That the said Taylor was then armed with pistols and a cutlass, and gave as a reason for carrying those arms that he was afraid of being insulted upon the road. And the said James Campbell further saith that he believes the said John Taylor to be greatly disaffected to the American cause, as the said Taylor is intimate with Gilbert Forbes, and others of the like stamp. And further he saith, that, at the time above-mentioned, the said John Taylor pulled out a purse, in which was gold and silver, about three inches deep and three or four inches in diameter; and further these deponents, or either of them, say not.

JAMES CAMPBELL,
ALEXANDER ANDERSON.

Sworn before us, the 25th day of June, 1776:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

City-Hall, New-York, June 26, 1776.

The Committee met pursuant to adjournment; and, for want of room, adjourned to Scott's Tavern: Present, Mr. Philip Livingston, Mr. Tredwell, Colonel Graham, Mr. Randall, Mr. Gansevoort.

The gentlemen present unanimously chose Leonard Gansevoort, Esq., Chairman pro tempore.

The Committee resumed the consideration of the case of Doctor Samuel Martin. The proceedings of yesterday as to Mr. Martin were read; and the Committee resumed the question, the determination of which was postponed yesterday, and the same question was put by the Chairman.

And thereupon, Resolved, unanimously, That it is not necessary to remove Doctor Samuel Martin from the place of his present residence, as there is not any proof offered or known to this Committee that he has broken the condition of his bond given to the President of the Congress of this Colony on the 17th day of February last.

Resolved, unanimously, That Doctor Martin's parole be taken that he will not, directly or indirectly, oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony; and that his parole, together with the above-mentioned bond, is sufficient security.

Doctor Martin was called in, and signed a copy of his Parole, which is in the words following, viz:

New-York, June 26, 1776.

I, Samuel Martin, of Hempstead, on Nassau-Island, Physician, do declare, upon my honour, that I will not, directly or indirectly, oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of this Colony.

SAMUEL MARTIN.

A certified copy of which Parole was given to the said Samuel Martin. Mr. Martin then requested that some certificate might be given to him to prevent his being molested by any persons while his conduct shall be agreeable to his parole.

Thereupon a Certificate was given to Mr. Martin in the words following, viz:

In a Special Committee of the Colony of New-York, }
June 26, 1776. }

Whereas Samuel Martin, of Far Rockaway, in Hempstead, on Nassau-Island, Physician, did, on the 17th day of February last, give bond with security to the President of the Congress of this Colony, with condition thereto to behave himself peaceably, and make no opposition to the measures of the Continental Congress of the United Colonies or of the Congress of this Colony of New-York, or to instigate others so to do; and whereas the said Samuel Martin also this day hath given his parole to the said Congress of this Colony that he will not, directly or indirectly, oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of this Colony: Therefore it is hereby recommended to all friends to the United Colonies, and to all other persons whomsoever, not to molest, interrupt, or disturb the said Samuel Martin while he continues to fulfil the condition of his said bond, and to observe and keep his parole of honour.

Ordered, That Summons do issue, &c.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Know all men by these presents, that we, James Matthews, of Matthewsfield, in the Precinct of Cornwall, in the County of Orange, gentleman, and Nathaniel Strong, of Blooming-Grove, in the Precinct and County aforesaid, Esquires, are held and firmly bound unto John Haring, Esq., President of the Congress of the Colony of New-York, in the sum of five hundred pounds, lawful money of New-York, to be paid to the said John Haring, his executors, administrators, or assigns; for the payment of which sum we do bind ourselves, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents. Sealed with our seals, dated the 26th day of June, 1776.

The condition of the above obligation is such, that if the above bounden James Matthews shall, on reasonable notice to him given, or left at the usual place of his abode, attend the Congress of this Colony for the time being, or a Committee thereof hereunto duly authorized and appointed, and answer such matters as may be alleged against him, and, in the mean time, shall neither directly nor indirectly contravene or oppose the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony, but, on the contrary, shall approve himself a good friend to the American cause, then the above obligation shall be void, otherwise remain in full force and virtue.

JAMES MATTHEWS,
NATHANIEL STRONG.

Sealed and delivered in the presence of

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

I, James Matthews, Esquire, of Orange County, in the Colony of New-York; do most solemnly declare that the claims of the British Parliament to bind, at their discretion, the people of the United Colonies in America in all cases whatsoever, are, in my opinion, absurd, unjust, and tyrannical; and that the hostile attempts of their fleets and armies to enforce submission to those wicked and ridiculous claims ought to be resisted by arms; and, therefore, I do engage and associate, under all the ties which I hold sacred, to defend by arms these United Colonies against the said hostile attempts, agreeable to such laws and regulations as my Representatives in the Congresses or future General Assemblies of this Colony have, or shall, for that purpose, make and establish.

JAMES MATTHEWS.

New-York, June 26, 1776.

Israel Youngs being sworn, saith: That when he was first put into the Jail of this city, viz: about six weeks ago, he was confined there in the same room with Thomas Vernon, of the city of New-York, hatter; that the said Thomas asked this deponent where he came from; deponent told him he was born and brought up in Queen's County; he asked this deponent if he knew John Hulet and Richard Hulet; deponent said he did, particularly John, for deponent's brother had married his daughter; that the said Vernon thereupon spoke very freely to this deponent on the subject of politicks, and said he would be damned if the fleet did not come soon and let them all out; he confessed to this deponent that he had several times been on board the Dutchess-of-Gordon, where he had seen Richard Hulet and Thomas Cornell; that he had also seen Governour Tryon often, and that the Governour would talk very free with them; that they had on board a number of Rivington's types and one of his printers; that he had written a letter to the Governour the Monday before for money, and that he expected the next day to receive it; that the next day the said Thomas received a letter which he said was from the Governour, and also some water-work money, which he said they counterfeited on board the Dutchess, and he himself had seen them printing it off; that they had a chest of it. This deponent says that the money aforesaid resembled the said water-work money so much that he should have taken it for genuine but that the paper seemed to be rather thicker. The said Vernon further told this deponent that he kept a periagua, and he used to go after sand, and so he got on board the Dutchess.

And this deponent further saith: That the said Vernon told him they were enlisting men in the King's service, and that a Captain in Colonel McDougall's Regiment, whose name this deponent cannot recollect, had a commission from Governour Tryon for that purpose; that a man, whom the said Vernon told this deponent was the said Captain, came one day to the door of the room in which this deponent and the said Vernon were confined, and conversed with the said Vernon through the hole of the door, but this deponent did not overhear them; that when he went away, Vernon told this deponent that was the Captain who was enlisting men for Governour Tryon, and that he had got a hundred. The said Vernon also told this deponent that he had, by Governour Tryon's order, engaged with Dawkins, an engraver, who had been taken up on a charge of counterfeiting money, to go on board the Dutchess and cut money plates for the Governour, and that the Governour was to give the said Dawkins a hundred pounds for his trouble; and that the said Vernon was to have carried him on board had not Dawkins got drunk and told him that he (the said Vernon) was going to carry him on board, which being made known to him, (the said Vernon), he was afraid to attempt carrying him off at the time appointed, and that Dawkins immediately after disappeared. The said Vernon further told this deponent that he was in Jail with Dawkins before, that Dawkins left his chest open, and that he, (Vernon), intending to take something out of his chest and make him treat him for giving it to him again, opened the chest and found in it a plate to strike Pennsylvania money, and kept it near a week; that Dawkins, when he missed it, was very uneasy, and he (the said Vernon) again delivered it to him.

This deponent further says: That when Thomas Hickey and Michael Lynch, of the General's Guards, were apprehended for money-making, they were confined in the same room with this deponent; that they then cursed and swore a great deal and damned themselves if they would ever fight any more for America; that this deponent talked Tory with them, and by that means they came to confide in him; that Hickey and Lynch said there were near seven hundred men enlisted for the King, and that the night before the fleet arrived they were to have notice of it; that they were to repair towards King's Bridge and join them; and that some of the fleet were to go up the North River, and another party up the East River, and so surround the Island. Deponent understood from them that they were both enlisted, and their names sent on board the man-of-war. They also said that the Army was very corrupt, and spoke very slightly of Colonel McDougall's Regiment. That when the news came to their room that the plot was discovered, and that the Congress had taken up some of them, the said Hickey and Lynch seemed to be a good deal uneasy, but they comforted themselves in this: Lynch said they had not got his name, for it was gone on board the man-of-war, and Hickey said if they had got his name it was not of his writing, and therefore neither of them could be hurt. Lynch further said that if the guards came to be a little thinner he would make his escape through the windows.

ISRAEL YOUNGS.

Sworn the 26th day of June, 1776:

JOHN JAY,
GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Gilbert Forbes, being again examined, further saith: That he knows one ——— Silk; that he was left by Captain Aidey to wait upon his wife, who lives on Long-Island, somewhere near Hempstead; that he is often in town, frequently at Mrs. Oiry's and Mrs. Brandon's, has the air of a soldier, wears a short brown hunting coat and a double-breasted jacket of the same colour; that he used to wait on a Mr. Miller, who lives or lodges in Mr. Gouverneur's house on Rotten Row; that Sergeant Graham (an old soldier, discharged from the Royal Artillery) was employed by Governour Tryon to speak to examinant about enlisting men for the King's service, and told this examinant, from the Governour, that if this examinant exerted himself in that business and raised a number of men, he should have a company; that the said Sergeant also informed him that, at the request of the Governour, he had surveyed the ground and works about this city and on Long-Island, in consequence of which he had concerted a plan for an attack, which he had given to Governour Tryon, and of which the Governour approved, which was as follows, viz: that the man-of-war should cannonade the battery at Red Hook, and while that was doing a detachment of the Army, with some cannon, &c., should land below or about Red Hook, and march round so as to come upon the back of the batteries near Swedeland House; that a small part of the detachment should make a feint of marching up the road leading directly to the battery, but that the main body were to make a circuitous march so as to reach the battery while our attention was engaged by the feint aforesaid; that if they carried that battery, which they expected to take by storm, they were immediately to attack the battery on the hill near the ferry, which the Sergeant said would be easily done, as no embrasures were made or cannon fixed on the back side of it; that this latter battery, when in their possession, would command the works on Gouverneur's Island, which they would keep between two fires, viz: the battery last mentioned on the one side, and the shipping on the other; that then the shipping, with the remainder of the Army, were to divide, one division was to run up the North River and land at or near about Clarke's farm, and march directly to Enclenbergh Hall, and fortify there; the other division was to run up the East River and land in such manner as to gain a footing on Jones's Hill, from whence they expected to command and silence the battery on Bayard's Hill; that should they gain possession of the places above-mentioned, their next object would be the grounds adjacent to King's Bridge, where they intend to erect strong works, so as to cut off the communication between the city and country.

Gilbert Forbes, being further examined, saith: That some time before the man-of-war removed from the town to the Narrows, one Webb, a burr-millstone maker, told examinant that if he had any rifles to sell he might get a good price for them by sending them on board the man-of-war, and that a young man who lived with James Rivington told him the same; that this examinant had then nine rifles which he made, but they were bad and would not shoot straight, and eleven smooth narrow-bored guns; that he sent some of them to one Mrs. Beck's, a tavern-keeper, near the Fly Market, with orders to send them on board, which she accordingly did, and that the said Webb carried the remainder; that the said Webb told this examinant that Governour Tryon would give him three guineas apiece for them; that at the time when an exchange of prisoners took place with the man-of-war, and Tiley was, among others, exchanged, the Mayor, viz: David Matthews, Esq., sent for this examinant and told him he was going on board the Governour's ship, and that he would get the money due from the Governour to this examinant for the rifles aforesaid; that on his return the Mayor told this examinant he would pay him in a few days; that this examinant never did receive any money from him for the said fire-arms; that this examinant told Charles Benson that he was about inlisting men, and that he told this examinant it would do.

GILBERT FORBES.

Examined by and before me, this 29th June, 1776:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON.

Thursday, A. M., June 27, 1776.

The Committee met at the City-Hall, in the Council Chamber, pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Leonard Gansevoort, Esq., Chairman pro tempore, Mr. Livingston, Mr. Randall, Mr. Morris, Colonel Graham, Mr. Tredwell.

Mr. Axtell attending according to the order of this Committee of the 24th instant, was called in. He says that he is of the same opinion that he was when last before this Committee as to the signing of the parole which was offered to him—as his signing the parole might be construed on the other side of the water an overt act, and made use of to forfeit his estate there. Mr. Axtell further says that he is ready to give his parole not to take any active part against this country, or to do anything inconsistent with the duty of a good citizen.

Mr. Axtell, at the request of the Committee, withdrew.

The Committee then took Mr. Axtell's particular case into consideration; and, after some time spent therein, the Committee agreed that the particular situation of Mr. Axtell's estate and property is such as, in the opinion of this Committee, requires a particular provision in his case, which it is not in the power of this Committee to make. That, therefore, this Committee will state his case (concealing his name) to the Congress of this Colony for their direction in the premises, and, in the mean time, discharge Mr. Axtell on his parole to attend this Committee on receipt of a letter or notice for that purpose.

Mr. Axtell was called in, and informed of the present determination of the Committee, and promised the Committee to attend them again at any time on request.

Mr. Axtell then further offered to the Committee, if it was thought necessary that he should remove from his present place of residence, he was very ready to remove with his family up Hudson River, or to any other County in the Colony, and to have limits assigned to him; but that it would be disagreeable to him to remove out of the Colony. Mr. Axtell further says that if all the estate he was possessed of was in America only, he would not hesitate to determine the matter and fully express his sentiments, which, in his opinion, it is not proper for him to do in his present situation.

Ordered, That Summonses issue against the following persons of equivocal character, returnable on Saturday, the 29th instant, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the same day, viz: Charles Nicoll, Donald McClean, and Peter Graham.

Which said Summonses, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, were delivered to the Secretary, with directions to give them to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That Summonses issue against the following persons as inimical to the cause and rights of America, returnable on Monday, the 1st day of July next, at ten o'clock in the morning of that day, viz: Theophilact Bache, Charles Arden, John Moore, Sen., and Benjamin Williams.

Which said Summonses, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, were delivered to the Secretary, with directions to give them to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That Summonses issue against the following persons as inimical to the cause and rights of America, returnable on Wednesday, the 3d day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the same day, viz: Frederick Philipse and Samuel Merritt.

Which said Summonses, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, were delivered to the Secretary, with directions to deliver them to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That a Summons be issued to Richard Morris, Esq., as a person of equivocal character, returnable on Wednesday, the 3d day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Which said Summons, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, was delivered to the Secretary, with directions to deliver it to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That a Summons be issued to Solomon Fowler, as a person of equivocal character, returnable on Thursday, the 4th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Which said Summons, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, was delivered to the Secretary, with directions to deliver it to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That Summonses issue against the following persons as inimical to the cause and rights of America, returnable on Thursday, the said 4th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, viz: Nathaniel Underhill, James Horton, Jun., and William Sutton.

Which said Summonses, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, were delivered to the Secretary, with directions to deliver them to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That Summonses be issued to the following persons as inimical to the cause and rights of America, returnable on Friday, the 5th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, viz: Peter Corne and Peter Huggefard.

Which said Summonses, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, were delivered to the Secretary, with directions to deliver them to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That Summonses issue against the following persons as inimical to the cause and rights of America, returnable on Saturday, the 6th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the same day, viz: William Barker, Joshua Purdy, and Absalom Gidney.

Which said Summonses, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, were delivered to the Secretary, with directions to be delivered to the Messenger to be served.

Lastly, Ordered, That a Summons be issued to the Honourable William Smith, as a person of equivocal character, returnable on Saturday, the 6th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the same day.

Which said Summons, signed by all the Members present as aforesaid, was delivered to the Secretary, with directions to deliver it to the Messenger to be served.

Ordered, That the Secretary prepare a state of the case of William Axtell, Esq., (but concealing his name,) to be laid before the Congress of this Colony for their direction in the premises.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

A case stated by the Committee appointed by the Congress of this Colony to carry into execution their Resolutions of the 5th day of June instant, relative to persons inimical to the cause and rights of America, and those of equivocal character:

A. B., holding an honorary office from the King of Great Britain, and being a gentleman of fortune, was summoned to appear before your Committee, and appeared at the time and place for that purpose appointed.

On his appearance before your said Committee, the Chairman informed him of the Resolutions of this Congress as to persons of equivocal character, and desired him to give evidence of his being a friend to the American cause. The gentleman appealed to the uniform tenour of his conduct, which, he said, had never been unfriendly to his country. Being then asked whether he approves of the American opposition, he replied that he did not of the whole, and signified a disapprobation of the Canada expedition. On being asked whether the Parliament of Great Britain, in his opinion, have a right to bind these Colonies in all cases whatsoever, he said that, in his opinion, they had not; and he fully approved of the first part of the Association resolved on by this Congress on the 20th day of June instant. On being asked whether a resistance, by arms, to the hostile attempts of the British fleets and armies to enforce and execute their claims and demands was justifiable, he declined to give an answer, but declared that the bulk of his fortune was in Great Britain and the West-Indies, and that he did not mean to take an active part on either side.

Your Committee thereupon resolved that he is not such a friend to the American cause as is described in your said resolutions of the 5th instant; that his removal from his present place of residence was unnecessary; and that his parole, in the words directed by your said resolutions, was sufficient security.

The gentleman assigned objections to give this parole, and said he would submit to such a disposition of him as your Committee should make. He then had two days allowed him to consider of the said parole, at which time he returned to your said Committee.

On his return to your Committee the gentleman was of the same opinion as before, and said he could not consent to give his parole "not to oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony;" as his giving or signing such parole might, in his apprehension, be construed on the other side of the water to be an overt act, and made use of to forfeit his estate there.

The gentleman offered to your Committee to give his parole not to take any active part against this country, or do anything inconsistent with the duty of a good citizen.

He further voluntarily offered that if it was thought necessary that he should remove from his present place of residence, he was willing to move with his family to any County in the Colony, and to have limits assigned to him; but intimated that it would be disagreeable to him to remove out of the Colony. He also informed your Committee that if his whole estate was in the American Colonies only he would not hesitate to determine the matter, and fully express his sentiments, which, in his opinion, it is not proper for him to do in the present situation of his affairs.

Your Committee believe the gentleman to be a man of high honour and integrity; and have not the least doubt but that any parole which he will consent to give, he will hold sacred and perform; and he is to attend your Committee again on notice. But in the execution of the said resolves they have now no alternative but a warrant and force against the gentleman, and confinement. The policy of this measure your Committee submit to Congress, and request their directions in the premises.

Mr. NATHANIEL UNDERHILL:

Whereas, by certain resolutions of the Congress of the Colony of New-York, of the 5th day of June instant, we, a Committee of the said Congress, were authorized and required to summon certain persons, whose conduct had been represented to the said Congress as inimical to the cause and rights of America, (of which number you are one,) to appear before us at such time and place as we might think proper, then and there to answer such matters and things as should be alleged against them; and to show cause, if any they have, why they should be considered as friends to the American cause: We do, therefore, in pursuance of the trust reposed in us by the said resolutions, summon you to appear before us, for the purposes aforesaid, at the City-Hall of the City of New-York, on Thursday, the 4th day of July next, at ten of the clock in the forenoon of the same day. Dated the 27th day of June, 1776.

LEONARD GANSEVOORT, GOUV'R MORRIS,
PHIL. LIVINGSTON, THOMAS TREDWELL,
THOMAS RANDALL, LEWIS GRAHAM.

Summonses were also issued against the following persons: William Bayard, Esq., William Newton, Frederick Rhineland, Mr. Christopher Benson, Mr. John Woods, Mr. James Coggeshall, Mr. Samuel Burling, Theophilus Hardenbrook, Mr. John Millner, Mr. Benjamin James, (New-York or Flatbush,) David Beatty, (Hempstead, Long-Island,) Linus King, (New-York,) John Baltus Dash, (New-York,) and Henry Law.

To Mr. SOLOMON FOWLER, at EAST-CHESTER:

SIR: By virtue of the authority vested in us by certain resolutions of the Congress of the Colony of New-York, of the 5th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1776, reciting, that whereas there are in this Colony divers persons who, by reason of their holding offices from the King of Great Britain—from their having neglected or refused to associate with their fellow-citizens for the defence of their common rights—from their having never manifested by their conduct a zeal for, and an attachment to, the American cause—or from their having maintained an equivocal neutrality, have been considered by their countrymen in a suspicious light, whereby it hath become necessary, as well for the safety as for the satisfaction of the people, (who, in times so dangerous and critical, are naturally led to consider those as their enemies who withhold from them their aid and influence,) that certain persons in the said resolutions named, (of whom you are one,) who are generally supposed to come under the above description, should be summoned by a certain Committee to show cause, if any they have, why they should be considered as friends to the American cause, and as of the number of those who are ready to risk their lives and fortunes in defence of the rights and liberties of America against the usurpation, unjust claims, and cruel oppressions of the British Parliament, which rights and liberties and which unjust claims and cruel oppressions, are specified and stated in divers addresses, petitions, and remonstrances, of the present and late Continental Congresses, and directing certain proceedings in the said resolutions specified to be by the said Committee had against such of the said persons as the said Committee shall not adjudge and determine to be friends to the American cause: We do, therefore, in pursuance of the said resolutions, summon you to appear before us, at the City-Hall in New-York, on Thursday, the 4th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the said day, to show cause, if any you have, why you should be considered as a friend to the American cause, and of the number of those who are ready to risk their lives and fortunes in defence of the rights and liberties of America against the usurpation, unjust claims, and cruel oppressions of the British Parliament, which rights and liberties and which unjust claims and cruel oppressions are, as aforesaid, specified and stated in divers addresses, petitions, and resolutions, of the present and late Continental Congresses. Dated the 27th day of June, 1776.

June 29, 1776.

To Colonel WILLIAM ALLISON:

Whereas it is represented to us that David Baldwin, of Bergen County, in New-Jersey, but now in the City of New-York, can give very useful and important intelligence respecting the late discovered conspiracy against the rights and liberties of America: We do, therefore, in pursuance of a resolve of the Congress of this Colony, authorize and request you to bring the said David Baldwin forthwith before us, that he may be examined touching the said conspiracy.

Given under our hands this 29th June, 1776:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY.

The information of Mr. David Baldwin: Saith he has had reasons for some time past to believe there was a correspondence kept up between the people of Ramapo and the men-of-war, as well from the temper of the people as from many words dropped from time to time. He says that about the 17th instant he was told that Lawrence Van Buskirk, the miller at Ramapo, Abraham Van Buskirk, and a Schoolmaster, and Thomas Van Buskirk, at Saddle River, were going on board the man-of-war; that something prevented all but the Schoolmaster, who he verily believes did go, and that there is one Peter Van Buskirk living at or near the Hook or mouth of the Kills in Bergen County, who, it is frequently said, has followed trading with the men-of-war, who, he has reason to believe, carries people on board whenever requested, and has a sufficient craft for that purpose; and that this informant came to New-York on purpose to let it be known; that on his way he stopped at Erls's, in Bergen woods, where he was drinking to-day, in company with Francis Stephens, late a resident of this city, who took him (the said Baldwin) to be friendly to the Tory side, when said Stephens told Baldwin that there were fifty sail of King's ships near the Hook, and that there would soon be one hundred and fifty sail at New-York; that Erls said rum came from on board the man-of-war this week; that Stephens charged the informant not to mention it to some certain friends of his in New-York.

Sworn the 29th June, 1776, before us:

PHILIP LIVINGSTON,
JOHN JAY.

Joseph Baldwin, opposite the King's stores, tallow-chandler, is brother to the within informant, and will go on any expedition.

List of prisoners sent by Lieutenant-Colonel CARY to Brigadier-General GREENE, June 29, 1776.

Joseph Dorlant and John Hutchins, from Jamaica jail.

John Carman, received powder and absconded in the woods.

Andrew Allen, disaffected person, taken in the woods.

Jacob Lamberson, found with his gun charged.

Benjamin Pedet, in the swamp in the fight, and had powder from man-of-war.

Ezekiel Rainer, in the woods hid.

Richard Smith, in the swamp battle, and had powder from the Asia.

Jeremiah Bedle, a disaffected person.

Daniel Smith, in the swamp battle.

Elijah Rainer, hid in the swamp.

Joseph Bedle, same, disaffected person.

Nathan Smith, received powder from the Asia, absconded in the woods, and appears to know much of the scheme.

Townsend Wicks, a damned rascal, and the greatest Tory.

William McKoon, Thomas Fleet, John Fleet, Peter Wheeler, Samuel Townsend, declared they would sooner fight for the King than the Congress, and totally deny the authority of that body.

James Coggeshall, gun-stealer, or informer, from Newport.

Henry Dearing, said General Washington was more concerned in the conspiracy than any one.

To Brig. Gen. Greene, Head-Quarters, Long-Island.

Heimstead, June 29, 1776.

June 30, 1776.—Referred to the determination of the Congress of this Colony. T. MIFFLIN, Brig. Gen.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Charlestown, July 1, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I have the happiness to congratulate you on a very signal success (if I may not call it a victory) which we have gained over the mercenary instruments of the British tyrant. I shall not trouble you with a detail of their manœuvres or delays, but defer it to another time, when I have more leisure to write and you to attend: let it suffice that, having lost an opportunity (such as I hope will never again present itself) of taking the town, which, on my arrival, was utterly defenceless, the Commodore thought proper, on Friday last, with his whole squadron, consisting of two fifties, six frigates, and a bomb, (the rates of which you will see in the enclosed list,) to attack our fort on Sullivan's Island. They dropped their anchors about eleven in the forenoon, at the distance of three or four hundred yards, before the front battery. I was myself at this time in a boat, endeavouring to make the Island, but the wind and tide being violently against us, drove us on the main. They immediately commenced the most furious fire that I ever heard or saw. I confess I was in pain from the little confidence I reposed in our troops, the officers being all boys, and the men raw recruits. What augmented my anxiety was, that we had no bridge finished of retreat or communication, and the creek or cove which separated it from the continent is near a mile wide. I had received, likewise, intelligence that their land troops intended at the same time to land and assault. I never in my life felt myself so uneasy; and what added to my uneasiness was, that I knew our stock of ammunition was miserably low. I had once thoughts of ordering the commanding officer to spike his guns, and when his ammunition was spent, to retreat with as little loss as possible. However, I thought proper previous, to send to town for a fresh supply, if it could possibly be procured, and ordered my Aid-de-camp, Mr. Byrd, (who is a lad of magnanimous courage,) to pass over in a small canoe and report the state of the spirit of the garrison; if it had been low, I should have abandoned all thoughts of defence. His report was flattering. I then determined to maintain the post at all risks, and passed the creek or cove in a small boat, in order to animate the garrison in propria persona; but I found they had no occasion for such encouragement. They were pleased with my visit, and assured me they never would abandon the post but with their lives. The cool courage they displayed astonished and enraptured me; for I do assure you, my dear General, I never experienced a hotter fire—twelve full hours it was continued without intermission. The noble fellows who were mortally wounded conjured their brethren never to abandon the standard of liberty. Those who lost their limbs deserted not their posts. Upon the whole, they acted like Romans in the third century. However, our works were so good and solid, that we lost but few—only ten killed on the spot, and twenty-two wounded; seven of whom lost their legs or arms. The loss of the enemy, as you will perceive by the enclosed list, was very great. As I send a detail to the Congress, I shall not trouble you with a duplicate; but before I finish, you must suffer me to recommend to your esteem, friendship, and patronage, my (though young) Aid-de-camp, Byrd and Morris, whose good sense, integrity, activity, and valour, promise to their country a most fruitful crop of essential services. Mr. Jenifer, of Maryland, a gentleman of fortune, and not of the age when the blood of men flows heroically, has shown not less spirit than these youngsters. I may venture to recommend in these high terms, because the trial was severe. Colonel Moultrie, who commanded the garrison, deserves the highest honours. The manifest intention of the enemy was to land, at the same time the ships began to fire, their whole regulars on the east end of the Island. Twice they attempted it, and twice they were repulsed by a Colonel Thompson of the South-Carolina Rangers, in conjunction with a body of North-Carolina Regulars. Upon the whole, the South and North-Carolina troops and Virginia Rifle Battalion we have here, are admirable soldiers. The enemy are now returned to their old station on this side the bar. What their intention is, I cannot divine. One of the five deserters who came over to us this day, is the most intelligent fellow I ever met with. The accounts of their particular loss and situation are his, and I think they may be depended upon.

For God's sake, my dear General, urge the Congress to furnish me with a thousand cavalry. With a thousand cavalry, I could insure the safety of these Southern Provinces; and without cavalry, I can answer for nothing. I proposed a scheme in Virginia for raising a body without almost any expense; the scheme was relished by the gentlemen of Virginia, but I am told that the project was censured by some members of the Congress, on the principle that a military servant should not take the liberty to propose anything. This opinion I sincerely subscribe to, when our distance from the sovereign is so small and the danger so remote as to admit of proposing, deliberating, resolving, and approving; but when a General is at a vast distance, and the enemy close to him, I humbly conceive that it is his duty to propose and adopt anything, without other authority than the publick safety. From want of this species of troops we had infallibly lost the capital, but the dilatoriness and stupidity of the enemy saved us. I this instant learn that the Commodore is fixing buoys on the bar, which indicates an intention of quitting the place. It is probable that they will bend their course to Hampton or Chesapeake-Bay.

I am extremely happy, dear General, that you are at Philadelphia, for their councils sometimes lack a little military electricity. I have ordered the Adjutant-General to send you a return—I mean only a return of the strength of this place. I suppose it will be imperfect, for it is an Herculean labour to a South-Carolina officer to make any detail. God bless you, my dear General, and crown you with success, as I am most entirely and affectionately yours,

CHARLES LEE.

I am made quite happy by the resolution of Congress to keep Canada: had it been relinquished, all would have been lost.

Charlestown, July 2, 1776.

SIR: My having early in life engaged in the last war under you, and the present one we are engaged in appearing to be an affair that will not be very shortly settled, induces me to solicit your notice and patronage in obtaining a promotion of rank in some measure adequate to my long service and rank last war. In this I flatter myself with your notice to Congress, as otherwise I may pass altogether unnoticed amongst the many promotions taking place; and my principal having left a vacancy by his promotion, hope this application will not be out of time.

I am, with the utmost respect, your obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS BULLITT.

DEAR GENERAL: You must consider this as a Postscript, and at the same time recommendatory letter of your old friend Thomas Bullitt. He is certainly a man of merit, and entitled, from his length of services, zeal, and valour, to higher rank than he enjoys.

C. LEE.

Sullivan's Island, June 3, 1776.

SIR: We have seen this day two large ships—a large top-sail schooner and a tender. The tender has been very busy in sounding from the inlet at our advance-guard, all along to Long-Island. It seems as though they intended their descent somewhere hereabout. Our fort is now enclosed. It is the opinion of every one that we should have more men at this post; but as I know they cannot be spared from the capital, I must make the best defence I can with what I have got, and doubt not but that I shall give four or five hundred men a great deal of trouble before they can dislodge me from this post.

I shall be glad you would order those boats over which I had fitted up for this post. Captain Coppithorn has them.

I am your Excellency's most obedient servant,

WILLIAM MOULTRIE,

Colonel of the Second Regiment.

To His Excellency the President.

June 4, 1776.

SIR: Captain Beekman is sent down to take the command of the battery at Haddrell's Point: if he should want a reinforcement from Sullivan's Island, you will send it, if it can be spared.

Yours, &c.,

J. RUTLEDGE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Sullivan's Island, June 7, 1776.

SIR: A flag was just now sent from the men-of-war; but before they came to the shore, by some unlucky accident, they were fired upon by some of our sentries, contrary to orders. I am sorry it should have happened; but now, no help for it. I suppose it only a piece of ceremony they intended. I expect they will begin very shortly. Several of the fleet have gone northward, perhaps to land some troops. I doubt not your Excellency will provide accordingly.

Your most obedient,

WILLIAM MOULTRIE,

Colonel of the Second Regiment.

To the President.

June 7, 1776, half past six o'clock P. M.

SIR: I am very sorry that a flag has been fired upon by one of your sentries: pray send off a flag immediately, by a discreet officer, with a proper letter to the commanding officer of the British fleet, acquainting him that this act was committed by mistake, and contrary to orders; and that a messenger shall be properly received, and that I have given this direction the moment I was apprized of the fact; but take care to prevent a repetition of such conduct in the sentries. At the same time, do not suffer any, under the appearance of a flag, to make discoveries of what the enemy ought not to know.

Yours, in haste,

J. RUTLEDGE.

Honourable Colonel Moultrie.

Sullivan's Island, June 8, 1776.

SIR: I send this flag by Captain Huger, to assure you that the firing on a flag coming from your ship yesterday, was the effect of error in the sentinel. A guard, placed on the shore in order to receive your messenger, attempted to convince him of the mistake, by displaying a white cloth at the end of a musket. I acquainted the President and Commander-in-Chief of this accident, whose orders I received immediately to inform you that a messenger, if you think proper to send one, shall be properly received.

I have the honour to be your most obedient,

WILLIAM MOULTRIE,

Colonel of the Second Regiment.

To the Commanding Officer of his Britannick Majesty's Fleet, now lying in Five-Fathom Hole, South-Carolina.

A second flag was sent, with a proclamation of pardon to all that would return to their allegiance.

Thursday Morning, six o'clock.

SIR: I am extremely obliged to you for your activity and alertness. I beg you will order Long-Island to be reconnoitred well, and perhaps you will see a probability of attacking them with advantage from the main; but this must be left to their own prudence. I have ordered the two rascally carpenters who deserted, to be searched for; if they can be found, I shall send them bound to you. I do not myself much like the scheme of retreating by boats; it cannot, I think, be done without confusion. But I think you ought to have two means of retreat; for which reason I must beg that you will be expeditious in finishing the bridge; and all the boats I can procure shall be likewise sent to you. If possible I will visit you to-day.

I am, dear sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Charlestown, 8 o'clock, June 8th.

SIR: As we have received information that a body of the enemy have landed, and are lodging themselves on Long-Island, and as the nature of the country is represented to me as favourable to Riflemen, I must request that you immediately detach Thompson's and Sumpter's regiments, Captains Alston's, Mayham's and Couturier's companies, to that Island, with orders to attack, and, if possible, dislodge this corps of the enemy; but you must, above all, take care that their retreat across the breach from Long-Island to Sullivan's Island is secured to them in case of necessity. For which purpose, you are desired to move down to the point commanding the breach two field-pieces; the sooner it is done the better. You are, therefore, to exert yourself in such a manner that the attack may be made at break of day.

I am, sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE, Major-General.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Charlestown, June 8, 1776.

SIR: I have ordered a considerable reinforcement of Riflemen to join Colonel Thompson, which, with the advantages of ground, ought to make you totally secure. I shall be with you as soon as possible in the morning. Mr. Bellamy will, I hope, be able to finish you a bridge to-morrow.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie, Sullivan's Island.

June 9th, five o'clock.

The command of all the Regular forces and Militia of this Colony, acting in conjunction with them, being invested in Major-General Lee, orders issued by him are to be obeyed.

J. RUTLEDGE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

June 10, 1776.

SIR: You will receive a number of flats, ropes, and planks for the construction of bridges for your retreat. You are to give a receipt, and be answerable for them. I am, sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE, Major-General.

To Colonel Moultrie.

P. S. I find my last night's letter was not sent. I beg you would send a few expert scouts to discover what the enemy have done, or are doing. If it can be done with the least probable advantage, put my last night's orders in execution to-night.

Sullivan's Island, June 10, 7 o'clock, 1776.

SIR: I just now received your orders for detaching Thompson and Sumpter's regiments, Alston, Maham, and Couturier's companies. By the date of your letter, it seems as if you intended this business to have been done this morning, but your letter came too late to hand for that purpose. I shall send the detachment to our advance guard, there to remain with their boats for crossing them, hid till night, then shall embark them for Long-Island, where they may be reconnoitring till day-light. I shall be obliged to your Excellency to send us some person to finish our gate.

I am, sir, your most obedient,

WILLIAM MOULTRIE, Col. 2d Regiment.

To General Lee.

June 10, 6 o'clock P. M.

SIR: I am just returned from an excursion into the country. As the large ships are now over the bar, and as your bridge must be finished, I would wish you would lay aside all thoughts of an expedition against Long-Island, unless your scouts bring such intelligence as almost to insure a successful stroke. I am, sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie, Sullivan's Island.

June 10, 1776, 8 o'clock.

SIR: As the Commodore's ship has passed the bar, and as it is absolutely necessary for your and the common safety that the bridge of retreat should be finished this night, I would have you, by all means, to lay aside all thoughts of the expedition against Long-Island, unless you receive assurances from your scouts that you may strike an important stroke. Yours,

CHARLES LEE, Major-General.

To Colonel Moultrie.

June 11, 1776.

SIR: As the main body of Horry's Regiment are at Point Haddrell, Mayham and Coutirier's companies should be included in the detachment to be sent to the main.

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

June 11, 1776.

SIR: I was much surprised that this morning the Engineer should make a report to me that a bridge of retreat was impracticable, as I understand that a few days ago yourself and the other Field Officers gave it as your opinions that it might be effected. If I had boats, I should send them according to your request, but they are not to be had. The flats, ropes, and anchors, were sent in consequence of your former opinion. As I think your security will be much greater by posting a considerable body of Riflemen on the continent than on the Island, I must desire that you will immediately detach four hundred of them to the continent. They are to post themselves, or rather extend themselves, from the left of Point Haddrell towards Long-Island, by which means they will be able to prevent the enemy from erecting works to cut off your retreat. I would order the whole body off the Island, but apprehend it might make your garrison uneasy. You must order this body to be alert in patrolling, and if there is not natural cover in this range, they must throw up artificial ones. I request that this order may be instantly obeyed. I am, sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

I had rather you would make up this detachment five hundred. I hope the point of your Island, opposite to Long-Island, is secured against the enemy lodging there. I have ordered boats to be found, if possible.

C. L.

Charlestown, June 13, 1776.

SIR: As I am extremely solicitous for the honour and safety of you and the troops under your command, and as I am myself persuaded that your danger or safety depends entirely on the strength or weakness of the corps stationed on the other side of the creek, I must request that when the necessary works proposed are finished, you will detach at least another hundred men to strengthen this corps. I wish you would send me an exact state of your ammunition, that you may be supplied accordingly. His Excellency the President complains that several boats have been lost at your station. As so much depends on these boats, I must desire that you will put them under a sufficient guard. Oblige the officer commanding the guard to give a receipt for their number, and be accountable for them. I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Haddrell's Point, June 15, 1776.

SIR: I have stationed Brigadier-General Armstrong at this place. You are to make all your reports to him, and in all respects to consider him as your commanding officer.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Sullivan's Island, June 16, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Thompson is now with me, and informs me that he has taken particular notice of the movement of the enemy. He observed about ten o'clock two hundred Grenadiers and a small battalion, (which he imagines came from Dewee to cover the landing of the rest,) where they posted themselves, about one mile from our advanced guard, and waited until about seventeen hundred men were landed. They then marched off to Dewee's Island. He observed every six men carried something like a tent. They are still landing as fast as the boats can bring them. Colonel Thompson begs that he may have at least his own men which are over with you, (one hundred,) without whom he cannot undertake to prevent their landing on this Island, should they attempt it. We are all in high spirits, and will keep a good look-out to prevent a surprise. Colonel Thompson requests as a favour, if you have time, that you would come over and take a ride on the Island to observe what a length of ground we have to defend. I am yours, &c.,

WILLIAM MOULTRIE, Col. 2d Regt.

To General Armstrong.

Haddrell's Point, June 16, 1776.

DEAR COLONEL: I shall do my utmost to comply with yours and Colonel Thompson's request respecting the residue of his regiment. No passage over, unless you can send some boats in the morning. I wish the situation of the bridge may not be fatal to us, as we must assist each other. Let Mr. De Brahm be early at work there, as it must be defensible. Does not the movement of the enemy towards Dewee's look like an intention to use one of the creeks towards Haddrell's, probably Bolton's landing? I expect General Lee early here to-morrow. Dear Colonel, be vigilant, keep your troops alert. I see no reason why you may not also reinforce Colonel Thompson; nay, if they appear indeed to land on Sullivan's, it must be done, and the point at the Island where they may best land prudently and vigorously defended at all events. Let the Colonel know this.

May Heaven attend you all.

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

To Colonel Moultrie.

June 21, 1776.

SIR: I am extremely concerned to hear that the traverse which I had ordered to be thrown up, and which is really of the greatest importance, should be so illy executed as to threaten a speedy fall; surely Mr. De Brahm, the Engineer, must be acquainted with the degree of talus necessary in all works. For God's sake enjoin him to correct the evil before it is too late. At any rate devise the means of preventing its ruin. I must likewise express my concern when I am told that your gunners are suffered to fire at the enemy when it is almost impossible that their fire should have any effect. I must desire you, sir, that you must establish it as an eternal rule, that no piece of ordnance, great or small, should be fired at a greater distance than four hundred yards; but all orders will be in vain unless you make an example of the first who disregards your orders. Is Bellamy with you? Has he begun the second bridge? I hope you will keep him on the Island until he has finished the work.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

P. S. Those two field-pieces at the very end of the Point are so exposed that I desire you will draw them off to a more secure distance from the enemy; in their present situation, it appears to me they may be carried off whenever the enemy think proper.

Charlestown, June 21, 1776.

SIR: I hope you will excuse the style of my last letter. I must once more repeat that it did not arise from any diffidence in your judgment, zeal, or spirit; but merely from an apprehension that your good nature and easy temper might, in some measure, counteract those good qualities which you are universally known to possess. As you seem sensible that it is necessary to exert your powers, I do not, I cannot wish this important post in better hands than yours: once more, therefore, excuse my manner of writing. I wish Mr. Bellamy had (when he was desired to give in a list of all he wanted) left nothing to ask for at this time. Mr. Cochran is now employed in finding out the planks he requests; you shall have it as soon as possible. Captain Tufts was ordered to put himself under the command of General Armstrong. I shall write to the General to-night, to order him to station him in such a manner as to be of the greatest use to you, as likewise to spare you all the necessary assistance. To-morrow I expect Muhlenburg's Regiment, and I flatter myself that we shall be able to devise some means of baffling the enemy, should your post be really their object.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie, Fort Sullivan.

P. S. We have hoes and spades, but no helves to them; so General Armstrong must return those he borrowed. We shall endeavour to replace them.

Charlestown, June 22, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed is a letter for Colonel Thompson; I send it open that you may read it; for allowing for the difference of his circumstances as a Rifle officer, the spirit of the order is to extend to the whole; no vague uncertain firing, either of rifles, muskets, or cannon, is to be permitted. Soldiers running at random, wherever their folly directs, is an absolute abomination not to be tolerated. For Heaven's sake, sir, as you are in a most important post—a post where you have an opportunity of acquiring great honour—exert yourself. By exerting yourself, I mean, when you issue any orders, suffer them not to be trifled with. Everybody is well persuaded of your spirit and zeal, but they accuse you of being too easy in command; that is, I suppose, too relaxed in discipline—than which, in your situation, give me leave to say, there is not a greater vice. Let your orders be as few as possible, but let them be punctually obeyed. I would not recommend teasing your men and officers with superfluous duties or labour; but I expect that you enforce the execution of whatever is necessary for the honour and safety of your garrison. Should any misfortune happen which can be attributed to negligence or inertness on this head, the weight of censure will scarcely fall less heavily upon you, than should it arise from a deficiency of courage; but as you are known to possess sufficiently of this last attribute, your friends are only apprehensive on the other score. You will excuse the prolixity and didactic style of this letter, as it arises not only from my anxiety for the publick, but in some measure for my concern for the reputation of a gentleman of so respectable a character as Colonel Moultrie; but enough of this at present.

Before you employ your Engineer in any work, satisfy yourself well that he understands the principle of the work he undertakes, and the mode of executing it. For instance, does he understand what is the necessary degree of talus for the traverse in the fort? If I recommend the construction of an advanced fleche on the right flank of your fort to impede the enemy's approaches, will he comprehend it? If he does not, I will send Mr. Byrd. I shall order some timber for this purpose to be carried to you. I desire you will post a commissioned officer (and a good officer) at the beach, to prevent the monstrous disorders I complain of.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie, Sullivan's Island.

Haddrell's Point,* June 25, 1776.

DEAR COLONEL: This moment I was about to write you to learn the occasion and utility of the firing from the Point.

* About one mile from the fort, is an almost navigable river between us.

I hope some of your officers have been up to see and give the necessary directions. The Baron's conjectures may be right, but their breastworks may as naturally be designed as a defence against any effort made upon our part. I am of opinion they will not attempt to land on Sullivan's Island, until the armed vessels are first before your fort.

The state of the bridge and marsh is like to give me great trouble. Part of the last detachment I ordered to your Island has this morning absolutely refused, until the passage between the two places is safely passable. I am a little surprised that your Sergeant, agreeable to orders of yesterday, did not meet the men I sent to stake out the best path through the marsh on your side the bridge; nor could the men I sent find any boards laid down, as you remember was ordered on Saturday night. This is the third day that, for want of boats, I could not get this detachment over—now part have refused. I sent an express to General Lee, and, in the mean time, desire to know whether any new amendments for the bridge are going on on your side the water, and further notice as the movements of the enemy may require. I am obliged to throw up works in a kind of chain, near four miles from this camp; the enemy constantly striving to find new landing places on the main.

I am, dear sir, yours,

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

Charlestown, June 23, five o'clock.

SIR: I have sent Captain Cochran (a very active man) to your Island, to devise the means of establishing a second communication with the continent. Pritchard's flat, he says, is already at the Island. Muhlenburg's Regiment will be here to-night; we shall be then very strong. I will be down with you to-morrow, with a body of workmen, and put you, I hope, in a state of great security. Upon the whole, I think you will be safe, if your people do their duty. There can be nothing to fear to-night. I hope your garrison will remain in spirits. On my part, I promise every attention; and am, with the greatest truth, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Charlestown, June 25, 1776.

SIR: The gentleman that delivers you this letter is Baron Massenbaugh, one of the Continental Engineers. I desire you will furnish him with the number of workmen, and with every material he may require to carry on his works.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie, Sullivan's Island.

SIR: I have sent you the carpenter; it is your fault if he escapes again; keep a guard over him. Send the express boat back immediately. Yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

P. S. Finish the bridge.

Charlestown, June 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Could you not contrive this night to take up the enemy's buoys? I have ordered General Armstrong to send a hundred volunteers to ease Colonel Thompson's Regiment of their heavy duty; for I find that a part of Colonel Horry's Regiment had most magnanimously refused to take this duty on them; we shall live I hope to thank them. I am in hopes your bridge will be finished this night; you can then be reinforced at pleasure.

I am, dear sir, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Charlestown, June 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Some boats will possibly pass by you to-night from town on a scouting expedition, before twelve o'clock at night; their orders are to intercept some of the enemy's boats, and gain some important intelligence; I must desire, therefore, that you enjoin the whole sentinels on your Island not to challenge any boats passing from town, or to fire upon them, which would defeat the whole scheme; on their return, if they meet with any success, they shall have orders to greet you with two cheers; and if the wind or tide is against their return to town, they will put into your post, and remain with you this night. I hope your bridge is finished, as I intend to reinforce you considerably.

Yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Point-Haddrell, June 28, 1776.

DEAR COLONEL: If you should unfortunately expend your ammunition without beating off the enemy, or driving them on ground, spike your guns and retreat with all the order possible; but I know you will be careful not to throw away your ammunition.

CHARLES LEE, Major-General.

To Colonel Moultrie.

June 28—6 o'clock A. M.

DEAR COLONEL: I shall send you immediately a reinforcement. If the bridge cannot be finished without taking down the old, take it down without ceremony; but it would be better to have both. Yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Armstrong's, June 28—3 o'clock P. M.

DEAR COLONEL: Mr. Byrd makes reports of your conduct which does you infinite honour; they are, indeed, such as I expected. I have sent for more ammunition for you, and ordered a large corps of Riflemen to reinforce Colonel Thompson. Yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

[The following Letter from President Rutledge, written with a pencil on a slip of paper, was sent in the height of the engagement.]

June 28.

DEAR SIR: I send you five hundred pounds of powder. I should think you may be supplied well from Haddrell's. You know our collection is not very great. Honour and victory, my good sir, to you, and our worthy countrymen with you. Yours,

J. RUTLEDGE.

P. S. Do not make too free with your cannon. Cool and do mischief.

Charlestown, June 29—9 o'clock.

DEAR COLONEL: I should have thanked you and your brave garrison this morning, vis-à-vis, at the fort, but am prevented by a great deal of business. I do most heartily thank you all, and shall do you justice in my letters to Congress. I have applied for some rum for your men. They deserve every comfort that can be afforded them. We have sent for more powder; inform me of all your wants.

I am, dear Colonel, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

P. S. The General desires that Colonel Thompson will send, as soon as he can, a return of all occurrences in his part of the Island.

JOSEPH NOURSE, Secretary.

June 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: My very particular thanks are due to you and the brave officers and men in your garrison for their heroic behaviour of yesterday. I beg that you will receive them yourself, and make them acceptable to the gentlemen, officers and soldiers. Seeing the necessity of supporting you properly, I will strain every nerve to supply you with ammunition; no man would go a greater length than myself in this matter; but, my good sir, you know the scantiness of our stock; I send you fifteen hundred pounds, and think more cannot be spared. Indeed, to do this I have been obliged to get two thousand pounds from Dorchester. We must not wholly exhaust ourselves for the forts; small-arms must decide the matter at last.

I daily expect powder from Eustatia, then I hope to supply you plentifully. If those gentry think proper to revisit you, after saying what I have done, you will not need any caution to spare your powder. I beg and entreat you only to fire your heaviest guns very slowly, only now and then, and take good aim; if a brisk fire is kept up on your side, to attempt, by any means, to equal theirs, your ammunition will soon be expended, and what shall we do then? I therefore once more request most earnestly that you will observe this advice. I send this powder upon Roberts's pressing it much, in consequence of a letter from Captain

Beckman; but yet I think it cannot be wanted, I mean what you have had cannot have been near expended. I think you had twenty-one rounds to each gun, besides the five hundred pounds sent yesterday, and surely nothing like that quantity could have been fired yesterday. I presume there must be a good deal made up for the guns that were not fired, which Beckman has not thought of when he was writing to Roberts. Pray, sir, have this matter investigated, and let me have a correct state of it by the bearer, Captain Legaré, or any other good hand coming up soon, let me have it. Acquaint me if anything, and whatever you may think material or proper for me to know. I should mention, and you will please communicate to the garrison, General Lee's sentiment, which he thus expresses to me: "Their conduct is such as does them the greatest honour. No men ever did, and it is impossible ever can, behave better." I hope you will caution the men with their field-pieces at the advanced guard, and the Riflemen also there, not to expend their ammunition at random shot, or unnecessarily.

Dear sir, yours,

J. RUTLEDGE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

Fort Johnston, July 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I most heartily congratulate the Colony on the drubbing you gave those fellows the other day, and only wish you had had powder enough, that it might have been complete. Enclosed I send you a copy of a letter I sent General Lee this morning, containing the information I received from five honest fellows (Americans) that got away last night.

If they come up again, they are determined to come as close to the forts as possible, in order, I suppose, to command us more easily from their tops. Two of these men were on board the Commodore in the action. They say your first fire killed a man in the tops, upon which the Commodore ordered them all out of the tops, from whence they assured us there was not a gun fired. The Sphinx lost her bowsprit by running foul of the Acteon, and they were obliged either to cut away their bowsprit or the Acteon's mainmast. These men all belonged to the Acteon, and two of them were drafted on board the Commodore just before the action. I fired three cannon at the Syren, merely to please several of my officers, which fell far short, as I expected. We admired your behaviour, but could do no more. My compliments to all your corps; we drink their healths every day. If you will send this account to General Armstrong I shall be obliged to you.

Yours, sincerely,

CHRISTOPHER GADSDEN.

P. S. As soon as the action began, the Commodore ordered to be put into a place of safety negro Sampson, a black pilot.

C. G.

Charlestown, July 1, 1776.

DEAR COLONEL: Huger's Regiment have offered themselves to work at your fort. I believe a corps of blacks would have answered better, but the President and Vice-President think otherwise. You must desire the Baron to throw up the redoubt I ordered near on the beach to prevent their landing. The carpenters, I hope, will soon finish the gate. I have applied for six horses, and hope I shall procure them for you. Five deserters have just arrived here from the ships of war. Enclosed I send you a list of the murders your garrison have now to answer for, but I hope it will sit light on their consciences.

I am, dear Colonel, yours,

CHARLES LEE.

To Colonel Moultrie.

P. S. I must request that your garrison may be kept more vigilant than ever, and that Colonel Thompson and his corps do not relax, for it is almost proverbial in war that we are never in so great danger as when success makes us confident. Let the bridge be finished as soon as possible.

JOHN CRADOCK TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore County, July 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: With a grateful sense of your good opinion of me, I beg leave to resign the commission of first Major in Soldiers' Delight Battalion, since (having attended last Saturday) the battalion declared that they will be commanded only by officers recommended by themselves.

Be assured that this is the only reason of my resignation, for with pleasure will I execute any further office conferred upon me in the service of my country.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servant,

JOHN CRADOCK.

To the Council of Safety of the Province of Maryland.

THOMAS GIST TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

GENTLEMEN: According to orders from Brigadier-General Buchanan, I have endeavoured to get the account of the effective arms in Soldiers' Delight Battalion, but could not obtain any but from three companies, which you will find enclosed; and I believe there is not above forty in the other companies fit for service.

Saturday last being field-day of the said battalion, I attended, when some of the men laid down their arms, declaring they would not do duty under any other Field Officers but what they had recommended to the last Convention. I being loath to blow the spark into a flame of contention, and for the sake of peace and unity, beg leave to resign; and am your Honours' most obedient servant,

THOMAS GIST.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, July 1, 1776.

SIR: This will be delivered to you by Monsieur Antoine Felis Wiebert, a French gentleman, who brings such ample recommendation of his skill as an engineer, that the Congress are desirous of having him placed in a situation where he may have it in his power to show it; and indeed this is all he requests himself, being very willing, after his abilities shall be put to the trial, that his future character and promotion in the American Army should depend on the proofs he may give of his capacity and qualifications. I am, therefore, to request you will employ him in such way as you shall judge will best conduce to the good of the service and answer Mr. Wiebert's desire.

I have the Honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

JOHN ADAMS TO ARCHIBALD BULLOCK.

Philadelphia, July 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Two days ago I received your favour of May 1st. I was greatly disappointed, sir, in the information you gave me, that you should be prevented from revisiting Philadelphia. I had flattered myself with hopes of your joining us soon, and not only affording us the additional strength of your abilities and fortitude, but enjoying the satisfaction of seeing a temper and conduct here somewhat more agreeable to your wishes than those which prevailed when you were here before; but I have since been informed that your countrymen have done themselves the justice to place you at the head of their affairs, a station in which you may perhaps render more essential service to them and to America than you could here.

There seems to have been a great change in the sentiments of the Colonies since you left us, and I hope that a few months will bring us all to the same way of thinking.

This morning is assigned for the greatest debate of all. A Declaration, that these Colonies are free and independent States, has been reported by a Committee, appointed some weeks ago for that purpose, and this day or to-morrow is to determine its fate. May Heaven prosper the new-born Republick, and make it more glorious than any former Republicks have been!

The small-pox has ruined the American Army in Canada, and of consequence the American cause. A series of disasters has happened there, partly owing, I fear, to the indecision at Philadelphia, and partly to the mistakes or misconduct of our officers in that department; but the small-pox, which infected every man we sent there, completed our ruin, and compelled us to evacuate that important Province. We must, however, regain it some time or other.

My countrymen have been more successful at sea in driving away all the men-of-war completely out of Boston harbour, and in making prizes of a great number of transports and other vessels.

We are in daily expectation of an armament before New-York, where, if it comes, the conflict must be bloody. The object is great which we have in view, and we must expect a great expense of blood to obtain it; but we should always remember, that a free Constitution of civil Government cannot be purchased at too dear a rate, as there is nothing on this side the New-Jerusalem of equal importance to mankind.

It is a cruel reflection, that a little more wisdom, a little more activity, or a little more integrity, would have preserved us Canada, and enabled us to support this trying conflict at a less expense of men and money; but irretrievable miscarriages ought to be lamented no further than to enable and stimulate us to do better in future.

Your colleagues, Hall and Gwinnett, are here, in good health and spirits, and as firm as you yourself could wish them. Present my compliments to Mr. Houston; tell him the Colonies will have Republicks for their Governments, let us lawyers, and your divine, [Zubly] say what we will.

I have the Honour to be, with great esteem and respect, sir, your sincere friend and most humble servant,

JOHN ADAMS.

To His Excellency Archibald Bullock, Esq., of Georgia.

JOHN ADAMS TO SAMUEL CHASE.

Philadelphia, July 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favour by the post this morning gave me much pleasure, but the generous and unanimous vote of your Convention gave me much more. It was brought into Congress this morning just as we were entering on the great debate; that debate took up most of the day, but it was an idle mispense of time, for nothing was said but what had been repeated and hackneyed in that room before a hundred times for six months past.

In the Committee of the Whole, the question was carried in the affirmative, and reported to the House. A Colony desired it to be postponed until to-morrow, when it will pass by a great majority, perhaps with almost unanimity; yet I cannot promise this, because one or two gentlemen may possibly be found who will vote point blank against the known and declared sense of their constituents. Maryland, however, I have the pleasure to inform you, behaved well; Paca, generously and nobly.

Alas, Canada! We have found misfortune and disgrace in that quarter—evacuated at last. Transports arrived at Sandy-Hook, from whence we may expect an attack in a short time upon New-York, or New-Jersey, and our Army not so strong as we could wish. The Militia of New-Jersey and New-England not so ready as they ought to be.

The Romans made it a fixed rule never to send or receive Ambassadors to treat of peace with their enemies, while their affairs were in an adverse or disastrous situation. There was a generosity and magnanimity in this becoming freemen. It flowed from that temper and those principles which alone can preserve the freedom of a people. It is a pleasure to find our Americans of the same temper. It is a good symptom, foreboding a good end.

If you imagine that I expect this Declaration will ward off calamities from this country, you are mistaken. A bloody conflict we are destined to endure. This has been my opinion from the beginning. You will certainly remember my decided opinion was, at the first Congress, when we found that we could not agree upon an immediate non-exportation, that the contest could not be settled without bloodshed, and that if hostilities should once commence, they would terminate in an incurable animosity between the two countries. Every political event since the 19th of April, 1775, has confirmed me in this opinion.

If you imagine that I flatter myself with happiness and halcyon days, after a separation from Great Britain, you are mistaken again. I do not expect that our new Governments will be so quiet as I could wish; nor that happy harmony, confidence, and affection, between the Colonies, that every good American ought to study, labour, and pray for, for a long time; but freedom is a counterbalance for poverty, discord, and war, and more. It is your hard lot and mine to be called into life at such a time; yet even these times have their pleasures.

I am your friend and servant,
To Mr. Chase, Annapolis.
JOHN ADAMS.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, July 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 14th ultimo is now before me. I am truly sorry that guns, &c., for the ships cannot be got as soon as wanting, but so it happens. The Committee appointed for that purpose have not been able to procure them yet. As to naval affairs, I must refer you to brother Whipple, who continues of the Marine Committee alias Board of Admiralty, and who will, while here, inform you from time to time what is to be done in your department as agent for New-Hampshire.

I am sorry to hear our Colony have determined to keep up the Provincial Regiment at Portsmouth in the pay of the Colony, besides the Continental Regiment. The design of raising that regiment was to ease our Colony of that expense, and I expected they would have been immediately put on the Continental establishment, and our Colony eased of the burden. The cost of maintaining Colonel Gilman's Regiment, with the bounty given to the men going to Canada, with our other expenses, will be very great, and where we can save cost, consistent with the publick safety, we ought to do it. In short, in my opinion it will be no advantage to us, for when it is known that our harbour is defended by our own forces, it is very probable the Continental Regiment may be ordered somewhere else, which would not be the case if they were wanted, as was expected, for the Colony's defence. I have the highest opinion of Dr. Brackett, but think he would not accept of the appointment of Surgeon to the Continental Regiment, especially as it may possibly be ordered to some distant place, and I fear he would take it as an affront to offer it to him. New-Jersey have appointed a new set of Delegates, consisting of five; among them is Dr. Witherspoon.

The affair of Independency has been this day determined in a Committee of the whole House; by next post I expect you will receive a formal Declaration, with the reasons. The Declaration before Congress is, I think, a pretty good one. I hope it will not be spoiled by canvassing in Congress.

General Lee, by express, informs us that fifty-three ships, with General Clinton, were before Charlestown, South-Carolina. General Washington, by express this day, informs us that General Howe, with near one hundred sail, were at Sandy-Hook; so that we may soon expect serious work.

Before this reaches you, you will hear that General Sullivan has evacuated Canada, and is at present at Isle-aux-Noix, and I expect soon to hear he is at Crown Point. The time is now at hand when we shall see whether America has virtue enough to be free or not.

Sir, you will excuse the erasements and many other defects in this scrawl, as I have not time to copy or correct it.

I am, sir, your friend, &c.,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

To Captain Langdon.

P. S. The transport, with Highlanders, that was taken by the Cabot, and afterward retaken, is taken a second time by Captain Barron, and carried into Jametown, Virginia. She had two hundred and twelve soldiers on board, being the whole of the soldiers in two transports taken by the Cabot. The other transport contained the officers of both, and was retaken by the Cerberus man-of-war, and afterward taken again by the Schuyler and Montgomery, and carried into New-York.

CHESTER COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Downingtown, Chester County, }
July 1, 1776. }

Present fifty Members.

On motion, Resolved, That this Committee use their utmost endeavours to put in execution the Resolve of Conference for raising six hundred and fifty-two Men forthwith in this County; and that the following gentlemen be appointed Officers, viz: William Montgomery, Colonel; Thomas Bull, Lieutenant-Colonel, and John Bartholomew, Major. Captains: Joseph Gardner, Benjamin Wallace, Samuel Cul- binson, James Boyley, John McDowel, John Shaw, Matthew Boyd, and John Beaton. First Lieutenants: William Henry, Andrew Dunwooddy, Thomas Kenney, Benjamin Culbinson, Samuel Lindsey, Allen Cunningham, Joseph Strawbridge, and Joseph Bartholomew. Second Lieutenants: Robert Filson, William Lockart, Thomas Davis, Samuel Hammel, Jeremiah Cloud, Joseph Wherrey, David Curry, and Alexander McCaragher. Ensigns: John Grardtreshner, William Cunningham, John Filling, Andrew Curry, Thomas James, Lazarus Finney, Archibald Desart, and John Lewellyn.

PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, }
July 1, 1776. }

The Committee, taking into consideration the Resolution of Congress [for raising a German Battalion], and being of opinion that the publick service requires that it be carried into execution without any delay, and the Recruiting service be entered on as soon as possible:

Resolved, That this Board will, on Friday, the 5th instant, appoint Captains, and on Friday, the 12th instant, Lieutenants and Ensigns, for the four Companies of Germans directed to be raised in this Province by order of Congress; and that it is the opinion of this Board that, consistent with the Resolve of Congress, no person but such as are Germans born, or the sons of Germans, should hold any office in said Companies.

All such gentlemen who fall under the above descriptions, and are desirous to enter into the service, are requested to send in their applications as early as may be.

Extract from the Minutes:

WILLIAM GOVETT, Secretary.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

New-York, July 1, 1776.

SIR: I received your favours of the 20th and 23d ultimo, and am happy to hear of the further success of our armed vessels, in the capture of the transport with the Highland Grenadiers. If they have been fortunate enough to take the eleven ships mentioned in your last, I suppose we are in possession of a large share of the Highlanders ordered against us. I am extremely sorry for your indisposition, and wish to afford you all the relief in my power, and that the situation of things will admit of. It is particularly unlucky that Mr. Whitcomb should refuse his commission at this crisis. A fleet has arrived at the Hook, which we suppose to be General Howe's, having received authentick intelligence of his sailing from Halifax on the 9th ultimo with one hundred and thirty-two sail. One hundred and ten came in on Saturday; more were in the offing; and a few had got in two or three days before. We expect he will make an attack as soon as possible; and I am making every preparation to receive him. As we are extremely deficient in arms here, and in great distress for want of them, I shall be glad if you will send off those taken from the Highlanders, which you conceive can possibly be spared. Let them be sent immediately to Norwich, to the persons there who were intrusted with the others, with directions to forward them without delay, by water, if there shall be no risk; if there is, by land. You will observe that the new regiments to be raised in the Massachusetts are to furnish their own before they are received, or can be taken into pay.

I am, &c.,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Ward.

P. S. It is not in my power to send a General Officer now. I have but one Major-General, and not Brigadiers more than are absolutely necessary, nor so many. I have heard nothing more of the other three hundred carbines; they are not yet arrived.

COLONEL REED TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, July 1, 1776.

SIR: The General being informed that the Provincial Congress of New-York have collected a quantity of lead in divers parts of the city, requests they would be pleased to let Mr. Commissary Cheever have all that can be spared, as it is one of those articles of which the Army stands at present in the greatest need.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH REED, Adjutant-General.

To the Hon. the President of the Provincial Congress.

JAMES COGGESHALL TO THE COMMITTEE OF NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New Jail, July 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am informed you are appointed to act during the recess of the Congress respecting the prisoners confined in Jail. I take the liberty to beg your assistance in relieving me as far as possible from my situation, truly necessary on account of my ill state of health, which I dare say you can be made fully sensible of if you will do me the favour to visit me. I am conscious of no particular charge that is or can be brought against me; and I am willing to comply with any restrictions you shall deem necessary. I am so much unwell that I look upon the continuance of my confinement the absolute destruction of my life, which I think your humanity would by no means suffer if in your power to prevent. I must just mention one circumstance, that, so sure was I of being immediately released I came from the country without a second shirt, or strip of any one thing which I would wish to have in my power to obtain, as you must be sensible how necessary cleanliness is to the health, especially of an invalid. As soon as I can be indulged with your favour, the greatest obligation will be conferred on, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JAMES COGGESHALL.

To Messrs. Brasher, Broome, and Bancker, Committee of the Honourable Provincial Congress, New-York.

To the Honourable the Speaker and Members of the Provincial Congress of NEW-YORK:

The Petition of ISAAC KETCHUM humbly beggeth the consideration of this honourable House,

In regard to a proposal made to your humble Petitioner by the honourable Speaker of this House, on the 14th day June last, (which I do not doubt but part of the members of this House are sensible of,) which I undertook to trace; the matter I had some idea of, and on which, whether I succeeded or not, I took it for granted, after a final discovery, that liberty was depending: however, with the help of Divine Providence, I succeeded in the undertaking, though not expecting to be called as a publick evidence, there to declare what I gathered from a person's own mouth, by laying schemes, and using arguments to get it from him, which was a considerable shock of conscience, though it being in the glorious cause of America, which gives satisfaction on the next thought. Though I have a fear I am detained to be brought in as evidence; but I must refuse if so called, as I think it hard usage, as I have laid myself liable to all the enemies of America, as I have a double chance whether we are overcome or not, as we have a large party of these kind of friends in the country, and not far from my habitation, as I am very sensible of my adversaries, by reason of our friendship being broken six or eight months ago on account of the contest. Your humble Petitioner sincerely begs you would consider his circumstances, as he hath faithfully accomplished and discharged the trust reposed in him, as I hope it will appear to every member of this honourable House, as your humble petitioner ever stands in duty bound to obey every resolve of this honourable House, and to the protection of the Continental Army. Your Petitioner humbly begs that justice may be shown him in regard to a small sum of money and some papers taken by Captain Wool, as I hope it will appear right and equitable in the sight of every member of this House that your humble Petitioner should have his property returned, and discharged from confinement. And your Petitioner ever is in duty bound to serve.

God bless the Congress in all their lawful enterprises.

ISAAC KETCHUM.

QUEENS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Queens County, July 1, 1776.

The Committee took into consideration a Resolve of the Convention of the honourable the Provincial Congress relating to the removing the Cattle from the south side of this County; and as many difficulties and impossibilities doth appear, this Committee hath appointed Colonel Jeromus Remsen, Colonel Joseph Roberson, and Samuel Riker, to make a representation thereof to the honourable the Provincial Congress and General Officers of the Continental Army relating to that matter; and that they make a representation of the defenceless state of this County, and request such a force as shall be able, with the assistance of the County Militia, to prevent our being plundered by the Ministerial troops; and also apply for two hundred Pounds for the use of this County.

BENJAMIN SANDS.

THEOPHYLACT BACHE TO PHILIP LIVINGSTON.

Flatbush, July 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I would have waited upon you this day, pursuant to your citation received on Friday last, but the distressed state of Mrs. Bache and my numerous family, since the arrival of the fleet at Sandy-Hook, will, I hope, be a sufficient apology for my remaining with them, as they will require all my attention to save them from the horrible calamities of the approaching conflict.

My being represented to the Congress as one of the persons inimical to the cause and rights of America fills me with the deepest concern. Be assured, gentlemen, that the accusation is unmerited, and must have proceeded from those who are unacquainted with my sentiments. I have not, since the unhappy dispute began, contravened any order of the Congress, Continental or Provincial, nor is it my intention.

I sincerely hope for a reconciliation, that this once happy country may enjoy the blessing of peace; and am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

THEOPHYLACT BACHE.

To P. Livingston, Esq., and gentlemen of the Congress.

To the Honourable the Representatives of the City and Province of NEW-YORK, in Congress assembled:

GENTLEMEN: We, the subscribers, being united friends to American liberty, considering our defenceless state, in case there should be an attack made by our enemies upon this Province, and likewise our being surrounded with numbers of Tories who are daily meditating our destruction; and having two large storehouses contiguous to the North River, in which are great quantities of provisions, which, we apprehend, in case they should get past the city with their tenders, they may run up and supply themselves at pleasure out of these storehouses, which might prove very dangerous to the common cause of this country; for which reason we conceive it to be highly necessary that you would be pleased to supply us with two field-pieces, with everything necessary for an attack under your directions, for our defence, in order to assist the Militia of this Manor, for which purpose we mean to form ourselves into a Company of Artillery, on our own expense, you giving us the liberty of choosing our own officers. We understand there are some field-pieces at the upper fort, in the Highlands, which can be spared. Your compliance will greatly oblige, gentlemen, your Petitioners, &c.

To the Honourable Members of the Provincial Congress of NEW-YORK:

The humble Petition of the Inhabitants of CHERRY-VALLEY, NEW-TOWN, MARTIN, and SPRINGFIELD, in the County of TRYON, humbly sheweth:

That we, the aforesaid inhabitants, from the most authen-

tick intelligence we have received from our missionaries and Indian friends, learn that we are in imminent danger of being cut off by the savages, our enemies, whom, we understand, are bribed by Sir John Johnson and Colonel Butler to execute the same. Know also, honourable gentlemen, that the spirit of our inhabitants hath been such for the American cause, that out of the small and scattered bounds of Cherry-Valley, New-Town, and Martin, no less than thirty-three have turned out for immediate service and good of their country, and thereby left us in a defenceless condition. We, therefore, your humble petitioners, humbly pray you would forthwith take this, our deplorable and distressed state and condition, under your immediate consideration, and meditate some speedy relief for us before it be too late, especially as the inhabitants of Old England District and Unadilla are daily flying to our settlement, so that we shall immediately, in all appearances, become an open, defenceless, and unguarded frontier, and very much exposed to the insults of the enemy, especially scalping parties, and are at present without ammunition or men any way sufficient to defend ourselves; and unless you, gentlemen, that can help us, will help us, by sending ammunition to the inhabitants, and a sufficient number of men, such as you may think proper to guard our frontiers, we must expect to fall victims to the rage and fury of our merciless enemies, and therefore must once more beg you may take this, our deplorable circumstances, under your consideration, and send us immediate relief. And your Petitioners shall ever pray.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, July 1, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: On Friday evening I received a line from General Sullivan, a copy whereof I have the honour to enclose. By the contents your Excellency will perceive that we have reasons to believe his next will announce his arrival at Crown Point.

Yesterday morning General Gates introduced a Mr. Avery to me, who applied to me for money to carry on the Commissary-General's Department here. I asked if Mr. Livingston was superseded, and begged to see how he (Avery) was authorized to act here. He showed me a commission from Mr. Trumbull, the Commissary-General, with instructions annexed, appointing him Deputy Commissary in Canada, and the instructions were correspondent to such appointment. I told him his commission did not, by any means, supersede Mr. Livingston's, and until that was done, that I must consider Mr. Livingston as the Deputy Commissary-General here, and that all warrants for money to carry on that department here must be drawn in his favour, unless Mr. Trumbull himself was present. He assured me that it was Mr. Trumbull's intentions that he (Avery) should have the sole management, and that Mr. Livingston was only to be considered as a contractor. I sent for Mr. Livingston, who produced a letter of the 25th instant from Mr. Trumbull directly contradictory to what Mr. Avery had asserted; upon which he declared that Mr. Trumbull had informed him that Congress had given him full power to make any arrangement he thought proper, and displace whom he pleased, and that it was his intention by giving him (Avery) that commission to supersede Mr. Livingston. To which Mr. Livingston answered that although Mr. Trumbull had no power to remove him unless authorized so to do by Congress, as he held his commission immediately from that body; yet if Mr. Trumbull had expressed any such intention, that he would immediately resign, and he would put the question to Mr. Trumbull. I observed to Mr. Avery that nothing in his commission or the instructions annexed authorized him to say what he did; that Mr. Trumbull's letter to Mr. Livingston flatly contradicted it; that if he remained with the Army, provided it was not in Canada, he must be subordinate to Mr. Livingston, and obey his orders, which he chose not to do, and is now going down. I advised him to remain until the affair was determined, and candidly told him that I should try to keep Mr. Livingston in the employment if he chose it, because, admitting that their abilities and integrity were perfectly equal, Mr. Livingston's conduct had met my approbation, and that his great family connexions in this County had enabled him to carry on the service when others could not have done it, of which I gave instances. General Gates was present, and acquiesced in the propriety of what I observed. I was, therefore, greatly surprised to be informed that he should tell Mr. Avery that he had nothing to say here, but that as soon as he came to the Army he would employ him. I say I was greatly surprised, because General Gates knew that that Army was no longer in Canada, and because I did not know that he then claimed a right to control my orders with respect to the Army, even if it should be at Crown Point, nor could I imagine he thought so, as your Excellency's instructions to him gave, as I conceive, not the least colour for it. Your last letter to me holds up a contrary idea, and so does every resolution of Congress hitherto transmitted to me; but that General Gates conceived, and still does, that the Army is immediately under his command, I had a very few hours after the most convincing proof of, as your Excellency will observe from the enclosed paper, which I hastily drew up immediately after the discourse, and which I desired General Gates to read, that no misunderstanding might arise for want of recollecting what had been said, and which he acknowledges contains the substance of what passed between us.

By your Excellency's instructions to General Gates, he is empowered to appoint a Quartermaster-General in Canada. I observed this morning that I believed it was founded on a supposition that Colonel Campbell was then about quitting Canada, for that I could not imagine that an officer being "ordered to Congress to settle his accounts" deprived him of his employments; that Colonel Campbell was originally appointed to this department, and that Canada now being made a separate one, and the command of it given to General Gates, he could, under the powers he had, appoint whom he pleased to act there, but that, unfortunately for us, the evacuation of that country by our troops had taken place, and that I must and should consider Colonel Campbell as the Deputy Quartermaster-General on this side of Canada.

If Congress intended that General Gates should command the Northern Army, wherever it may be, as he assures me they did, it ought to have been signified to me, and I should then have immediately resigned the command to him; but until such intention is properly conveyed to me I never can. I must, therefore, entreat your Excellency to lay this letter before Congress, that they may clearly and explicitly signify their intentions, to avert the dangers and evils that may arise from a disputed command; for after what General Gates has said, the line must be clearly drawn, as I shall until then stand upon punctilios with General Gates that I would otherwise with pleasure waive; but that the service may not be retarded, nor suffer the least from a difference of opinion between General Gates and me, I have determined to remain here, although I had, before this affair came to light, mentioned to him my intentions of going up with him.

As both General Gates and myself mean to be candid, and wish to have the matter settled without any of that chicane which would disgrace us as officers and men, we have agreed to speak plain, and to show each other what we have written to you upon the occasion, and he has accordingly read the whole of what I have above said.

Since writing the above, General Gates has shown me the resolutions of Congress of the 17th instant, which confirm me in the opinion I have entertained, that he was only to command the Army in Canada, and that I had no control upon him when there.

Your Excellency may be assured of my best exertions to prevent the enemy from penetrating into these Colonies. General Gates is in sentiment with me on the mode—that of increasing our naval strength and fortifying some advantageous spot on the east side of Lake Champlain, either opposite to Ticonderoga or between that and Crown Point.

Part of the Militia from this Colony is marched up; none of the others are yet moved. Their tardiness will greatly distress us, as we have much, very much, to do, and few men to do it with.

The cannon sent by Colonel Knox arrived yesterday ; and although the Indians have deferred the treaty to the middle of this month, yet I have thought it advisable to take post at Fort Stanwix, and all the stores are moving from here to-day, and will, I hope, leave Schenectady on Wednesday morning. The Commissioners of Indian Affairs have prepared a message to the Six Nations, giving the reasons why we take post at Fort Stanwix. This will, however, not be sent until everything is so far advanced that there may be no danger in communicating to them my intentions.

Should the enemy advance, and we be under the necessity of calling forth the Militia nearest to us, we shall be at a loss for ball and buckshot. I wish, therefore, to have twenty-five rounds apiece for ten thousand men sent up the soonest possible, if it can anywhere be procured, with a proportionate quantity of cartridge-paper, and two tons of oakum.

If any cutlasses, stinkpots, and hand-grenades can be got, I beg they may also be sent for the use of our armed vessels.

One hundred thousand of the dollars brought up by General Gates are ordered to the Army ; better than half of the other are already expended, nor will any be left in two or three days.

Mr. Duane informed me, and gave me leave to make use of his name, that the five hundred thousand voted by Congress the 22d of May for this department, were actually charged, and he fears that they may have met with some accident on the way up.

I have ordered the silver to be kept in chests, except about three thousand pounds, which we borrowed here, and must now be repaid.

Four o'clock, P. M.—I am this moment favoured with your Excellency's letter of the 27th ultimo, enclosing copy of a resolution of Congress of the 24th. I have immediately an opportunity of forwarding copies thereof to Governor Trumbull and Mr. Edwards ; the latter has already received one month's advance wages for the Stockbridge Company, and which, I suppose, is by this time paid to them, as he informed me that they were to be here on Wednesday or Thursday next. I am afraid it will give great umbrage if they are immediately discharged ; but as the order is positive, I dare not presume to defer complying with it. I shall, however, request Mr. Edwards to do it in a manner that will give the least offence.

I wish Colonel Francis and Colonel Wolcott were immediately ordered up to attend the conference at the German Flats on the 15th instant, as I propose going to Crown Point to-morrow, having, upon further consultation with General Gates and General Arnold since writing the foregoing, determined upon it ; and this journey may detain me so long as to prevent my attendance, in which case there will be only two Commissioners present.

I am, dear General, most respectfully, your obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Isle-aux-Noix, June 24, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Before this comes to hand, you will have received mine by General Arnold, acquainting you with our retreat to this place. Your favour of the 17th instant, enclosing his Excellency's letter, came to hand this evening.

I am much obliged for the powers you have been pleased to delegate to me, of which I shall make a proper use against the persons you mention, provided their crime turns out as I apprehend ; they are now under trial, and I trust the result will be known to-morrow. This cowardly affair, together with the want of discipline, and that infernal disorder the small-pox, has ruined our Army. Believe me, dear General, that when I ordered the sick people from hence to Crown Point, many regiments were obliged to apply for men to be drafted from other regiments to row them away, they not having well men enough for that purpose. Those that remain here, owing to their fatigue and want of fresh provisions, are daily dropping off, like the Israelites before the destroying angel. The officers, to a man, are daily calling aloud to go on to Crown Point, to fortify there, and recruit the Army. I am, for my own part, now convinced that this step must be taken, or the Army will be lost, not by the enemy, but by sickness.

I have this day viewed Windmill Point and Point-au-Fer, and think that garrisons at either or both those places would be useless, the former being a low sunken piece of ground, and the river so wide that cannon cannot command it. The latter is three miles from this point, and there the river is still wider. So if garrisons were at these places, the enemy might pass, either by water or land, without regarding them. I had four boats in company with me on my return, two of which dropped astern, and the people went on shore. I heard a firing about two or three miles astern, but could not guess what it was. I have since learned that the people were attacked by the Indians, and their batteaus taken. I cannot give full credence to this at present, as I think the firing must have been further off. However, as the batteaus have not yet arrived, I have sent a party after them, and shall soon know the truth of this report.

This afternoon, before my return, a party of officers and men, who had carelessly ventured to a French house, about half a mile below this Island, without their arms, were attacked by a party of Indians and two Canadians, who killed and took seven officers and four or five privates. We find these fellows have lined our shores to watch our batteaus. I shall take care to guard them well, and am now sending off a strong party of Riflemen to scourge the rascals for their insolence. Colonel Wayne, with a party, followed those who attacked and killed the officers, but could not overtake them. He recovered the batteaus and five dead bodies, scalped and mangled in a shocking manner. I shall give you the particulars as soon as it can be done with certainty.

Dear General, believe me to be, with much respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

Albany, June 30, 1776.

In a conversation with General Gates, in the presence of Walter Livingston, Esq., General Gates observed that Mr. Lewis had intimated to him, as what he had from Colonel Trumbull, that he might as well return to New-York, as General Gates could not provide for him agreeable to expectation, because the Army having quitted Canada, it was now under the command of General Schuyler. General Gates declared that Colonel Campbell being ordered to Congress to settle his accounts, he should appoint Mr. Lewis as Deputy Quartermaster-General. General Schuyler answered, that if Colonel Campbell quitted the department, he should willingly appoint any person General Gates thought proper ; that the Army being now out of Canada, he conceived that it was under his command, and he could suffer no appointment to be made by General Gates. General Gates conceived the contrary ; upon which General Schuyler observed that he meant to be clear and explicit on a point of such importance, and declared that he conceived the Army to be altogether under his command when on this side of Canada, subject, however, to the control of General Washington ; that, in his absence, General Gates commanded the Army in the same manner as General Sullivan did now, and only as eldest officer, who acknowledged that General Schuyler's commands were binding on him, which he instanced in General Sullivan's last letter, and pointedly observed that if he was with the Army, (which he always would be, when his health or other indispensable publick business did not call him from it,) and ordered it to remove from one place to another, he should expect to be obeyed ; that, upon any sudden emergency, the officer with, and commanding the Army, had a right to exercise his judgment, and take measures accordingly, for which he was, however, obnoxious to the censure or praise of the commander of the department ; that if Congress meant that General Gates should command the Army in this department, and would resolve so, that he should most readily acquiesce, but that they could not after that imagine he would remain in it ; that they had certainly a right to make what arrangements they thought proper ; that he was a creature of theirs, and they had a right to move him wherever they pleased, but they could not put him under the command of a younger officer, nor oblige him to be a suicide, and stab his own honour ; that he frankly confessed General Gates's superior military qualifications ; that he would always advise with him and his other brother Gene-als; and that if he were superseded, it would give him great pleasure to be superseded by a gentleman of General Gates's character and reputation.

Both General Gates and General Schuyler declared they would lay the matter before Congress, to prevent any evil consequences from a disputed command in a critical moment; that, for the present, they would co-operate, that no evil might result to the service, and that each should write to Congress to determine the matter.

General Gates, having read this and General Schuyler's letter to his Excellency General Washington, agreed that the matter was fairly and fully stated, and therefore declined writing.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, July 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was yesterday honoured with yours of the 28th, and have detained the express, as I expected some accounts from the northward, but have received none.

General Gates, General Arnold, and I, set out to-morrow morning for the Army. We suppose we shall meet it at Crown Point, as General Sullivan, in his last to me, gave reasons to believe that he would immediately remove from Isle-aux-Noix. I am very far, my dear sir, from desponding, although so many untoward circumstances have arisen to the northward, as I do not think the enemy will be able to penetrate into the more inhabited parts of the Colonies, especially if the Militia which is ordered to join us should soon arrive, which I sincerely hope they will. I have given a plan to the Committee of this County to enable them to draw forth the Militia on the shortest notice, and I believe it will be adopted. Your Colony cannot want it, as your Militia is already properly regulated. Would it not, however, be prudent to give a standing order to the Militia to march as soon as they should be certainly informed of an intended attack, without waiting for further orders?

It is a melancholy reflection that there are so many of the eastern people who have not had the small-pox. We propose to dispose of all such as not to have any intercourse with that part of the Army now infected with that disorder, unless upon the most pressing occasion, which can only happen if we should be threatened with an immediate attack by the main body of the enemy.

Four o'clock in the afternoon.—Just now received a letter from General Washington, enclosing a resolution of Congress, which I do myself the honour to transmit you. I am apprehensive that the Stockbridge Indians will take umbrage at it, and have desired Mr. Edwards to broach the matter in the least exceptionable terms, so as to give as little offence as possible.

I am, dear sir, with great truth, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO MESHECH WEARE.

Albany, July 1, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your letter of the 21st ultimo by Benjamin Giles, Esq., who delivered me one thousand one hundred and forty-seven pounds one shilling lawful, equal to three thousand eight hundred and twenty-three dollars and a half in specie, for which I have passed duplicate receipts. I am exceedingly sorry that the necessity of any further supply of hard money seems to be unhappily superseded by our troops evacuating Canada. I do not mean this, however, as an opinion that no more ought to be sent, as Congress may have views which I am unacquainted with.

By a letter from General Sullivan, of the 24th ultimo, I have reason to believe that our Army is now on its way to Crown Point. I leave this to-morrow in order to join it. Every exertion must be made to prevent the enemy from crossing Lake Champlain, and I have a confident hope that we shall be able to retard their progress by a superior naval force, which is daily increasing, insomuch that we have already built and equipped two gondolas, and I hope to have two more every week for a succession of at least five or six weeks.

We wish much to have the expected reinforcement of Militia from the different Colonies ordered to levy them. Those from this are nearly all marched. We shall take such measures as will have the most probable tendency to prevent the small-pox from infecting these men; and we hope to succeed, provided that the men will strictly abide by the orders that will be issued.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Honourable Meshech Weare, Esq., President of the Colony of New-Hampshire.

GENERAL SCHUYLER'S RECEIPT FOR SPECIE.

Received, Albany, July 1, 1776, from Benjamin Giles and James Betton, Esquires, in specie, the sum of one thousand one hundred and forty-seven pounds one shilling, lawful money of New-England, equal to three thousand eight hundred and twenty-three dollars and a half, it being money sent by the Assembly of the Colony of New-Hampshire by said Benjamin Giles and James Betton, Esquires, to be lodged in my hands for the use of the Army of the United American Colonies; which sum I am accountable for to this or any future Congress, and for which I have given duplicate receipts of this tenour and date.

PHILIP SCHUYLER, M. General.

COLONEL BELLOWS TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Walpole, July 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Being apprehensive that the inhabitants of this part of the globe may ere long be called to face the common enemy in the field, or to defend our possessions, our wives and children, from the cruelty and barbarity of the skulking savages, in order whereto it is absolutely necessary that we should be furnished with arms and ammunition: wherefore I take this opportunity to lay before you the state and condition of the regiment which I have the honour to command in regard of their military accoutrements, that, if possible, you may furnish us with the necessary means of defence. The number of training soldiers I am not able to ascertain, not having received the proper returns. Certain I am there is not less than five or six hundred, the half of whom cannot collect one ounce of powder or ball, and, it is highly probable, not a single fire-lock fit for use. Would, therefore, beseech you, if possible, to put the bearers hereof in a way to procure the above-mentioned articles, more especially ammunition, for there are many who have good arms but not ammunition; and unless we can be some way equipped, we must (should the enemy be permitted to come down upon us) quit our possessions and resort to you, which would be very disagreeable to your humble servant,

BENJ. BELLOWS, Jun., Col. 16th Regt.
Militia, Colony of New-Hampshire.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-Hampshire.

CAPTAIN HARDING TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Boston, July 1, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I now enclose for your Honour's perusal an inventory of as much of the cargoes of the ships Lord Howe, George, and brigantine Annabella, as have come to hand. Neither of the vessels are yet unloaded; there are some coals and a few other articles in each. The prize brigantine, Annabella, remains on the rocks. We hope we shall be able to get her off in the spring-tides.

I expected to have received your Honour's orders about returning to New-London, as I believe the prospect of taking any more prizes is over. There have been ten sail men-of-war and transports cruising in the bay for some days. We suppose them to be the last of the Highland fleet. They disappeared on Friday noon, having, we suppose, received intelligence of the evacuation of Boston.

Having nothing new for your Honour's detention, I remain your most obedient, humble servant,

SETH HARDING.

To the Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Lebanon, in Connecticut.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM GENERAL LEE TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS, DATED CHARLESTOWN, JULY 2, 1776.

I should have done myself the honour sooner of informing the Congress of the attack made by the enemy's squadron on Sullivan's Island, and their repulse, but conjectured that, by waiting a day or two, I might probably be furnished with the means of sending a more minute, full, and satisfactory account.

My conjecture was right; for yesterday five seamen made their escape, one of whom is a more intelligent fellow than is commonly found amongst men of his level. Enclosed is a copy of their Narrative. I may venture to congratulate Congress on the event. Not only the advantage must be considerable, but the affair reflects no small credit to the American arms.

On Friday, about eleven o'clock, the Commodore, (Sir Peter Parker,) with his whole squadron, consisting of two line-of-battle ships and six frigates, the rates of which are marked in the enclosed Narrative, anchored at less than half musket-shot from the fort, and commenced one of the most furious and incessant fires I ever saw or heard. It was manifestly their plan to land, at the same time, their whole Regulars at the east end of the Island, and of course invest the fort by land and sea. As the garrison was composed entirely of raw troops, both officers and men, I thought it my duty to cross over to the Island to encourage the garrison by my presence. But I might have saved myself that trouble, for I found, on my arrival, they had no occasion for any sort of encouragement. I found them determined and cool to the last degree; their behaviour would, in fact, have done honour to the oldest troops.

I therefore beg leave to recommend, in the strongest terms, to the Congress the commanding officer, Colonel Moultrie, and his whole garrison, as brave soldiers and excellent citizens. Nor must I omit, at the same time, mentioning Colonel Thompson, who, with the South-Carolina Rangers and a detachment of the North-Carolina Regulars, repulsed the enemy in two several attempts to make a lodgment at the extremity of the Island.

Our loss, considering the heat and duration of the fire, was inconsiderable. We had only ten men killed on the spot, and twenty-two wounded, seven of whom lost their limbs. But with their limbs they did not lose their spirits; for they enthusiastically encouraged their comrades never to abandon the standard of liberty and their country. This, I do assure you, is not in the style of gasconading romance usual after every successful action, but literally a fact. I with great pleasure mention the circumstance, as it augurs well to the cause of freedom. At eleven the fire ceased, having continued just twelve hours without the least intermission.

Narrative, by THOMAS BENNET, of Colonel DANIELSON'S MASSACHUSETTS Regiment; DANIEL HAWKINS, of BOSTON; ROBERT SCOTT and EDMUND ALLSTON, of NEW-HAMPSHIRE; and JAMES SCOTT, of VIRGINIA, deserters from the Fleet which attacked and were beaten off by the Fort at SULLIVAN'S ISLAND, Friday, 28th June, 1776.

They are all Americans, and had been taken by the enemy at sea—Bennet, Hawkins, and Scott, in the sloop Sally; Scott and Allston in the brigantine Friendship.

The Bristol, of fifty guns, commanded by Sir Peter Parker, greatly damaged in her hull, large knees and timbers shot through and smashed. If the water had not been very smooth, it would have been impossible to have kept her from sinking. All the carpenters in the fleet had been called to her assistance; mizzenmast shot away, mainmast badly wounded by three several shot, foremast by two, rigging, sails and yards much injured.

The Captain of the Commodore lost his left arm above the elbow. He was sent yesterday (30th of June) to England in a brigantine. The Commodore's breeches torn off, his backside laid bare, his thigh and knee wounded, and he walks only when supported by two men. Forty-four men killed and thirty wounded; among whom were many Midshipmen and petty officers. Twenty of the wounded dead since the action. Talked in the fleet that the two large ships would go over the bar again, and proceed to English harbour in Antigua, to be repaired.

The Bristol, when lightened as much as possible, draws eighteen feet water. Experiment, of fifty guns on two decks, all twelve-pounders, a slighter built vessel than the Bristol, exceedingly damaged in her hull; several ports beat into one, her mizzenmast hurt, but uncertain of particulars. Killed fifty-seven, of whom the Captain was one; wounded thirty, several since dead. Draws, when lightest, seventeen feet water. The general opinion is, that neither of these large ships will go safely over the bar again.

Solebay, twenty-eight guns, two men killed, four wounded; Active, twenty-eight guns, Lieutenant killed, four wounded; Acteon twenty-eight, Sphinx twenty, Syren twenty-eight; all got aground, the first in coming up, the two latter in running away. The Sphinx cut away her bowsprit; the Syren got off. Acteon, by the assistance of a friendly English seaman, remained fast, burnt and blown up by her own people. While she was on fire, Mr. Millegan, one of our marine officers, and a party of men, boarded her, brought off her colours, the ship's bell, and as many sails and stores as their boats could carry. The Thunder, bomb, lay at a considerable distance, throwing shells at the fort, and by overcharging had shattered the beds and damaged the ship so much as to render it necessary for her to go into dock before she can act again.

The Friendship, a hired armed vessel of twenty-six guns, of various sizes, covered the bomb, as did the Syren, who also fired very briskly at the fort recochet shots. The whole fleet badly manned and sickly, particularly the Syren's crew, at two-thirds short allowance of provisions and water. They have had no fresh meat since their arrival (the 1st of June.)

Lord William Campbell had been very anxious for the attack, and proposed to take all the forts with only the Syren and Solebay. Lord Cornwallis has the chief command of the forces by land. He and General Clinton are both ashore with the troops at Long-Island. His Lordship some time ago had urged Sir Peter Parker to attack on the sea-side, otherwise he would march up, attack and take the fort, and complain of Sir Peter's tardiness. The Commodore replied, Lord Cornwallis might march his troops when he pleased, but the fleet required fair wind; the first that happened, he would proceed against the fort. The General at that time believed we had no troops out of garrison; but he was soon better informed, being since repulsed and driven back, with loss. He remained quiet, and left the Commodore to enjoy the glory of being defeated alone. This must have been a mistake, from Lord Cornwallis's having the command when the fleet left Cork, in Ireland. The negro pilot, (Sampson), who is exceedingly caressed, was on board the Commodore, and put down with the Doctor, out of harm's way. When the fleet left Cork, the number of troops was about four thousand; but eleven transports had been separated from the rest, and not since heard of. The former deserters from on board the Ranger sloop, who had seen all the land forces, said the amount was from thirteen hundred to two thousand, at most. Between nine and ten o'clock the night of the action the Commodore and other ships began to steal away—they made no piping, nor waited to heave up their anchors, but slipped their cables. The Commodore has only one anchor and cable left.

About two o'clock on Friday, when the fort was waiting for supply of powder, some of the men-of-war's men mistaking the unavoidable silence for surrender, cried out, The Yankees had done fighting. Others replied, By God we are glad of it; for we never had such a drubbing in our lives; we had been told the Yankees would not stand two fires, but we never saw better fellows. All the common men spoke loudly in praise of the garrison—Brave, fine fellows. The seamen, in general, are desirous of getting on shore to join the Americans.

One McNeil, a deserter from Colonel Gadsden's Regiment, had informed the Commodore that before he left Fort Johnston, he had spiked up all the cannon, and that the fort might easily be taken. A report in the fleet that no quarters would be given to the Americans, and that five thousand pounds sterling had been offered for General Lee.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CHARLESTOWN, SOUTH-CAROLINA, DATED JULY 2, 1776.

On Tuesday the 4th ultimo, the British fleet, consisting of ten ships of war and thirty transports, appeared off our bar. So formidable an armament would have alarmed us, had we not been conscious of the justice of our cause; but trusting that the Almighty would support and protect us in this glorious struggle for liberty, the most righteous of all contests, we were resolved to make the most vigorous opposition in our power. We had information two days before that they were in at Bull's, so that their arrival was not altogether unexpected. As we were ignorant of the mode of attack intended by the enemy, General Armstrong ordered some breastworks to be thrown up at such places as he thought they would most probably attempt to land, little thinking they would bend their whole force against Sullivan's Island fort. So great a number of vessels, as you may suppose, could not get over the bar immediately, nor did they until Sunday, the 9th, on which day Generals Howe and Lee arrived here. Lee immediately saw the defenceless state our town was in, and the impossibility of keeping it, if attacked in such a situation. He accordingly the next day drew up all the men in town, in number about one thousand, told them the absolute necessity of some breastworks being thrown up round the town, pulling down the houses on the wharves, &c. The people expressed the greatest alacrity in doing it immediately—old and young, high and low, rich and poor, white and black, one with another, set about the work, and for several days were constantly employed in making such preparations for a defence of the town as were thought necessary, the enemy all the while lying within twelve miles of the town. On the 10th, their last and largest vessel, the Bristol, of fifty guns, came over the bar, having previously taken out all her guns and stores, and that night a very smart gale of wind came on, which lasted two days, and drove off the vessel that had her stores on board, who never could beat up again till Tuesday, the 25th, when she and the Experiment (another fifty-gun ship) appeared off the bar, and both came over the next day. During the interval, the enemy landed their troops, in number about two thousand effective men, on Long-Island, which is at the back of Sullivan's, with intent, we supposed, either to attack us in front and rear at the same time, (which certainly was a very good plan, if they could have effected it,) or to land on the main, get possession of Haddrell's Point, and by that means cut off the retreat from Sullivan's, if they silenced the fort; and on Friday last, the 28th, they convinced us that the former was their scheme, for at three-quarters of an hour after ten o'clock in the morning, their Bomb-ketch began to play on the fort at Sullivan's, to divert their attention while the ships advanced to make their attack, and at half-past eleven o'clock the following ships were all engaged: the Bristol, of fifty guns, Experiment fifty, Solebay twenty-eight, Syren twenty-eight, Active thirty-six, Acteon thirty-six, Sphinx twenty. The Sphinx had her bowsprit shot away the first shot that was fired at her, which sent her out of the line; the Acteon was driven ashore by another shot, as it is said; but that is of no consequence, for she could not be got off, and the next morning the enemy set her on fire, leaving almost all her stores on board, some of which, however, we have got, and shall get most of her guns; the ketch was totally disabled, after discharging about twenty shells, by one bursting, which split the bed of the mortar. The five first vessels continued a very heavy cannonade, one of the most fierce ever known, without ten minutes' intermission in the whole, in which, by the most moderate calculation, they could not have fired less than twelve thousand times, till nine o'clock at night, when they ceased, lying the whole time within four hundred yards of the fort; and about three o'clock next morning they very quietly retired to their former station. The Bristol has lost her mizzenmast, and her mainmast is also much disabled.

Monday morning, five sailors, who deserted from the Bristol, gave us the following intelligence, viz: The Commodore was wounded in the breech; Captain of the Bristol, his arm shot off, forty-four men killed, and thirty wounded; Experiment, Captain and fifty-seven men killed, and thirty wounded; Solebay, three or four killed; they can say nothing as to the killed and wounded of the other vessels. The Captain of the Bristol sailed for England on Sunday, to carry them the good news, I suppose. Our whole loss at the fort was ten killed, three of whom by their own imprudence, and twenty-two wounded. The fort is as good as ever it was. The conduct of Colonel Moultrie, his officers and men, merits the highest applause, and reflects the greatest honour on them. Lee was present almost the whole fire, and declares both officers and men behaved with the greatest coolness and intrepidity; they behaved as well as ever men did—as well as men could do. Unfortunately for us nearly all the ammunition at the fort was expended by three o'clock, and it was some time before they could even get a small supply; if we had had double the quantity there, in all human probability neither of those fifty-gun ships would have got off; as it is, the Experiment has three or four ports knocked into one, and is otherwise terribly shattered. It is astonishing, and almost incredible to think, that a palmetto log fort, with twelve guns, (those were all they could bring to bear on the vessels,) and three hundred men, should make such havock with so formidable a fleet of British vessels. At the time of attacking the fort, their troops endeavoured to land on the Island, and were twice repulsed by Thompson's Rangers, about three hundred men. Be assured the foregoing account is true in every particular. There are many other circumstances of the spirit and bravery of individuals, which would appear still more incredible for young soldiers, that I have not time to relate. I expect in about ten days we shall have another brush with them, and doubt not but through the Divine favour we shall be equally successful.*

* WHITEHALL, (LONDON,) August 24, 1776.—Captain Hope arrived on Wednesday evening last from South-Carolina, with despatches from Commodore Sir Peter Parker and Lieutenant-General Clinton.—[Gazette.]

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM SIR PETER PARKER TO MR. STEPHENS, SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY, DATED WITHIN CHARLESTOWN BAR, JULY 9, 1776.

It having been judged advisable to make an attempt upon Charlestown in South-Carolina, the fleet sailed from Cape-Fear on the 1st of June, and on the 4th anchored off Charlestown Bar. The 5th, sounded the bar, and laid down buoys preparatory to the intended entrance of the harbour. The 7th, all the frigates and most of the transports got over the bar into Five-Fathom Hole. The 9th, General Clinton landed on Long-Island with about four or five hundred men. The 10th, the Bristol got over the bar with some difficulty. The 15th gave the Captains of the squadron my arrangement for the attack of the batteries on Sullivan's Island, and the next day acquainted General Clinton that the ships were ready. The General fixed on the 23d for our joint attack, but the wind proving unfavourable prevented its taking effect. The 25th, the Experiment arrived, and the next day came over the bar, when a new arrangement was made for the attack; the 28th, at half an hour after nine in the morning, informed General Clinton, by signal, that I should go on to the attack. At half an hour after ten made the signal to weigh, and about a quarter after eleven the Bristol, Experiment, Active, and Solebay, brought up against the fort. The Thunder, bomb, covered by the Friendship armed vessel, brought the angle of the bastion to bear northwest by north, and Colonel James (who has ever since our arrival been anxious to give the best assistance) threw several shells a little before and during the engagement, in very good direction. The Sphinx, Acteon, and Syren, were to have been to the westward, to prevent fire-ships or other armed vessels from annoying the ships engaged to flank the works, and, if the Rebels should be driven from them, to cut off their retreat if possible. This last service was not performed, owing to the ignorance of the pilot, who ran the three frigates aground. The Sphinx and Syren got off in a few hours, but the Acteon remained fast till the next morning, when the Captain and officers thought proper to scuttle and set her on fire. I ordered a Court-Martial on the Captain, officers, and company, and they have been honourably acquitted. Captain Hope made his armed ship as useful as he could on this occasion, and he merits everything that can be said in his favour. During the time of our being abreast of the fort, which was near ten hours, a brisk firing was kept up by the ships, with intervals, and we had the satisfaction, after being engaged two hours, to oblige the Rebels to slacken their fire very much. We drove large parties several times out of the fort, which were replaced by others from the main. About half an hour after three, a considerable reinforcement from Mount-Pleasant hung a man on a tree at the back of the fort; and we imagine that the same party ran away about an hour after, for the fort was then totally silenced, and evacuated for near one hour and a half; but the Rebels, finding that our Army could not take possession, about six o'clock a considerable body of people re-entered the fort, and renewed the firing from two or three guns, the rest being, I suppose, dismounted. About nine o'clock, it being very dark, part of our ammunition expended, the people fatigued, the tide of ebb almost done, no prospect from the eastward, and no possibility of our being of any further service, I ordered the ships to withdraw to their former moorings. Their Lordships will see plainly by this account, that if the troops could have co-operated on this attack, his Majesty would have been in possession of Sullivan's Island. But I must beg leave to be fully understood, lest it should be imagined that I mean to throw the most distant reflection on our Army. I should not discharge my conscience were I not to acknowledge that such was my opinion of his Majesty's troops, from the General down to the private soldier, that after I had been engaged some hours, and perceived the troops had not got a footing on the north end of Sullivan's Island, I was perfectly satisfied that the landing was impracticable, and that the attempt would have been the destruction of many brave men, without the least probability of success; and this, I am certain, will appear to be the case when General Clinton represents his situation. The Bristol had forty men killed and seventy-one wounded; the Experiment twenty-three killed and fifty-six wounded, and both of them suffered much in their hulls, masts, and rigging; the Active had Lieutenant Pike killed, and six men wounded, and the Solebay had

THOMAS ENNALLS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
Cambridge, July 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: On Saturday, the 29th ultimo, I received information, by express, from Colonel William Travers, (of the corps of the lower part of this County,) that there were five tenders then in Hooper's Straits; that they had landed on Hopkins's Island, and had taken upwards of sixty head of cattle from that place, together with two young men, and everything else that was valuable on the Island; that they had committed considerable depredations on the Somerset shore, and thrown that County into the utmost confusion; and he expected they would commit further ravages in this County. In consequence of this information, I ordered Colonel John Ennalls and Major Robert Harrison to go down to that neighbourhood (it being forty miles from this place) to get further information respecting these circumstances, and to take such steps as should appear to them to be necessary on the occasion. They immediately went down; and I am informed by them that on their arrival there they found affairs circumstanced as above related. The tenders had gone down the bay with their plunder a few hours before they arrived; but the Militia of that corps were still upon duty; many of them being much fatigued and anxious to go home, they were all discharged, except about forty who were left to keep a look-out.

In the evening of that day there appeared in Nanticoke Sound one large ship, and seven other vessels supposed to eight men wounded. Not one man who was quartered at the beginning of the action on the Bristol's quarter deck, escaped being killed or wounded. Captain Morris lost his right arm, and received other wounds, and is since dead; the master is wounded in his right arm, but will recover the use of it. I received several contusions at different times, but as none of them are on any part where the least danger can be apprehended, they are not worth mentioning. Lieutenants Caulfield, Molloy, and Nugent, were the Lieutenants of the Bristol in the action; they behaved so remarkably well that it is impossible to say to whom the preference is due, and so indeed I may say of all the petty officers, ship's company, and volunteers. At the head of the latter I must place Lord William Campbell, who was so condescending as to accept of the direction of some guns on the lower gun-deck. His Lordship received a contusion on his left side; but I have the happiness to inform their Lordships that it has not proved of much consequence. Captain Scott, of the Experiment, lost his left arm, and is otherwise so much wounded that I fear he will not recover.

I cannot conclude this letter without remarking, that when it was known that we had many men too weak to come to quarters, almost all the seamen belonging to the transports offered their service with a truly British spirit, and a just sense of the cause we are engaged in. I accepted of upwards of fifty to supply the place of our sick. The masters of many of the transports attended with their boats, but particular thanks are due to Mr. Chambers, the master of the Mercury.

All the regiments will be embarked in a few days. The first brigade, consisting of four regiments, will sail in a day or two under convey for New-York; and the Bristol and Experiment will, I hope, soon follow with the remainder.

Sir Peter Parker's squadron consisted of the following Ships and Vessels: the Bristol, fifty guns, Sir Peter Parker Commodore, John Morris Captain; Experiment, fifty, Alexander Scott; Active, twenty-eight, William Williams; Solebay, twenty-eight, Thomas Symonds; Acteon, twenty-eight, Christopher Atkins; Syren, twenty-eight, Tobias Furneaux; Sphinx, twenty, Anthony Hunt; Friendship, armed vessel, twenty-two, Charles Hope; Ranger, sloop, eight, Roger Wills; Thunder, (bomb,) eight, James Reid; Saint Lawrence, schooner, . . . . . Lieutenant John Graves.

WHITEHALL, August 24.—It appears by Lieutenant-General Clinton's letters to Lord George Germaine, dated July 8, 1776, from the Camp on Long-Island, Province of South-Carolina, that Sir Peter Parker and the General having received intelligence that the fortress erected by the Rebels on Sullivan's Island (the key to Charlestown harbour) was in an imperfect and unfinished state, resolved to attempt the reduction thereof by a coupe de main, and that, in order that the Army might co-operate with the fleet, the General landed his troops on Long-Island, which had been represented to him as communicating with Sullivan's Island by a ford passable at low-water; but that he, to his very great mortification, found the channel, which was reported to be eighteen inches deep at low water, to be seven feet deep, which circumstance rendered it impossible for the Army to give that assistance to the fleet in the attack made upon the fortress that the General intended, and which he, and the troops under his command, ardently wished to do.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A SURGEON IN SIR PETER PARKER'S FLEET, DATED JULY 9, 1776.

We left Cape-Fear on the 27th of May, and anchored the same evening off the bar. The camp was struck at the same time, and the troops embarked the same evening on board the several transports. All our motions were so languid and so innervate, that it was the 9th of June before the Bristol and Pigot passed the bar of Charlestown; the Bristol in passing struck, which alarmed us all exceedingly; but, as it wanted two hours of high water, she soon floated again. The Prince of Piedmont, a victualling ship, was totally lost on the north breakers of the bar. General Clinton and Lord Cornwallis were both on board when she struck; but as the weather was very fine, they were not in the least danger. By our delays we gave the people every opportunity they could be tenders. This gave the inhabitants great uneasiness and anxiety. They, therefore, ordered such part of the Militia as could readily be collected to assemble to prevent the enemy from committing further damage. I am further informed by them that they found many of the people in that part of the County very lukewarm in their opposition, difficult to be got together, and, when collected, in such bad discipline they are not (in their opinion) to be relied on, they paying but little regard to the instructions of their officers. Things being in this situation, I have thought it advisable to order part of the Militia under my command to march down to their assistance; and I flatter myself we shall be able to prevent their landing in that quarter; but should the enemy continue there a few days, and keep the Militia on duty, numbers of the inhabitants must unavoidably lose a considerable part of their crops, their wheat being now ready to cut.

Captain Woolford is at this time with his company on the borders of Nanticoke, near the mouth of that river, to guard that neighbourhood, where his assistance is much wanted.

I must further beg leave to inform you that our Militia are badly fitted with arms. I am clearly of opinion that not one half of them have effective guns; neither have we sufficient quantity of powder and lead, (particularly the latter,) should we have occasion to make use of those articles.

I have this moment received an express from Hooper's have wished for, to extend their lines, &c.: they were not idle—every hour gave us astonishing proofs of their industry. As we anchored at one league distance from Sullivan's Island, we could see all that was going on with the help of our glasses. The fort on this Island is exceedingly strong, (or rather the battery;) it is built of palm trees and earth, and on it are mounted eighteen of the lower deck guns of the Foudroyant: I never could distinguish more than seventeen; others imagined they could see nineteen—however, that is immaterial.

The signal for attacking was made by Sir Peter Parker on the 27th of June; but the wind coming suddenly to the northward, the ships were obliged again to anchor. The troops have been encamped on Long-Island since the 15th, and it was intended that General Clinton should pass the neck that divides Long-Island from Sullivan's Island, and attack by land while Sir Peter attacked by sea. General Lee had made such a disposition of masked batteries, troops, &c., that it is the opinion of all the officers of the Army whom I have heard mention this circumstance, that if our troops had attacked, they must have been cut off; but this assertion does not satisfy the Navy, for they certainly expected great assistance from the Army. Excuse this necessary digression. On the morning of the 28th, the wind proved favourable; it was a clear fine day, but very sultry; the Thunder, bomb, began the attack at half past eleven, by throwing shells while the ships were advancing. The ships that advanced to attack the battery were the Bristol and Experiment, two fifty-gun ships; the Solebay, Active, Acteon, and Syren, of twenty-eight guns; the Sphinx, of twenty, and the Friendship, an armed ship of twenty-eight guns. With this force what might not have been expected? Unfortunately the bomb was placed at such a distance that she was not of the least service. This Colonel James, the principal engineer, immediately perceived; to remedy which inconvenience, an additional quantity of powder was added to each mortar: the consequences were, the breaking down the beds, and totally disabling her for the rest of the day. The Bristol and Experiment have suffered most incredibly: the former very early had the spring of her cable shot away—of course she lay end on to the battery, and was raked fore and aft; she lost upwards of one hundred men killed and wounded. Captain Morris, who commanded her, lost his arm; the worthy man, however, died a week after on board the Pigot. Perhaps an instance of such slaughter cannot be produced; twice the quarter-deck was cleared of every person except Sir Peter, and he was slightly wounded; she had nine thirty-two pound shot in her mainmast, which is so much damaged as to be obliged to be shortened; the mizzen had seven thirty-two-pound shot, and was obliged, being much shattered, to be entirely cut away. It is impossible to pretend to describe what our shipping have suffered. Captain Scott, of the Experiment, lost his right arm, and the ship suffered exceedingly; she had much the same number killed and wounded as the Bristol. Our situation was rendered very disagreeable by the Acteon, Syren, and Sphinx, running foul of each other, and getting on shore on the middle ground. The Sphinx disengaged herself by cutting away her bowsprit; and, as it was not yet flood-tide, the Sphinx and Syren fortunately warped off. The Acteon was burnt next morning by Captain Atkins, to prevent her falling into the hands of the Provincials, as fine a new frigate as I ever saw. Our ships, after laying nine hours before the battery, were obliged to retire with great loss. The Provincials reserved their fire until the shipping were advanced within point blank shot; their artillery was surprisingly well served, it is said, under the command of a Mr. Masson and DeBrahm; it was slow, but decisive indeed; they were very cool, and took great care not to fire except their guns were exceedingly well directed. But there was a time when the battery appeared to be silenced for more than an hour; the Navy say, had the troops been ready to land at this time, they could have taken possession. How that is I will not pretend to say. I will rather suppose it; but the fire became exceedingly severe when it was renewed again, and did amazing execution after the battery had been supposed to have been silenced. This will not be believed when it is first reported in England. I can scarcely believe what I myself saw on that day—a day to me one of the most distressing of my life. The Navy, on this occasion, have behaved with their usual coolness and intrepidity; one would have imagined that no battery could have resisted their incessant fire.

Straits, by which I am informed that the ship of war is now in the mouth of Nanticoke, two of the tenders in Hungar River, and one in Fishing Bay, close to the shore; that the people are in great confusion, and much harassed by them. I have not the least doubt but they are in the like or a worse situation in Somerset County. I think it my duty to give you this information as early as possible, and doubt not you will give such assistance as the emergency of our affairs require.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,

THOMAS ENNALLS.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety.

BENNETT BRACCO TO GABRIEL DUVALL.

Port-Tobacco, July 2, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have sent the bearer, John Barnett, express to Annapolis, to request that you will make application to the Council for a sum of money to defray the expenses of providing food and other necessities that are requisite for the soldiers under inoculation here. The Doctors tell me that it will not be proper for the soldiers to eat the rations provided for them by the Commissary, for three weeks at least, in which time their expenses will amount to near one hundred and fifty pounds, or thereabouts; be that as it may, a true and just account shall be rendered of the expenditure of the money in case the Council think proper to advance it; pray do this as quickly as possible. I have expended almost all my own cash; and when that is gone, we may whistle for provision until we can get a fresh supply. The people here follow a very good rule, not to trust us farther than they can see us. Please apply also for our subsistence from the 15th of March last, and let me know whether it will be granted, agreeable to account rendered by Capain Beall some time ago; if it should, you will send it by the bearer, as I promise you I want it much.

I would have written to the Council, but did not know whether it would be agreeable to them to receive it from among the small-pox. Be kind enough to despatch Wirt down immediately; let no excuse stop him. I hear that he wants to stay; you may tell him he is to return again. Please write me, and enclose a list of the officers of the flying camp. I have nothing new to write; but am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

BENNETT BRACCO.

To Mr. Ridgely, or Mr. G. Duvall, at Annapolis.

P. S. We are all getting through the small-pox as well as can be expected.

JOHN MARTIN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

GENTLEMEN: This will inform you of my safe arrival with the brig Friendship into Chingoteague on Tuesday, July 2d, which Mr. Richards has taken on your account. I likewise enclose you a manifest of the cargo I have on board,* best part of which I have got on shore, under the protection of Colonel F. Lemmon. Be so kind as to let me know as soon as possible what measures must be taken with the brig and crew, they being all in debt to the vessel, some three pounds, some more and some less. I have not time to write you a full detail, for there are three tenders cruising off this harbour, which puts me in confusion till I get my cargo landed. If the brig should fit out again, should I be appointed to go in her, I hope you will grant me leave to go as far as Baltimore, to see my little family and settle with my last owner.

I have on board eight officers and twenty-three hands; three four-pounders, six three-pounders, six swivels, and one cohorn. Be so kind as to let me have what quantity of powder and lead I shall keep on board for the vessel's use, for the tenders are dangerous.

If the brig is fitted out again, she must have a new windlass, and new fore and maintops, and a new mainmast. The steerage is cut off; and if I carry this number of hands she will not carry as much by two hundred barrels as last voyage.

Gentlemen, your humble servant,

JOHN MARTIN.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

N. B. I lost the opportunity by Mr. Lux, not knowing he would go that day, and confusion with the tenders. I was fired at near the harbour by one the morning I got in.

ELBRIDGE GERRY TO JAMES WARREN.

Philadelphia, July 2, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have only time to inform you that yesterday was agitated in Congress the great question of Independency; and as the facts are as well known at the Coffee-House of the city as in Congress, I may go on to inform you that, in a Committee of the whole House, it was carried by nine Colonies.

I remain, sir, with due regard, your assured friend and humble servant,

ELBRIDGE GERRY.

To Colonel Warren.

HENRY WISNER TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, July 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since writing the enclosed, the question of Independence has been put in Congress, and carried in the affirmative, without one dissenting vote. I therefore beg your answer as quick as possible to the enclosed.

I am, with due regard, your humble servant,

HENRY WISNER.

To the Provincial Congress, at New-York.

Philadelphia, July 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The important question of Independency was agitated yesterday in a Committee of the whole Congress, and this day will be finally determined in the House. We know the line of our conduct on this occasion: we have your instructions, and will faithfully pursue them. New doubts and difficulties, however, will arise should Independency be declared, and that it will not, we have not the least reason to expect; nor do we believe that (if any) more than one Colony (and the Delegates of that divided) will vote against the question, every Colony (ours only excepted) having withdrawn their former instructions, and either positively instructed their Delegates to vote for Independency, or concur in such vote, if they shall judge it expedient. What part are we to act after this event takes place? Every act we join in may then be considered as in some measure acceding to the vote of Independency, and binding our Colony on that score. Indeed many matters in this new situation may turn up in which the propriety of our voting may be very doubtful; though we conceive (considering the critical situation of publick affairs, and as they respect our Colony in particular, invaded or soon likely to be by powerful armies in different quarters) it is our duty, nay, it is absolutely necessary, that we should not only concur with, but exert ourselves in forwarding our military operations. The immediate safety of the Colony calls for and will warrant us in this. Our situation is singular and delicate, no other Colony being similarly circumstanced, with whom we can consult. We wish, therefore, for your earliest advice and instructions, whether we are to consider our Colony bound by the vote of the majority in favour of Independency, and vote at large on such questions as may arise in consequence thereof; or only concur in such measures as may be absolutely necessary for the common safety and defence of America, exclusive of the idea of Independency. We fear it will be difficult to draw the line; but, once possessed of your instructions, we will do our best endeavours to follow them.

We are, with the greatest respect, your most obedient servants,

GEORGE CLINTON,
HENRY WISNER,
WILLIAM FLOYD,
FRANCIS LEWIS,
JOHN ALSOP.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of New-York.

ADDRESS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

In Committee of Safety, Philadelphia, July 2, 1776.

To the Inhabitants of PENNSYLVANIA.

This Committee, too much occupied in the various and multiplied business of the department in which they are placed, have seldom troubled the publick with addresses; and, indeed, little occasion has been afforded for them, especially in justification of their own conduct, while general acquiescence in their authority prevailed, and entire confidence in their integrity and abilities remained; but they are not so blinded by self-love, or so lost in their own importance, as not to perceive lately that both confidence and authority are considerably shaken and impaired. Not resting on a foundation altogether popular, their existence has been beheld with jealousy, and, by an opposition formed on mistaken or unworthy principles, their conduct, in almost every branch of the publick service, has been traduced and vilified. In the honest discharge of duty they have been obliged to stand the unmerited reproaches of many individuals, as well as of some publick bodies. After accumulated mortifications, why they still continue to keep their seats ought to be accounted for, lest they be justly supposed insensible to the feelings of men of honour. But it is necessary, first, to state the transaction which has principally given rise to this address.

About the beginning of last month the Committee appointed Captain Samuel Davidson Commodore and Commander-in-Chief of the Naval Armament, equipped for the defence of the River Delaware. The motives to this appointment, at a board of thirteen members, when there was not one dissenting voice, were such as these:

1st. That during his continuance in the service as Captain of one of the armed boats, he was conspicuous among the officers for care and attention to his duty, and while he maintained a strict discipline, he had the address to conciliate the regard and affections of his crew, and always kept his boat well manned.

2d. That having, on the return of Captain Davidson from a short voyage, in which he was spared from the service of this Province to go into that of the Congress, and while perfect harmony yet existed between this Board and all its officers, and on a deliberate estimate of the comparative merits of each, given him, though a younger officer, the more important command of the floating battery, in which the same superior good conduct was observable, the Committee acted but consistently with themselves in elevating him to a still higher rank.

3d. A clamour having been formerly excited against a superior officer, because, as was said, he had not been of the fleet, and some of the officers having since declared they would yield ready obedience to any Commodore if taken from their own establishment, even though he should be the youngest among them, the present appointment, as it prevented the necessity of going out of the fleet, was considered rather as conciliatory than as administering cause of uneasiness and discontent. They were well aware of the obvious military maxim to which they had run counter, of advancing men according to seniority; but this maxim, though perhaps proper in old establishments where a long course of service in the lower classes are supposed to confer the necessary qualifications for the higher, may and ought occasionally to be dispensed with in the formation of new ones. Where there can be but a slender pretext for qualifications from this cause, merit is to be sought out and preferred wherever to be found, though ambition should be disappointed or delicacy offended. In many instances have the Congress departed from this supposed fundamental maxim, and their country has been benefited by it. The resistance of the officers of the armed boats to this appointment, and their indecent remonstrance, are well known; they were countenanced and supported by men whose decisions on publick questions influence, in some degree, the publick opinion. Mutiny was justified and abetted, and disobedience triumphed over authority. The Committee thought it their duty to adhere to the appointment they had made, the Conference of Committees interposed by the following Resolution, agreed to immediately before their dissolution:

"That it be recommended to the Committee of Safety of this Province to confine the command of Commodore Davidson to the ship of war and floating battery belonging to the Province, and to issue no orders to the Captains or other officers of the row-galleys, fire-ships or fire-rafts, through the said Commodore, until the Convention meets; and that it be recommended to the Captains and other officers of the row-galleys, &c., to pay all due obedience to the Committee of Safety until that time, and until a new appointment shall take place."

The Board, astonished and surprised, would have remonstrated against it, not without hope that, on a fair and impartial state of the question, those who, from the nature of their appointment, could have nothing in view but the publick happiness, and who could not have been insensible of the benefit of good order and discipline, would have recalled this hasty determination, which may be so fatal to both, but the dissolution would not allow the necessary time.

The Committee doubt not the purity of the intention which produced this Resolution, and by which their power in so important a branch is so greatly mutilated, if not altogether destroyed. They well know the regard due to the representatives of the people, and are disposed to submit to the recommendation, though wounded and dishonoured by it. But they would have it understood that the continuance of many of their Board, under such circumstances, is of necessity, as no body of men can at present be appointed to supply their places, and as they perhaps may, fettered in their authority as they are, still render some small services to their country. They, however, think it incumbent on them to declare that many bad consequences may probably proceed from a divided command. Military authority is not of a nature to be participated, and when attempted, the greatest mischiefs commonly flow from it. Should this unfortunately prove so in our case, the Committee are not responsible; they have performed their duty, and look forward with pleasure to the short period of a few weeks which is to deprive them of the seats they have held, of late so much to the dissatisfaction of some men and uneasiness to themselves.

Extract from the Minutes:

WILLIAM GOVETT, Secretary.

GENERAL MIFFLIN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp at Mount Washington, July 2, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I find the works well advanced, but not in a state of defence. The teams allotted to them have been taken off—some of them sent to town for materials and there detained, others necessarily employed in hauling up the powder (which is now stored in the best place I could find) and provisions from the landing.

From the Colonel's reports, the men's arms are in a most alarming situation; Colonel Magaw has not more than one hundred and twenty-five in his regiment fit for service; Colonel Shea about three hundred, including all the carbines which they received lately by your order. If the enemy pay us a visit, we will do our best, and endeavour to make up in zeal what we want in appointment. Should sufficient reinforcements arrive at New-York, may we not expect a share? You are best acquainted with the importance of this post, my dear General, and I flatter myself will put it into our power to do something more than mere defensive work within our lines.

I think the enemy may divert our attention to the heights above King's Bridge; if so, is it expected that we can detach a party to oppose them? I shall be happy in your orders how to act if a landing should be attempted above or below us, at the same time that we may have reason to believe our present post to be one of their objects. Were the works in good order and the men well equipped, I could easily determine those points, but circumstanced as we are, I do not see how we can permit even a small party to leave the environs of this camp without exposing it to immediate danger, and yet I might be tempted to do it.

I propose to exercise with the artillery, if the works will admit of it, two companies who are not armed; our principal business within the works must be with artillery.

We have many arms which might soon be put in order if Colonel Moylan will favour us with four armourers and some tools; Captain Bacon promised it several days past, but still neglects us.

I am, my dear General, your obedient, humble servant,
THOMAS MIFFLIN, B. G.

R. CAREY, A. D. C., TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

Head-Quarters, New-York, July 2, 1776.

SIR: I am ordered by his Excellency General Washington to return you for answer to your favour of this day's date, that it is not in his power to supply you with any arms, as there is a great want of them in the camp here, which he supposes you are not insensible of. There is a number of rifle-guns which are retained for the recruits, and which the General will lend you for the present, if there are any men in Colonel Magaw's or Shea's Regiments, who know how to use them, otherwise he thinks they will be sent to no purpose.

Colonel Moylan has this day despatched some armourers and tools, agreeable to your directions.

You may depend on receiving a reinforcement as soon as any considerable number of Militia arrives. As yet so few have reached this, that none can possibly be spared.

The General has not the least expectation that in your present situation you will be able to do more than defend your own lines, though he is fully persuaded your most vigorous exertions will be manifested in every respect. He also much approves of your intentions to exercise with the artillery those men who are not armed.

I am, with respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

R. CAREY, A. D. C.

To Brigadier-General Thomas Mifflin.

DAVID MATTHEWS TO GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

New Jail, July 2, 1776.

SIR: I wrote a few lines to Mr. Livingston on Saturday last relative to my situation; but his departure for Philadelphia prevented (as I suppose) an answer. I therein requested that some persons whom I named might be sent for before the Committee, who would have entirely cleared up my character against the cruel aspersions that have been cast on it. I think you won't deny me some kind of certificate relative to this horrid plot, in order to take off that resentment which the citizens harbour against me on a supposition of my being concerned. I should not deny this, Mr. Morris, to the greatest enemy I ever had, and I am not conscious of ever having injured any man; notwithstanding which there are numbers who would now willingly take my life. If it was not that a wife and ten small children depend on my hands for their support, it would be of little consequence what became of this earthly tabernacle of mine.

I shall commit this matter to your candour and humanity, and doubt not but that you will take such steps therein as you think in justice ought to be done to clear up my character from such infamous reports as have been propagated against me.

I am, sir, with esteem, your very humble servant,

DAVID MATTHEWS.

To Gouverneur Morris, Esq.

JAMES COGGESHALL TO GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

New Jail, (New-York,) July 2, 1776.

DEAR MORRIS: Residing peaceably upon Long-Island, I was taken prisoner, brought to town on Sunday evening, and confined in Jail. As there neither is nor can be any crime alleged against me, I flatter myself that for merely being a servant to his Majesty it cannot be the intention of the Congress to keep me in this situation. You may be assured that I am in a very bad state of health, and my constitution unable to sustain the dismal and weary hours of a prison. This, added to the precarious situation of every person confined here at present, makes me more than anxious to be free. I make no doubt of your readiness to afford every generous and humane assistance to relieve me.

Wishing you all health and happiness, I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES COGGESHALL.

FREDERICK PHILIPS TO THE COMMITTEE OF NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Philipsborough, July 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I was served on Saturday evening last with a paper signed by you, in which you suggest that you are authorized by the Congress to summon certain persons to appear before you, whose conduct had been represented as inimical to the rights of America, of which number you say I am one. Who it is that has made such a representation, or upon what particular facts it is founded, as you have not stated them, it is impossible for me to imagine; but considering my situation, and the near and intimate ties and connexions which I have in this country, (which can be secured and rendered happy to me only by the real and permanent prosperity of America.) I should have hoped that suspicions of this harsh nature would not be easily harboured. However, as they have been thought of weight sufficient to attract the notice of the Congress, I can only observe that, conscious of the uprightness of my intentions, and the integrity of my conduct, I would most readily comply with your summons, but the situation of my health is such as would render it very unadvisable for me to take a journey to New-York at this time. I have had the misfortune, gentlemen, of being deprived totally of the sight of my left eye, and the other is so much affected and inflamed as to make me very cautious how I expose it, for fear of a total loss of sight. This being my real situation, I must request the favour of you to excuse my attendance to-morrow; but you may rest assured, gentlemen, that I shall punctually attend as soon as I can, consistent with my health; flattering myself in the mean time that, upon further consideration, you will think that my being a friend to the rights and interests of my native country is a fact so strongly implied as to require no evidence on my part to prove it, until something more substantial than mere suspicion or vague surmises are proved to the contrary.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
FREDERICK PHILIPS.

To Leonard Gansevoort, Philip Livingston, Thomas Tredwell, Lewis Graham, Gouverneur Morris, Thomas Randall, Esquires.

THOMAS MOFFAT TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Blooming-Grove, July 2, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have a copy of the evidence of Ephraim Dunning, and the examination of John Samson, relative to the plot contrived against the liberties of the United Colonies, which contain the substance of all the examinations that came before the Committee whilst sitting upon that business, and is the evidence in principal against Thomas Cayne, now confined in New-York. The Committee thought proper to transmit the same to you, in order that the Committee of Congress, or any others who may have the examination of Cayne, might be the better prepared to interrogate him closely, as he mentioned to Dunning several persons of distinction, who, if they were concerned, ought to be confined immediately. Most of those persons were before the Committee, but no evidence appearing against them were discharged, although there was reason to think that Mr. Gale was at least knowing to the affair, as several persons in his employ absconded as soon as the County Committee appeared in Goshen. Great pains have been taken to discover the leaders of the plot in this County, but no evidence has appeared against any one but Ebenexer Seely, who absconded when it first came out, and may possibly endeavour to get on board the man-of-war; a strict watch should be kept to prevent it if possible. Captain Seth Marvin will be able to give a description of him.

Nicholas Dean, who moved from Sugar-Loaf to New-York last spring, is the man that Cayne told Samson was to be their Captain. Cayne ought to be strictly examined relative to him.

The Committee thought proper to retain the following persons in close confinement, viz: James Haff, Julius Smith, Matthew Sweny, John Samson, James Smith.

You will be good enough to give the earliest information of what is further to be done with them.

I am, with the most profound respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant.

By order of the Committee: THOMAS MOFFAT.

To Colonel William Allison, Esq., at the Congress in New-York, or, in his absence, to any other Member belonging to Orange County.

William McCray, Samuel McCray, and John McKinstry, absconded from Mr. Gale's employ.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, July 2, 1776.

DEAR SIR: An hour after the post was gone the express arrived with your favour of the 28th continued to the 29th. I am extremely happy that your Excellency approved of the orders given to General Sullivan.

None of the expresses I sent to the eastward to hasten on the Militia and to try to procure carpenters are yet returned. Mr. Giles, one of the Council of New-Hampshire, who brought me some money, arrived on Sunday; he informs me that their Government did not receive the orders of Congress for sending Militia until the 21st ultimo; that orders were soon after issued to engage them; that he did not expect they would be at Ticonderoga for some time to come. I have assured the Eastern Colonies that every precaution will be taken to prevent their being infected by the small-pox.

On Thursday last and on Sunday two gondolas were finished. I hope we shall complete two every week with what carpenters we now have.

Everything is prepared and now carrying over to Schenectady for taking post at Fort Stanwix. I hope the greatest part of the stores will be embarked there to-morrow and move the next day; if so, I hope Colonel Dayton will be on the 9th or 10th at Fort Stanwix; he has his orders. His forces will consist of five hundred of his own regiment, about one hundred and fifty of Wyndkoop's, seventy-five Militia intended for Canada, and three hundred Militia of the County, except one hundred of these men to be left at the German Flats; so that he will be about nine hundred strong.

We shall want every man Congress has ordered to the northward; but I fear that the shameful tardiness which prevails in almost all the Colonies will greatly prejudice our cause. I was in hopes you would have been more effectually supported by them. What can they be about?

I am this moment going to mount; I will try to be back in such time as to be at the conference at the German Flats.

I am, dear sir, with the greatest esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 16, 1776.]

Crown Point, July 2, 1776.

MUCH RESPECTED SIR: I beg leave to inform Congress of the unhappy state of our Northern Army, which arrived here last evening from Isle-la-Motte. After evacuating St. Johns, I thought best to make a stand at Isle-aux-Noix, till we could have some direction from Congress or the Commander-in-Chief. This I knew would afford an opportunity to our frontier inhabitants to remove, with their effects, to some place of safety, which they have in general done. We have given them every assistance in our power for that purpose. The amazing number of our men taken down by sickness at that unhealthy spot obliged us to remove to Isle-la-Motte, and from thence to this place. To give you a particular account of the miserable state of our troops there, and the numbers which daily keep dropping into their beds and graves, would rather seem like the effect of imagination than a history of facts. I beg leave to suggest that this must be owing to the troops living so long upon salt provision, and having nothing to drink but the poisonous water of the Lake. I am now in hopes, as this is a healthy spot, and as the country affords good spring water, that we shall soon find the Army regain their health; and that we shall be able to make an effectual stand at this place. I have ordered all the sick to be removed at a distance from the other troops, that the sight of such pitiful objects may not disperse the rest. I shall do everything in my power to preserve the health of the Army, and reduce the troops to some kind of order. I am now about fortifying this post, which I think may, in a short time, be made strong enough to baffle all the attempts of our enemies. I think that a number of row-galleys upon the Lake, upon the construction of those at Philadelphia, will be of great advantage. I am now preparing timber for that purpose, and beg Congress would send a workman from Philadelphia that understands constructing them. A few of those vessels, in conjunction with those we already have, must effectually give us the command of the Lake, and prevent the enemy from penetrating the country.

I enclose a petition from the inhabitants about Onion River for protection. Colonel Warner offers to raise a regiment to protect that quarter. This I could not consent to, as I have no such authority; but beg leave to recommend it to Congress, as those men are much better calculated for the purpose than any others, as they have such a thorough knowledge of the country. I have sent Colonel Winds, with a hundred and fifty men, to take post there till the pleasure of Congress can be known. The reason of my sending a chief Colonel with so small a detachment is, because he cannot do duty anywhere else for fear of the small-pox; this is also the case with most of the men who are with him.

I beg Congress to send me some directions about the defence of the frontiers, and building armed vessels here. Every order shall be complied with as soon as received. I have sent several times back to discover the motion of the enemy. A Lieutenant, who went off with four men, has just returned. He counted the number of tents at St. Johns, and found them about a hundred and fifty; he found twenty-five at St. Rays, and fifteen at Chambly. He sent off two of his men from St. Johns to give information, but they have not arrived. He tarried two days longer about St. Johns and Chambly, and then returned through the woods to Missisque Bay. He found their trails at Missisque River, but could discover nothing of the men. I apprehend that the Indians have entrapped them. The Lieutenant could discover but two boats at those places; and I think it must take them so long to construct vessels to transport their Army over the Lake, that we shall by that time be ready to receive them. I am determined, however, not to lose a moment in securing this important post in the best manner possible, as I am convinced that the loss of this place would be next to losing our country.

I beg leave, my dear sir, to assure you and the honourable Congress that I never had an idea of pain equal to that which I felt at the evacuation of Canada. I hope Congress will not attribute it to my timidity or want of resolution. I must refer you to Colonel Allen for the particular reasons which obliged us to abandon that country. I beg leave to recommend him to you as an intelligent, brave, and active officer, and one who will give you a perfect account of the miserable state of our Army in Canada, and what is their present situation. I shall feel myself extremely happy if Congress should be satisfied with the steps I have taken. It is seldom that an officer can claim any merit from a retreat, and I am far from laying in a claim of the kind; yet it gives me some satisfaction that, under all our disadvantages, we saved the whole of the publick stores, the baggage of the Army, and left not one of our sick behind us. This I hope will at least convince Congress that we did not retreat in hurry and confusion. The fatigue we had to save our batteaus, cannon, &c., and get them over the Rapids, was beyond anything that ever I went through, and what was never done by an army in our situation before, and what, for my own part, I never wish to attempt again. I must beg Congress to give some direction about the redemption of General Thompson, Colonel Irvine, and some other officers, who have fallen into the hands of the enemy. Opposite the Isle-aux-Noix, Captain McLean, Lieutenants McTierran, McAlister, and Hogg, of Colonel Irvine's Regiment, were taken prisoners by the Indians, and are now, I apprehend, at Quebeck. I wish Congress would consent to an exchange of prisoners; if they should, I will send a flag immediately to St. Johns, to treat upon the subject.

I beg leave to assure you and the Congress that nothing on my part shall be wanting to prevent the enemy from penetrating the country in this quarter; and that I am, with the highest sentiments of respect and esteem, my dear sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

To the Honourable JOHN SULLIVAN, Brigadier-General in the Northern Department.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: We, the inhabitants of the New-Hampshire Grants, being appointed a Committee by the several Towns in this District, beg leave to address your Honour in behalf of our constituents and ourselves. We are greatly alarmed at the retreat of our Army out of Canada, and the news of the savages killing a number of our men on the west side of Lake Champlain; in consequence of which events, the frontier settlements are removing their families into the country; but the inhabitants thus removing being greatly desirous that the frontier settlements should be protected, and anxious to return and secure their crops, we earnestly beg and entreat your Honour to send a guard to Onion River, or some other place which your Honour shall think most advantageous to the Army and inhabitants. We are much alarmed on account of our unhappy situation, and would express our great concern for the invaded liberties of the Colonies in general. We have a number of good woodsmen, well acquainted with fire-arms; and should your Honour, in your wisdom, think proper and give leave, we would immediately raise a battalion of effective men for the defence of the United Colonies, and the frontiers of New-Hampshire Grants in particular. And likewise earnestly desire that your Honour would give orders that our frontier towns, which are destitute, may be supplied with ammunition as your Honour shall think proper.

We, the subscribers, have appointed Colonel Thomas Chittenden and Captain Herman Allen to present this Memorial to your Honour, and to act in our behalf.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Crown Point, July 2, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I have from time to time endeavoured to give your Excellency the earliest intelligence of our movements in this quarter; but the distance is so great that we are under necessity of making many without having your Excellency's advice. In my last I mentioned that I should remain with the Army at Isle-aux-Noix till your Excellency's pleasure could be known. This, I supposed, would serve to cover and protect the inhabitants settled by the Lake till they could remove with their effects, and at the same time give us an opportunity of receiving your Excellency's directions where to make a stand; but, unfortunately, sickness of almost every kind seized both officers and men to such a degree that I was forced to leave that unhealthy place and retire to this, where I hope the Army will soon recruit. We have, I think, secured everything, even to an axe, except three cannon at Chambly, and those not very good. We have taken one out of the Lake, a fine twelve-pounder, which in part makes up our loss. I am now fortifying this place, and will endeavour to have it as strong as possible, and fix as many galleys to command the Lake as I can. I have sent for some person acquainted with those constructed at Philadelphia, that we may have some of that kind built if it is agreeable to your Excellency. I have written General Schuyler for his advice, which hope soon to receive. In the interim I shall be procuring as much timber and boards as possible.

I hear that a number of Militia are ordered here. I don't think them necessary at present; but should they be sent, I wish they may be such as have had the small-pox, as there is no avoiding it in our camp. As the air is pure at this place, and the Army can have fresh provisions and good water, I hope they will soon recruit. If they should, sure I am that we shall have enough to fortify and hold this place, and at the same time command the Lake. A Lieutenant whom I sent to reconnoitre at St. Johns and Chambly has returned, and says that he counted about one hundred and fifty tents at St. Johns, twenty-five at St. Rays, and fifteen at Chambly; and that the Regulars are very busy in fortifying at St. Johns. He saw no boats except a canoe and one batteau at Chambly. He despatched two of his men from St. Johns to give me intelligence, who have not since been heard of. I fear the Indians have entrapped them.

In my route I have given every assistance in my power to remove the frontier inhabitants with their effects, and have ordered Colonel Winds, with a hundred and fifty men, to take post at Onion River, to guard there till I could have your Excellency's and General Schuyler's opinion. I have sent Congress a written application from these inhabitants for assistance. Doubtless they will make some order upon it, which I hope will be that Colonel Warner, of the Green Mountains, shall raise men for that purpose, as I think those men much better calculated to defend that part of the country than any others. I shall now be able to make your Excellency a proper return of men and stores, which shall be immediately forwarded. In the interim I remain, with the highest sentiments of respect, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. We are in great want of about six or eight field-pieces, which beg may be forwarded as soon as may be.

Your Excellency's most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Isle-aux-Noix, June 24, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: It is with the greatest pain I inform you that, after our retreat from Canada to this place, of which I have given your Excellency an account through General Schuyler, and after I had determined to make a stand here till I received your Excellency's order, I find myself under an absolute necessity of quitting this Island for a place more healthy, otherwise the Army will never be able to return, as one fortnight longer in this place will not leave us well men enough to carry off the sick, exclusive of the publick stores, which I have preserved thus far. The raging of the small-pox deprives us of whole regiments in the course of a few days, by their being taken down with that cruel disorder. But this is not all. The camp disorder rages to such a degree that of the regiments remaining, from twenty to sixty in each are taken down in a day, and we have nothing to give them but salt pork, flour, and the poisonous waters of this Lake. I have, therefore, determined, with the unanimous voice of the officers, to remove to Isle-la-Motte, a place much more healthy than this, where I have some hope we shall preserve the health of the few men we have till some order is taken respecting our future movements. I think it would be by far the best to remove to Crown Point, fortify that, build row-galleys to command the Lake, and by scouting parties to defend our frontiers, as the savages have already begun upon us. They have made two attacks upon our men, killed and taken near twenty, among whom are some officers. These officers went on shore unarmed, when I was gone to reconnoitre Point-au-Fer. The other party went on shore at river Lecot to buy milk. They were in boats loaded with flour, which they brought off, but had some men killed. The whole of our loss in killed and taken amount to about twenty. This happened in both cases for want of that care which should ever be taken in an enemy's country. I hope it will be a warning to our people in future. I hear from all quarters that the enemy are very numerous in Canada. Their shipping is also numerous, and it cannot be doubted that all the Canadians and all the Indians in this quarter will be compelled to bear arms against us. This I know they would gladly have avoided; but finding that we are not able to afford them that protection we promised, they are obliged to make their peace in the best manner they can. I think it is now past a doubt that the neglect and inattention to this department has not only lost us Canada, but involved us in a war with all the blacks and whites in this quarter; and to check their progress I know of no better method than to secure the important posts of Ticonderoga and Crown Point, and, by building a number of armed vessels, command the Lakes, otherwise the forces now in Canada will be brought down upon us as quick as possible, having nothing now to oppose them in that Colony. They have a number of batteaus framed, which they brought from Three Rivers. They will doubtless construct some armed vessels, and then endeavour to penetrate the country toward New-York. This I am persuaded they will attempt, but am sure they can never effect, unless we neglect to secure the important posts now in our power. I have written to General Schuyler, and wait with impatience for his answer, as I know that no time ought to be lost in fortifying this place or Crown Point. If I attempt to fortify here, and afterwards am ordered to leave it, I shall strengthen the enemy, by preparing a work for them, which I would not willingly do. If I am to tarry and fortify here, I should be glad to know it as soon as possible, that I may put the order in execution; but I must say that unless our men grow much more healthy, our Army here will be no kind of check upon the enemy after remaining in this low marsh for a few weeks longer.

I enclose your Excellency a general return, drawn from the returns made the day before yesterday; since which I suppose a quarter part have been taken down with the camp disorder. This, however incredible it may seem, is a real fact. For instance, Colonel Wayne has sixty, out of one hundred and thirty-eight, taken down since. Colonel De Haas and all his field-officers, with a number of his men, are since taken down. This seems to run through the whole, no corps being exempt from it. I am shocked to relate, but much more to see, this dreadful havoc among the troops.

I enclose your Excellency a return of the ordnance and stores at St. Johns on the 12th instant. The whole could not, in our confused state, be procured. As to the provisions, some are on board the armed vessels, some at this place, and some at Isle-la-Motte, which were never brought further down. I can make no accurate return at present. I will have one made as soon as possible and forward it, and send regular returns in future. I do not despair of getting this Army yet into some kind of order and regulation; but I must confess that it is a work of time and trouble, as order and regularity seem to have been strangers in this northern Army.

I received your Excellency's favour of the 13th instant. Am extremely sorry it was not in my power to fulfil your Excellency's wishes, by leading on our troops to victory. The reasons for my not being able has doubtless long since reached you, in my letters giving an account of the strength of the enemy, the weakness of our Army, and the unhappy defeat of General Thompson at Three Rivers, as also the result of our Council of War in Canada. I think we shall secure all the publick stores and baggage of the Army, and secure our retreat with very little loss. Whether we shall have well men enough to carry them on, I much doubt, if we don't remove quickly, unless Heaven is pleased to restore health to this wretched Army, now perhaps the most pitiful one that ever was formed.

There is no return of Colonel Patterson's Regiment, as he has but five men here fit for duty, which I this day ordered to Crown Point to join the rest of the regiment, which are all sick there. You may assure yourself, my dear General, that nothing shall be wanting on my part to restore order among the troops here and to recover their health, as also to throw every stumbling-block in the way of the enemy, that lies in the power of your Excellency's most affectionate humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL SULLIVAN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

June 25, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: This morning, at daybreak, I received your Excellency's favour of the 16th instant. Am extremely mortified to find that everything here has turned out contrary to my expectation and your Excellency's wishes. This was not owing to my being deceived with respect to the enemy on the ground at the time I wrote, but to the sudden arrival of such a number under General Burgoyne the night before the battle of Three Rivers, of which I have given a full and perfect account in former letters. I am conscious of having done everything in my power to gain the ground our troops had lost, and to secure the retreat of the Army, when I found our point could not be carried. I imagine that General Schuyler forgot to enclose the return, as I think it went from me at the time; but I am not clear whether it did not go in a separate letter. I dare say it has reached you before this. I now enclose another, which wish safe to hand, and hope to have a more complete and perfect one in a few days, which I shall forward to your Excellency.

I am well convinced of the necessity of a good understanding being kept up among the officers of the Army. This has been remarkably the case since my arrival. I have not seen an instance to the contrary, except some few reflections which seemed to take place between the northern and southern troops, which I hope I have sufficiently cured by calling upon the officers of every corps, and requesting them to suppress a thing which, if continued, must weaken, if not destroy, the Army. They all agreed to join heartily in putting an end to this dangerous behaviour among the troops, which I am convinced they did, as I have heard nothing of it since, and find that harmony takes place among the troops in a surprising manner. In all our difficulties there seemed to be a unanimity of sentiment among all the officers. Indeed, I have not known the least dispute among them. The unfortunate General Thompson and the Baron De Woodtke and myself, were at Sorel. Never did greater harmony and friendship exist. General Arnold was at Montreal, and kept up the most friendly intercourse and correspondence with us, and we with him. It is true, I thought the keeping Colonel De Haas from Sorel was wrong, but only supposed it an error in judgment, as I did that of his keeping the forces in too great numbers at the posts up country. This I communicated to him in the most friendly manner, which he accounted for in a way that convinced me that he acted not without some foundation; though I think it would have been better had it not been done. Assure yourself, my dear General, that I will exert myself in cultivating harmony and friendship among both officers and soldiers in the Army; and that I am, with the most profound respect, your Excellency's most devoted, humble servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. The Brigade-Major and Adjutant of the day have this moment informed me that, while they were parading the main guard, four men dropped down under arms, and appear like dead men. I am almost distracted with the thoughts of losing so many men as daily go off by sickness. I shall to-day remove from this infectious place to Isle-la-Motte, which I should have done before now, had not too many of our batteaus gone forward with the sick to Crown Point. Your Excellency's most obedient servant,

J. SULLIVAN.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, July 2, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of 25th of June is received. Some strange fatality seems to attend our northern Army. Yet our comfort and matter for rejoicing is the same—that the Lord reigns. I trust our Army is able to keep the navigation of the Lake. This is the critical time when every nerve must be strained for our security. Agreeable to your request, without loss of time expresses were sent to Norwich and Middletown. Captain J. Winslow came to me yesterday. I furnished him with an agreement and fifty pounds in cash, which you will see by the enclosed copy. I have taken measures, which I hope will prove acceptable, in the best manner to promote the undertaking of good men for the service. This day Captain Jonathan Lester came to me. I have transacted with him in the same manner as the other. I doubt not they will begin their march for Albany the beginning of, or in all next week. The former had encouragement from ten men, before he came to me—the latter from fifteen. Doubt not they will engage the men soon. I promised both the head carpenters to recommend it to you to make them some further allowance for their extra trouble and charge in raising the men, which appears to me highly reasonable. I trust you will find them substantial, valuable, skilful men, very suitable for your purpose. The forces raising for the Northern Department are forwarding with diligence; they will begin their march by parties. Brigadier-General Waterbury will be with you soon. The route is ordered in manner you directed. I have given directions concerning the prisoners mentioned in yours. There are two or three young persons—one the son of Captain Lester, the other belonging to Captain Winslow, and another to a good workman—whom I would recommend to your notice and a suitable allowance. Cleansing the Army from the infection of the small-pox is of the utmost importance. Certainly it is not difficult to be done. Let me know, by first opportunity, the measures taken for that purpose.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, at Lebanon, Tuesday, July 2, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Eliphelet Dyar, Jabez Huntington, William Williams, Titus Hosmer, Jeremiah Elderkin, Nathaniel Wales, William Hillhouse, and Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

Considered the price at which Gunpowder at our Mills should be sold, when disposed of, &c.; and allowed and voted, that, for the present, the price be fixed at 5s. 4d.

One Major Griswold and Captain Marsh are present, a Committee from Lebanon, Hartford, &c., and twelve Towns in the Cohoss, so called, pressing for Powder, &c., under their apprehensions from Canada, &c.

Voted, That they be allowed to receive and purchase at Elderkin & Wales's Mill, eight hundred pounds of Gunpowder, at the rate of 5s. 4d., as agreed on, for cash or good security, payable in a short time.

Order given; and that they may receive at the Furnace at Middletown one thousand pounds of Lead, at the price of 6d., as below.

And Voted, That the price of Lead for the present be 6d. per pound; and orders given accordingly to Griswold and Marsh.

On Application from Blanford, &c.:

Voted, That Mr. Samuel Dunn, applying in behalf of said Town, may be supplied by Colonel Pitkin, at his Mill at Hartford, with sixty-seven pounds of Gunpowder; the said Dunn paying for the same at the rate of 5s. 4d. per pound; said Pitkin to receive and account for the same.

(Order given, and delivered said Dunn.)

Captain Jonathan Lester's Account, for building the Row-Galley Shark, amounting to £861 16s. 6½d., in the whole, having been inspected and examined by a sub-Committee at Hartford, is now allowed. He had received by orders from this Board £100, £300, and £4, of B. H., Esq. The balance, being £455 5s. 11½d., is ordered now to be drawn for. (Order given, and delivered said Lester.)

Voted, That an Order be drawn on the Committee of Pay-Table in favour of Captain Jonathan Lester, for the sum of £50, as so much advance pay for him and a Company of twenty-five Carpenters, now raising under him, at the request of General Schuyler, to be employed at or about Crown Point, in building Batteaus, &c., &c., and to be refunded by said General in behalf of the Congress.

(Order given.)

Voted, That a quantity of Lead, belonging to Jonathan Kilbourn, Esq., of Colchester, by him made use of on the water-wheel of his said Mill, shall not be taken from him for the use of the publick until actually wanted, and then to be taken by the Selectmen, without further orders.

(Order given him accordingly.)

Voted, That five hundred pounds of Gunpowder be delivered and ordered for the use of the Town of Fairfield, on their request, to be received of Mr. N. Shaw, at New-London, and to be by them accounted for to the Governour and Company of the Colony. (Order given. Delivered to Captain Eliphelet Thorp, present.)

Voted, That Lieutenant-Colonel Samuel Mott be appointed Colonel of the First Battalion raising for the northern service, in the room of Colonel John Douglass, resigned.

Voted, That Major Oliver Smith be Lieutenant-Colonel of the Regiment at New-London, instead of Colonel Mott, promoted; and that Captain John Ely be Major of said Regiment, in the room of Lieutenant-Colonel Smith, promoted.

Voted, That Major Giles Russell, of Colonel Sheldon's Regiment, be Lieutenant-Colonel of Colonel Sage's Regiment, instead of Lieutenant-Colonel Danielson, resigned.

Voted, That Captain Waterman Cleft be Major of Colonel Sheldon's Regiment, in the room of Major Russell, promoted to be Lieutenant-Colonel of said Regiment.

Voted, That Captain Edward Mott be appointed Major of Colonel Gay's Regiment, in the room of Major Gallup, resigned.

A Resolve for ordering three Regiments of Horse, &c.

This Board, taking into consideration the contents of a Letter from his Excellency General Washington, of the 28th of June last, laid before them by his Honour the Governour, informing of his having certain advice that a Fleet of one hundred and thirty sail left Halifax the 9th ultimo, bound for New-York, and that General Howe was then already arrived at the Hook, and pressing, in the most earnest manner, that not one moment's time may be lost in sending forward the Militia of this Colony, &c.; and considering also the contents of several Letters very lately received from the honourable President of the Continental Congress, urging the same thing in strong and pressing terms; considering also that the several Battalions of Militia ordered by the last General Assembly to be raised for the relief and support of the Army at New-York, by inevitable difficulties of preparation, are not, and it is feared cannot be ready so as to arrive at New-York seasonably for the expected attack of the enemy, and, should that be the case, the event may prove fatal to the cause of American liberty, which this continent has so long struggled with great zeal and expense to support and defend,—in this critical situation no efforts can be too great, and nothing should be unattempted which may tend to strengthen and serve a cause on which the all of America depends:

It is, therefore, Resolved and Ordered, by this Board, That the three Regiments of Light-Horse, lately established, and on the west side of Connecticut River, be, and they are hereby, ordered and directed forthwith to set forward and march to New-York, well equipped and furnished, for the assistance and succour of the Army there, and to be under the command of the Commander-in-Chief in that department; to remain till such time as the Battalions ordered by the General Assembly for that service shall arrive, and no longer than the General Assembly shall judge necessary, and they can be orderly dismissed. And as an encouragement to their ready exertion and services, the said Troops may expect such reasonable pay, wages, and allowance, as the honourable Continental Congress, or the General Assembly, in their wisdom and justice, shall appoint and allow; and they need not fear but the same will be just and satisfactory.

And it is further Resolved and Ordered, That the sum of £1000 be advanced out of the publick Treasury, to assist them in their march, and to be accounted for on settlement of their Pay-Rolls; and that the same be put into the hands of Lieutenant-Colonel Seymour, to be properly distributed for that purpose.

And it is further Voted and Resolved, That Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Seymour, chief officer of said Regiment of Light-Horse in the absence of Colonel Silliman, be, and he is hereby, ordered and directed to transmit necessary orders for the purposes hereof to the several Majors of said Regiments, and other proper officers, and to use his utmost efforts, in conjunction with them, to hasten the preparation and march of said Troops, and to lead and conduct them, under their other proper officers, in and for the service aforesaid.

Adjourned until to-morrow morning.

— Wednesday, July 3, 1776.

Governour and Council met. Present the same as yesterday. Many things considered, &c., and persons coming in.

Voted, An Order of £1000 on the Pay-Table, in favour of Colonel T. Seymour, to be divided and improved to assist the march of the Regiments of Horse, ordered to New-York, as yesterday. (The Order drawn and sent.)

Letters of Marque, &c., prepared for Captain Thorp, present, part owner of the Privateer Broome.

An Account of Ebenezer Ledyard, Esq., and Mr. Park Avery, a Committee who built the Fort at Groton, laid in, examined, and adjusted, and allowed thereon the sum of £265 7s. 9d., in discharge thereof.

And Voted, That an Order be drawn and delivered Mr. Ledyard.

On application of Captain George Elliott, of Killingworth,

Voted, That one hundred and fifty pounds of Powder be delivered the Selectmen of Killingworth, by Mr. Shaw, they paying him for the use of the Colony at the rate of 5s. 4d. per pound, and said Shaw to account with the Colony therefor.

(Order given. Delivered Captain George Elliott.)

Voted, (on application by Lieutenant John Mills, Commander of the party stationed at Black-Rock Fort at Fairfield, for and on account of Billeting, premium for Guns, Blankets, &c., first month's pay and wages of his said party,) viz: That an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table on the above Account, for the sum of £200, to be accounted for on settlement of the Pay-Roll of said Company or party.

(An Order drawn, and delivered said Lieutenant Mills.)

Ordered, That Colonel Jabez Huntington send to Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, of New-London, one ton of the Cannon Powder lately ordered to his care from Elderkin & Wales's Powder-Mill.

He present, received it verbally, &c.

Oliver Coit is appointed Captain of a Company at New-London, in the room of Edward Mott, promoted; William Latham First Lieutenant, in room of said Coit; William Whitney Second Lieutenant of said Company, in room of said Latham; and James ——— Ensign of said Company, in room of said Whitney.

Appointed Lieutenant Martin Kirtland Captain of a Company at New-London, in room of Captain John Ely, promoted; Daniel Platts First Lieutenant of said Company, in room of said Kirtland; Adriel Ely Second Lieutenant of said Company, in room of said Platts; Daniel Kirtland Ensign of said Company, in room of said Ely, promoted.

Appointed Adam Shapley Captain of a Company at New-London, in the room of Colonel Saltonstall, who hath resigned as Captain of the same; John Hempstead, Jun., First Lieutenant of said Company, in room of said Shapley; Richard Chapman Second Lieutenant of said Company, in room of said Hempstead; Nathaniel Richards Ensign of said Company, in room of said Chapman, promoted.

Appointed Nathan Palmer Captain of the Company at Stonington, in New-London station, in the room of Lieutenant-Colonel Smith, promoted; John Belcher First Lieutenant, in the room of said Palmer, promoted; Clement Miner Second Lieutenant of said Company, in room of said Belcher, promoted; Moses Palmer Second Ensign of said Company, in room of said Miner, promoted.

Appointed William Ledyard a Captain of a Company of Matrosses, to be raised at Groton and New-London, to serve in the Forts there. (Copies given.)

Appointed Nathaniel Saltonstall Captain of another Company of Matrosses, to be raised at said places, for the purposes aforesaid. (Copy given for Officers.)

Colonel Samuel Mott laid in his Account for reconnoitring the Harbours of New-London, Stonington, &c., and the Fortifications, places for fortifying, in surveying and planning, in attending to the works, &c.: 105 days, or three and a half months, at £12—£42; 14 weeks' board and Horse keeping, at 15s.—£10 10s.; deducting £4 16s. by him for charges, after he was in another commission, the remainder being £48 14s., and an Order given said Mott.

Resolved and Ordered, That the Commanding Officer at New-London remove such number of the Cannon from the old Fort at New-London to Mamacoick, at his discretion, for the preservation and security of the same.

Voted and Ordered, That Mr. Nathaniel Shaw deliver to the Commanding Officer at New-London, or to Colonel Smith, for the use of the Fort at Stonington, five hundred pounds of Cannon Powder, taking proper receipts therefor.

(Order given, and delivered Colonel Smith.)

Voted, That an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table in favour of Captain Samuel Mather, for the sum of £330, in so far payment of the pay, allowance and wages, &c., of his Company at New-London, and to be accounted for on settlement of his Pay-Roll.

(Order given, and delivered Captain Mather.)

Resolved and Ordered, That the Committee of Inspection for New-London and Groton do forthwith remove the horned Cattle, Sheep and Swine from Fisher's Island to the main, leaving necessary working Oxen, Cows, Sheep, and Swine, for the use of the families there, at their discretion; that they cause them to be appraised by indifferent, judicious men, under oath, at their present just value in money; that the amount of such appraisment be paid out of the Colony Treasury to the owner or owners of said stock; and that said Committee sell and dispose of such stock, at a reasonable price, in behalf of the Colony, rendering their account of such sale, and how they shall execute this order, to his Honour the Governour, as soon as may be; and also advising Colonel Champion, Deputy Commissary, when they remove such stock, that he may purchase such part of the same as may be fit and proper for the use of the Army.

(Copy sent by Colonel Smith.)

Adjourned till to-morrow morning.

Thursday, July 4, 1776.

Met according to adjournment, present the same as yesterday.

The Governour received Letters last night from General Schuyler, Mr. Trumbull, &c.

Captain Herrick is here from the frontier Towns, who are under great fears and distress, and soliciting relief. The matter discoursed, &c., and seems most proper to write General Washington on the subject, moving to have a Continental Regiment raised thereabouts, &c., and suggesting the advantage of an established Militia there, &c., &c.

A Letter is prepared for Mr. Hosmer.

Captain Joseph Marsh (late Captain Marsh, of this Town, now of Hartford, on the frontiers, Member of the York Congress) came in from New-York, and gave large accounts of the conduct of affairs there, &c.

Captain Thomas Stanton, of the Galley Shark, exhibited his Account of many sundries for and about said Galley, of £95 9s. 6d., and Tilley's Bill for Rigging, &c., £34 2s. 2d.; total, £129 11s. 8d., and is allowed; and ordered that the said sum be drawn for. (Order given.)

Voted, That an Order be drawn on the Pay-Table for Captain Thomas Stanton for £100, to be by him improved in purchasing Provisions and necessaries for the Galley, and render his account thereof.

(Order given, and delivered said Stanton.)

Voted, That six barrels of Montserrat Sulphur Ore, now in the hands of Mr. Thomas Mumford, on account of the General Congress, may properly be delivered to, and for the use of Messrs. Elderkin & Wales's Powder-Mill, they accounting therefor to said Congress.

Whereas this Board are informed that vessels loaded with Provisions frequently pass down the Sound, and go out to sea in this critical time, when the coasts are lined with ships of our enemies, who are in great need of our Provisions, and without which they cannot carry on their hostile designs against us; and very many of our provision vessels having already fallen into their hands, and much of their support having been received and derived that way, and the danger at this time of their being taken being greater than ever:

It is therefore Resolved and Ordered, That Captain Niles, of the Colony's armed Schooner Fly, now lying in the Harbour of New-London, or the commander of any other armed vessel belonging to this Colony, be, and they are hereby, directed to seize and bring into port any such provision vessel or vessels which he or they may be able to discover and take, in or about said harbour, offing or sound, bound to sea, and the same hold and detain; and make report of the circumstances, cargo, and destination of such vessel or vessels, the master's name, place of abode, owner's name, the license by which they have sailed, &c., to his Honour the Governour, and take his directions relative to the proceeding or further destination of such vessel: Provided, nevertheless, That if any such vessel, so taken, shall be furnished with papers, clearances, or authority from the honourable Continental Congress, allowing such vessel to proceed to the port of her destination, such vessel is not to be hindered or detained by said Captain or commander, anything herein to the contrary notwithstanding. (Copy given.)

Resolved and Ordered, That Captain Thomas Stanton, of the Colony Row-Galley Shark, shall and may, from time to time, have and receive a supply of salted Beef and Pork, Bread and Flour, sufficient for the support of the Officers,

Sailors, and Marines, in the service of this Colony, on board said Galley, of Captain John Deshon, who is directed to deliver the same; and that said Stanton provide all other necessaries for their supply; and that he take order that the same be dealt out to them prudently and carefully, without spoil or waste, with such fresh Fish as they take; and that he keep a just and exact account of purchase and expenditure of such Provisions, and the same render to his Honour the Governour at the end of two months, for his consideration and further orders in the premises.

Further, Resolved and Ordered, That the said Stanton, from time to time, apply to, and receive of, Mr. N. Shaw, at New-London, all such Powder, Shot, and Military Stores as said Shaw shall judge necessary for said Galley.

And further, Resolved and Ordered, That said Stanton, with said Galley, do, for the present, and until further orders, make the Harbour of Stonington his general place of rendezvous, and that he cruise from thence through Fisher's Island Sound as far westward as New-London Harbour, and east and south of Fisher's Island, when opportunity presents that he may do it with prudence, and that he observe and obey such signals as Captain Harding, in the Colony Brig Defence, and Captain Niles, in the armed Schooner Spy, or other his superior officers, from time to time, shall appoint and make to him. (Order given for £100. Also, Order given, sent by Mr. B. Huntington.)

Allowed an Account of Samuel Wheat, of Norwich, viz: to said Daniel Lattimer, &c., to carting four Guns and one load of Carriages to Norwich, for use of the Schooner, £3 18s. An Order to be drawn accordingly.

Adjourned until to-morrow morning.

WALTER SPOONER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Watertown, July 2, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The General Court, in compliance with the resolve of Congress, appointed Committees to go into the several Counties of Plymouth, Bristol, Worcester, and Berkshire, to raise from the Militia two thousand men, destined to New-York, a copy of which resolve we enclose you. And immediately on the receipt of your letter of the 28th ultimo, the General Assembly sent away expresses to their several Committees appointed to raise the men destined for New-York, pressing them to forward their march with all expedition, and we hope it will not be long before they will join you.

Wishing you success in all your enterprises, in the name and by order of the General Assembly, I am your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

WALTER SPOONER.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the United Colonies, New-York.

COLONEL JOSHUA WENTWORTH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Portsmouth, July 2, 1776.

SIR: I was honoured with your favour of 15th ultimo per post, enclosing resolves of the honourable Continental Congress, which fully answers the purpose of my request to Stephen Moylan, Esq., and shall pursue a mode consistent to the resolves. And as they point the line of duty, shall omit troubling your Excellency any further. I should not have been so pressing to Mr. Moylan had I been possessed of the Continental resolves previous to your Excellency's favouring me with them.

I am informed the gentlemen that petitioned the Congress have not received any determination; nor do I suppose the former resolves will be counteracted to avail prejudicial to the captors.

The agents of your Excellency's appointment to the westward of this port, I hear, are confirmed by the Continental Congress. I presume to solicit your Excellency's recommendation for my confirmation, if you still think me worthy of that trust. I am the more induced to trouble your Excellency, as I was first honoured with your commission, and vainly attempt to assure you, sir, that my study shall be to merit the confidence of the continent; being, with respect, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

JOSHUA WENTWORTH.

To His Excellency General Washington.

NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN GAGE.

Colony of New-Hampshire, Exeter, July 2, 1776.

To Captain JAMES GAGE, greeting:

Pursuant to a vote of the Council and Assembly directing me hereto, I do hereby require you forthwith to raise and see equipped sixteen men out of the company under your command, to be ready to march and reinforce General Sullivan, supposed to be at Crown Point. In raising which men you are to call on the alarm-list as well as the trained-band. The number already inlisted and passed muster (living within the bounds of your town) for the service aforesaid you are to consider as so many of said number, and make return to the General Committee of your doings therein with all despatch. The persons appointed Muster-Masters are to pay each man the sum of seven pounds eighteen shillings as a bounty to equip himself, and also forty shillings for one month's advance wages. The men are not to be detained in the service any longer than the 1st day of December next, and have liberty of choosing their officers. As our lives and all that is dear to us depend on our stopping the progress of our enemy's Army from Canada into our settlements, for your own and your country's sake, make no delay in pursuing this important business, especially as there is the greatest probability of General Sullivan's maintaining his ground at that strong pass, and defeating the enemy, if seasonably reinforced; which must disconcert them, as they cannot recruit again from Europe this year.

NATHANIEL FOLSOM, Major-General.

Amherst, July 24, 1776.

Colony of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, HILLSBOROUGH, ss:

In obedience to the within order, I have endeavoured to raise the men, but have got but ten, several of the men that I laid it upon to do a turn absolutely refusing to do anything toward going or hiring, viz: Joshua Atherton, John Hollon, Ebenezer Weston, &c. Those persons being those that ought to do, and it is well known by the people, therefore others will not do anything till those or their estates have done a turn.

JAMES GAGE, Captain.

To the Honourable Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-Hampshire.

R. REA TO GOVERNOUR BULLOCK.

Augusta, Georgia, July 3, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty of enclosing your Excellency the copies of the two depositions which came by express from Major Williamson yesterday, likewise a copy of an intercepted letter from Henry Stuart to the frontier inhabitants of North-Carolina and Virginia.

I am afraid the emissaries of Government have at last accomplished their hellish designs with the Cherokees; yet I believe they have mistimed matters, as I hope we shall be able to give them a good drubbing before they can get assistance from the King's troops or any other nation.

Last night Major Williamson had upwards of a thousand men imbodyed, and in a few days expects to have five, when they intend marching into their nation. Should this happen, your Excellency will doubtless see the necessity of having some force on the frontiers of this Province. I shall order the draft that has been made of this regiment to Broad River and Ogechee as soon as possible, but not to go over the line until I receive your Excellency's orders, which I shall wait for with impatience. I shall likewise be glad to know how far we are to act in concert with the Carolinians, or if we are only to guard our own frontiers.

I have not heard from the Creeks for some time past. The last accounts were favourable. I mentioned to your Excellency some time ago our intention of carrying two Indians to Ninety-Six, which I did. They saw a poor fellow suffer death, and we have since sent them off to their nation perfectly satisfied.

I am, with due respect, your Excellency's very humble servant,

R. REA.

To His Excellency A. Bullock, Esq.

SOUTH-CAROLINA, NINETY-SIX District:

Personally appeared Aaron Smith, son of Captain Aaron Smith, of Little River, in said District, Planter, who, being duly sworn, maketh oath, that this morning about daybreak a number of Indians, about eight or ten in number, came to his father's house and killed him and Lorick Smith, his son, and fired upon him and his brother, who made their escape, and that he believes all the rest of the family are killed.

AARON SMITH.

Sworn before me this 1st day of July, 1776, eight o'clock in the morning:

JOHN PURVES, J. P.

N. B. This Little River is in South-Carolina, six miles from the Indian land.

SOUTH-CAROLINA, NINETY-SIX District:

Before me, John Purves, one of the Justices of the Peace for said District, personally appeared David Shettroe, of Keowee, who, being duly sworn, maketh oath, that yesterday morning, about a quarter of an hour before the first cock crew, two Indians came to his house on the river bank, near Fort Prince George, and called to him to get up, which he did, and opened the door, when they came in, and asked for water, which he gave them. The youngest of the two, named the Glass, desired him to make some fire, that he might see; the other named the Terrapin. As he went up to the chimney to blow up the fire, the Glass laid hold of him, and told him he was his slave, it was very bad times, the white people were going to break out, and he should not run away from him. Then the Terrapin stepped up to an old man named William McTeer, who was lying on the floor, and told him he was his slave, and must go along with him. They drove this deponent and McTeer before them until they came to the house of Mr. James Holmes, in Keowee, where he saw a great number of the Lower Towns Cherokee Indians, where they had taken Mr. Holmes and his wife and a white child prisoners, also Thomas Holmes, John Lammas and his wife, and two of their children, (boys,) and a man that had gone from Enoree on business; that while he staid there they also brought one John Garrick and a man that came from Rocky-Run, prisoners; that the Indians took all Mr. Holmes's effects, drank as much rum as they chose, and then stove a hog'shead, and let the rum that was in it run out; that about dawn of day the Indians drove all the white people out of the house, and sent a party up the river with them to guard them, except this deponent, who stayed and saw them plunder Mr. Holmes's house. The fellow who took this deponent prisoner gave him two deer-skins, and told him to make shoes for himself, to walk over the hill to Mr. Cameron's, for he must go with him there; that during his confinement one Ratcliff, a white man, kept riding about among the Indians, laughing and scoffing at the prisoners; that an Indian fellow told him when in confinement that George Parris, a half-breed, was gone down to acquaint the King's people over Saluda to come to join the Indians to help and to fight for the King; that the Indian who pretended to be this deponent's master sending him to hunt a horse for him to ride about two hours before sunset yesterday, he made his escape from them. Further, that he saw them bring several guns, pipe-hatchets, and sundry other effects, the property of Edward Wilkinson, Esquire, to the house where he was taken, and that he was in the employ of Edward Wilkinson, Esq., and that he cannot write.

DAVID <sup>his</sup> SHETTROE.

Sworn before me,

June 30, 1776.

JOHN PURVES, J. P.

May 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Some time ago Mr. Cameron and myself wrote you a letter by Mr. Thomas, and enclosed you a talk we had with the Indians respecting the purchase which is reported you lately made of them on the River Wattaga, Nolachuckey, &c. We are since informed that you are under great apprehensions of the Indians doing mischief immediately, but it is not the desire of his Majesty to set his friends and allies (the Indians) on his liege subjects; therefore, whoever of you that are willing to join his Majesty's forces, as soon as they arrive at the Cherokee nation, by repairing to the King's standard, shall find protection, and their families, and be free from all danger whatever. Yet, that his Majesty's officers may be certain which of you are willing to take up arms in his Majesty's just right, I have thought fit to recommend it to you, and every one that is desirous of preventing inevitable ruin to themselves and families, immediately to subscribe a written paper acknowledging their allegiance to his Majesty King George, and that they are ready and willing, whenever called on, to appear in arms in defence of the British right in America, which paper, as soon as it is signed, send to me by some safe hand. Should any of the inhabitants be desirous of knowing how they are to be kept free from every kind of insult or danger, inform them that his Majesty will immediately land an army in West Florida, march them through the Creek to the Chickasaw nation, where five hundred warriors from each nation are to join them, and then come by Chote, who have promised their assistance, and then to take possession of the frontiers of North-Carolina and Virginia, at the same time that his Majesty's forces make a diversion on the sea-coasts of those Provinces. If any of the inhabitants have any beef cattle, flour, pork, or horses, to spare, they shall have a good price for them by applying to us as soon as his Majesty's troops are imbodyed.

I am yours, &c., &c.,

HENRY STUART.*

WATTAGA:

This day Nathan Read came before me, one of the Justices of Wattaga, and made oath, on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that a stranger came up to Charles Robinson's gate yesterday evening; who he was he did not know, and delivered a letter, a true copy of which is above.

JOHN CARTER.

Sworn before me the 19th of May, 1776.

Attest:

JAMES SMITH.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN NATHANIEL SMITH.

[No. 56.]

Annapolis, July 3, 1776.

SIR: You are requested to send to the Council of Safety as soon as possible an account of all the cannon and swivel guns at Baltimore belonging to the Province, as well those that are mounted at the fortifications as those that are not, and their weight of metal. We are, &c.

To Captain Nathaniel Smith.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

Philadelphia, July 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You are so well acquainted with the critical and alarming state of our publick affairs, that it is unnecessary to use arguments to press you to a compliance with any resolves of Congress calculated to promote the cause of liberty in the United Colonies of America; I am therefore to request, by order of Congress, that the troops you are raising to form the flying-camp may be sent to the city of Philadelphia with the utmost expedition. That they may arrive the sooner, it is the desire of Congress you will send them by battalions, or detachments of battalions, or companies, as fast as raised. I am persuaded the Committee

You are undoubtedly informed before this that the detestable villain, Stuart, has prevailed upon the Cherokees to take up the hatchet against our countrymen. This, however, does not in the least intimidate us. Our people march forth against the savages with all the alacrity and cheerfulness you can conceive, and with a full, determined resolution to extirpate the whole tribe. The damage done to us by them is trifling. A number of the heads of the Tories in this Province, when they heard of the breaking out of the Indians, wrote to our Governour, and told him that they never dreamt the King would descend to such low and diabolical designs; that they were now willing to do everything in their power to assist their brethren in America. These are men of influence on the frontiers, and will be very useful against the Indians.

July 27th.—In a little brush with the Indians the other day our people were successful—killed, wounded, and took prisoners a considerable number. Colonel McIntosh, of Georgia, with a party of his regiment, went out a few days ago to reconnoitre the situation of the two young Wrights, who are posted on St. Mary's River, which separates Florida from Georgia. When he came within two miles of their fort, he was fired on from an out-post of theirs. Our Colonel returned the fire, killed one, and took nine prisoners, upon which the fort fired an alarm-gun. The man-of-war below hearing this, immediately detached a barge with a Lieutenant and nine men. All these the Colonel thought proper to seize upon. In the brig lately taken here with Highlanders on board was found about six hundred pounds sterling worth of goods.

July 31.—There is now an expedition determined on to Florida, where the enemy have about one thousand men posted at St. Augustine.

of Philadelphia will strain every nerve to comply with this requisition of Congress with all the despatch which the infinite importance of the present situation of our affairs requires.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Committee of Philadelphia.

(Same to the Committee of Chester County, to the Committee of Bucks County, to the Committee of Berks County, to the Committee of Northampton County, to the Committee of Lancaster County, to the Committee of York County, and to the Committee of Cumberland County.)

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, July 3, 1776.

Your favour of 17th June, dated at Plymouth, was handed me by yesterday's post. I was much pleased to find that you had taken a journey to Plymouth to see your friends, in the long absence of one whom you may wish to see. The excursion will be an amusement, and will serve your health. How happy would it have made me to have taken this journey with you.

I was informed a day or two before the receipt of your letter that you were gone to Plymouth, by Mrs. Polly Palmer, who was obliging enough, in your absence, to send me the particulars of the expedition to the lower harbour against the men-of-war. Her narration is executed with a precision and perspicuity which would have become the pen of an accomplished historian.

I am very glad you had so good an opportunity of seeing one of our little American men-of-war. Many ideas new to you must have presented themselves in such a scene; and you will in future better understand the relations of sea engagements.

I rejoice extremely at Dr. Bulfinch's petition to open a Hospital; but I hope the business will be done upon a larger scale. I hope that one Hospital will be licensed in every County, if not in every town. I am happy to find you resolved to be with the children in the first class. Mr. Whitney and Mrs. Katy Quincy are cleverly through inoculation in this city.

The information you give me of our friend's refusing his appointment has given me much pain, grief, and anxiety. I believe I shall be obliged to follow his example. I have not fortune enough to support my family, and, what is of more importance, to support the dignity of that exalted station. It is too high and lifted up for me, who delight in nothing so much as retreat, solitude, silence, and obscurity. In private life, no one has a right to censure me for following my own inclinations, in retirement, simplicity, and frugality. In publick life every man has a right to remark as he pleases; at least he thinks so.

Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America, and a greater perhaps never was nor will be decided among men. A resolution was passed, without one dissenting Colony, "that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; and, as such, they have, and of right ought to have, full power to make war, conclude peace, establish commerce, and to do all other acts and things which other States may rightfully do." You will see, in a few days, a Declaration setting forth the causes which have impelled us to this mighty revolution, and the reasons which will justify it in the sight of God and man. A plan of Confederation will be taken up in a few days.

When I look back to the year 1761, and recollect the argument concerning writs of assistance in the Superior Court, which I have hitherto considered as the commencement of this controversy between Great Britain and America, and run through the whole period, from that time to this, and recollect the series of political events, the chain of causes and effects, I am surprised at the suddenness, as well as greatness of this revolution. Britain has been filled with folly, and America with wisdom; at least this is my judgment. Time must determine. It is the will of Heaven that the two countries should be sundered forever. It may be the will of Heaven that America shall suffer calamities still more wasting and distresses yet more dreadful. If this is to be the case, it will have this good effect at least, it will inspire us with many virtues which we have not, and correct many errors, follies, and vices, which threaten to disturb, dishonour, and destroy us. The furnace of affliction produces refinement in States as well as individuals. And the new Governments we are assuming in every part will require a purification from our vices and an augmentation of our virtues, or they will be no blessings. The people will have unbounded power; and the people are extremely addicted to corruption and venality, as well as the great. But I must submit all my hopes and fears to an overruling Providence, in which, unfashionable as the faith may be, I firmly believe.

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, July 3, 1776.

Had a Declaration of Independency been made seven months ago it would have been attended with many great and glorious effects. We might, before this hour, have formed alliances with foreign States. We should have mastered Quebeck and been in possession of Canada. You will, perhaps, wonder how such a declaration would have influenced our affairs in Canada: but if I could write with freedom, I could easily convince you that it would, and explain to you the manner how. Many gentlemen in high stations, and of great influence, have been duped by the Ministerial bubble of Commissioners to treat; and, in real, sincere expectation of this event, which they so fondly wished, they have been slow and languid in promoting measures for the reduction of that Province. Others there are in the Colonies who really wished that our enterprise in Canada would be defeated, that the Colonies might be brought into danger and distress between two fires, and be thus induced to submit. Others really wished to defeat the expedition to Canada lest the conquest of it should elevate the minds of the people too much to hearken to those terms of reconciliation which, they believed, would be offered us. These jarring views, wishes, and designs, occasioned an opposition to many salutary measures which were proposed for the support of that expedition, and caused obstructions, embarrassments and studied delays, which have finally lost us the Province.

All these causes, however, in conjunction would not have disappointed us, if it had not been for a misfortune which could not be foreseen, and perhaps could not have been prevented—I mean the prevalence of the small-pox among our troops. This fatal pestilence completed our destruction. It is a frown of Providence upon us which we ought to lay to heart.

But, on the other hand, the delay of this Declaration to this time has many great advantages attending it. The hopes of reconciliation, which were fondly entertained by multitudes of honest and well-meaning, though weak and mistaken people, have been gradually and at last totally extinguished. Time has been given for the whole people maturely to consider the great question of Independence, and to ripen their judgment, dissipate their fears, and allure their hopes, by discussing it in newspapers and pamphlets; by debating it in Assemblies, Conventions, Committees of Safety and Inspection, in Town and County meetings, as well as in private conversations; so that the whole people, in every Colony of the Thirteen, have now adopted it as their own act. This will cement the Union, and avoid those heats, and perhaps convulsions, which might have been occasioned by such a declaration six months ago.

But the day is past. The 2d day of July, 1776, will be the most memorable epoch in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival. It ought to be commemorated as the day of deliverance, by solemn acts of devotion to God Almighty. It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward, forevermore.

You will think me transported with enthusiasm, but I am not. I am well aware of the toil and blood and treasure that it will cost us to maintain this Declaration, and support and defend these States. Yet through all the gloom I can see the rays of ravishing light and glory. I can see that the end is more than worth all the means; and that posterity will triumph in that day's transaction, even although we should rue it, which I trust in God we shall not.

CONGRESS OF NEW-JERSEY TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

Burlington, July 3, 1776.

SIR: I am directed to transmit the enclosed Resolves, which we hope will answer valuable purposes.

I have the honour to be, your most humble servant.

By order of Congress:

SAMUEL TUCKER, President.

To the Honourable the President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

In Provincial Congress, New-Jersey, }
Burlington, July 3, 1776. }

Ordered, That the Provincial Congress of New-York be empowered to apprehend and secure such of the Inhabitants of that Colony who have removed into this as they may think necessary for the publick good; and all persons within this Colony are desired to aid and assist in the execution of such orders for that purpose as they may think proper to make.

Ordered, That Stephen Crane, Lewis Ogden, and Caleb Camp, be a Secret Committee to correspond and co-operate with the Secret Committee of the Provincial Congress of New-York; and that the said Committee be vested with power to issue Warrants, and apprehend and confine such person or persons as they may think necessary for the publick good.

Extract from the Minutes:

WILLIAM PATTERSON, Secretary.

GENERAL LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL MERCER.

Elizabethtown, July 3, 1776—six o'clock P. M.

SIR: With respect to the operations of the enemy last night we have no intelligence at all. What we can collect respecting their motions to-day is, that a little after sunrise this morning a party of them, amounting, according to the estimation of one of the inhabitants who was made a prisoner, to between fifty and sixty, took him, with his effects, as he was removing from Staten-Island, and was on the ferry stairs opposite to our Point. They returned all his effects, and made him promise to go over to this place, fetch his wife, and to live in peace, assuring him that they came not to injure, but to protect the inhabitants. During the day a party of them have showed themselves at the house of one Pool, a tavern on the Island, about a mile along shore.

They have taken up the planks of a drawbridge across a creek in the Salt Meadow, on the Staten-Island side, opposite to the Point. Their sentries appear along shore to the westward as far as Rahway River, which is about three miles from the Point towards Amboy, and near the Blazing Star Ferry, in order, I suppose, to prevent all access from this Province to that Island. Since, I received a letter from Colonel Reed, (on my way to New-York;) informing me of their having landed on the Island; and collecting from his letter that my presence was more necessary here than at New-York, I have ordered Captain Neil, of our Artillery company at Amboy, to proceed immediately with his company and four field-pieces, in two divisions, one—consisting of one-third of his men and two field-pieces—to the Blazing Star Ferry, the other to come on to this place, where report is to be made, and to wait my further orders. This at present I propose to station at Elizabethtown Point, and at Newark Ferry, where there are already two field-pieces, but no men belonging to them.

Our people here seem to be greatly dispirited at so great a part of the force of this Province being drawn off to New-York, (important as they deem that object to the enemy,) while they are absolutely at their mercy. If the Connecticut Militia is arrived in such numbers as, with the Continental troops, to be adequate to repel the expected attack upon New-York, with the aid of part of the Jersey forces, it really seems necessary, in my poor judgment, to return part of them to defend the borders of this Province, between Newark and Amboy, from their depredations; but this, sir, is humbly submitted to the judgment of my superiors in command.

I have the honour to be, sir, your very humble servant,

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON,
Brig. Gen. of Militia of New-Jersey.

To the Honourable Hugh Mercer, Esq.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

P. S. At the Point we have about four or five hundred men, but with indifferent arms and few officers.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Received and read in Congress July 4, 1776.]

New-York, July 3, 1776.

SIR: Since I had the honour of addressing you, and on the same day, several ships more arrived within the Hook, making the number that came in then a hundred and ten, and there remains no doubt of the whole of the fleet from Halifax being now here.

Yesterday morning fifty of them came up the Bay and anchored on the Staten-Island side. Their views I cannot precisely determine, but am extremely apprehensive, as part of them only came, that they mean to surround the Island and secure the stock upon it. I had consulted with a Committee of the Provincial Congress upon the subject before the arrival of the fleet, and they appointed a person to superintend the business and to drive the stock off. I also wrote Brigadier-General Heard, and directed him to the measure, lest it might be neglected; but am fearful it has not been effected.

Our reinforcement of Militia is but yet small; I cannot ascertain the amount, not having got a return. However, I trust if the enemy make an attack they will meet with a repulse, as I have the pleasure to inform you that an agreeable spirit and willingness for action seem to animate and pervade the whole of our troops.

As it is difficult to determine what objects the enemy may have in contemplation, and whether they may not detach some part of their force to Amboy to ravage that part of the country, if not extend their views farther, I submit it to Congress whether it may not be expedient for them to repeat and press home their requests to the different Governments that are to provide men for the flying-camp, to furnish their quotas with all possible despatch. It is a matter of great importance, and will be of serious consequence to have the camp established in case the enemy should be able to possess themselves of this river, and cut off the supplies of troops that might be necessary on certain emergencies to be sent from home.

I must entreat your attention to an application I made some time ago for flints. We are extremely deficient in this necessary article, and shall be greatly distressed if we cannot obtain a supply. Of lead, we have a sufficient quantity for the whole campaign, taken off the houses here.

Esteeming it of infinite advantage to prevent the enemy from getting fresh provisions, and horses for their wagons, artillery, &c., I gave orders to a party of our men on Staten-Island, since writing General Heard, to drive the stock off without waiting for the assistance or direction of the Committees there, lest their slow mode of transacting business might produce too much delay, and have sent this morning to know what they have done. I am this minute informed by a gentleman that the Committee of Elizabethtown sent their company of Light-Horse on Monday to effect it, and that some of their Militia was to give their aid yesterday; he adds that he was credibly told last night by part of the Militia coming to this place, that yesterday they saw a good deal of stock driving off the Island and crossing to the Jerseys; if the business is not executed before now, it will be impossible to do it.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the greatest esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

COLONEL CURTENIUS TO NEW-YORK CONGRESS.

New-York, July 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am out of money, and can do nothing without it; should be glad you would send me five thousand pounds on account of Captain Brasher, or let me know whether I must come up to receive it. The last raised troops are in want of guns, but cannot get them because Mr. Norwood or I have not any orders to deliver them to any other troops but the first four regiments that were raised. If I am to deliver any, please to give me an order in writing.

The Regulars have landed at Staten-Island without opposition. News just this moment came that part are marched to Elizabethtown and some on Bergen-Point, and we have most of the Jersey men over here. It is said the flying-camp from Philadelphia will be soon there to oppose them. I would have wished that they had been there before they came, to prevent their laying the country waste. Not one Connecticut man is come in yet.

I am, in haste, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,
PETER T. CURTENIUS.
To the New-York Provincial Congress, at the White Plains.

COLONEL MALCOM TO JOHN McKESSON.

New-York, July 3, 1776.

SIR: I request from the Congress their order on Mr. Curtenius for sixty or seventy fire-locks; he can deliver them very soon. Mr. Norwood also will furnish me with a few, provided I can obtain an order for that purpose. I have one hundred and fifty unarmed men—a circumstance that I do not like. Captain Brasher will attend the house to know their pleasure. If I thought these arms would be more useful in other hands, I would not apply for them.

How am I to get a medicine-chest? Dr. Townsend cannot attend the regiment, but Dr. Adams (a s. n. Lieutenant,) takes his place; he has been examined by Dr. Jones, whose certificate* Captain Brasher will show you. I request his commission.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your very humble servant,
WILLIAM MALCOM.

To John McKesson or Robert Benson.

I trouble you with this business that Captain Brasher may not be detained. Excuse me. The lobster pots at the watering-place.

COLONEL HUNTINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp, New-York, July 3, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Between two and three hundred cannon have been heard since one o'clock this afternoon. Our row-galleys have attacked the Phoenix and Rose, which went up the North River the 12th of last month. Am expecting every moment to hear the event. The Rhode-Islanders went up with very strong desires of making some suitable returns to their friend Wallace for all the kind things he has heretofore done them. The river is so narrow the ships cannot bring a broadside to bear upon the galleys without being in danger of running ashore.

You will find in the enclosed paper an account of the arrival of a ship from France with a very valuable cargo, and some interesting articles of intelligence. The Duke de Chartres retaking one of our vessels from an English man-of-war may be big with important consequences. Forty-four ships have joined the British fleet at Staten-Island in the last six or seven days, and are probably the first embarkation mentioned in the letter from Philadelphia. There are about seven thousand men at Newark, Bergen-Point, Elizabethtown, and Amboy. I hope there are three times the number in all our other camps.

My letters are called for, therefore must conclude with, that I am your affectionate son,

JEDEDIAH HUNTINGTON.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Lebanon.

New-York, July 3, 1776.

On Sunday last one of our cruisers, on the south side of Long-Island, took a large Bermudian built sloop, from Halifax, laden with intrenching tools, &c., bound for this place; in which were a number of the Boston Refugees, among whom, it is said, is Robert Auchmuty, Esq., late Judge of the Admiralty at Boston, and brother to the Rev. Dr. Auchmuty of this city.

Last Saturday the Ministerial Fleet arrived at Sandy-Hook from Halifax; their number, it is said, consists of one hundred and thirty sail. Yesterday upwards of fifty of them came up to the Watering place.

* This is to certify that Mr. William Adams has this day been examined by me respecting his knowledge in Surgery, and that I find him qualified to act as Surgeon of a Regiment.

Dated in New-York, July 2, 1776.

many places to hold. The enemy's shipping were masters of the St. Lawrence, and riding triumphant wherever they pleased. Above Deschambault there is no place that can be so fortified as to prevent vessels from passing. At several places between Chambly and the mouth of the Sorel the river St. Lawrence runs within a league, the mouth of which last river if the enemy once possessed, (which would have been done on the north side without coming near our batteries,) our retreat would be effectually cut off; and in case they should make any attempt that way, we had no prospect of a reinforcement to enable us to keep possession of Canada. In short, as we saw it was impossible, whilst the enemy commanded the waters of the St. Lawrence, it was agreed in Council that this place, being of the greatest consequence, ought to be fortified and secured, and we should immediately leave Canada and come here.

The troops were ordered from Montreal and other parts of the country to St. Johns. A sickly Army, and a large quantity of baggage and stores were to be conveyed away. In a few days, with great trouble and fatigue, we arrived at St. Johns, expecting every moment to meet the enemy. Part of our Army (the sick, amounting to upwards of three thousand) we sent off for Crown Point; with the rest we came to the Isle-aux-Noix, perhaps the most sickly spot in the world, where we waited for the return of the boats. The enemy came to the Sorel the night after we left it; and supposing us to be there, fired several shot against our works. They also got up to Montreal just after our men had left it.

On the 21st ultimo we met with a very great loss in our regiment. Captains McClane, Adams, and Rippie, Lieutenants McFerran, McCallister, and Hogg, and Ensigns Lusk and Culbertson, with four privates, went over from the Isle-aux-Noix to the western shore of the Lake, about a mile from the camp, but within sight, to fish and divert themselves. Captain McClane prudently proposed to carry arms, but was unfortunately overruled. Some Indians observed their motions, and while they were at a house drinking some spruce-beer, the savages surrounded them, killed Captain Adams, Ensign Culbertson, and two privates, whom they scalped in the most inhuman and barbarous manner, and carried off prisoners Captain McClane, Lieutenants Ferran, McCallister, and Hogg, and the other two privates; but a party coming to their relief from the camp, Captain Rippie and Ensign Lusk made their escape. The prisoners were doubtless carried directly to the Regulars at Montreal. We expect they will be exchanged in a short time. Some more of our people, I believe about six, were killed and scalped by the Indians the same day, about six miles above the Island, by the treachery of a Scotchman of the name of McDonald. However, our vigilance and attention have been such that nothing of the kind has since happened.

The enemy considering us intimidated, and apprehending we would not fight, sent several Indians and Canadians to line the waters and observe our motions. Colonels Wayne and Hartley having information that some persons were seen at the place where Captain Adams was killed, took a party over in the evening; when they saw a man on the top of the house looking at them, upon which they pushed forward through a swamp, found fresh tracks, saw Indian wigwams and fires; they pursued them for some distance, and took a fine horse and saddle, which some regular officer had been riding, but night prevented their overtaking the enemy. It was proposed that a party of one thousand men should go from the Isle-aux-Noix, by land, to the Isle-la-Motte, whilst the rest went in batteaus. Colonel Hartley was of the party, with two hundred and fifty Riflemen out of his regiment. They scoured the country, traversed disagreeable swamps, and destroyed the house, mills, &c., of the traitor McDonald before mentioned, who had fled the morning before they got to his house. Near the house, finding fresh tracks and fires, they renewed their pursuit, but could not overtake the enemy.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, July 3, 1776.

SIR: Immediately after the recess of the General Assembly, I gave the necessary orders to Brigadier-General Wadsworth for expediting the raising and marching the battalions ordered to be raised and sent to your assistance. Since which I had the honour to receive your favour of the 28th ultimo, advising of the arrival of General Howe at the Hook, and the near approach of the British fleet. In consequence of which, I have ordered such part of the battalions ordered to be raised to join you as are inlisted, to begin their march without delay, and that the residue move forward as fast as they are inlisted. But to prevent, as much as may be, any misfortune or danger from their arriving too late, I have ordered three regiments of Light-Horse of our Militia, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Seymour, to march, without loss of time, and join the Army under your command, and to continue to do duty with them until our battalions are completed, when, it is expected, they will be discharged, unless the situation of the Army should require that they be longer detained, of which you will be the proper judge; in which case it is hoped that they may be detained no longer than is absolutely necessary, as their private business at this season, in which the publick is interested, will suffer by their absence.

The critical situation of the Army under your command, and our desire to do everything in our power for the common defence, are the motives to order these regiments of horse to your assistance; but if you should think their service not necessary or useful, or should the situation of the Army be such that their march may be dispensed with, you will signify the same to Gold Selleck Silliman, Esq., the Colonel of the regiments of Light-Horse in this Colony, as well as of a battalion of foot coming to your assistance, that he may put a stop to their march. The utmost possible despatch in completing and forwarding the other troops ordered to your assistance will be used.

I am, with great truth and regard, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COMMITTEE OF SPRINGFIELD, ETC., MASSACHUSETTS.

The Committee of the several Towns of Springfield, Westfield, and West-Springfield, at a meeting on the 3d day of July, 1776, agreed upon the following Resolves respecting the Prisoners committed to the care of the Committees of the several Towns in that part of the County of Hampshire, viz:

1. Resolved, That whereas some dangerous weapons have lately been found on some of the Prisoners, the several Committees be desired to make special search in each of their packs, pockets, &c., for the discovery of any such weapons, or inimical letters therein contained.

2. That the said Prisoners be not suffered to go out of any town or parish where they reside, upon any occasion or pretence, without a special permit from the Committee of such town or parish, nor allowed to be absent from their employers at any time without their leave; and that no leave of absence ought to be given them later than half an hour after sunset, and that they have no leave to be absent on Sundays, except to attend publick worship.

3. That the venders of spirituous liquors ought not to suffer any of the said Prisoners to be drinking in their respective houses, either at their own expense or others; but if either of the Committees of the respective towns and parishes shall judge it expedient and needful that they have strong drink, that they shall appoint some suitable person to supply them, but in a very sparing and moderate manner.

4. That whoever shall employ any of the above-said Prisoners, shall, within the space of three weeks from the time of their receiving them, transmit to the Committee from whom they receive them a copy of their agreement.

5. That no person may purchase any clothing or wearing apparel whatever belonging to the said Prisoners.

ELISHA PARKS, Chairman.
JOHN PINCHON, Clerk.

SELECTMEN OF ROCHESTER (STAFFORD COUNTY, N. H.) TO MESHECH WEARE.

Rochester, July 3, 1776.

SIR: We received an order from the Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-Hampshire, in which we were desired to deliver to Colonel Stephen Evans a four-pound cannon, which is in this town, to be returned to Piscataqua harbour, &c. Colonel Evans applied for said cannon in April last, but without an order. We told the Colonel we looked upon the cannon to be the town's property, and that it might be of service in alarming the country, &c.; but still we told him we were willing it should be carried where your Honours should think it would answer the best end, in case he would give a receipt, and promise the value thereof equal to what hath been given for other cannon bought for the use of the Colony; on which the Colonel told us he was in no capacity to receive it on that condition, and so left it. One Saturday, the 29th June last, Colonel Evans sent again for said cannon, and likewise sent the above order; but as the same difficulty subsisted that there was at first, (there being no person to give a receipt or rather security,) the cannon was not delivered. The Selectmen acquainted the Committee of Safety for said town with their proceedings relative to the cannon; they justified our proceedings, yet thought the cannon ought to be carried where it would answer the best end, but yet thought our request for the value thereof not unreasonable.

We would herewith testify our readiness to obey all such orders as we shall receive from the honourable House from time to time, as also our willingness, with our lives and fortunes, to bear our proportionable part in defending and securing to us the rights and liberties and privileges we are now contending for, &c.

We are, sir, yours and the honourable House's most obedient and humble servants,

JABEZ DAME,
BARNABAS PALMER, } Selectmen of Rochester.
WILLIAM ALLEN,

To the Hon. Meshech Weare, Esq., President of the General Assembly now sitting.

TRANSLATION OF AN EDICT, PUBLISHED AT LISBON, BY ORDER OF THE KING OF PORTUGAL.

EDITAL.

Being lately informed that the Colonies of English America, by an act published by the Congress held on the 15th of May last, do not only declare themselves entirely separated from the subjection of the Crown of Great Britain, but are already making laws by their own particular authority to resist the lawful authority of his Britannick Majesty, my good brother, friend, and ally:

And as such a pernicious example must be interesting to Princes the most indifferent, so as to deny all favour and assistance, directly or indirectly, to subjects who, in so public and formal a manner, have risen against their natural Sovereign, I am pleased to order, that in none of the Ports of these Kingdoms and Dominions there be given pratique or entry to any ship which shall arrive there with or without a cargo, coming from the Ports of the above-mentioned English North-America; but that, on the contrary, they be driven from the said Ports in the same state in which they shall arrive, without any succour of any nature whatever being given to them. The masters of ships to whom an entry may till now have been permitted, in consideration that there was no motive for hindering them, shall have notice to go out of the said Ports with their ships within the term of eight days, without further prolongation; an examination being made before they go out, whether they have on board any Gunpowder or such Ammunition as I have already prohibited by my Royal orders, given on the 21st of October of the last year, at the Arsenal and the Consulado; and confiscating for the benefit of the publick works all such ships in which there may be found such prohibited Ammunition clandestinely and privately put on board as effects deemed by such a discovery to belong to Rebels. The Conselho da Fazenda is to understand it so, and is to order this Edital to be printed and fixed up in all the publick places of the City of Lisbon, and the Ports of this Kingdom and of Algarve, that it may come to the knowledge of all, and no one may allege ignorance of it.

Palace of Nossa Senhora da Ajuda, 4th July, 1776.

With the Royal Signature.

COLONEL SMALLWOOD TO THOMAS JOHNSON.

Annapolis, July 4, 1776.

SIR: There is in this battalion a man who was enlisted by Captain Fulford as a Sergeant, who (upon the company's marching here to station) I found had been a Drum-Major in the British service, and understood the duty extremely well. Appearing much attached to our cause, I persuaded him to quit his Sergeantcy, and to act as Drum-Major in this corps; in which character he has acted about two months, during which time he has discharged his duty in an extraordinary manner, having improved our drummers and fifers very much, and has taught one for the First Independent Company, and may be very useful in forming many others for the service. His duty in this department engages him entirely, and hitherto has been, and probably for some time will continue to be, much more fatiguing than most in the battalion, for which he has only received common drummer's pay, which certainly is much too low for this duty.

I must, therefore, through you, beg leave to recommend him to the honourable Convention, as a person who merits encouragement, hoping his pay will be made adequate to his services.

There is also a Corporal of the Artillery enlisted by the Council of Safety, who understands that duty very well, is very useful, and deserves encouragement.

I am, with much respect, &c., your obedient, humble servant,

W. SMALLWOOD.

To Thomas Johnson, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JAMES TILGHMAN.

[No. 57.]

Annapolis, July 4, 1776.

SIR: Your presence is much wanted, there being but three Members in town, and several commissions to sign, and other business before us.

We are, &c.

To James Tilghman, Esq.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO DORCHESTER COUNTY COMMITTEE OF OBSERVATION.

[No. 58.]

Annapolis, July 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have sent by a boat belonging to Mr. William Acres, of Talbot County, opposite to Cambridge, two hundred and fifty weight lead, for your County. The skipper has engaged to deliver it at Cambridge to you. We shall send some more over by General Chamberlaine, to be lodged at Talbot Court-House, for the use of your Shore. In case you should be in want hereafter be pleased to apply to him.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Dorchester County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO MESSRS. DANIEL AND SAMUEL HUGHES.

[No. 59.]

Annapolis, July 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Convention have directed the Council of Safety to fortify Annapolis immediately. This cannot be done without you comply with your contract with the Province, or as much thereof as you possibly can; you will, therefore, be pleased to send as many of the eighteen and nine-pounders to Baltimore as may be in your power.

We are, &c.

To Messrs. Daniel and Samuel Hughes.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THOMAS SMYTH, THOMAS B. HANDS, AND JOSEPH NICHOLSON, JUN.

[No. 60.]

Annapolis, July 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Convention have appointed you Members of the Council of Safety, and we beg your attendance immediately.

Messrs. Vanbibber and Harrison have bought us a brig, and shipped us a valuable cargo, as you will perceive by the enclosed copy of the invoice. You will be pleased to despatch wagons immediately from Kent or elsewhere, as to be had, sufficient to convey this cargo to Chestertown, and also to provide provision for the guard to Chingoteague and back, which is to consist of a commissioned officer and twenty-four privates out of Captain Veazey's company.

We are, &c.

To Messrs. Smyth, Hands, and Nicholson.

P. S. The Convention have this moment determined that the battalion and three Independent Companies immediately march to the Jerseys, armed; you will, therefore, not lose one moment's time, but send the wagons instantly down to Virginia. We shall be totally without arms till these arrive. If Veazey's Independent Company is to march immediately, you are desired to send a Captain and thirty picked men of the Militia to guard the wagons.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL JAMES KENT.
[No. 61.] Annapolis, July 6, 1776.

SIR: Captain Nicholson being appointed to the command of one of the Continental frigates, renders it necessary that some gentleman should be commissioned to fill the department he acted in on board the ship Defence. The subalterns, though otherwise very clever, want experience; and as we have been advised by Captain Nicholson you had sailed in a vessel of force, and probably would accept the command of our ship, and as we were well satisfied of your zeal, activity, and prudence, we moved and obtained liberty from the Convention to propose it to you to take the command of the Defence. You will please to favour us with your answer immediately, and signify to us whether you will accept it. We wish you to receive the commission, and leave it to yourself to determine if it will not be better to accept the command, which probably will have continuance, than of the battalion, which will be disbanded the 1st of December.

We are, &c.

To Colonel James Kent.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN REZIN BEALL.
[No. 62.] Annapolis, July 6, 1776.

SIR: As Captain Thomas is directed by the honourable Convention to march immediately with his company to the northward, and as it is proper his men should be as completely armed as possible, we have ordered that you furnish him with such of the guns, with bayonets, belonging to your company, as may be sufficient for that purpose. He will leave with you such of his guns as have not bayonets. We desire to have a particular state of the arms of your company after Captain Thomas may have delivered you this, that we may immediately order you a proper supply from hence, to make up the deficiency if there should be any wanting.

We are, &c.

To Captain Rezin Beall.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO MESSRS. VANBIBBER AND HARRISON.
[No. 63.] Annapolis, July 6, 1776.

SIRS: Enclosed you have bill of lading and invoice of sundries, shipped on account of this Province, in the John, Captain . . . . ., amounting to £ . . . . ., which you will dispose of to the best advantage.

Captain Martin is arrived with the needful, and your orders in his favour shall be paid at sight. The brig is immediately to return to you. The articles we most want, you have a list of enclosed.

Your letters of May 21st, Mr. B. H., 15th June, we have not time to answer, particularly at this time, being much hurried by military preparations, and shall say that we are well pleased with everything you have done, and shall give you every support in our power.

We are, &c.

To Messrs. Vanbibber and Harrison.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE COMMITTEE OF OBSERVATION FOR WORCESTER COUNTY.
[No. 64.] Annapolis, July 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have ordered a Captain and thirty privates of the Militia of Kent County to guard the gunpowder, &c., belonging to this Province, from Chingoteague, in Accomack County, in Virginia, to Chestertown; but as we cannot, with any certainty, from the unhappy and disturbed state of your County and Somerset, determine with any certainty whether it may be a sufficient guard, we request, if you think it will not, that as many of your Militia as you shall determine proper, may march through Somerset and the head of Dorset with the wagons, for the further security of your powder; and we cannot doubt of the readiness of your men to engage in this service; and are fully persuaded a requisition, without an order from our Board, will be sufficient to induce a compliance.

We are, &c.

To the Committee of Observation for Worcester County.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed resolves, to which I must beg leave to refer your attention, will inform you of the steps Congress have taken to establish the flying-camp. To the unhappy confusions that have prevailed in this Colony must principally be ascribed the delays that have hitherto attended that salutary measure. However, I flatter myself things will now take a different turn, as the contest to keep possession of power is now at an end, and a new mode of government, equal to the exigencies of our affairs, will soon be adopted, agreeably to the recommendation of Congress to the United Colonies.

I am directed to request you will appoint a proper officer for the command of the flying-camp, and persons to supply them with rations.

I have written to the several Committees, and have pressed them to send forward their troops with the utmost despatch.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, July 4, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress have this day received intelligence which renders it absolutely necessary that the greatest exertions should be made to save our country from being desolated by the hand of tyranny. General Howe having taken possession of Staten-Island, and the Jerseys being drained of their Militia for the defence of New-York, I am directed by Congress to request you will proceed immediately to embody your Militia for the establishment of the flying-camp, and march them with all possible expedition, either by battalions, detachments of battalions, or by companies, to the City of Philadelphia.

The present campaign, I have no doubt, if we exert ourselves properly, will secure the enjoyment of our liberties forever.

All accounts agree that Great Britain will make her greatest effort this summer. Should we, therefore, be able to keep our ground, we shall afterwards have little to apprehend from her. I do, therefore, most ardently beseech and request you, in the name and by the authority of Congress, as you regard your own freedom, and as you stand engaged by the most solemn ties of honour to support the common cause, to strain every nerve to send forward your Militia. This is a step of such infinite moment, that, in all human probability, your speedy compliance will prove the salvation of your country. It is impossible we can have any higher motives to induce us to act. We should reflect, too, that the loss of this campaign will inevitably protract the war; and that in order to gain it, we have only to exert ourselves, and to make use of the means which God and nature have given us to defend ourselves. I must, therefore, again repeat to you that the Congress most anxiously expect and request that you will not lose a moment in carrying into effect this requisition with all the zeal, spirit, and despatch which are so indispensably required by the critical situation of our affairs.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Honourable Convention of Maryland.

(Same to the Assembly of Delaware Government.)

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

In Congress, July 4, 1776.

A Declaration by the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in General Congress assembled.

When in the Course of human Events, it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the Political Bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the Earth the separate and equal Station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent Respect to the Opinions of Mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the Separation.

We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness—That to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed, that whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these Ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its Foundation on such Principles, and organizing its Powers in such Form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient Causes; and accordingly all Experience hath shewn, that Mankind are more disposed to suffer, while Evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the Forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long Train of Abuses and Usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a Design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their Right, it is their Duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future Security. Such has been the patient Sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the Necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The History of the present King of Great Britain is a History of repeated Injuries and Usurpations, all having in direct Object the Establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid World.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the publick Good.

He has forbidden his Governours to pass Laws of immediate and pressing Importance, unless suspended in their Operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the Accommodation of large Districts of People, unless those People would relinquish the Right of Representation in the Legislature, a Right inestimable to them, and formidable to Tyrants only.

He has called together Legislative Bodies at Places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the Depository of their publick Records, for the sole Purpose of fatiguing them into Compliance with his Measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly Firmness his Invasions on the Rights of the People.

He has refused for a long Time, after such Dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative Powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the Dangers of Invasion from without, and Convulsions within.

He has endeavoured to prevent the Population of these States; for that Purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their Migrations hither, and raising the Conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the Tenure of their Offices, and the Amount and Payment of their Salaries.

He has erected a Multitude of new Offices, and sent hither Swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their Substance.

He has kept among us, in Times of Peace, Standing Armies, without the consent of our Legislatures.

He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil Power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a Jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution, and unacknowledged by our Laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of Pretended Legislation:

For quartering large Bodies of Armed Troops among us:
For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from Punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all Parts of the World:

For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us, in many Cases, of the Benefits of Trial by Jury:

For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended Offences:

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an arbitrary Government, and enlarging its Boundaries, so as to render it at once an Example and fit Instrument for introducing the same absolute Rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with Power to legislate for us in all Cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection, and waging War against us.

He has plundered our Seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our Towns, and destroyed the Lives of our People.

He is, at this Time, transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to complete the Works of Death, Desolation, and Tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty and Perfidy, scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous Ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized Nation.

He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the Executioners of their Friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestick Insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the Inhabitants of our Frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known Rule of Warfare is an undistinguished Destruction of all Ages, Sexes and Conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions we have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble Terms: our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose Character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the Ruler of a free People.

Nor have we been wanting in Attentions to our British Brethren. We have warned them from Time to Time of Attempts by their Legislature to extend an unwarrantable Jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the Circumstances of our Emigration and Settlement here. We have appealed to their native Justice and Magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the Ties of our common Kindred to disavow these Usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our Connections and Correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the Voice of Justice and of Consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the Necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of Mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace, Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in GENERAL CONGRESS, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the Rectitude of our Intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly Publish and Declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political Connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which INDEPENDENT STATES may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm Reliance on the Protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honour.

Signed by Order and in Behalf of the Congress:

Attest:

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary.

CAPTAIN NICHOLSON TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

Baltimore, July 4, 1776—five o'clock.

GENTLEMEN: I was favoured with your commands last evening, but too late to get the ship under way. Am now proceeding with the ship and tenders, and shall lose no opportunity in getting to Annapolis as soon as possible, to wait your further commands.

I am, gentlemen, your most obliged humble servant to command,

JAMES NICHOLSON.

To the Honourable the Convention of Maryland.

PENNSYLVANIA ASSOCIATORS.

At a meeting of the Officers and Privates of fifty-three Battalions of the Associators of the Colony of Pennsylvania, at Lancaster, on the 4th day of July, 1776, on notice, to choose two Brigadier-Generals to command the Battalions and Forces in said Colony:

Colonel George Ross was unanimously chosen President, and Lieutenant-Colonel Daniel Clymer was unanimously chosen Secretary.

The Protest of the Board of Officers of the five Battalions of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia to the Assembly was read.

The Circular Letter signed by the Chairman, Colonel Roberdeau, was read.

The Circular Letter from the Committee of Privates of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, signed by the Chairman, Mr. Samuel Simpson, was read.

The Protest of the Privates of the City and Liberties of Philadelphia to the Assembly, signed by Mr. Samuel Simpson, was read.

A question was put, whether the Officers and Privates shall vote by ballot separately.

Resolved, unanimously, in the affirmative.

Resolved, That both Brigadier-Generals be voted for at the same time, and that the highest in votes to be the Commanding Officer.

Adjourned till five o'clock, P. M.

P. M., five o'clock.—The Officers and Privates met according to adjournment.

Resolved, That the President, with Colonel Mark Bird and Captain Sharp Delany, be judges of the election for Brigadier-Generals.

The poll was then opened, and after casting up the same, the majority of votes were for Daniel Roberdeau and James Ewing.

The President immediately declared Daniel Roberdeau First Brigadier-General, and James Ewing Second Brigadier-General.

Resolved, That the Brigadier-Generals shall have full power and authority to call out any number of the Associators of this Colony into action, and their power to continue, unless superseded by the Convention, or by any authority under their appointment.

Resolved, That the President of this Board shall have full power and authority to grant Commissions to the two Brigadier-Generals, to continue until Commissions shall issue from the Convention, or any authority they may delegate to confirm or supersede them.

Resolved, That we will march under the command and direction of our Brigadier-Generals to the assistance of all or any of the free and independent States of America.

Resolved, That the Associators to be drafted out of each County by the Brigadier-Generals shall be in the same proportion as that directed by the late Provincial Conference in Philadelphia.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Board be given to the President for his seasonable and excellent Speech this day in behalf of the liberties of America, and for the cheerfulness and impartiality with which he conducted the business of the day. Which the President received and politely thanked them for.

Resolved, That the President, with Lieutenant-Colonel Daniel Clymer and Captain Sharp Delany, be a Committee to revise and correct the Minutes of the Proceedings of this day, and they are desired to publish them in the several Newspapers in this Colony, and that they be signed by the President.

GEORGE ROSS, President.
DANIEL CLYMER, Secretary.

Lancaster, July 4, 1776.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM TRENTON, NEW-JERSEY, DATED JULY 4, 1776, A. M.

A gentleman who this moment arrived informs that about half-past twelve on yesterday noon, as he was passing from Staten-Island to Brunswick, he was surprised by three or four officers and about one hundred Regulars, who detained him upwards of two hours. In the course of his confinement he met with Courtlandt Skinner, who told him that General Howe with his Army, from seven to ten thousand men, had landed the night before and taken possession of every pass on the Island. He says he saw most of the troops, but as they were dispersed through the Island, he could form no idea of their numbers. Skinner also told him that the fleet from England had arrived at the Hook on the night of their landing, with ten thousand men, who were to land on Staten-Island, as this morning; that they had placed two regiments opposite Amboy, had planted several pieces of cannon there, and at each of the ferries. He also asked the officers if the Commissioners were come; to which they answered yes, and that they were the very men most proper to settle differences of this sort, and also told him they were determined to dislodge our worthy General from New-York. He left New-York yesterday morning, where the Jersey Militia had most of them arrived; that the General and his troops were in high spirits, and he supposed much disappointed at this sudden movement of Howe's. The Jersey Militia have turned out unanimously, to their great credit; but as most of them have gone over to New-York, would it not be necessary for Pennsylvania to send them assistance? The gentleman thinks that both the General's express (if one was sent) and the stage are in all probability stopped, for which reason I thought it necessary to send an express. I fear I shall not be able to join our worthy General; however, I am determined to try, and if I fail, must be satisfied with having done my duty. Howe treated him very genteelly, and dismissed him at half-past two.

The enemy have taken several of the Riflemen who were on their way to Pennsylvania. I hope all such scoundrels, who will quit an army in sight of an enemy, may meet the same fate.

GENERAL LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Elizabethtown, July 4, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Since my last to Mr. Adjutant Reed nothing material has happened here, excepting that we are all fully confirmed in the enemy's having posts along the whole Staten-Island shore as far as Amboy. They have thrown up a couple of small breastworks on the Causeway leading from the Point over the Salt Meadows, at the entrance of the two brigades. It is said that last night they brought two pieces of cannon to the nearest work. We have between four and five hundred men at the Point, who have thrown up a line from the Point House eastward, to answer as a cover. We have two field-pieces, with a part of the company of Artillery of this Province.

Your Excellency must be sensible that as the department I now act in is to me entirely new, I must be desirous of every aid that can possibly be obtained. If you, sir, could spare a few experienced officers to assist me in this important business, it might be of essential service. Our men are raw and inexperienced, our officers mostly absent, want of discipline is inevitable, while we are greatly exposed for the distance of twelve or fourteen miles.

I have the honour to be, sir, your very humble servant,

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

ESSEX COUNTY (NEW-JERSEY) COMMITTEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Newark, July 4, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: As not only the levies, but the main body of the Militia, of this and the neighbouring Counties are gone to New-York, and as the King's troops are in possession of Staten-Island, and there being but a narrow river between them and our defenceless country, and it being thought improbable that General Howe will make any attempt on New-York with his present strength, or until all his expected reinforcements arrive, and as there is great reason to apprehend that he, knowing our naked and defenceless state, will in the mean time, if his troops have no other employment, make incursions at least into, and ravage our country, so near and exposed,—we cannot behold our alarming situation without anticipating the most cruel distress, our country destitute of inhabitants, our wives and children unprotected either from the enemy without or the Tories and negroes in the midst of us. In this dangerous predicament, we have no other source for relief but by humble application to your Excellency. Finly relying on your Excellency's wisdom and humanity, we don't doubt you will order the most speedy and suitable provision for the safety of our country, and quieting the distresses of our women and children. If it be really necessary that we should fall a sacrifice to the benefit of the common cause, we will endeavour to support our misfortunes without repining; but we hope the arrival of troops from Connecticut will render it unnecessary, and make the longer attendance of the main body of our Militia at New-York dispensable.

We are, with the most respectful submission, your Excellency's most obedient servants.

By order of the Committee of Newark:

LEWIS OGDEN, Chairman.

To General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL MERCER.

Head-Quarters, July 4, 1776—9 o'clock P. M.

DEAR SIR: I am to acknowledge the receipt of your favours of yesterday and this morning, and approve much of the steps you have taken for securing the ferries, as well as quieting the apprehensions of the inhabitants of Newark by stationing some troops there.

Upon full consideration of all circumstances, I have concluded to send the Militia home, except five hundred to guard Bergen Neck, which I deem an important post, and capable of being used very much to our prejudice. I am also of opinion that a body about Woodbridge and Amboy would be very useful. I propose to retain the Morris County Militia for the first purpose, and leave it to General Livingston to order the security of the other places. As to the Militia who have marched from distant parts, I suppose, like all others, they are impatient to return to their farms and business, and as others are discharged, it will be difficult to keep them. However, that I leave to General Livingston, who, if he thinks they are necessary for the defence of the Province, will give them his orders; but I do not require their service any longer.

I cannot spare Captain Burr any swivels, the row-galleys requiring all I have.

I would by all means recommend to you to place a guard at the two ferries, Hackensack and Passaic. I shall send over an Engineer to-morrow to erect some works for the security of these places. The Militia of distant parts are better in such cases than the Militia of the neighbourhood.

In detaining troops you will please to distinguish, and inculcate upon others the distinction, between the new levies and Militia. Every man of the former I expect with all expedition.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Hugh Mercer, in New-Jersey.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read in Congress July 6, 1776.]

New-York, July 4, 1776.

SIR: When I had the honour to address you on the 30th ultimo, I transmitted a copy of a letter I had received from a gentleman, a member of the honourable General Court, suggesting the improbability of succours coming from thence in any reasonable time either for the defence of this place, or to reinforce our troops engaged in the Canada expedition. I am sorry to inform you that, from a variety of intelligence, his apprehensions appear to be just and to be fully confirmed; nor have I reason to expect but that the supplies from the other two Governments—Connecticut and New-Hampshire—will be extremely slow and greatly deficient in number, as it now seems beyond question and clear to demonstration, that the enemy mean to direct their operations and bend their most vigorous efforts against this Colony, and will attempt to unite their two armies—that under General Burgoyne and the one arrived here—I cannot but think the expedient proposed by that gentleman is exceeding just, and that the Continental regiments now in the Massachusetts-Bay should be immediately called from thence and be employed where there is the strongest reason to believe their aid will be indispensably necessary. The expediency of the measure I shall submit to the consideration of Congress, and will only observe, as my opinion, that there is not the most distant prospect of an attempt being made where they now are by the enemy; and if there should, that the Militia that can be assembled upon the shortest notice will be more than equal to repel it. They are well armed, resolute, and determined, and will instantly oppose any invasion that may be made upon their own Colony.

I shall also take the liberty again to request Congress to interest themselves in having the Militia raised and forwarded with all possible expedition as fast as any considerable number of men can be collected that are to compose the flying-camp. This I mentioned in my letter yesterday, but think proper to repeat it, being more and more convinced of the necessity. The camp will be in the neighbourhood of Amboy, and I shall be glad that the Conventions or Committees of Safety of those Governments from whence they come, may be requested to give us previous notice of their marching, that I may form some plan and direct provisions to be made for their reception. The disaffection of the people at that place, and others not far distant, is exceedingly great, and unless it is checked and overawed, it may become more general and be very alarming. The arrival of the enemy will encourage it; they, or at least a part of them, are already landed on Staten-Island, which is quite contiguous, and about four thousand were marching about it yesterday, as I have been advised, and are leaving no arts unessayed to gain the inhabitants to their side, who seem but too favourably disposed. It is not unlikely that in a little time they may attempt to cross to the Jersey side, and induce many to join them, either from motives of interest or fear, unless there is a force to oppose them.

As we are fully convinced that the Ministerial Army we shall have to oppose this campaign will be great and numerous, and well know that the utmost industry will be used, as it has already been, to excite the savages and every body of people to arms against us whom they can influence, it certainly behooves us to strain every nerve to counteract their designs; I would, therefore, submit it to Congress whether, especially as our schemes for employing the Western Indians do not seem to be attended with any great prospect of success from General Schuyler's accounts, it may not be advisable to take measures to engage those of the eastward—the St. Johns, Nova-Scotia, Penobscot, &c., in our favour. I have been told that several might be got, perhaps five or six hundred or more, ready to join us. If they can, I should imagine it ought to be done; it will prevent our enemies from securing their friendship; and further, they will be of infinite service in annoying and harassing them should they ever attempt to penetrate the country. Congress will be pleased to consider the measure, and if they determine to adopt it, I conceive it will be necessary to authorize and request the General Court of the Massachusetts-Bay to carry it into execution; their situation and advantage will enable them to negotiate a treaty and an alliance better than it can be done by any person else.

I have been honoured with your two favours of the 1st instant, and agreeable to the wishes of Congress shall put Monsieur Weibert in the best place I can to prove his abilities in the art he professes. I shall send him up immediately to the works erecting towards King's Bridge, under the direction of General Mifflin, whom I shall request to employ him.

I this moment received a letter from General Greene, an extract of which have enclosed. The intelligence it contains is of the most important nature, and evinces the necessity of the most spirited and vigorous exertions on our part. The expectation of the fleet under Admiral Howe is certainly the reason the Army already come has not begun their hostile operation. When that arrives we may look for the most interesting events, and such as, in all probability, will have considerable weight in the present contest. It behooves us to prepare in the best manner; and I submit again to Congress, whether the accounts given by these prisoners do not show the propriety of calling the several Continental regiments from the Massachusetts Government, raising the flying-camp with all possible despatch, and engaging the Eastern Indians.

July 5.—General Mercer arrived here on Tuesday, and the next morning was ordered to Paulus Hook, to make some arrangements of the Militia as they came in, and the best disposition he could to prevent the enemy crossing from Staten-Island, if they should have any such views. The distressed situation of the inhabitants of Elizabethtown and Newark has since induced me, upon their application, to give up all the Militia from the Jerseys except those engaged for six months. I am hopeful they will be able to repel any incursions that may be attempted. Generals Mercer and Livingston are concerting plans for the purpose. By a letter from the latter last night, I am informed the enemy are throwing up small works at all the passes on the north side of Staten-Island, which it is probable they mean to secure. None of the Connecticut Militia are yet arrived, so that the reinforcement we have received is very inconsiderable.

A letter from General Schuyler, with sundry enclosures, of which Nos. 1, 2, and 3, are exact copies, this moment came to hand, and will no doubt claim, as they ought to do, the immediate attention of Congress. The evils which must inevitably follow a disputed command are too obvious and alarming to admit a moment's delay in your decision thereupon; and although I do not presume to advise in a matter now of this delicacy, yet as it appears evident that the Northern Army has retreated to Crown Point, and mean to act upon the defensive only, I cannot help giving it as my opinion that one of the Majors-General in that quarter would be more usefully employed here, or in the flying-camp, than there; for it becomes my duty to observe, if another experienced officer is taken from hence in order to command the flying-camp, that your grand Army will be entirely stripped of Generals who have seen service, being in a manner already destitute of such. My distress on this account, the appointment of General Whitcomb to the Eastern Regiments, a conviction in my own heart that no troops will be sent to Boston, and the certainty of a number coming to this place, occasioned my postponing from time to time sending any General Officer from hence to the eastward heretofore, and now I shall wait the sentiments of Congress relative to the five regiments in Massachusetts-Bay before I do anything in this matter.

The Commissary-General has been with me this morning concerning the other matter contained in General Schuyler's letter, respecting the business of that department. He has, I believe, in order to remove difficulties, recalled Mr. Avery, but seems to think it necessary in that case that Mr. Livingston should be left to himself, as he cannot be responsible for persons not of his own appointment. This matter should also be clearly defined by Congress. I have already given my opinion of the necessity of these matters being under one general direction, in so full and clear a manner that I shall not take up the time of Congress to repeat it in this place.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Extract of a Letter from General Greene, dated July 4, 1776.

General Scott being appointed to examine prisoners, I this morning sent four that were taken last night at the Narrows. The following is a copy of their examination. They were taken separate, and agreed in their account in everything except the number of men. The Captain's account was the least, and, I believe, the rightest, and I apprehend not much from the truth.

The fleet sailed from Halifax the 10th of June, and arrived the 29th. The fleet consisted of one hundred and twenty sail of topsail vessels, and they have on board one thousand troops received at Halifax, besides some of the Scotch Brigade that have joined the fleet on the passage. The troops from the West-Indies joined the Army at Halifax, and were there received with them.

A list of the Generals: Howe, Pigot, Percy, Grant, and Jones.

A list of the ships of force: Asia 64, Centurion 50, Chatham 50, Phoenix 40, Greyhound 30, Rose 20, Swan 16, Senegal 16.

Four days before the fleet sailed from Halifax, a packet arrived from England, that brought an account of Admiral Howe's sailing, with a fleet of one hundred and fifty sail, on board of which were twenty thousand troops; the fleet sailed a few days before the packet; they are expected in here every day.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

General Carleton's Regiment went from Halifax to Quebeck; the Niger ship that went from Halifax in April to Canada, met Burgoyne going up the river, with thirty-six transports, and six thousand troops on board.

General Carleton's son went into Quebeck painted like an Indian.

The people of Staten-Island went on board the fleet as they lay at the Hook, several boat loads of them.

Albany, July 1, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: On Friday evening I received a line from General Sullivan, copy whereof I have the honour to enclose. By the contents, your Excellency will perceive that we have reasons to believe the next will announce his arrival at Crown Point.

Yesterday morning General Gates introduced a Mr. Avery to me, who applied for money to carry on the Commissary-General's Department here. I asked if Mr. Livingston was superseded, and begged to see how he (Avery) was authorized to act here. He showed me a commission from Mr. Trumbull, the Commissary-General, with instructions annexed, appointing him Deputy Commissary in Canada, and the instructions were correspondent to such appointment. I told him his commission did not by any means supersede Mr. Livingston's; and until that was done, that I must consider Mr. Livingston as the Deputy Commissary-General here, and that all warrants for money to carry on that department here must be drawn up in his favour, unless Mr. Trumbull himself was present. He assured me that it was Mr. Trumbull's intentions that he (Avery) should have the sole management, and that Mr. Livingston was only to be considered as a contractor. I sent for Mr. Livingston, who produced a letter of the 25th ultimo from Mr. Trumbull, directly contradictory to what Mr. Avery had asserted; upon which he declared that Mr. Trumbull had informed him that Congress had given him full power to make any arrangement he thought proper, and displace whom he pleased; and that it was his intention by giving him (Avery) that commission to supersede Mr. Livingston. To which Mr. Livingston answered, that although Mr. Trumbull had no power to remove him unless authorized so to do by Congress, as he held his commission immediately from that body, yet if Mr. Trumbull had expressed any such intention, that he would immediately resign, and he would put the question to Mr. Trumbull. I observed to Mr. Avery that nothing in his commission or the instructions annexed, authorized him to say what he did; that Mr. Trumbull's letter to Mr. Livingston flatly contradicted it; that if he remained with the Army, provided it was not in Canada, he must be subordinate to Mr. Livingston, and obey his orders; which he chose not to do, and is now going down. I advised him to remain until the affair was determined; and candidly told him that I should try to keep Mr. Livingston in the employment, if he chose it, because, admitting that their abilities and integrity were perfectly equal, Mr. Livingston's conduct has met my approbation, and that his great family connexions in this country had enabled him to carry on the service when others could not have done it, of which I gave instances. General Gates was present, and acquiesced in the propriety of what I observed; I was, therefore, greatly surprised to be informed that he should tell Mr. Avery that he had nothing to say here, but that as soon as he came to the Army he would employ him—I say I was greatly surprised, because General Gates knew that the Army was no longer in Canada, and because I did not know that he then claimed a right to control my orders with respect to the Army, even if it should be at Crown Point; nor could I imagine he thought so, as your Excellency's instructions to him gave, as I conceive, not the least colour for it. Your last letter to me holds up a contrary idea, and so does every resolution of Congress hitherto transmitted to me. But that General Gates conceived, and still does, that the Army is immediately under his command, I had, a very few hours after, the most convincing proof of, as your Excellency will observe from the enclosed paper, which I hastily drew immediately after the discourse, and which I desired General Gates to read, that no misunderstanding might arise for want of recollecting what had been said, and which he acknowledges contains the substance of what passed between us.

By your Excellency's instructions to General Gates, he is empowered to appoint a Quartermaster-General in Canada. I observed this morning that I believed it was founded on a supposition that Colonel Campbell was then about quitting Canada, for that I could not imagine that an officer being "ordered to Congress to settle his accounts," deprived him of his employments; that Colonel Campbell was originally appointed to this department; and Canada now being made a separate one, and the command of it given to General Gates, he could, under the powers he had, appoint whom he pleased to act there; but that, unfortunately for us, the evacuation of that country by our troops had taken place, and that I must and should consider Colonel Campbell as the Deputy Quartermaster-General on this side of Canada.

If Congress intended that General Gates should command the Northern Army wherever it might be, as he assures me they did, it ought to have been signified to me, and I should then have immediately resigned the command to him; but until such intention is properly conveyed to me I never can. I must, therefore, entreat your Excellency to lay this letter before Congress, that they may clearly and explicitly signify their intentions, to avert the dangers and evils that may arise from a disputed command; for after what General Gates has said, the line must be clearly drawn, as I shall, until then, stand upon punctilios with General Gates, that I would otherwise with pleasure waive. But that the service may not be retarded nor suffer the least from the difference in opinion between General Gates and me, I have determined to remain here, although I had, before this affair came to light, mentioned to him my intentions of going up with him. As both General Gates and myself mean to be candid, and wish to have the matter settled without any of that chicane which would disgrace us as officers and men, we have agreed to speak plain and show each other what we have written to you upon the occasion; and he has accordingly read the whole of what I have above said.

Since writing the above, General Gates has shown me the resolutions of Congress of the 17th instant, which confirm me in the opinion I have entertained, that he was only to command the Army in Canada, and that I had no control upon him when there.

Your Excellency may be assured of my best exertions to prevent the enemy from penetrating into the Colonies. General Gates is in sentiment with me on the mode, that of increasing our naval strength, and fortifying some advantageous spot on the east side of Lake Champlain, either opposite to Ticonderoga or between that and Crown Point. Part of the Militia from the Colony is marched up; none of the others are yet moved; their tardiness will greatly distress us, as we have much, very much, to do with it.

The cannon sent up by Colonel Knox arrived yesterday; and although the Indians have deferred the treaty to the middle of this month, yet I have thought it advisable to take post at Fort Stanwix; and all the stores are moving from here to-day, and will, I hope, leave Schenectady on Wednesday morning. The Commissioners of Indian Affairs have prepared a message to the Six Nations, giving the reasons why we take post at Fort Stanwix; this will, however, not be sent until everything is so far advanced that there may be no danger in communicating to them my intentions.

Should the enemy advance and we be under the necessity of calling forth the Militia nearest us, we shall be at a loss for ball and buckshot; I wish, therefore, to have twenty-five rounds apiece for ten thousand men, sent up the soonest possible if it can anywhere be procured, with a proportionate quantity of cartridge-paper, and two tons of oakum. If any cutlasses, stink-pots, and hand-grenades, can be got, I beg they may also be sent for the use of our armed vessels.

One hundred thousand of the dollars brought up by General Gates are ordered to the Army; better than half of the other are already expended; nor will any be left in two or three days. Mr. Duane informed me, and gave me leave to make use of his name, that the five hundred thousand voted by Congress the 22d of May for this department were actually charged, and he fears they may have met with some accident on the way up. I have ordered the silver to be kept in chest, except about three thousand pounds which we borrowed here, and must now be repaid.

Four o'clock P. M.—I am this moment favoured with your Excellency's letter of the 27th ultimo, enclosing copy of a resolution of Congress of the 24th. I have immediately an opportunity of forwarding copies thereof to Governour Trumbull and Mr. Edwards. The latter has already received one month's advance wages for the Stockbridge company, and which suppose is by this time paid to them, as he informed me that they were to be here on Wednesday or Thursday next. I am afraid it will give great umbrage if they are immediately discharged; but as the order is positive, I dare not presume to defer complying with it. I shall, however, request Mr. Edwards to do it in a manner that will give the least offence. I wish Colonel Francis and Colonel Walcott were immediately ordered up to attend the conference at the German Flats, on the 15th instant, as I propose going to Crown Point to-morrow, having, upon further consultation with General Gates and General Arnold, since writing the foregoing, determined upon it; and this journey may detain me so long as to prevent my attendance, in which case there will be only two Commissioners present.

I am, dear General, most respectfully, your obedient and humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To General Washington.

Albany, June 30, 1776.

In a conversation with General Gates, in the presence of Walter Livingston, Esq., General Gates observed that Mr. Lewis had intimated to him, as what he had from Colonel Trumbull, that he might as well return to New-York, as General Gates could not provide for him agreeable to expectation, because the Army having quitted Canada, it was now under the command of General Schuyler. General Gates declared that Colonel Campbell being ordered to Congress to settle his accounts, he should appoint Mr. Lewis as Deputy Quartermaster-General. General Schuyler answered, that if Colonel Campbell quitted the department, he should willingly appoint any person General Gates thought proper; but that the Army being now out of Canada, he conceived that it was under his command, and he could suffer no appointment to be made by General Gates. General Gates conceived the contrary; upon which General Schuyler observed that he meant to be clear and explicit on a point of such importance, and declared that he conceived the Army to be altogether under his command when on this side of Canada, subject, however, to the control of General Washington; that in his absence, General Gates commanded the Army in the same manner as General Sullivan did now, and only as eldest officer, who acknowledged that General Schuyler's commands were binding on him, which he instanced in General Sullivan's last letter; and pointedly observed, that if he was with the Army, (which he always would be when his health or other indispensable publick business did not call him from it,) and ordered it to remove from one place to another, that he expected to be obeyed; that upon any sudden emergency, the officer with, and commanding the Army, had a right to exercise his judgment and take measures accordingly, for which, however, he was obnoxious to the censure or praise of the commander of the department; that if Congress meant that General Gates should command the Army in this department, and would resolve so, that he should most readily acquiesce, but that they could not after that imagine he would remain in it; that they had certainly a right to make what arrangements they thought proper; that he was a creature of theirs, and they had a right to move him wherever they pleased; but they could not put him under the command of a younger officer, nor oblige him to be a suicide and stab his own honour; that he frankly confessed General Gates's superior military qualifications; that he would always advise with him and his other brother Generals; and that if he was superseded, it would give him great pleasure to be superseded by a gentleman of General Gates's character and reputation.

Both General Gates and General Schuyler declared they would lay the matter before Congress, to prevent any evil consequence from a disputed command in a critical moment; that for the present they would co-operate, that no evil might result to the service; and that each should write to Congress to determine the matter.

General Gates having read this and General Schuyler's letter to his Excellency General Washington, agreed that the matter was fairly and fully stated, and therefore declined writing.

Isle-aux-Noix, June 24, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Before this comes to hand you will have received mine by General Arnold, acquainting you with our retreat to this place. Your favour of the 17th instant enclosing his Excellency's letter, came to hand this evening.

I am much obliged for the power you have been pleased to delegate to me, of which I shall make a proper use against the persons you mention, provided their crimes turn out as I apprehend. They are now under trial, and I trust the result will be known to-morrow. This cowardly affair, together with the want of discipline, and that infernal disorder the small-pox, has ruined our Army. Believe me, dear General, that when I ordered the sick people from hence to Crown Point, many regiments were obliged to apply for men to be drafted from other regiments to row them away, they not having well men enough for that purpose. Those that remain here, owing to their fatigue and want of fresh provisions, are daily dropping off like the Israelites before the destroying angel. The officers to a man are daily bawling aloud to go on to Crown Point, to fortify there and recruit the Army. I am, for my own part, now convinced that this step must be taken, or the Army will be lost, not by the enemy, but by sickness. I have this day viewed Windmill Point and Point-au-Fer, and think that garrisons at either place, or both, would be useless, the former being a low sunken piece of ground and the river so wide that cannon cannot command it; the latter is three miles from this point, and there the river is still wider; so that if garrisons were at these places the enemy might pass, either by water or land, without regarding them. I had four boats in company with me on my return, two of which crossed astern and the people went on shore. I heard a firing about two or three miles astern, but could not guess what it was. I have since learned that the people were attacked by the Indians and the batteaus taken. I cannot give full credence to this at present, as I think the firing must have been further off; however, as the batteaus have not yet arrived, I have sent a party after them, and shall soon know the truth of this report. This afternoon before my return, a party of officers and men, who had carelessly ventured to a French house about half a mile below this Island without their arms, were attacked by a party of Indians and two Canadians, who killed and took seven officers and four or five privates. We find these fellows have lined our shores to watch our batteaus. I shall take care to guard them well, and am now sending off a strong party of Riflemen to scourge the rascals for their insolence. Colonel Wayne, with a party, followed those who attacked and killed the officers, but could not overtake them; he recovered the batteaus and five dead bodies, scalped and mangled in a shocking manner. I shall give you the particulars as soon as it can be done with certainty.

Dear General, believe me to be, with much respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SULLIVAN.

To General Schuyler.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, July 1, 1776.

(Parole, Jersey.)

(Countersign, Militia)

The General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Parsons is President, is dissolved. A General Court-Martial of the line, consisting of one Colonel, one Lieutenant-Colonel, one Major, and ten Captains, to sit to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, to try all such prisoners as shall be brought before them. All witnesses and other persons concerned to attend the Court. Field-Officers for the above General Court-Martial: Colonel Reed, President, Lieutenant-Colonel Clarke, and Major Sprout.

John Lynch, of Captain Benezet's Company, and Colonel Magaw's Regiment, convicted by a General Court-Martial of "striking and wounding an Officer of Colonel Shea's Battalion," and Richard Neal and James Higgins, of Captain Stephenson's Independent Company of Riflemen, being convicted by the same Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Par- sons was President, of "striking and abusing several Officers of the Twentieth Regiment," were sentenced by the Court to receive thirty-nine lashes each.

The General approves the sentences, and orders them to be put in execution at such time and place as the Commanding Officer of their respective Corps shall direct.

A working party of nine hundred men, from Generals Heath's, Spencer's, and Lord Stirling's Brigades, and the same proportion from General Scott's, to turn out at five o'clock, A. M.; Huntington's, Ward's, Nixon's, and Webb's Regiments to work at the Redoubts on Jews-Hill Plain and Bayard's Hill, to be allowed one hour for breakfast, three for dinner, and to work till sunset; Parsons's Regiment to work on the well, under Captain Chapman's directions; Learned's, Wylly's, and Bailey's Regiments to go to Governour's Island; Learned's to take axes from the Laboratory; Prescott's Regiment to work as Huntington's, and turn out the whole off duty, the picket not excepted; Prescott's Regiment is required to be more attentive to duty, not having furnished their complement at the works for two weeks till yesterday; Baldwin's Regiment to work at Red-Hook, and take tools from the Laboratory; General Scott's Brigade, McDougall's, Ritzema's, and Reed's Regiments, to receive orders at the Laboratory in the morning. All working parties to work till sunset, and those Regiments not otherwise directed to parade by six o'clock, A. M.

The Troops in rotation to be allowed to fire two Cartridges per man, in such a manner and at such time as the respective Brigadiers may direct. The Brigadiers to give notice to the General of their several determinations on this head.

William Hurly, of Captain Parke's Company, and of the Regiment late Learned's, tried by the above Court-Martial for firing on and wounding, without cause, one Peter Child, a citizen, was acquitted. The General approves thereof, and orders him to be discharged.

After Orders.—The whole Army to be under arms to-morrow morning, at daylight, on their Regimental parades, with their full Ammunition ready for action. The Militia of the City will parade at their usual places, and take their orders from the Brigadier-General commanding in that quarter. The Artificers, and such Militia and other Troops as are arrived in town, and have no other destination, are to parade on the Common in front of the Park of Artillery, and take their orders from Brigadier-General Lord Stirling. Colonel Nixon, with his Regiment, is to proceed, as soon as possible in the morning, to Governour's Island, and take the command there.

Head-Quarters, New-York, July 2, 1776.

(Parole, Armstrong.)

(Countersign, Lee.)

General Mifflin is to repair to the post near King's Bridge, and to use his utmost endeavours to forward the works there; General Scott in the mean time to perform the duty required of General Mifflin in the Orders of the 29th June.

No Sentries are to stop or molest the country people coming to market or going from it, but to be very vigilant in preventing soldiers leaving the Army.

Colonel Cortlandt, of the New-Jersey Brigade, is to send over five hundred of the Militia under his command, to reinforce General Greene's Brigade; these troops are to be distinguished from the old Militia in future by being called New Levies. The Quartermaster-General to furnish them with Tents. The detachment from General Spencer's Brigade to return when these get over. The Militia not under the immediate command of General Heard, are to be under that of General Mercer until the arrival of their own General Officer.

The time is now near at hand which must probably determine whether Americans are to be freemen or slaves; whether they are to have any property they can call their own; whether their houses and farms are to be pillaged and destroyed, and they consigned to a state of wretchedness, from which no human efforts will probably deliver them. The fate of unborn millions will now depend, under God, on the courage and conduct of this Army. Our cruel and unrelenting enemy leaves us no choice but a brave resistance or the most abject submission. This is all we can expect. We have, therefore, to resolve to conquer or die. Our country's honour calls upon us for a vigorous and manly exertion, and if we now shamefully fail, we shall become infamous to the whole world. Let us, therefore, rely upon the goodness of the cause and the aid of the Supreme Being, in whose hands victory is, to animate and encourage us to great and noble actions. The eyes of all our countrymen are now upon us, and we shall have their blessings and praises, if happily we are the instruments of saving them from the tyranny meditated against them. Let us, therefore, animate and encourage each other, and show the whole world that a freeman, contending for liberty on his own ground, is superior to any slavish mercenary on earth.

The General recommends to the Officers great coolness in time of action, and to the Soldiers a strict attention and obedience, with a becoming firmness and spirit.

Any Officer or Soldier, or any particular Corps, distinguishing themselves by any acts of bravery and courage, will assuredly meet with notice and rewards; and, on the other hand, those who behave ill will as certainly be exposed and punished; the General being resolved, as well for the honour and safety of the country as Army, to show no favour to such as refuse or neglect their duty at so important a crisis.

The General expressly orders that no Officer or Soldier, on any pretence whatever, without leave in writing from the Commanding Officer of the Regiment, do leave the parade, so as to be out of drum call in case of an alarm, which may be hourly expected. The Regiments are immediately to be under arms at their respective parades, and should any be absent they will be severely punished. The whole Army to be at their alarm posts, completely equipped, to-morrow, a little before day.

Ensign Charles Miller, of Captain Wright's Company, and Colonel Wyll's Regiment, charged with "absenting himself from his guard," tried by a General Court-Martial and acquitted. The General approves the sentence, and orders him to be dismissed from his arrest.

As there is a probability of rain, the General strongly recommends to the Officers to pay particular attention to the men's Arms and Ammunition, that neither may be damaged.

Lieutenant-Colonel Clarke, who was ordered to sit on the General Court-Martial in the Orders of yesterday, being absent on command, Lieutenant-Colonel Tyler is to sit in Court.

Evening Orders.—It is the General's desire that the men lay upon their Arms in their Tents and Quarters, ready to turn out at a moment's warning, as there is the greatest likelihood of it.

Head-Quarters, New-York, July 3, 1776.

(Parole, Brunswick.)

(Countersign, Princeton.)

The Director-General of the Hospital having laid before the General a plan of conduct for the Surgeons and Mates of the Regiments, by which, in case of action, they will do their duty with greater ease and benefit to the service, and the General much approving thereof, they are to attend the Director-General, and each take a copy of said plan, to which they are strictly to conform. The Adjutants of the several Regiments to make this order particularly known to each Surgeon and Mate without delay.

A working party to-morrow, consisting of eight hundred men, properly officered, from Generals Heath's, Spencer's, Lord Stirling's, and Scott's Brigades: Spencer's at Bayard's Hill Plain and Jones's Hill—Captain Chapman to direct them; the others to apply at the Engineer's Store for tools and directions, (at the west end of the Barrack,) Scott's Brigade in particular, not to depart the store until they have a director, as it will relieve the Engineer from much intricateness; they being unacquainted, did not find the place destined for them yesterday, by which means the works at the Bomb-Battery were entirely omitted.

After Orders.—That the several Brigades and Troops be at their alarm posts every morning at daybreak, as ordered this morning, and hold themselves in constant readiness, in case of an alarm.

Head-Quarters, New-York, July 4, 1776.

(Parole, Alexandria.)

(Countersign, ———)

The Colonels and Commanding Officers of Regiments are to make out Pay-Abstracts for the month of May. These are to be carefully examined by the Brigadiers under whom they serve, and by the Paymaster-General, before the Warrants are brought to be signed by the General; they are then to deliver them in, and receive payment.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read July 8. Referred to Board of War.]

New-York, July 4, 1776.

SIR: This will be handed you by Colonel Stephenson, whom I have ordered, with the Captains of the two Rifle companies from Maryland, to wait on Congress. They will point out such measures as they conceive most likely to advance the raising of the new Rifle battalion, and the persons they think worthy of promotion, that have served in the three companies here, agreeable to the enclosed list. I am not acquainted with them myself but from their report and recommendation, which I doubt not to be just, and that if Congress will please to inquire of them, they will mention other proper persons for officers. Only about forty of the three old companies have reenlisted, which I shall form into one for the present, and place under an officer or two till a further and completed arrangement is made of the whole battalions.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

A List of Officers recommended to serve in Captain Hugh Stephenson's Company of Riflemen: Abraham Shepherd Captain, Samuel Finlay First Lieutenant, William Kelley Second Lieutenant, Henry Bedinger, Third Lieutenant.

To serve in Captain Rawlings's Company: Richard Davis Captain, Daniel Cresap First Lieutenant, Newman Tannehill Second Lieutenant, Rezin Davis Third Lieutenant, not at present in the Company.

To serve in Captain Williams's Company: Philemon Griffith Captain, Thomas Hussey Luckett First Lieutenant, Adamson Tannehill Second Lieutenant, Henry Hardman Third Lieutenant, not at present in the Company.

New-York, July 4, 1776.

On Monday about one thousand of the Ministerial Troops landed on the west end of Long-Island, but soon embarked again, and seeing a party of Riflemen, said to be about one thousand, gave them three huzzas, which they returned with the Indian war-whoop. On Tuesday morning some of them appeared coming up, and before night about forty-five sail came above the Narrows, and anchored at and near the Watering place, where they fired about fifty cannon shot, of which we have not heard the occasion, and landed many of their men, whom we could plainly see exercising and parading. It was apprehended they intended to penetrate into the interior parts of the Island, or to some of the neighbouring towns, but it does not appear that they have yet attempted it, or done anything on shore, except taking up a little bridge on the Causeway between the Landing and the Highlands at the Ferry. We hear General Mercer with a detachment was yesterday despatched to watch their motions, and act as occasion might require.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED THURSDAY, JULY 4, 1776, TWELVE O'CLOCK AT NIGHT.

One of the enemy's armed sloops, of fourteen guns, having this evening run up near Elizabethtown Point, was attacked from the shore with two twelve-pounders, a great number of her men killed, she set on fire and entirely destroyed. Eight of the enemy's boats endeavoured to land some men last night on Long-Island, below the Narrows, but met with so warm a reception that they put back. We killed some of them; and took four prisoners. A finer set of men and better armed I never saw than the New-Jersey Militia which are here.

ULSTER COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee for the County of Ulster, New-Paltz, }
July 4, 1776. }

In consequence of an Order issued by this Committee the 28th ultimo, directing Cadwallader Colden, Jun., to appear here this day, where he had appealed from the Joint Committees of Newburgh and New-Windsor on the 24th ultimo:

Mr. Colden appeared accordingly, and a Letter was produced and read to this Committee, directed to the Joint Committees of this County by Cadwallader Colden, Jun., wherein the said Colden refers to the principles and opinions he hath ever professed since the present disputes between Great Britain and the Colonies took place; but, as he says in his letter, while he thought they might in the least contribute to ward off the calamities he then saw must attend the publick measures then adopted. He then gave the Committee a specimen of those principles, which are as follows, viz: That he had ever been opposed to the measures adopted for the redress of grievances, and ever believed that America was aiming at, what he now saw plainly taking place, to wit: Independency; which he should ever oppose with all his might, and wished to the Lord that his name might be entered on record as opposed to that matter, and be handed down to latest posterity, to show them his disapprobation of it.

On this Mr. Colden was desired to withdraw.

Then the Committee proceeded to consider of the matter, together with the evidence of Messrs. Palmer and Logan, which they were already furnished with. After debating the affair for some time, the Committee resolved to give Mr. Colden the offer of signing the late Association published by our Provincial Congress, with the addition—that is, that he should, in the presence of that Committee, declare upon his honour that he would immediately equip himself for the field of battle, and in case of actual invasion, go forth with the rest of his neighbours to action in defence of his country. His answer at first was, that he would not, let the consequences be what they would. Only a small space elapsed, when he desired that the Committee would indulge him (on his parole of honour) a few days to consider of the matter, and consult his family. On which he was desired to withdraw till the Committee should determine whether his request would be granted. He did, and the Committee determined that he should give a direct answer immediately. Of this he was notified, and after considering the matter for some time, he returned, and told the Committee that if he must sign it he must. The Committee then observed to him that they would use no compulsive means for that purpose; that if he did sign it, they would recommend it to him to do it freely. He then answered that he supposed the consequence of his not doing it would be his being sent to jail. To which the Committee answered him, they had not as yet determined what was to be done in that case, but observed to Mr. Colden that it was inconsistent with the character of a gentleman to sign anything contrary to his sentiments for fear of a little punishment.

On which Mr. Colden withdrew again.

After some time he returned, and informed the Committee that he would now sign the Association as directed by Congress, but thought the Committee had no right to impose additions. To this the Committee answered him, they had determined on the matter, and would not recede. On this Mr. Colden said they might do as they pleased; then turned his back and departed the room. After which the Committee then resolved that Cadwallader Colden, Jun., be committed to the common Jail of this County, there to remain until discharged by the Provincial Congress or this Committee.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT BOYD, Jun., Chairman.

ULSTER COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee for the County of Ulster, }
July 4, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: On the 13th of May last, in the town of the New-Paltz, the Committee of this County then met, at which meeting Colonel Hardenburgh, who was then Chairman, produced a resolve of our Provincial Congress, by which it appeared that the Committee of this County was authorized to draw on Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., Provincial Treasurer, for the sum of three hundred and sixty pounds, to be applied toward paying the contingent expenses that might accrue in this County. On which the Committee then met on the 13th of May aforesaid, made out an order on Mr. Livingston for the above-named sum in favour of Colonel Hardenburgh, whom they (the Committee) then appointed their Treasurer, making him amenable to the Committee for his disbursements from time to time, also for the stock in hand whenever thereunto called by that Committee.

At a meeting of the Committee on the 27th ultimo it was resolved that a new Treasurer should be elected, and an order made out desiring Colonel Hardenburgh to appear and account with the Committee, who were to meet this day. Major Joseph Hasbrouck was unanimously chosen Treasurer on the 27th ultimo, and this day Colonel Hardenburgh appeared, agreeable to the notice given him, but absolutely refused giving up the money remaining in his hands, alleging that he, considered personally, was accountable to Congress for the money, having given his receipt for it, and would not deliver it up to the Committee without an order from Congress for that purpose. To all this he was pretty fully answered by the Committee; but to no purpose, he being determined. Now, gentlemen, in order to show you that this Committee do not mean to act in this matter with the least partiality towards any person, neither have they any objection to Colonel Hardenburgh's having remained their Treasurer provided he had remained in the Committee; but his being voted out in the precinct where he lived rendered him incapable to serve in the character of Chairman in the County Committee any longer. Of course he would have no business that could induce him to attend the Committee more than other individuals, therefore every person who had accounts against the County, and lived in the southern parts of it, after having them audited by the Committee, must be put to the extra expense and fatigue of travelling from the house of Ann Dubois to Colonel Hardenburgh's to receive their money, which certainly would be a grievance, and is wholly removed by the appointment of Mr. Hasbrouck as Treasurer, who lives contiguous to the house where the Committee meets, of course convenient for persons from every part of the County. Therefore, gentlemen, we beg that you will immediately lay this matter before the honourable Convention of our State, and procure us an order that will enable us to draw our money from Colonel Hardenburgh, which, we conceive, he unjustly detains from us, and thereby be enabled to discharge the accounts that appear to be justly due by us. Also, gentlemen, that you will be pleased to solicit the Convention for a determination what commissions Colonel Hardenburgh is entitled to, as that gentleman declared before the Committee he would be paid a commission as ample for the whole sum as though he paid it out in small parcels; therefore, beg the honourable Convention may fix this matter, lest there should some altercation take place between that gentleman and this Committee concerning it, which we would by all due means endeavour to avoid.

We have the honour, gentlemen, to be, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT BOYD, Jun., Chairman.

To the Members for the County of Ulster now in the Convention of the State of New-York.

P. S. Gentlemen, must beg your care and vigilance in the above. The affair should long ere this have been sent to you, having been committed to my charge, but our late troubles give me other employment. Last Tuesday our Committee met and fixed officers for our Rangers, in which we found no other difficulty than choosing the persons who should serve from an extra number, having nine offered for Captains and fourteen Lieutenants. Isaac Belknap, Jacob R. Dewitt, and Elias Hasbrouck are the Captains. Gentlemen, as it doth not appear by the resolves concerning the raising of Rangers, who is to muster them, or where or by whom they are to be stationed, I have it in charge from our Committee to write you concerning those particulars, begging that the honourable Convention may direct concerning them.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest esteem, your very humble servant,

ROBERT BOYD, Jun.

COMMITTEE OF PANTON TO GENERAL GATES.

Panton, July 4, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: With hearts full of gratitude, we beg leave to return you our most sincere thanks for the kind regard you have paid to our petition of yesterday, by sending over Captain Hay to hear our proposal with respect to forming a mode of protection for ourselves, our families, and for us. If agreeable to you, sir, we would be glad three gentlemen, sufficiently well acquainted with the nature of farming to be sufficient judges of the value of all the standing stock on each of our farms, might be appointed by your Honour to appraise the same, as we all expect that whatever loss may accrue (moveables excepted) to any one of us from the enemy shall be borne by the whole in proportion to the valuation of every individual's stock at the beginning. We are likewise desirous that some sort of fort or forts may be built at such place or places as may be found most proper, to which we could retire every night. We are ready to put ourselves under the command of any officer you may please to appoint for our protection, till our crops are got in, the damage, if any, which may happen to any individual ascertained, provided we are not sent further to the northward than Onion River, nor further to the southward than Ticonderoga, except the whole Army should think proper to move. We will be glad to supply the Army with whatever may be saved of our crops, after reserving what is absolutely necessary for our families, at the price customary to be given for such articles in this country. We hope we shall have the liberty of choosing our own officers. If agreeable to your Honour, it would be very pleasing to us if Captain Stanton was to take command of the whole of this place. We are sorry to trouble you at this time of hurry and business, but hope necessity will plead our excuse.

Determined to defend the freedom of America at the risk of everything that is dear to us, permit us to wish that your Honour may long be continued in the chief command over us, as the easy access the distressed find to your ear is a convincing proof you will do everything in your power to render us as happy as the present situation of affairs will admit of.

We have the honour to be, with the utmost respect, your Honour's most obedient humble servants,

JOHN STRONG,
ZADOK EVERETT, } Committee.
EDWARD RAYMENT, }

To the Hon. Major-General Gates, at Ticonderoga.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, July 4, 1776.

SIR: The retreat of the Northern Army, and its present situation, have spread a general alarm. By intelligence from Major-General Schuyler, received last evening, I have reason to conclude that they are now at Crown Point and Ticonderoga, in a weak state, and under necessity of an immediate reinforcement to enable them to make a stand, and prevent the enemy from passing the Lake and penetrating into the country. The prevalence of the small-pox among them, is every way unhappy. Our people in general have not had that distemper. Fear of the infection operates strongly to prevent soldiers from engaging in the service; and the battalions ordered to be raised in this Colony fill up slowly. Are there no measures may be taken to remove the impediment? May not the Army be soon freed from that infection? Can the reinforcements be kept separate from the infected? Or, may not a detachment be made from the troops under your command, and the Militia raising in the several Colonies, and ordered to New-York, of such men as have had the small-pox, to be replaced by the troops raising for the Northern Department? Could any expedient be fallen upon that would afford probable hopes that this infection may be avoided, I believe our battalions would soon join the Northern Army. I shall omit nothing in my power to expedite them.

The retreat of the Army from Canada exposes the northern frontiers of New-York and New-Hampshire to the ravages of the Indians, who will doubtless be spirited up to fall upon them. Some of the settlements on Onion River, I am informed, are breaking up and removing, and the whole filled with the most disquieting apprehensions. Some powder and lead, upon application, have been supplied them from this Colony; but the settlers there, from their infant state and consequent poverty, are unable to devote themselves to the defence of the frontiers, unless they should be enabled to hire labourers to carry on the business of their farms in their absence. I could therefore wish that your Excellency might think proper to recommend it to the Continental Congress to order a battalion to be raised and stationed there for the defence of those settlements. It would, I trust, be immediately filled up with a hardy race of men in that quarter, well adapted to repel the attacks of the savages, and ready to join and support the Northern Army upon occasion, and at all times may scour the woods and furnish intelligence of the enemy's motions. If those settlers are driven back, besides the loss of their property, a much heavier expense will fall upon some of the Colonies for the support of their families than the charges arising from the raising and maintaining a battalion of Continental troops; and we shall still have a frontier to defend. The anxiety of the friends and relations of many, if not most of those settlers, who emigrated from this Colony, and the importance of the matter, will, I trust, be my sufficient apology for wishing to engage your influence with Congress to support the motion I judge advisable and shall make, to have a battalion raised out of and stationed on those frontiers.

By a letter from General Schuyler of the 1st instant, received last evening, I am advised that Generals Schuyler, Gates, and Arnold, were to set out on Tuesday morning. I trust they are by this time at the end of their journey, and hope their presence may have a happy effect towards relieving affairs in that quarter.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COLONEL SEYMOUR TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, July 4, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I last evening received your Honour's direction and order to march with the three regiments of Light-Horse to New-York, to succour our Army until the troops raising could arrive. In consequence thereof, I last night despatched orders to the Majors of the several regiments to proceed forthwith, and should have taken entire pleasure to have gone with them and served my country at this critical moment, but the particular circumstances of my family (Mrs. Seymour being near her time) must plead my excuse. I will, however, venture as far as New-Haven, and give them every encouragement in my power.

We shall set out from here to-morrow morning, and join Major Hart at New-Haven to-morrow evening. Shall wait the return of the bearer, and hope your Honour will think proper to supply my place with some other appointment; and am your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

THOMAS SEYMOUR.

To the Hon. Governour Trumbull, at Lebanon.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL SEYMOUR.

Lebanon, July 4, 1776.

SIR: I have your letter of the 4th instant, and observe the contents. If your circumstances are such that you cannot proceed with the troops, the command will naturally devolve on Major Hart as first Major. You will deliver your instructions to him, and the money you have received for the support of the troops, and use your influence to animate the men and hasten their march.

To Colonel Seymour.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO DAVID GALUSHA.

Lebanon, July 4, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 30th ultimo came to hand by Captain Herrick. I have considered the contents, and have written to General Washington to desire him to use his influence with the Continental Congress, that a battalion of Foot may be raised and stationed on or near the Grants, and by the next post shall propose the same to the Congress.

This, it is hoped, will be sufficient for your present defence, and you may depend upon every assistance in future which it will be in my power to afford you.

To Mr. David Galusha, Chairman of the Committee on Bennington Grants.

DR. WHEELOCK TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hebron, July 4, 1776.

MUCH HONOURED SIR: The bearer must be my epistle for the intelligence from Coos, which he this minute has brought me.

If the College breaks up and the scholars leave that country, which is so exhausted of men, arms, and ammunition, for the publick service, the consequences will likely be very sad. If they can be furnished with means of defence, they will likely be willing to stay. The College and neighbourhood will need not less than one hundred stand of arms. I expect a wagon down to-morrow to carry them directly up, with a supply of ammunition, if you can possibly provide the same.

I write in the utmost haste and in a feeble state, but design, Deo volente, to set out for Dartmouth as soon as you have answered my desire aforesaid, or it can be done by anybody you shall direct or give orders to do it.

I am your Honour's most obedient humble servant,
ELEAZER WHELOCK.

To the Hon. Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

A PROCLAMATION FOR A DAY OF PUBLICK HUMILIATION, OF FASTING AND PRAYER.

It being our incumbent duty to acknowledge God in all our ways, and to commit all our affairs, both publick and private, to his all-wise direction and guidance, and especially in a day of singular and general calamity to implore his merciful interposition; and it having been the laudable practice of this Government to recommend and appoint days of publick Fasting and Prayer upon special and solemn occasions; and this Court apprehending the present season to be big with the most important events, not only to this, but to all the United American Colonies, and sensible that these events are at the disposal of the Supreme Governour of the Universe:

We have thought fit, with the advice of Council, and at the desire of the House of Representatives, to appoint, and do hereby set apart Thursday, the first day of August next, to be observed throughout this Colony as a day of solemn humiliation, fasting, and prayer, hereby calling upon Ministers and People publickly to humble themselves under the righteous hand of God; penitently to acknowledge their many heinous and aggravated sins, and the righteousness of his dispensation towards them; with devout and importunate supplications to implore Almighty God that the frowns of his Providence, manifested by the severe drought wherewith some parts of the land have been visited, and all the humiliating events which have lately taken place in America, may, under the Divine influence, produce a sincere repentance and thorough reformation among all orders and degrees of persons; that he would mercifully remove the present tokens and effects of his righteous displeasure against us, and prevent those more severe judgments that our sins deserve, and which, in the present aspects of Divine Providence, we are warned to prepare for; that he would command his blessing upon all our publick Councils in this important crisis of our political affairs; protect and preserve the life of our General, his officers and soldiers; succeed and prosper their arms wherever employed; that our cruel and unnatural enemies may be defeated in their open attempts, secret plots, and diabolical machinations to subjugate or destroy us; and this people, placing their hope and confidence in that God in whom their patriotick and pious fathers trusted, and were delivered, may be disposed, with manly cheerfulness, to offer themselves for the defence of their bleeding country, and of those rights, civil and religious, in the enjoyment of which the peace and happiness of the present and future generations depend; that he will be pleased to hear the cry of the prisoners, and grant a speedy liberation to all our captivated brethren; that he would water the earth with timely refreshing showers, and cause this year to abound with health and plenty, and prevent the spreading of any epidemical sickness among us; that he would put a stop to the wanton effusion of human blood, guard and defend our sea-coasts from the invasions of those sons of war destined by Britain indiscriminately to burn and destroy; that he would protect our frontiers from the inroads of the Northern savages; that he would pour out of his Spirit upon this people, and his blessing upon their offspring; and that he would spread the peaceful Kingdom of the Divine Redeemer over the face of the whole habitable world.

And all servile labour and recreation are forbidden on the said day.

Given at the Council Chamber, at Watertown, this 4th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1776.

Signed by the major part of the Council.

By their Honours' command:

JOHN AVERY, Jun., Dep. Secretary.
GOD save AMERICA.

Sachervill Wood exhibited his Account against Congress for supplying the Continental Prisoners confined in the Jail of this County up to this day, amounting to £70 4s. 8d.; which amount was approved of, and signed by the Chairman.

The two following Resolves of Congress are ordered to be entered on the Minutes of this Board:

"IN CONGRESS, May 29, 1776.—Resolved, That Midshipman Draper be offered in exchange for Captain William Buddin.

"June 4, 1776.—Resolved, That the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania be empowered to negotiate with Captain Bellew on the best terms they can for an exchange of the Prisoners on board the Liverpool: Provided always, that this shall not be construed so as to enable them to deliver up Lieutenant Bogard and Lieutenant Ball in the exchange.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

In consequence of the above Resolve of Congress of 29th May, a Letter was written to Dr. Binsell, of German-town, desiring that Mr. Draper may be suffered to come to this City with Captain Buddin, in order to his being exchanged.

Captain William Brown being appointed by this Board to go on board the Liverpool man-of-war, the following Instructions were signed by the Chairman, and delivered him:

"You are to proceed with Mr. William Buddin and John Draper on board the Liverpool ship of war, and deliver Mr. Draper in exchange for Mr. Buddin and his son, and treat with Captain Bellew for a further exchange of prisoners; observing that this Committee are not empowered to offer either Lieutenant Ball or Lieutenant Bogard to be exchanged. It cannot be expected that the seamen taken prisoners belonging to the King's ships can be rendered back in exchange upon equal terms for mariners who are taken in merchant ships or coasting vessels, much less for passengers or other inhabitants that may be made captive, who ought to be set on shore, as is the custom of war. You are, therefore, carefully to attend to these distinctions, and procure such proposals from Captain Bellew as this Committee can accept of, and which may serve as a basis for future exchanges."

The Commanding Officer of the Fleet had this day orders to suffer the Marine Company on board the Provincial ship to be entirely under the command of their own Officers.

Pursuant to a Resolve of Congress of the 4th day of June instant, empowering this Committee to negotiate with Captain Bellew for an exchange of Prisoners on board the Liverpool, Captain William Brown is authorized and appointed to take Mr. John Draper, Midshipman of the Liverpool, on board the said ship in exchange for Mr. William Buddin and his son, and to treat with Captain Bellew for the exchange of such other prisoners as are on board the said ship.

In Committee of Safety, June 8, 1776.

Present: James Biddle, Chairman, John Nixon, James Mease, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Owen Biddle, Samuel Howell, Samuel Morris, Jun.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Fitzsimmons & Moulder, for £375, which is directed to be charged to their Account.

Resolved, That Mr. James Biddle and Owen Biddle be authorized to agree for a sufficient number of Store-Houses in Germanstown, to contain the Salt, Saltpetre, and other articles belonging to the Province, that may be thought necessary to send there for their better security.

That they be authorized to apply to Robert Towers, the Commissary, who is directed to deliver any articles that he may have in Store belonging to the Province for the purpose aforesaid.

That they employ a proper person at Germanstown to receive and store the different articles that may be sent there, and to deliver them out agreeable to the orders of this Board.

That they employ Wagons to take the said articles to Germanstown.

John Montgomery, Esq., exhibited an Account from the Committee of Correspondence and the Commissioners of Cumberland County, amounting to £343 16s. 1d., being the amount of 46 quarter-casks and 359 lbs. Powder, 41 cwt. 2 qrs. of Lead, and 336½ lbs. Lead, and 1421 Flints, with the charges thereon, purchased for account of this Province; (310 lbs. of the above Powder was sent to Westmoreland County, and 90 lbs. delivered to the Indian Commissioners); which sum was directed to be paid by the Committee of Accounts.

On application from the Committee of Westmoreland County, that the Ammunition belonging to the publick left in the care of Robert Hanna, Esq., be applied for the defence of the frontiers of this Colony:

Resolved, That the said Committee be authorized to receive from Robert Hanna, Esq., all the Ammunition belonging to the publick that he has in his care; which Ammunition they are to dispose of in such way as will best conduce to the safety of the said County, and the said Robert Hanna, Esq., is hereby required to deliver to the said Committee or their order.

That the Steward of said Boat be allowed ten Dollars per month.

By order of the Board Robert Morris, Esq., was applied to for four tons of Gunpowder, to fill up sixty Cartridges for the Boats; and, if Congress required, this Board will return the like quantity from the Cartridges now in the Boats.

Upon application of Colonel Francis for a quarter-cask of Gunpowder for the use of his Battalion of Rifle Associators, by order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver him one-quarter cask of Powder.

Captain Richards having furnished a list of such necessities as may be wanted by the Boats in time of engagement,

Resolved, That the list be completed, and that he be directed to procure, as soon as possible, every article contained in said list.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Committee of Lancaster to permit the makers of Rifle-Guns in that Borough to contract, under their care and with General McKinley, or such person as he shall empower, for forty Rifle-Guns, for the use of the Delaware Companies, provided that a certificate be produced to the said Committee from Colonel Miles that this Battalion is fully supplied before the said contract shall take place.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Mr. John Cauborn, for £300; which is directed to be charged to his account for sinking Chevaux-de-frise.

Resolved, That Mr. Owen Biddle be requested to write to George Taylor, Esq., and desire he would send down to this Board one of his four-pound Cannon, and to inform what quantity of Powder he used in proving the same.

Resolved, That Mr. Robert Smith be fully empowered to purchase materials and employ a sufficient number of hands to carry the above Resolve into immediate execution.

That Captain White and Mr. Samuel Morris be requested to give every assistance and advice in their power to forward the execution of the said Resolve.

Resolved, That the Commissary make up 60 rounds of Cartridges, with Powder, for each of the Galleys, the Floating Battery, and the Ship Montgomery. Those for the 32-pounders are to be filled with the following quantity of Powder, viz: 40 rounds with 11½ pounds, 10 ditto with 11½, and 10 ditto with 12½ pounds. Those for the 24-pounders are to be filled as follows: 40 rounds with 8½ pounds, 10 rounds with 8½ pounds, 10 rounds with 9½ pounds. Those for the 18-pounder are to be filled as follows: 40 rounds with 6½ pounds of Powder, 10 rounds with 6½ pounds, and 10 rounds with 7½ ditto. And that the Commissary is hereby required to observe the same proportions, as a rule, in making up Cartridges in future, not to be deviated from on any account without special orders from this Board.

By order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver Henry Hoover, or his order, half a ton of Saltpetre, and one-and-a-half hundred weight of Sulphur, to be manufactured into Gunpowder.

The following was this day sent to this Committee from Congress, and ordered to be entered on the Minutes:

"In Congress, June 14, 1776.

"A Memorial from the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania was presented to Congress, and read, setting forth that a Committee of Assembly, accompanied by the General Officers lately in town, and a skilful Engineer, have viewed the River Delaware, and the fortifications and defences erected at the expense of the Colony of Pennsylvania to oppose and prevent the passage of the enemy's ships, and that they have judged it necessary, for further security, that a Redoubt should be erected at Billingsport, New-Jersey, and that a Boom should be there thrown across, or some other obstructions fixed in the Channel; and praying, as the place for the Redoubt is out of this Government, and their Colony has expended a very large sum for the defence of the River, that the Congress would direct these works to be done at the expense of the Continent.

"Wherefore, Resolved, That the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania be empowered, at the Continental expense, to erect the Redoubt, and to fix the Boom or other obstructions, at the places aforesaid.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

Adjourned to five o'clock in the afternoon.

5 o'clock, P. M.—The following Members met: George Clymer, Chairman, Barnard Dougherty, Joseph Parker, John Nixon, Samuel Howell, Robert White, Owen Biddle.

Resolved, That the Delegates in this Province in Congress be requested to inform Congress that their recommendation relative to forming the Flying-Camp was not carried into execution by the Assembly, and desire to be informed whether it is their intention that this Board should take upon them the execution of the same.

A few days since, this Board wrote to Congress in respect to the exchange of Prisoners with the Commander of the Liverpool, man-of-war; in answer to which the President of Congress, in his letter of the 18th instant, informs this Board that Congress judges it improper to exchange men taken in the merchant ships and river crafts for seamen taken from the enemy's ships.

In Committee of Safety, June 20, 1776.

Present: John Nixon, Chairman, George Clymer, John Cadwallader, Robert White, Samuel Howell, David Rittenhouse, Daniel Roberdeau, Alexander Wilcocks.

Instructions to Commodore Samuel Davidson were drawn up and agreed to yesterday, and delivered him this day, and are as follows:

In Committee of Safety, June 19, 1776.

SIR: The Committee have thought proper to appoint you Commodore-in-Chief of all the Provincial Naval Armaments in the river Delaware, which you are to notify to the officers of the Fleet by publishing to them your commission. It becomes necessary to give you some instructions to regulate your conduct in some points of this important trust.

And, first, you are by all possible means to establish such a proper sense of subordination in the Fleet, that all the orders you think necessary to issue be punctually and implicitly obeyed—a loose and relaxed discipline utterly enfeebling every military establishment, however respectable it may otherwise be in the circumstance of number and force.

Secondly. As it is the duty and inclination of this Committee to maintain the Fleet in a constant state of preparation to receive the enemy, you must immediately take an exact survey of its present condition, and whatever may be wanting in its equipments, to make report of to Captain William Richards, who is appointed and directed to supply all its deficiencies.

Thirdly. An attack from the enemy being highly probable, though the time uncertain, it is necessary that every part of the Fleet should have its proper stations assigned, in such way as to afford mutual support, and that the whole may act to the best effect.

Fourthly. You must particularly attend not only to the situation of the Fleet, but take great care that the officers and men are not absent from their respective vessels any length of time and at any great distance; but as it is probable that some of the officers of the boats may be desirous of coming up to this city, you may give leave of absence to them, but only to six officers at one time; and that no more than three of that number shall be Captains, who shall not be absent more than forty-eight hours at one time from their respective vessels.

Lastly. Should any accident or circumstance happen in the Fleet that has the least tendency to affect the service, you are to give the earliest information of it to the Committee of Safety, that they, if they have the means of remedy, may apply such as the nature of the case may require.

These being the principal matters that have occurred to the Committee, they confide in your prudence and discretion, which have directed their choice, to supply their omission in those numberless circumstances and situations in which you may be placed, earnestly recommending to you, however, that you endeavour to promote the utmost harmony between you and the officers of the Fleet and between one another, on which depends so much the success of every undertaking where men are to act in concert, and mutual assistance is required.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN NIXON, Chairman.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Thomas Nevill, for £200, to be charged to his account for purchasing Lead for the use of this Province.

Resolved, That Edward Bingley be appointed Captain to the Fire Brigantine in the service of this Province, and that he engage four men to navigate the said Brigantine.

The Commodore had directions this day to distribute fifty rounds of Gunpowder to each of the Armed Boats, taking receipts for the delivery from their Commanding Officers, and at the same time to take from them all the Powder they have now on board.

A Letter was this day written to George Bryan, Esquire, Naval Officer, desiring he would grant permits to the Captains of Vessels that may apply for Chevaux-de-frise Pilots to the Town of Chester, taking a qualification that they will take no Pilot further down the River than Chester, unless it be such Vessels as go down the Bay under convoy of Continental Ships of War, who are to be allowed Pilots on their producing a certificate from the Marine Committee that they are to be taken under convoy, and that Privateers will always receive the necessary papers from this Board.

In Committee of Safety, June 21, 1776.

Present: Robert Morris, Vice-President, John Cadwallader, Joseph Parker, Alexander Wilcocks, Samuel Howell, James Mease, George Ross, Daniel Roberdeau, John Nixon, George Clymer, Robert White, Thomas Wharton, Jun., David Rittenhouse, Samuel Morris, Jun.

Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver Thomas Apty two pounds of Gunpowder for cleansing the Work-House of bad air, and to deliver to George Clymer, Esquire, six pounds of Gunpowder.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of James McLene for £152 19s. 3d., being the amount of twenty Rifles and forty-three Muskets purchased by him in Cumberland County, which is to be charged to Arms purchased for account of Congress.

By order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver to Colonel Atlee, or his order, as many Fire-locks and Accoutrements as he may have occasion for to complete his Battalion.

Resolved, That the Report of the Committee of Assembly appointed to inquire into the conduct of this Committee, on the 14th instant, be published in the different Newspapers of this City.

Adjourned to four o'clock, when the following Members met: George Ross, Chairman, Thomas Wharton, John Nixon, John Cadwallader, Alexander Wilcocks, James Mease, Daniel Roberdeau, Robert White, Samuel Howell, George Clymer.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of John Fulton, of Chester County, for £50, to be charged to his account, for purchasing Arms on account of Congress.

Resolved, That John Hazlewood, Esq., be appointed Captain and Superintendent of the Fire-Vessels and Fire-Rafts and to the Guard-Boats, and that he be allowed for his services thirty-six dollars per month and four rations, to commence the day of his first appointment, being the 23th of December last.

In consequence of a Resolve of the 19th instant, Robert Morris, Esquire, applied to Congress, and delivered the following memorandum to the Board, taken by him in Congress:

"In Congress, June 20, 1776.

"Robert Morris, one of the Delegates from the Province of Pennsylvania, reminded the Congress that the Assembly of said Province had adjourned on the 14th instant, without having been able to carry into execution the Resolves of Congress of the 3d instant for raising six thousand Militia for establishing a Flying-Camp.

"And then informed the Congress that their said Resolve not being directed in terms to the Committee of Safety, but addressed to the Colony, the said Committee were in doubt whether it would be expected from them to execute the said Resolve, as they are in recess of Assembly the Executive body of this Province. He also alleged, that if the Congress expected the Committee to proceed in this business, it would be necessary or advisable that they should recommend it expressly to them; for, under the present circumstances of the Province, he much doubted if they would be obeyed, unless so authorized; and added, that if the Congress did not see proper to take further order in this matter, he hoped the Committee of Safety would always be held blameless, as they now gave Congress this necessary information for the express purpose of having an explicit declaration if they were expected to act in this important business, which they were ready to undertake if so desired. This application was made by Mr. Morris, as declared, by order of the Committee of Safety; and after a debate of considerable length, and two motions made and seconded, one was withdrawn and the other determined in the negative. In consequence whereof, I have made this memorandum immediately on the spot, to appear when it may be necessary, and to prevent blame being cast where it is not merited.

“JOSEPH HEWES, “EDWARD RUTLEDGE, } Delegates in
“T. HOPE, } Congress.”

Resolved, That Colonel Roberdeau be requested to apply to Mr. Benjamin Harrison, or any other person, to be employed in purchasing of ten tons of Brass for the use of this Province.

Resolved, That Mr. Samuel Howell be requested to purchase of Mr. Amos Strettle the whole quantity of Copper that he has for sale.

Upon application of Mr. Lawrence Bernie for a sum of Money to be advanced him to assist his carrying on a File Manufactory, by order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of said Bernie, for £300, which is directed to be paid him on his giving proper security for the repayment of said sum in eighteen months from the date hereof, either in Cash or Files, which payment shall be made at the option of this Committee.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esquire, and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of David Kennedy, Esquire, for £100, to be charged to his account, being towards the payment of Linens and Blankets, to be delivered by him to this Committee.

Resolved, That Colonel Cadwallader, Captain White, and Mr. Parker, be a Committee to employ proper persons to build six flat-bottomed Boats, agreeable to a Resolve of yesterday.

By order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver the following quantity of Ammunition to the Colonels of the different Battalions of Associators in Chester County, viz:

To Colonel James Moore: 2,300 Cartridges for Provincial Muskets; 2,070 Cartridges, assorted, for the other different bores of Fire-locks; 1,500 Flints.

To Colonel Thomas Hockley: 2,300 Cartridges for Provincial Muskets; 2,300 Cartridges, assorted, for the other different bores of Fire-locks; 1,600 Flints.

To Colonel Hugh Lloyd: 1,840 Cartridges for Provincial Muskets; 1,610 Cartridges, assorted, for the other different bores of Fire-locks; 1,200 Flints.

To Colonel William Montgomery: 2,760 Cartridges for Provincial Muskets; 2,415 Cartridges, assorted, for the other different bores of Fire-locks; 1,800 Flints.

To Colonel Richard Thomas: 1,840 Cartridges for Provincial Muskets; 1,610 Cartridges, assorted, for the other different bores of Fire-locks; 1,200 Flints.

And to each of the said Colonels the same proportion of loose Powder and Lead equal to the quantity of Cartridges.

In Committee of Safety, June 24, 1776.

Present: George Clymer, Chairman, Joseph Parker, Robert White, John Cadwallader, Daniel Roberdeau, Samuel Howell, David Rittenhouse, Alexander Wilcocks, John Nixon, Thomas Wharton, Jun.

Resolved, That Mr. Samuel Howell, Mr. George Clymer, and Mr. Owen Biddle, be a Committee to agree with Mr. Thomas Savage to carry on the manufactory of Salt on the Jersey shore, and make report of such agreement to this Board; and that they (the said Committee) draw on the Committee of Accounts for such sums of money as may be necessary to complete and carry on said work.

Robert Towers, Commissary, his account for wages, up to the 4th instant, was this day directed by the Board to be paid, being for three hundred and thirty-four days, at 10s., amounting to £167.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Robert Towers, for £53 5s. 5d., being the amount of his account for making Cartridges, for the pay of Lead, &c.

Resolved, That Dr. Duffield and Dr. Rush be directed to lay before this Board an account of the quantities and kind of Medicine, Surgical Instruments, Lint, and Rags for bandages, belonging to the publick, and report their opinion whether anything is wanted for the use of the Hospital.

At a special meeting of the Committee of Safety:

Present: Alexander Wilcocks, Chairman, Samuel Howell, John Nixon, James Biddle, John Cadwallader, Robert White, Joseph Parker, Daniel Roberdeau.

In Committee of Safety, June 25, 1776.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, for £200, in favour of Colonel William Rankin, being towards the payment of Fire-locks, purchasing by him in York County, on account of Congress.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Thomas Gaucher, for £30, being so much paid him for disclosing his art of boring and grinding Gun-barrels, agreeable to his agreement of this day.

Upon application of Robert Morris, Esq., from the Marine Committee, for a quantity of Lead for the use of the four Frigates building for account of Congress,

Resolved, That this Board supply the said Ships with Lead for their head-pumps and hause-hole.

ROBERT MORRIS, Vice-President.

By order of the Board the Committee of Accounts was directed to pay Colonel Miles his order for the amount of a hogshead of Rum, received by him at Lewistown, for the use of the Provincial Rifle Battalion under his command, and charge the same to account of Congress.

The Conference of Committees having sent the following Resolve to this Board, by Mr. Hill, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Blewer, Members of that body:

“In Conference, June 25, 1776.

“Resolved, unanimously, That it be recommended to the Committee of Safety of this Province to confine the command of Commodore Davidson to the Ship of War and Floating Battery belonging to the Province, and to issue no orders to the Captains or other officers of the Row-Galleys, Fire-Ships, or Fire-Rafts, through the said Commodore, until the Convention meets; and that it be recommended to the Captains and other officers of the Row-Galleys, &c., to pay all due obedience to the Committee of Safety until that time, and until a new appointment shall take place.

“A true copy:

“THOMAS MCKEAN, President.”

In consequence of the above Resolve, a Letter was written to Commodore Davidson, directing him to confine his command to the Ship and Floating Battery ; and a Letter written to Captain Dougherty, enclosing him a copy of said Resolve, with directions that he repair forthwith to this Committee, to receive such instructions as may be judged necessary.

Resolved, That Mr. Clymer, Mr. James Biddle, and Mr. Wilcocks, be a Committee to draw up a state of the publick transactions of this Board, in order to its being laid before the publick, if thought necessary.

In Committee of Safety, June 26, 1776.

Present : George Clymer, Chairman, Joseph Parker, Samuel Morris, Jun., John Nixon, Samuel Howell, Thomas Wharton, Jun., James Biddle, Robert White, Daniel Roberdeau.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Thomas Fitzsimmons and Joseph Moulder, for £500, to be charged to their Accounts.

Colonel David McCutcheon being brought before this Board by a sub-Committee of the Committee of Inspection and Observation, as a person dangerous to the safety of American liberty; and Mr. James Steward, a Pilot, appearing at the same time, deposed that the said McCutcheon told him that if he would go aboard the Asia at New-York, there was a good offer, and that he should have two dollars a day, and other matters that will more fully appear by the deposition of said Steward,—in consequence thereof he was ordered to be confined in the Jail of this city, and the following commitment was issued :

“ To the Keeper of the Jail of PHILADELPHIA County :

“ You are hereby required to receive into your custody David McCutcheon, and keep him in close confinement until discharged by this Committee.

“ By order of the Committee :

“ GEORGE CLYMER, Chairman.”

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of William Richards and Nathaniel Falconer, or either of their Orders, for £300, to be charged to their accounts for Alarm Signals.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of William Richards, or his Order, for £400, to be charged to his account towards the payment of Provincial Naval Stores.

In Committee of Safety, June 27, 1776.

Present : Owen Biddle, John Nixon, George Ross, Chairman, Samuel Howell, Daniel Roberdeau, James Biddle, George Clymer, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Robert White, Samuel Morris, Jun., George Gray.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on Michael Hillegas, Esq., in favour of Ludwig Kerker, for £1500, being so much advanced him towards the payment of provisions supplied the Provincial Troops.

Resolved, That the Officers confined in the Jail of this city be allowed 15s. per week for their subsistence from the time of their being first confined.

The Board thinking it necessary that Captain Henry Dougherty should have proper Instructions for his government, the following were drawn up, approved of, and signed by the Chairman :

“ In Committee of Safety, June 27, 1776.

“ SIR : The Committee think it proper to give you the following Instructions to regulate your conduct as eldest Captain of the thirteen armed Boats or Gallies in the service of this Province :

“ You are forthwith to take upon you the command of the said armed Boats, and station them at anchor at the east side of Fort-Island, and keep them at that station until otherwise ordered by this Board, or the necessity of the service shall require their removal.

“ You are to cause the said armed Boats to be frequently exercised, and keep them in a complete state of preparation to receive the enemy ; and the better to effect this, immediately take an exact survey of the present condition of the said armed Boats, and whatever may be wanting in their equipments make a report of to Captain William Richards, who is appointed and directed to supply all their deficiencies.

“ The officers must constantly lodge in their respective boats, and you are to take particular care that neither officers nor men be absent from their respective vessels any length of time without your license in writing, or the leave of this Board; and you are not to suffer more than four officers, and of that number not more than two to be Captains, to be absent at any one time, nor any of them to be longer absent than for forty-eight hours at one time.

“ You are to cause fifty rounds of Powder to be delivered from the Ammunition Vessel on board each of the said boats, for which the respective Captains are to give receipts, and all the Powder now on board said boats to be put on board the said Ammunition Vessel, and order her up immediately to this city to deliver the same to the Commissary.

“ You are by all possible means to establish such a proper sense of subordination among the men of the boats, that all the orders you think necessary to issue be punctually and implicitly obeyed—a loose and relaxed discipline utterly enfeebling every military establishment, however respectable it may otherwise be in the circumstance of number and force.

“ Should any accident or circumstance happen in the Fleet that has the least tendency to affect the service, you are to give the earliest information of it to the Committee of Safety, that they, if they have the means of remedy, may apply such as the nature of the case may require.

“ These being the principal matters that have occurred to the Committee, they earnestly recommend that you endeavour to promote the utmost harmony between you and the officers of the Fleet, and between one another, on which depends so much the success of every undertaking where men are to act in concert, and mutual assistance is required.

“ By order of the Committee :

“ GEORGE ROSS, Chairman.”

“ To Captain Henry Dougherty.”

By order of the Board Thomas Dewees, Jailer, was directed to discharge from confinement Robert Saunderson, a person taken with Captain Duncan Campbell some time past.

The Committee, having reason to believe that wicked and ill-disposed persons have seduced and enticed some of the men belonging to the Boats to desert the service and go into other employ, have thought it necessary to publish the following Resolve of Assembly :

“ In Assembly, Tuesday, March 26, 1776.

“ Resolved, That any person or persons whatever, within this Colony, who shall harbour and conceal any deserter (knowing him to be such) from the Continental forces, or any other forces raised within this or any other of the United Colonies for the defence of America, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding fifty nor less than thirty dollars, or suffer three months’ imprisonment for each offence, being convicted thereof by the testimony of one or more witnesses before any two Justices of the Peace of the City, Borough, or County, respectively, where such offence shall be committed, who are hereby authorized to hear and determine all offences contrary to the above Resolve; which fine shall be deposited in the hands of the Overseers of the Poor of the City, Borough, or Township, where the offence is committed, for the use of the poor of such place.

“ And the Committee give this publick notice that they are determined to prosecute, with the utmost rigour, any person who shall harbour, conceal, or in any manner employ any deserter from the service of this Colony.”

In Committee of Safety, June 28, 1776.

Present : Owen Biddle, Chairman, Samuel Howell, Daniel Roberdeau, James Biddle, George Clymer, Robert White, George Gray.

Thomas Dewees, Jailer, was directed to discharge a man belonging to Captain Dougherty, agreeable to sentence of Court-Martial.

Resolved, That the pay of the Captain-Lieutenant of the Artillery Company be twenty-two Dollars per month.

That the First Lieutenant of said Company be allowed eighteen Dollars per month.

That the Second Lieutenant of said Company be allowed eighteen Dollars per month.

Resolved, That Hercules Courtney be appointed First Lieutenant of the Artillery Company.

That John Martin Strobogh be appointed Second Lieutenant of the Artillery Company.

Resolved, That Colonel Roberdeau, Mr. Clymer, Mr. Rittenhouse, Mr. James Biddle, and Mr. Owen Biddle, be a Committee to employ proper Engineers to make a draft of Fortifications proper to be erected at Billingsport, and to report what Works are necessary to be erected there.

That the said Committee be authorized to purchase the whole or part of a Plantation at Billingsport, on which said Fortifications are to be erected, at the expense of Congress.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Mr. Randolph, for £26, for Fire-locks purchased for account of Congress.

Resolved, That Mr. John Emmes be appointed Lieutenant on board the Fire Brig; that his pay be seventeen Dollars per month.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., in favour of Mr. McCleane, for carriage of sixty-four Fire-locks and Rifles, and one Fire-lock purchased by him, the whole amounting to £8 4s. 6d., to be charged to Arms bought for account of Congress.

Present: James Mease, George Clymer, Owen Biddle, John Nixon, Alexander Wilcocks, George Gray, Daniel Roberdeau, Samuel Howell, David Rittenhouse, Samuel Morris, Jun., Thomas Wharton, Jun., Robert White.

Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver to Doctor Harris two tons of Saltpetre, to be manufactured into Gunpowder.

The President of the Continental Congress sent the following Resolves to this Committee, which are directed to be entered on the Minutes:

"Resolved, That four Companies of Gunners be raised in Pennsylvania and four Companies in Maryland, to compose the German Battalion.

"That it be recommended to the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania immediately to appoint proper Officers for, and direct the inlistment of, the four Companies to be raised in that Colony.

"That it be recommended to the Convention, or, in their recess, to the Committee or Council of Safety of Maryland, immediately to appoint proper Officers for, and direct the inlistment of, the four Companies to be raised in that Colony.

"That the said Companies be inlisted to serve for three years, unless sooner discharged, and receive Bounty, Pay, Rations, and all other allowances equal to any of the Continental Troops.

"That the said Companies be entitled to Pay and Subsistence from the time of inlistment.

"That the said Companies, when raised, be formed into a Battalion under the command of such Field Officers as the Congress shall direct.

"That the rank of the Captains in the said Companies be regulated as the Congress shall hereafter direct.

"That five thousand Dollars be sent to the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania, and five thousand Dollars to the Convention, or, in their recess, to the Committee of Safety of Maryland, to defray the expense of raising the German Companies.

"By order of Congress:

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

Captain Loxly is requested to view the Furnace and other works belonging to Morgan Bustead, and report to this Board his opinion of their fitness to cast Brass Cannon.

By order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver to Captain Nathaniel Falconer, for account of Congress, twelve Cutlasses and twenty-eight pounds of Musket Ball.

By order of the Board Robert Towers was directed to deliver Mr. Moulder four pieces of Russia Sheeting, for Awnings for the Shallops, for accommodating the Fire-Raftmen.

Resolved, That two quarter-casks of Gunpowder be issued to each Battalion of Musketeers of Associators in the City of Philadelphia, and the Counties of Chester, Philadelphia, and Bucks, for the purpose of firing in the exercises of their Battalions, the better to qualify them for actual service; and that it be recommended to the Commanding Officers of said Battalions to direct very small Cartridges to be made up, about eighty to the pound.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Mr. John Williams, for £100, towards the payment of a Gondola he is building.

The Committee, taking into consideration the Resolution of Congress for raising a Battalion of Germans, and being of opinion that the publick service requires that it be carried into execution without any delay, and the Recruiting service be entered on as soon as possible:

Resolved, That this Board will, on Friday, the 5th inst., appoint Captains, and on Friday, the 12th instant, Lieutenants and Ensigns, for the four Companies of Germans directed to be raised in this Province by order of Congress; and that it is the opinion of this Board that, consistent with the Resolve of Congress, no persons but such as are Germans born, or the sons of Germans, should hold any office in said Companies. All such gentlemen who fall under the above descriptions, and are desirous to enter into the service, are requested to send in their applications as early as may be.

Resolved, That Mr. Towers be directed to deliver to the Orders of the Committees of the Counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, and Chester, two quarter-casks of Powder for each Battalion of Musketeers of Associators in said Counties, for the purposes as mentioned in a Resolve of this day.

Resolved, That the Commanding-Officer of Colonel Atlee's Battalion, at the Barracks in this City, be desired to appoint a Lieutenant to escort Lieutenants Bogan and Ball, now at Germantown, to Yorktown, and that he attend to this Board to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock, for his instructions.

In Committee of Safety, July 2, 1776.

Present: George Ross, Chairman, Owen Biddle, Samuel Howell, Samuel Morris, James Mease, James Biddle, George Gray, Joseph Parker, David Rittenhouse, John Nixon, George Clymer, Alexander Wilcocks, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Samuel Miles.

Resolved, That Captain Loxley be directed to put Morgan Bustead's Air Furnace in proper order for casting Brass

Artillery, and that this Board will account to said Bustead for the use of his Works.

Upon application of William Tucker, one of the Commissioners of New-Jersey, appointed to procure necessities for the Troops of that Province, for one ton of Lead, by order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver him twenty hundred pounds of Lead.

George Ross, Esq., and George Ege having contracted to supply this Board with one hundred tons of Cannon Ball at the same price that others have contracted for, and applying for a sum of Money to be advanced him, by order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts in favour of the said George Ege, for £300.

The Committee appointed to prepare an Address to the publick, reported an essay, which, being read, amended, and approved, was ordered to be inserted upon the Minutes, and to be published in the Newspapers of this City; and is as follows:

“This Committee, too much occupied in the various and multiplied business of the department in which they are placed, have seldom troubled the publick with Addresses, and, indeed, little occasion has been afforded for them, especially in justification of their own conduct, while general acquiescence in their authority prevailed, and entire confidence in their integrity and abilities remained; but they are not so blinded by self-love, or so lost in their own importance, as not to perceive lately that both confidence and authority are considerably shaken and impaired. Not resting on a foundation altogether popular, their existence has been beheld with jealousy, and, by an opposition formed on mistaken or unworthy principles, their conduct in almost every branch of the publick service has been traduced and vilified. In the honest discharge of duty, they have been obliged to stand the unmerited reproaches of many individuals, as well as of some publick bodies. After accumulated mortifications, why they still continue to keep their seats ought to be accounted for, lest they justly be supposed insensible to the feelings of men of honour; but it is necessary first to state the transaction which has principally given rise to this Address. About the beginning of last month the Committee appointed Captain Samuel Davidson Commodore and Commander-in-Chief of the Naval Armaments equipped for the defence of the river Delaware. The motives to this appointment at a Board of thirteen Members, when there was not one dissenting voice, were such as these:

“1st. That, during his continuance in the service as Captain of one of the armed Boats, he was conspicuous among the Officers for care and attention to his duty; and while he maintained a strict discipline, he had the address to conciliate the regard and affection of his crew, and always kept his Boat well manned.

“2d. That having, on the return of Captain Davidson, on a short voyage, in which he was spared from the service of this Province to go into that of the Congress, and while perfect harmony yet existed between this Board and all its Officers, and on a deliberate estimate of the comparative merits of each, given him, though a younger Officer, the more important command of the Floating-Battery, in which the same superior good conduct was observable, the Committee acted but consistently with themselves in elevating him to a still higher rank.

“3d. A clamour having been formerly excited against a superior Officer because, as was said, he had not been of the Fleet, and some of the Officers having since declared that they would yield ready obedience to any Commodore if taken from their own establishment, even though he should be the youngest among them, the present appointment, as it prevented the necessity of going out of the Fleet, was considered rather as conciliatory than as administering cause of uneasiness and discontent. They were well aware of the obvious military maxim to which they had run counter, of advancing men according to seniority; but this maxim, though perhaps proper in old establishments, where a long course of service in the lower classes are supposed to confer the necessary qualifications for the higher, may, and ought occasionally to be dispensed with in the formation of new ones. Where there can be but a slender pretext for qualifications from this cause, merit is to be sought out and preferred wherever to be found, though ambition should be disappointed and delicacy offended. In many instances have the Congress departed from this fundamental maxim, and their country has been benefited by it. The resistance of the Officers of the armed Boats to this appointment, and their indecent remonstrance, are well known. They were countenanced and supported by men whose decisions on publick questions influence in some degree the publick opinion. Mutiny was justified and abetted, and disobedience triumphed over authority. The Committee thought it their duty to adhere to the appointment they had made. The conference of Committees interpose by the following Resolution, agreed to immediately before their dissolution: ‘That it be recommended to the Committee of Safety of this Province to confine the command of Commodore Davidson to the Ship-of-War and Floating-Battery belonging to the Province, and to issue no orders to the Captains or other Officers of the Row-Galleys, Fire-Ships, or Fire-Rafts, through the said Commodore, until the Convention meets; and that it be recommended to the Captains and other Officers of the Row-Galleys, &c., to pay all due obedience to the Committee of Safety until that time, and until a new appointment shall take place.’ The Board, astonished and surprised, would have remonstrated against it, not without hope that, on a fair and impartial state of the question, those who, from the nature of their appointment, could have nothing in view but the publick happiness, and who could not have been insensible of the benefit of good order and discipline, would have recalled this hasty determination, which may be so fatal to both; but the dissolution would not allow the necessary time.

“The Committee doubt not the purity of the intention which produced this Resolution, and by which their power in so important a branch is so greatly mutilated, if not altogether destroyed. They well know the regard due to the representatives of the people, and are disposed to submit to the recommendation, though wounded and dishonoured by it. But they would have it understood that the continuance of many of their Board under such circumstances is of necessity, as no body of men can at present be appointed to supply their places, and as they perhaps may, fettered in their authority as they are, still render some small services to their country. They, however, think it incumbent on them to declare, that many bad consequences may probably proceed from a divided command. Military authority is not of a nature to be participated, and when attempted the greatest mischiefs commonly flow from it. Should this unfortunately prove so in our case, the Committee are not responsible; they have performed their duty, and look forward with pleasure to the short period of a few weeks which is to deprive them of the seats they have held, of late so much to the dissatisfaction of some men and uneasiness to themselves.”

Resolved, That the title of the Land purchased at Billingsport, to erect Fortifications by order of Congress, be made out in the names of George Clymer and Michael Hillegas, Esquires, Continental Treasurers.

Resolved, That Colonel Miles be requested to order a Battalion of the Pennsylvania Forces to New-Jersey, to encamp at Billingsport, and that the men to be employed in erecting Fortifications there be allowed two gills Spirits per diem each, over and above their usual allowance, while they work on said Fortifications.

Upon application of John Maxwell Nesbitt, Esq., a Commission was granted to John Hunn, as commander of the schooner Security, of thirty tons burden, eight carriage-guns, and eleven men.

Captain Benjamin Loxley having made proposals for casting Brass Artillery for the use of this Province, as follows, viz: that the Furnace, Fuel, Metal, and other necessities, to be found, and every incidental expense paid by this Committee, and that he have such compensation for his trouble in superintending and conducting the business as shall be thought a reasonable equivalent thereto,

Resolved, That the said proposals of Captain Loxley be agreed to.

By order of the Board Robert Towers was directed to deliver to Colonel Samuel Miles, or his order, what Rifles he has in store belonging to this Province.

Resolved, That Robert Towers, Commissary, be directed to get made two tons of Rifle-Powder as soon as possible.

That the Cartridges he makes up in future have an addition of three Buckshot in each Cartridge.

In consequence of intelligence just received, Colonel Miles is requested immediately to march his Battalion to this City, and suspend the sending a Battalion to Billingsport till further orders.

Upon application of James Craig and William Erskine & Co., owners of the Sloop Chance, James Robertson Master, burden thirty tons, six carriage guns, and thirty-four men, a Commission was granted to him, the said Captain James Robertson.

Ordered, That the Commissary deliver to Captain Loxley such of the Ordnance and Military Stores required for his Artillery Company as he can supply, and Captain Loxley is authorized to procure the remainder on the most reasonable terms, and bring in his account to this Committee.

Adjourned to four o'clock, when the following Members met: George Clymer, Chairman, Samuel Morris, Joseph Parker, John Nixon, Owen Biddle, Samuel Howell, David Rittenhouse.

Resolved, That the Continental Powder-Mill be furnished with ten tons of Saltpetre and two tons of Sulphur, and that Mr. Owen Biddle be directed to give orders for the delivery of the same.

Colonel Miles informing the Board that many of the Arms belonging to the Battalion under his command are greatly out of order, the Chairman, by order, wrote to the Superintendents of the Lock Manufactory to lay aside all other work, and apply themselves to repairing them; they are requested further to put all the workmen in the City upon this business.

Letters were this day written to the Colonels of the different Battalions of the Counties of Philadelphia, Bucks, Chester, and Lancaster, requesting they would hold themselves in readiness to march at an hour's warning with their Battalions to this City.

Resolved, That Messrs. Parker and Owen Biddle have the Guard-House at the old Powder-House removed to the new Magazine, and that Mr. Towers be authorized to occupy the said Magazine as soon as he may think it suitable to receive the publick Ammunition; and that an Officer's Guard be mounted at the said Magazine, with orders that no person but the Commissary, and such as are employed under him, are admitted on the lot without special orders from the Committee of Safety, unless they be Members of the Board.

Resolved, That Mr. Towers have the Laboratory enclosed with a fence, and that the Officer of the Guard be directed that no person be suffered to come within it but the Commissary, and such as are employed under him, but by special order of this Board, or such as are Members of this Board.

In Committee of Safety, July 3, 1776.

Present: Alexander Wilcocks, Chairman, Samuel Howell, James Mease, David Rittenhouse, George Clymer, Thomas Wharton, Jun., George Gray, James Biddle, John Nixon.

By order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver Mr. Kincar eight pieces of Russia Sheet-iron, for making sails for the Gondola building by Captain Williams.

Captain West was directed to deliver to Commodore Davidson the whole quantity of Ammunition that he now has on board the Ammunition Vessel.

By order of the Board John M. Nesbitt, Esq., Paymaster, was desired to advance two months' pay to Lieutenant Emmes, of the Fire-Brig.

Lieutenants Bogan and Ball having refused to sign the Paroles prepared for them, agreeable to the Resolves of Congress and by this Board of the 14th ultimo, Colonel Atlee had directions to order a discreet Officer and suitable Guard to proceed to Germantown and take into custody the said Bogan and Ball, and convey them forthwith to Yorktown, and deliver them to the keeper of the common Jail, provided they still persist in their refusal.

Adjourned to four o'clock.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

Four o'clock P. M.—The following Members met: James Mease, Chairman, Samuel Howell, Alexander Wilcocks, George Gray, John Cadwallader, James Biddle, Owen Biddle, Thomas Wharton, Jun., David Rittenhouse, John Nixon.

Resolved, That the following articles be procured for the use of this Province, viz: five thousand wooden Canteens, five thousand five hundred Knapsacks.

In consequence of the following Resolve of Congress, a Letter was written to Colonel Miles requesting he would give orders for the most speedy march of the Rifle Battalion to this City, and to Colonel Atlee, of the Musket Battalion, desiring his attendance on this Board:

"In Congress, July 3, 1776.

"The Congress took into consideration the Letter from the Convention of New-Jersey. Whereupon,

"Resolved, That the Committee of Safety of Pennsylvania be requested to send as many of the Troops of their Colony as they can spare to Monmouth County, in New-Jersey, to the assistance of the inhabitants of that Colony, and to be subject to the order of the Commander-in-Chief, the said Troops to be allowed the same pay and rations as the Troops in the service of the Continent from the time of their march until they return.

"Extract from the Minutes.

"CHARLES THOMSON, Sec'y.

"By order of Congress: JOHN HANCOCK, Pres't."

Colonel Atlee attended the Board, and informs that the Fire-locks belonging to his Battalion are in very bad order; that upwards of two hundred of them are now in the hands of the Gunsmiths; that he will make report to-morrow morning of deficiencies of Arms and Accoutrements in his Battalion.

Resolved, That all Officers, prisoners of war, in this Province, or coming into it, do in future wear their Uniforms whenever they go abroad; and if any Officer shall be found hereafter transgressing this order he shall be taken up and confined.

The several Committees are earnestly requested to see this Regulation effectually carried into execution.

And whereas proper attention has not been paid to the Order of the Committee of Safety of the 1st of May last, it is again published, that all persons concerned may govern themselves accordingly, as they may depend on its being strictly executed.

In Committee of Safety, July 4, 1776.

Present: Owen Biddle, Chairman, David Rittenhouse, George Clymer, Joseph Parker, John Nixon, Samuel Howell, Thomas Wharton, Jun., Alexander Wilcocks, James Mease, George Gray, James Biddle, John Cadwallader.

Resolved, That the Pay of the three Battalions of Provincial Troops of this Province, under the command of Colonel Miles, be increased to Continental pay, to commence mence the 1st of July last.

Resolved, That Abraham Hayes be appointed Third Lieutenant in one of the Rifle Companies in the service of this Province.

Upon application of Captain Nathaniel Falconer for a quantity of Grape-Shot for the use of the Marine Committee of Congress, by order of the Board Robert Towers, Commissary, was directed to deliver one cask of Grape-Shot for the use aforesaid.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Captains Peters and Wilcocks and Mr. De Haven, for £500, and directed to be charged to their Account.

Resolved, That one Battalion of five hundred Riflemen be immediately got ready to proceed to Bordentown, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Broadhead, to be employed agreeable to a requisition of the honourable the Continental Congress, and that a Letter be written to the Convention of New-Jersey to provide Wagons to transport the men and baggage to the place of destination.

Mr. Owen Biddle having occasion to leave the Board, Mr. George Clymer took the Chair.

By order of the Board an Order was drawn on John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, in favour of Captain John Hazlewood for £100; which is directed to be charged to his Account.

Resolved, That Captain David and Captain McIlwaine be empowered and directed to take up six Shallops to transport a Battalion of Troops from this City to Bordentown, to sail to-morrow.

There being an immediate necessity of a great number of Tents and Haversacks to be made up for the publick service,

Resolved, That Messrs. Bridges, Smith, Kennard, and Collins, be authorized and directed to go through the Town and buy up all the Awnings that can be got; and also, that Messrs. Mason, Bridges, and Moulder, purchase all the coarse Linen they can meet with suitable for the above purposes; the whole to be made up by them as the Board shall hereafter direct.

The following Advertisement is ordered to be published in the different Newspapers of this City:

"The Committee of Safety hereby offer a reward of one hundred Dollars to any person who shall discover by whom the Pier intended to be sunk near Fort-Island was cut loose from its moorings and turned adrift."

Resolved, That the Cannon arrived from New-London be sent down immediately to Fort-Island, and that Captain Proctor be directed to fit Carriages for them, and place as many of them for the present on the Platform, on the Battery there, as it will contain.

Resolved, That a number of rough Sheds be made at Billingsport, sufficient to accommodate and lodge five hundred Men to be employed on the Fortifications intended to be erected there.

That Mr. Robert Smith be directed to carry it into execution with all possible expedition.

The Committee, taking into consideration the Memorial of the Board of Officers of the City of Philadelphia, &c., for establishing a Patrol of Associators for the safeguard and peace of the City, came to the following Resolutions thereupon:

Resolved, That there be three Patrols of Associators for the City and Suburbs of the Northern District to begin on the north side of Arch Street and extend as far as Callowhill Street; the Middle District to begin on the south side of Arch Street and extend to the north side of Walnut Street; and the Southern District to begin on the south side of Walnut Street and extend to Almond Street; that each Patrol consist of a Commissioned Officer, who shall be allowed 5s., and four Privates, who shall be allowed 2s. 6d. each for the night; and are to patrol from eleven o'clock until daybreak.

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Colonels or Commanding Officers of the five Battalions in this City and Liberties to order and direct the said Patrols, and regulate the routine of duty in proportion to the strength of each Battalion, and to fix upon proper places for Guard Rooms.

Resolved, That the said Patrols be ordered and instructed carefully to avoid giving any disquiet to the peaceable inhabitants, but to examine all persons of suspicious appearance found in the streets, and confine such as cannot give a good account of themselves, or deliver them to the care of the City Watch; to observe and get the best information of any dangerous meetings of disaffected persons, and give intelligence thereof to the Committee of Inspection and Observation, or their sub-Committee, to whom the Officers of the Patrol are each day to report every material occurrence. That the Patrols may go beyond the limits of their respective Districts upon any particular occasion where their services may be necessary.

At a Special Meeting of the Committee of Safety, July 4, 1776:

Present: George Clymer, Chairman, Joseph Parker, Michael Hillegas, John Cadwallader, James Biddle, John Nixon, Samuel Morris, Jun., David Rittenhouse.

The honourable Continental Congress having sent the following Notice to this Committee,

Resolved, That the same be entered on the Minutes of this Board, which is as follows:

"GENTLEMEN: The Congress passed a recommendation this day requesting a Conference of the Committee of Safety, the Committee of Inspection of this City, the Delegates of New-York, New-Jersey, and Pennsylvania, and the Commanding Officers of the Association, to devise the most expeditious mode of raising and marching the Militia of this Province to the assistance of the neighbouring Colonies.

"I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

"July 4, 1776.

"ROBERT MORRIS.

"To the Honourable the Committee of Safety."

Resolved, That Mons. Kirmovan, Engineer, be requested to lay out the Military Works at Billingsport.

Ordered, That John Nixon, Esq., and others, the Committee of Accounts, pay Mr. Benjamin Weatherby the purchase money of the Land at Billingsport, and charge it to account of Congress, being £600.

NEW-YORK PROVINCIAL CONGRESS.

In the Congress Chamber of the City-Hall in the City of New-York, }
Die Martis, 10 ho. A. M., May 14, 1776. }

This being the day on which the Provincial Congress was to meet at the City of New-York, pursuant to Elections held in the respective Counties of this Colony, on the . . . day of April last, the following gentlemen met in the Assembly-Chamber at the City-Hall of the City of New-York, viz:

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Evert Bancker, Captain Denning,
Mr. Sands, Colonel Brasher.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler.

FOR ULSTER.—Mr. Wisner.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Captain Wickham.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Paulding.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Schenck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring.

No other Members appearing, the gentlemen present could not proceed to business, as a Congress, for want of a sufficient number.

But Captain Wool having arrived this morning, and being attending with certain Prisoners apprehended on Long-Island, and brought here by order of the late Provincial Congress, the gentlemen present had Captain Wool and Isaac Ketcham severally brought in and examined in their presence before Mr. Aldernan Brasher; and the Examination of Captain Wool and Isaac Ketcham, respectively, hereinafter follow, viz:

City of New-York, ss:

Jeremiah Wool, of the City of New-York, being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists, deposeth and saith: That he landed on Nassau-Island about nine or ten o'clock in the evening, last Saturday evening, and called on Thomas Weeks, Esquire, at Huntington, who was very ready and willing, on the order from Congress, to give his assistance in apprehending the persons therein named; that he then sent for the men under his command, and they arrived there about two o'clock last Sunday morning; that several of the Committee were then collected, who gave the deponent a guide to go with himself, and two guides to go with a party of his men to Isaac Ketcham's house; that he proceeded with one party and a guide to Isaac Youngs's house, and arrived there about the dawning of the day; that having set guards round the house, and knocked at the door, Isaac Youngs came to the door and opened it; that he (the deponent) immediately entered; that Isaac Youngs appeared much surprised; that the deponent told him he had business with him at Huntington, and desired him to make himself ready, and desired him to be silent and not make any alarm; that after Isaac Youngs had dressed himself, he proceeded with some of his men to search the house; that they then proceeded to an apartment of Israel Youngs, and searched that; that in that house they proceeded to a room in which they were informed Henry Dawkins usually lodged, and found under the bed in which he was informed Dawkins had lodged, a few Engraver's tools; that at the head of one of the beds in that room, one of his Sergeants discovered a crack or opening in the wall, which they suspected to be a door; that on removing the bed and other furniture necessary, with a bayonet put into the crevice, they opened a small door, within which was a narrow stairs; that Isaac Youngs, who was present, appeared to be in terror, and trembled; that the deponent sent his Sergeant and another man up the stairs, who called to him that there was a printing press; that having called up some more men to take charge of Isaac Youngs, he (the deponent) proceeded up the said stairs into a very concealed garret, with one small window, and there found a rolling-press; that the first paper he picked up was a paper which he now produced, appearing to be a copperplated imperfect copy of a Bill of Connecticut money, of forty Shillings; that he found no white man in the house, or any apartment of it, but Isaac Youngs; that he sent one man and a guide at some miles distance to search for Dawkins, and also sent to search for Henderson, but without success; that in a basin of water near the press were a number of papers cut to the size of the bill he found under the press, or thereabout; that he then had the press, with every utensil thereof, taken down, and brought down stairs; that he found in a chest in that house, which the wife of Israel Youngs said belonged to Henry Dawkins, a great number of Engraver's tools, and a number of plates, all which, with the said chest, he has brought with him; that on searching in Israel Youngs's apartment, in a drawer of a chest of drawers, he found a copperplate completely engraved for the impressing of two Dollar bills, and on the plate a bill appearing to be a two Dollar bill of Continental money, which plate and bill he now produces, and the bill is numbered 45,234, signed with the names of A. Morris, Jun., and Fred. Kuhl, and dated February 17, 1776; that out of a desk he took a parcel of strips of paper, now produced, which Israel Youngs's wife said she believed was cut off bills of Continental money; that in Israel Youngs's apartment, in a large chest, or something of that kind, large and deep, he found four bills, appearing to be Bills of Credit of Massachusetts-Bay Colony, each of the denomination of forty-two Shillings, of the Colony of the Massachusetts-Bay, dated December 7, 1775, completely plated, but not signed or numbered; that in Israel Youngs's apartment he found a parcel of paper, on some part of which he observed a number of names, written in different hands, which he has brought with him, and that four vials of different kinds of ink were found in that part of the house where the rolling press was, which ink he has left in the hands of an inhabitant of Huntington; that the ink for the plates is in Dawkins's chest; that in Isaac Youngs's apartment one of his men took a bill, appearing to be a Continental Dollar bill, off a shelf, which he now produces; that before he left Youngs's, he was informed that Isaac Ketchum was taken; that he ordered him to be brought to Youngs's; that he put the press and chests, and other matters he had seized, on a wagon, and proceeded with them, and the prisoners he had taken, to Williams's Tavern, where Mr. Weeks, and some of the Committee, who were sent for, came and attended; that from thence they despatched two parties, who found and took John Henderson and Henry Dawkins, and brought them there; that after he had talked some time with Dawkins, he told the deponent the whole truth should come out, and having got pen, ink, and paper, he wrote and signed, of his own accord, a declaration, which he delivered to the deponent, and is now produced, and is in the words following, to wit:

"The back of the Connecticut forty Shillings bill, and front of ditto, have had some impressions taken off; one back and front of the forty-two Shillings Massachusetts, none but one proof taken off to my knowledge; one back and front of the thirty Dollar bill never proved to my knowledge; one front of the two Dollar bill just begun, which was on the plate, taken off with blue letters, the borders partly done, the inside letters not touched, and will wipe off if put to the fire.

"HENRY DAWKINS."

That the deponent did not speak to the said Henry Dawkins while he was writing the said confession or memorandum, but the said Henry Dawkins wrote and subscribed the same in the presence of Henry Brasher, his Lieutenant, and the deponent; that the said Henry Dawkins also delivered to him (the deponent) a small paper containing the names of Israel Youngs, Isaac Youngs, Townshend Hulet, and Isaac Ketchum, and told the deponent they were concerned in this business; that said Dawkins told him that Israel Youngs was principally concerned, and had frequently applied to him on the subject of making and counterfeiting Paper money, or Bills of Credit; and when he was in Jail at New-York formerly, had offered to take him out and procure his discharge, if he would come up to his house and engage in that business; that Henry Dawkins informed him that ——— Woolhaupter had made the rolling-press, and that Israel Youngs brought it up to his house, secreted and put up in a box; that he (the said Dawkins) had recommended Woolhaupter to Israel Youngs as a proper person to make such press, and that Israel Youngs procured the press for the purpose of making money.* That the deponent found in the possession of Isaac Ketchum a sum of money, consisting of gold, silver, and paper money, of different denominations, which he now produces, amounting, according to the deponent's computation, to the sum of £30 14s., New-York money; that Isaac Ketchum told the deponent that he was employed in this business to get paper; that he had not been concerned in making the money, but that he was taken into the business to provide them with paper, and that he had been out on that business, but that he could inform the Congress of something that was very important to them; that a blank copperplate, now produced by the deponent, he received of Henry Brasher, his Lieutenant, who informed the deponent that he took it off a desk in Israel Youngs's house.

JEREMIAH WOOL.

Sworn this 14th day of May, 1776, before me:

ABRAHAM BRASHER, Alderman.

City of NEW-YORK, ss:

Isaac Ketchum, of Huntington, Suffolk County, Nassau-Island, being examined, saith: That Henry Dawkins has been at Cold-Spring, and the neighbourhood thereof, for about two months; that he was there some time before this examinant knew his (Dawkins's) name; that he (the examinant) was informed by Isaac Youngs that Rivington, the Printer, and the said Youngs, had had some discourse about counterfeiting the Continental money; that the Youngs hinted to this examinant that Dawkins and he had agreed to counterfeit the Paper currency, for he supposed it would be done by the Tories, and they might as well do it as others; that Israel Youngs asked this examinant if he would try to get some paper for that purpose at Philadelphia, where he (the examinant) was then going, and had talked of going for some time; that this examinant asked Youngs whether he thought they were able to make paper money; that Youngs answered they had a press making in New-York, which was not yet finished; that the examinant then asked how he applied for the press; he answered that Dawkins had written a letter to a man in New-York, in the name of one Cox, with directions how he would have it made, to be different from the one he had from him some time before, and more substantial; that this examinant believes Youngs carried the letter; that he had not got the press yet, but was promised to have it soon.

This examinant further saith: That he did not go to Philadelphia till about the 19th of April, and returned in about ten or twelve days; that he went to carry a couple of horses to sell at Philadelphia, and so collect some money which was owing to him there; that he did not purchase or make any inquiry about paper at any Paper-Mill, but that he asked a man if he knew where such paper as the Continental money was made of was to be had; that the man answered he did, but that the maker of it was sworn, and therefore would not make any of it for him. This examinant being asked who the man was of whom he made this inquiry relative to the paper, refused to mention his name, as he believed him to be a worthy, honest Dutchman. The examinant being further asked whether the Dutchman knew the use that was intended to be made of the paper, answered he believed he did—that he smiled; that the examinant told him he did not want it for his own use; upon which the man replied, "I suppose it is for some of your Yankees." That examinant, on his return home, informed Youngs that he had not been able to procure any paper for him. This examinant being asked whether he has seen any of the bills, answered that he had not, excepting one Connecticut bill, and that only the back of it, struck upon common paper.

This examinant further saith: That one Levi Lott, at Brunswick-Landing, had been employed by Youngs for the purpose of procuring paper, before this examinant was employed; that he was directed by Youngs to call on the said Lott, and inquire whether he had procured any paper; that Lott informed this examinant that he had been down to Spottswood, at a Paper-Mill, and had not applied for any paper, as there seemed little encouragement there, as he imagined there was no isinglass or suitable rags to be had there; that he (Lott) had promised Youngs to go to Pennsylvania, but waited for an answer or letter from Youngs; that he (the said Lott) did not make his business known to any person at the Paper-Mill at Spottswood, as he informed this examinant. This examinant being asked what reply Youngs made to him on his returning from Philadelphia, and informing him that he had not been able to procure him any paper, saith: That Youngs replied that he believed then he would not be able to go on, and Dawkins would lose his labour.

This examinant further saith: That he frequently spoke to Youngs, and told him it would not do for him to make such money; that Youngs answered him he did not intend to pass it himself, but intimated that some one on the frontiers of Virginia or Susquehanna would take it of him, and give something in exchange for it.

ISAAC KETCHAM.

Taken this 14th of May, 1776, before me:

ABRAHAM BRASHER, Alderman.

Isaac Ketcham being further examined, saith: That Levi Lott gave him a sample of paper to take to Philadelphia to the Paper-Mill, which he said he had cut out of a sheet of Continental bills from between the bills; that he (the examinant) put it into his pocket-book, and there kept it till the guard came to his house, when he took it out of his pocket-book and threw it into the fire and burnt it.

ISAAC KETCHAM.

Taken this 14th of May, 1776, before me:

ABRAHAM BRASHER, Alderman.

City of NEW-YORK, ss:

Isaac Ketcham, above-named, being, at his request, further examined, says: That though he at first intended to obtain paper at Philadelphia for the purpose of printing money, yet, on consideration, he thought it dangerous, and determined not to bring the paper, even if he could obtain it; that he considered if he got the paper it would not go into his saddle-bags, and that if he should carry it in a bag, it would be discovered, and therefore determined not to bring it, if it could be had.

ISAAC KETCHAM.

Taken this 15th day of May, 1776, before me:

WILLIAM WADDELL, Alderman.

In the Congress Chamber of the City-Hall of New-York, }
Die Martis, 3 ho. P. M., May 14, 1776. }

The following gentlemen met pursuant to their adjournment and agreement of this morning, viz:

FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Brasher, Colonel Stoutenburgh,
Mr. Bancker, Captain Denning.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Captain Wickham.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Paulding.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Herring.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus, Mr. Covenhoven.

No other Members appearing, the gentlemen present could not proceed to business as a Congress.

But Prisoners brought from Nassau-Island by Captain Wool, were separately brought in, and examined in the presence of Mr. Alderman Brasher, and the Examination of Thomas Henderson, Henry Dawkins, and Isaac Youngs, respectively, follow, viz:

City of NEW-YORK, ss:

Thomas Henderson, of Cold-Spring, in the Township of Huntington, in Suffolk County, Cooper, being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists, deposeth and saith: That he knows Charles Friend, and has known him since some time last summer; that he knows a person who is commonly called and known by the name of Henry Dawkins; that said Dawkins has for several weeks past resided at the house of Israel Youngs, in Huntington; that Dawkins said yesterday, in the deponent's presence, that he had been there upwards of eight weeks; that some weeks ago he saw the said Dawkins grinding some tools, which he then took to be Engraver's tools; that soon after Dawkins came up to Cold-Spring, he told the deponent that he was an Engraver and a Silversmith; that there has been a suspicion in that neighbourhood that Dawkins and the Youngs were counterfeiting money; that he (the deponent) some time ago informed Charles Friend that Henry Dawkins, a countryman of his, was in the neighbourhood at Israel Youngs; that Friend asked what he was doing there; that he (the deponent) said he supposed living on his money, which the Provincial Congress paid him for cutting plates; that Friend said, then he was on some such business now, and that he would have it out of him; that he (the deponent) told Friend he had the same suspicion; that he further told Friend that no person was permitted to go into Dawkins's chamber, and that Israel Youngs himself split the wood for fire and carried it up himself; that Friend went to see Dawkins.

City of NEW-YORK, ss:

Henry Dawkins, late of the City of New-York, at present of Cold-Spring, in Huntington Township, Engraver, being examined, says: That he left New-York nine weeks ago this day; that Israel Youngs had frequently before that applied to him to undertake to cut plates to make such bills as those issued by the Provincial Congress; that he (this examinant) would not undertake to make him such, because he had been sworn not to cut any other such; that the said Israel Youngs frequently came to see the examinant in New-York Jail, and came to see him while he (the examinant) was cutting those very plates; that after he (the examinant) was out of Jail some weeks, Israel Youngs came to the examinant and lent him some money to pay his shop-rent, and took him (the examinant) up to the said Youngs's house in Youngs's sloop, together with his (the examinant's) little son; that Israel Youngs had several times, both before and after he (the examinant) came out of Jail, applied to him to cut plates to print Provincial Bills of Credit; that after he (the examinant) had been a day or two at Cold-Spring, the said Israel Youngs showed him a large bundle of money, and took out of it a Connecticut bill of forty Shillings, and asked if he (the examinant) could imitate that for him, and requested him to do it immediately, and told the examinant that he (the said Israel) was about to pay a large sum of money and wanted it done immediately, that he might pay it away, as the examinant then understood; that said Israel Youngs told the examinant that he would reward him generously, and that he should never want; that the said Israel Youngs came to New-York for a press, but having got a bookbinder's press, which would not suit the purpose, he (the examinant) directed him to Woolhaupter to make a proper press; that, in the mean time, the said Israel Youngs was so impatient that, at his solicitation, he (the examinant) rubbed and made about a dozen of copies with a burnisher; that he believes the bills were signed by Israel Youngs; that he (the examinant) saw Israel Youngs sign three or four of those rubbed off with the burnisher; that the said Israel afterwards desired him (the examinant) to rub off some others in the same method; that he (the examinant) refused, as it injured the plate; that after the rolling-press was brought to Israel Youngs's house and put up, he (the examinant) pressed off seven other bills in Israel Youngs's presence, and showed him how to press the bills and make them; that any others that have been pressed and made were made by Israel Youngs, or some of the others concerned; that, by the handles of the press being very black, he judged at several different times that they had been at work; that it is about four weeks since the press was brought there; that Isaac Youngs and Townshend Hulet were concerned in this business; that Isaac Youngs frequently came and stayed with him hours at a time, and Townshend Hulet was frequently there and used to sleep in the room with him; that some time ago, (to wit: about a month ago, as he thinks,) Israel Youngs came to New-York, and when he returned home, brought with him a newspaper printed by Hugh Gaine, mentioning the difference between certain counterfeited Connecticut bills and the true bills, and got him (the examinant) to alter and amend the plate he had cut, to correct the differences or faults pointed out in that newspaper; that he (the examinant) did correct and amend the plate accordingly; that the counterfeit Connecticut bills described in that newspaper were those which had been struck off or printed on the said plate cut by him

(the examinant;) that soon after the rolling-press before-mentioned was set up, he then pressed the seven bills before-mentioned, and found that he had corrected the faults mentioned in that newspaper; that Israel Youngs told him when he gave him the newspaper that the bills were suspected; that he made no other plates for Connecticut money than the two plates for the forty Shilling bills; that after the examinant had completed the plate above-mentioned, Israel Youngs applied to him to make two plates to print thirty Dollar bills, Continental money; that he (the examinant) also completed those two plates; that Israel Youngs told this examinant that Isaac Ketchum was to go to Philadelphia to procure paper for the purpose of printing thirty Dollar bills; that he (this examinant) does not know whether Isaac Ketcham succeeded or brought such paper with him from Philadelphia or not; that Israel Youngs next applied to him to cut plates to print bills of Massachusetts money of the denomination of forty-two Shillings, lawful money, each; that he (this examinant) did engrave for him (the said Israel Youngs) two plates for making those bills of forty-two Shillings, lawful; that he never saw but one impression of the last-mentioned bill struck or printed, after which he (this examinant) corrected the plate for the front of the bill. The examinant being shown four copies of such bills, says they have been made with the plates which he (the examinant) cut. That the said Israel Youngs, when the last-mentioned plates were finished, took all the six plates which were finished and put them away together; that some times the said Israel Youngs used to put the said plates in a large deep chest in his parlour and sometimes in his desk; that he (the examinant) has at some times seen him put the plates in his pocket and go up stairs towards the rolling-press. That the said Israel Youngs afterwards applied to the examinant to cut plates for a two Dollar bill, and gave him a sample or bill; that he (the examinant) had proceeded to cut a part of the plate for the front of the bill. The said last-mentioned plate being produced to him, he says that is the plate which he had begun to engrave. That when Israel Youngs left home to come to New-York, about six or seven days ago, he locked up the plate in his chest of drawers; that Israel Youngs, about a month ago, told the deponent that Thomas Henderson had intimated to him that he (the said Henderson) knew what they were about, and seemed to suspect that he (the examinant) must have dropped some words that had given Henderson cause of suspicion or some knowledge of the affair. That the said rolling-press was fixed and set up in a garret, with a small window in it, which garret had not a floor, but that boards were laid there to support the press; that it was a low garret in which a person could not stand upright; that the passage to that garret was a small door out of the room in which the examinant lodged into a passage up, or place where a small stairs was made; that the said small door was placed in a wall where a bed stood before it, and that he (the examinant) did not know of the said small door, stairs, or garret, until the said Israel Youngs asked him to go up there to put the rolling-press together, which was then up in the garret. That the bills which the said Israel Youngs signed he subscribed three names to them, to wit, the same names which were signed to the bills from which the plates were engraved; that he (the examinant) was importuned by both Israel and Isaac Youngs to sign or subscribe the names to the counterfeit Connecticut bills; that through their importunities he attempted to sign one bill, but that that bill was destroyed. That Isaac Ketcham went to Philadelphia to get paper, as Israel Youngs informed the examinant, and that they expected the paper.

HENRY DAWKINS.

Taken before me this 14th day of May, 1776.

L. C. BRASHER, Alderman.

City of New-York, ss:

Isaac Youngs, of Cold-Spring, in the Township of Huntington, on Nassau Island, being examined, says: That Henry Dawkins has resided in Israel Youngs's house, which is under one roof with his (the examinant's) house for several weeks past; that he did not know that Henry Dawkins was engraving plates to print money; that he did not know that a rolling-press was in Israel Youngs's garret until after Captain Wool came there last Sunday morning; that he once saw Henry Dawkins rubbing a copper-plate, but did not know what it was for; that he did suspect that Dawkins was cutting plates to make money, but never informed himself nor ever attempted to inform himself; that his brother-in-law, Townshend Hulet, did sometimes sleep in the room with Dawkins; that he does not know where Townshend Hulet is; that the said Hulet does not stay much at home of late; that Isaac Ketcham has not frequented his brother's house more of late than formerly; that he did imagine that Henry Dawkins was making money, and spoke to his brother about it; that Israel Youngs said he never would pass any of it. Isaac Youngs further says that he did not deny to Captain Wool that there was any door or passage up to the garret where the press was found; that he did inform him that there was a door, and showed it to him; that Henry Dawkins informed the examinant that he could make a plate so exactly that it would not vary from the Congress bills, or words to that effect; that he (the examinant) informed Israel Youngs of it, and told him that he (this examinant) thought it was a sin to pass such money if it should not be found out, and that he would not have any hand in it; that the said Israel Youngs said he would not pass any of it.

ISAAC YOUNGS.

Taken this 14th day of May, 1776, before me:

L. C. BRASHER, Alderman.

Isaac Ketcham, having requested to be further heard before the gentlemen present, was again brought in and examined; and his short examination, now taken and by him subscribed in the presence of Mr. Alderman Brasher, was taken on the same paper with his examination in the former part of the day, and is herein before contained.

In the Congress Chamber of the City-Hall of New-York, }
Die Mercurii, 10 ho. A. M., May 15, 1776. }

The following gentlemen met pursuant to adjournment:

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Bancker, Mr. Stoutenburgh, Captain Denning, Mr. P. Van Zandt, Mr. Scott, Mr. Alsop.
FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Mr. Lawrence.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Captain Wickham.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Paulding, Mr. G. Morris.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Leffertse, Colonel Van Brunt, Mr. Polhemus, Mr. Covenhoven.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Alexander Webster.

Mr. Alderman Brasher being much indisposed, Mr. Alderman Waddell, on request, attended; and Israel Youngs was examined before Mr. Alderman Waddell, and his examination, by him subscribed in the presence of Mr. Waddell, is as follows:

City of New-York, ss:

Israel Youngs, of Cold-Spring, in the Township of Huntington, in Suffolk County, being examined, says: That he never applied to any person to cut any plates for him to print or impress money; that Henry Dawkins lodged in his chamber when at his house; that he does not know that Dawkins cut any plates while he was there; that he took Dawkins to his house at Dawkins's request; that he visited Dawkins a few times while he was in New-York Jail; that he never lent any money to Dawkins; that he first knew Dawkins in New-York Jail; that he never applied to Dawkins for any work but to cut a seal; that he took up a rolling-press from a person named Woolhaupter, as he thinks, to his house, at Dawkins's request; that the letter to procure the rolling-press Dawkins gave him; that when it was opened by Woolhaupter, it was written in the name of one Cox, to the best of his remembrance; that he (the examinant) then had some suspicion that Dawkins was about to print something which he ought not; that Townshend Hulet, when at his house, used to sleep in the same room with Dawkins; that his wife usually carries the keys of a large blue chest in his house; that he knows nothing of a two Dollar bill or any plate taken out of a chest of drawers in his house; that Dawkins mentioned to him that money might be struck if paper could be got; that he told Dawkins it was most probable that, if to be got, it must be in Pennsylvania, and that Isaac Ketcham was going there, and would be as likely as any person to get it, or words to that effect; that he (the examinant) spoke to Isaac Ketcham about paper, and told him what Dawkins said; that Ketcham said he did not think it could be procured; that he spoke to Levi Lott at Raritan, and informed him that a person had told him money could be made, and inquired of him whether paper could be obtained; that Lott told him he thought paper could not be obtained; that he saw Lott at his neighbour's house; that he applied to Lott about paper because he had heard that his brother had a Paper-Mill; that he purchased some sheets of large paper in New-York, and a parcel of colours of one Duyckinck, for Dawkins to make a draft for him (the examinant;); that Isaac Ketcham, since his return from Philadelphia, desired him to tell Dawkins that he thought the paper he wanted could not be got; that he does not recollect to have ever seen Henry Dawkins sign or attempt to sign a bill or counterfeit bill of Connecticut money; that his only motive or inducement to inquire about paper was to oblige Dawkins, who lived at his house; that the only subject on which he (this examinant) was to have written to Levi Lott was on account of some wheat, and that he never wrote the letter; that he does not know that he sent any message to Levi Lott by Isaac Ketcham; that it was only about wheat if he sent any message; that he has a Connecticut bill which he supposes to be a counterfeit; that it is in his pocket-book; that he showed it to a boatman and some butchers; that he was looking over his money when he discovered it; that he did not ever offer to pay it away; that he had another bill at home which was refused some time ago as bad, because it looked greasy and dirty; that the last-mentioned was a forty Shilling Connecticut bill; that he has never seen any Massachusetts bills unsigned; that he once went up to his chamber, and there saw a Connecticut bill unsigned on one of the beds; that it appeared to be a forty Shilling bill; that he does not know how it came there; that he left the bill there, and never inquired about it; that he did not suspect that Dawkins had made any of any other sort; that the rolling-press was set in the garret as being the most convenient place for it.

ISRAEL YOUNGS.*

Taken this 15th day of May, 1776, before me:

WILLIAM WADDELL, Alderman.

In the Congress Chamber in the City-Hall of New-York, }
Die Mercurii, 4to ho. P. M., May 15, 1776. }

The following gentlemen met pursuant to adjournment:

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Evert Bancker, Mr. Scott, Major Van Zandt, Colonel Rensen, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Captain Denning, Mr. Beekman.

* Isaac Youngs, examined, says: That he did suspect that Dawkins was making money; that his brother Israel once told him that Dawkins said he could make money; that he then told his brother that he would not pass any of it or countenance it; that his brother said the same; that one day saw Dawkins have a piece of copper in his hand, but never saw him engraving; that he (the examinant) knew nothing of the rolling-press until it was found by Captain Wool and his party.

Philip Youngs, being examined, says: That Dawkins was mostly employed in drawing pictures for children; that he does not know that Brown printed any bills for any person; that he asked Brown whether he could not print a little Congress money; that Brown said he could if he had a press, but looked on it to be a great sin; that he inquired what a press would cost; that Brown said about thirty or forty pounds; that Brown said he could not cut the plates; that he (the examinant) said if Dawkins could cut the plates he could not print the bills; that the examinant did tell Brown to consider of it and say nothing about the affair; that all this was merely to try Brown, as he had suspected him because he was a printer, and Dawkins had said he could cut the plates to make any money; that his father owns one quarter of the mills, and Israel Youngs and Isaac Youngs each a quarter, and John Hulet a fourth part.

Israel Youngs, being examined, says: That he never had any hand in counterfeiting money; that he suspected Henry Dawkins was about counterfeiting money, first, because he sent by him to New-York for a rolling-press, and, second, because he once found a bill in the chamber lying in a bed unsigned; that it was a forty Shilling Connecticut bill; that he never asked Dawkins any questions about it; that Dawkins paid him the most part of the money which became due for his boarding in Continental money, and boarded with him near two months; that he never saw him engraving; that he was frequently drawing pictures; that he (the examinant) offered one forty Shilling bill in payment to a woman in New-York for some tea, which she suspected, and which he took home again; that he does not know of whom he received that bill; that the door leading to the stairs to go where the press was put was made before he knew the house; that the stairs were there also before he came to that house. The letter Henry Dawkins sent for the press was signed by the name of Cox; that he (the examinant) did not inform Woolhaupter that the person who wrote the letter was not named Cox; that Dawkins sent forty shillings for the press, which the examinant then paid, and when he received the press paid the residue; that the press cost eleven pounds twelve shillings; that Dawkins has not repaid him what he advanced for the press.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Major Lockwood, Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Paulding.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Covenhoven, Mr. Leffertse, Mr. Polhemus.

Mr. Alderman Waddell attended, agreeable to request of the gentlemen present in the morning. James Parsons, of the City of New-York, Merchant, by request attended and produced a pocket-book of Israel Youngs, sealed up with different seals, impressed by the seal of the said Israel Youngs. The said Israel, being brought in and the said pocket-book shown to him, declared that he was satisfied that it had not been opened since he sealed it. It was then opened in his presence, and the money therein contained counted in his presence, and put up in lists. But of that book, in presence of the said Israel Youngs, was retained two bills of forty-two Shillings Massachusetts, one of them much blued; also two bills of Connecticut, forty Shillings each; one of them the said Israel Youngs says he supposes to be bad; that he discovered it lately; received it, as he supposes, from some person from the eastward. These bills were retained by Mr. McKesson, by order of the gentlemen present. All those transactions were in the presence of Alderman Waddell.

Isaac Ketchum sent in a request that he might be again heard. He was brought in, and his further declaration taken, in the presence of Mr. Waddell, at the end of his former examinations herein before contained.

Henry Dawkins sent in a request to the Council that he might be again called before them and examined. He was accordingly brought in, and examined before Mr. Alderman Waddell, and his Examination, by him subscribed hereafter, follows, to wit:

City of New-York, ss:

Henry Dawkins, late of the City of New-York, Engraver, being examined in the presence of William Waddell, Esq., Alderman of the North Ward of the said City, and one of the Justices of the Peace for the City and County of New-York, says: That a Bill of Credit of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, now produced to him, dated the 7th day of December, 1775, of the value of forty-two Shillings, lawful money, numbered 4354, signed G. Wheeler and Thomas Rice, is a bill which he formerly received of Israel Youngs, of Huntington, as a pattern to cut a plate to imitate the said bill and to make bills of the same denomination; that the said bill above-mentioned is yet stained with Prussian blue, which the examinant put thereon in order to obtain the imitation of the bill on a plate; that the said bill is yet smooth from the examinant having rubbed it on a plate with a burnisher; that after he (this examinant) had engraved the plate intended to print such bills, he delivered the said bill and the plate to the said Israel Youngs. The said examinant further says that a bill now produced to him, in form of a Connecticut bill, of forty Shillings, lawful money, dated May 10, 1775, and numbered 12,486, and appearing to be signed William Puthur, Thomas Seymour, Jesse Root, is a bill which he made for the said Israel Youngs, at his request, on a plate which he (the examinant) cut for the said Youngs; that it is one of the first twelve bills which the examinant rubbed off the said plate with a burnisher, before the said Youngs obtained a rolling-press; that before any bills were rolled with the press he corrected the plate by making the two small crosses after the asterism and before the obelisk to join together, which they do not in this bill; that this bill is one of the best which was rubbed off with the burnisher; that he saw the said Israel Youngs sign four of those bills; that he signed with red ink made of carmine; that he believes the bill now produced to be one of those which he saw signed with the signers' names by the said Israel Youngs; that he knows it to be one of the bills rubbed off with a burnisher by the hardness of the paper and its smoothness, and from the light colour of the bunches of grapes, which was afterwards corrected in the plate.

HENRY DAWKINS.

Taken and examined this 15th day of May, 1776, before me:

WILLIAM WADDELL, Alderman.

The following Officers of this Congress were then unanimously chosen, to wit :

Brigadier-General Nathaniel Woodhull, - President.
John McKesson and Robert Benson, - Secretaries.
Thomas Pettit, - - - - - Doorkeeper.

The Credentials from several Counties were respectively read, to wit :

A certified extract of the Minutes of the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, was read and filed. It thereby appears that at an election held at the City-Hall in the City of New-York, on the third Tuesday of April last, (pursuant to the Resolutions of the late Provincial Congress,) the following persons were, by plurality of voices, elected Deputies to represent the said City and County in Provincial Congress, to wit :

John Jay, Francis Lewis, Jacobus Van Zandt, Philip Livingston, Abraham Brasher, Henry Remsen, John Alsop, Evert Bancker, Thomas Randall, Comfort Sands, Isaac Stoutenburgh, William Denning, Joseph Hallett, John Van Cortlandt, John Morin Scott, James Beekman, Anthony Rutgers, Isaac Roosevelt, John Broome, Peter Praw Van Zandt, James Duane.

A certified copy of a Resolution of the said General Committee was also read. They thereby resolve that any five of the said Deputies shall constitute a quorum. A copy of such part of the Minutes of the Committee of the County of Albany, dated April 25, 1776, as relates to the election for Deputies to represent the said County in Provincial Congress, and certified by Matthew Visscher, Secretary, was read and filed. It thereby appears that Abraham Yates, Jun., John Js. Bleecker, Robert Van Rensselaer, Francis Nicoll, Leonard Gansevoort, John Ten Broeck, Jacob Cuyler, Abraham Ten Broeck, Robert Yates, Henry Glenn, Christopher Yates, and Peter R. Livingston, were duly elected Deputies to represent the City and County of Albany in Provincial Congress; and by a Resolve of the said Committee any three of them are authorized to represent the said City and County in Congress as aforesaid.

A Certificate, dated April 18, 1776, signed by William Smith, Chairman, and attested by Ezra L'Hommedieu, Clerk of the Committee of Suffolk County, was read and filed; whereby it appears that Nathaniel Woodhull, Thomas Treadwell, Selah Strong, John Sloss Hobart, Thomas Wickham, David Gelston, Daniel Brown, and Ezra L'Hommedieu, Esquires, were duly elected to represent the said County in Provincial Congress, and any three of them to be a quorum.

A Certificate, dated April 16, 1776, signed by Egbert Benson, Chairman, and attested by Melancthon Smith, Clerk, of the Committee of Dutchess County, was read and filed; whereby it appears that at an election held on the said 16th day of April, Anthony Hoffman, Morris Graham, Henry Schenck, James Livingston, Theodorus Van Wyck, Jun., John Field, Paul Schenck, James Vanderburgh, and Benjamin De Lavergne, Esquires, were elected Deputies to represent the said County in Provincial Congress for one year, and no longer, and any three of them to be a quorum.

A Certificate, dated on the third Tuesday of April last, and signed by Thomas Thomas, Chairman of the Committee of Westchester County, was read and filed. It thereby appears that Colonel Pierre Van Cortlandt, Colonel Lewis Graham, Colonel Gilbert Drake, Major Ebenezer Lockwood, Gouverneur Morris, William Paulling, Jonathan G. Tompkins, Samuel Haviland, and Peter Fleming, Esquires, were duly elected to represent the said County in Provincial Congress for twelve months, with such powers and authority as was recommended in the Resolutions of the late Provincial Congress to be given them, any three of whom to be a quorum.

A Certificate, dated April 16, 1776, and signed by George Townshend, Chairman of the Committee of Queen's County, was read and filed. It thereby appears that Colonel Jacob Blackwell, Jonathan Lawrence, Cornelius Van Wyck, Wal- ters Smith, Samuel Townshend, Thomas Hycks, Esqs., and Captain John Williams, were legally chosen to represent the said County in Provincial Congress, and that they, or any three of them, when met in Congress, to have full power to transact all matters which may concern the said County, and particularly to assist the other Counties in the choice of persons to represent this Colony in Continental Congress, and to appoint out of their body any number of persons to be a Committee of Safety for this Colony, if it be thought necessary.

A Certificate, dated April 16, 1776, and signed by John Leffertse, Chairman, and Abraham Van Ranst, Clerk of the Committee of King's County, was read and filed. It thereby appears that John Leffertse, Nicholas Covenhoven, Jeremiah Remsen, Theodorus Polhemus, Lefferts Leffertse, Rudgert Van Brunt, Jeremiah Vanderbilt, and John Vanderbilt, were chosen to make out a representation for the said County out of their body, and that any four, three, two, or one of them, make a quorum, with full powers, in behalf of the said County, to appoint Delegates to represent this Colony in Continental Congress, and to make such orders and take such measures as they shall judge necessary, not repugnant to, or inconsistent with, any rules or orders of the Continental Congress for the preservation of the rights, liberties, and privileges of the inhabitants of this Colony.

A Certificate, with a Resolve and Order subjoined, from the Committee of Tryon County, dated April 16, 1776, and signed by William Seeber, Chairman, and attested by John Eisenlord, Clerk, were read and filed; whereby it appears that Christopher P. Yates, Isaac Paris, John Moore, and William Harper, were duly elected, and that they, or any two of them, have power to represent the said County in Provincial Congress for not longer than twelve months from the said 16th of [April.]

A Letter from the Committee of Richmond County, dated April 23, 1776, signed by Christian Jacobson, Chairman, and attested by Israel D. Bedell, Clerk, directed to Messrs. Paul Micheau, Richard Conner, Aaron Cortelyou, and John Journey, was read and filed; whereby it appears that those gentlemen were duly elected to represent the said County in Provincial Congress, with power to any two of them to constitute a quorum, to represent the said County as aforesaid until the second Tuesday in May, 1777.

A Letter from the Committee of Charlotte County, dated at New-Perth, May 1, 1776, signed by John Williams, Chairman, and Edward Savage, Clerk, was read and filed; whereby it appears that Colonel John Williams, Major Alexander Webster, and Major William Malcom, were legally chosen to represent the said County; and it further appears, by a Resolve and Order of the said Committee subjoined, that they, or either of them, shall represent the said County in Provincial Convention until the second Tuesday in May, 1777.

A Certificate from the County Committee of Orange County, with two Resolutions of the said Committee, dated the 10th day of May instant, subscribed by Elihu Marvin, Chairman, and attested by Thomas Moffat, Clerk pro tempore, was read and filed. It thereby appears that on the 16th day of April last, elections were respectively duly held in the Precincts of Goshen and Cornwall for Deputies to represent the County of Orange in the Congress of this Colony, pursuant to the Resolutions of the late Congress of the 12th day of March last, for that purpose made and provided. That Peter Clowes and William Allison, Esquires, were unanimously elected in the Precinct of Goshen, and vested with all the powers mentioned in the Resolves of the said 12th day of March last, except the power of electing Delegates to represent this Colony in Continental Congress. That Archibald Little, Esquire, was unanimously chosen in Cornwall Precinct to be one of the Deputies to represent Orange County in this Congress, with all the powers specified in the aforesaid Resolves of the 12th of March last. Thereto is subjoined Resolutions of the said Committee: 1st. That those gentlemen were duly elected, and that they be returned as legal Members to this Congress. 2d. That any two of the Deputies chosen in the said County of Orange should be a quorum to represent that County in this Congress.

A Certificate from the County Committee held on the South side of the Mountains in Orange County, on the 16th day of May instant, subscribed by Johannes Isa. Blauvelt, Chairman pro tempore, and John Coleman, Clerk, was read and filed. It thereby appears that at elections held for that purpose in the several Precincts of Orangetown and Haverstraw, on the third Tuesday in April last, (according to a determination of the County Committee,) John Herring, Esq., in Orangetown, and David Pye, Esq., and Mr. Roe-loff Van Houten, in the Precinct of Haverstraw, were duly elected Deputies from Orange County to this Congress for the space of twelve months. That any two Deputies chosen in that County should be a quorum to represent that County in this Congress, with all the powers mentioned or set forth in the Resolutions of the late Congress of this Colony, of the 12th day of March last providing for such elections.

It was then proposed to determine in what manner the Votes of the respective Counties here represented shall be taken on any division; and debate arose thereon.

Thereupon, Mr. Leffertse moved, and was seconded by Mr. Gelston, that the further consideration thereof be postponed, and a future day now fixed for the consideration thereof; and that, in the mean time, the Counties respectively have the same number of votes as in the late Congress of this Colony.

The question being put thereon, it was agreed to be determined, and was determined, by polls, in the manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative—Mr. Leffertse, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Conner.

For the Negative—Every other Member present.

After some further time spent in consideration of this matter, and debates thereon, it is unanimously resolved, agreed, and ordered, That every question on any division, be determined by a majority of the votes of the several Counties then having a representation in this Congress; and that—

The City and County of New-York shall have.....	8	The County of Queen's .....	4
The City and County of Albany .....	6	The County of King's .....	2
The County of Dutchess .....	5	The County of Richmond .....	2
The County of Suffolk .....	4	The County of Tryon .....	3
The County of Ulster .....	4	The County of Charlotte .....	2
The County of Westchester .....	4	The County of Cumberland .....	2
The County of Orange .....	3	The County of Gloucester .....	1
		In all.....	50

The following Rules are unanimously resolved on and agreed to as the Rules of this Congress, viz:

1st. That the President, and, in his absence, a President to be appointed pro tempore, shall preside at every meeting, and keep order and decorum; and that it shall be his duty to sign all letters from this Congress.

2d. That all motions be made in writing, and read by the Member moving, in his place, and then delivered at the Chair; and that all addresses be made to the Chair, and standing.

3d. That if more than one shall rise to speak at the same time, the President shall determine who shall first be heard.

4th. That the substance of every motion made and seconded shall be entered on the Minutes, unless withdrawn by leave of the Congress.

5th. That no interruption shall be suffered while a Member is delivering his sentiments, unless by calling such Member to order.

6th. That after the determination of any matter or thing, the same shall not be resumed but with the consent of such majority as aforesaid, upon notice of a motion, for that purpose, previously given at least one day before the same is made.

7th. That when any question is determined upon a division, the names of the respective Counties shall be entered as they shall vote on each side; but any Member for any County may be at liberty to have his name and dissent from the vote of his County entered on the Minutes.

8th. That this Congress shall, from time to time, meet on their own adjournments.

9th. That, for the despatch of business, and to prevent interruptions, the doors of our meetings shall be shut, unless on any such occasion where a majority as aforesaid shall determine otherwise.

10th. That no question shall be determined on the day that it is agitated, if three Counties shall request that it be deferred to the next day.

11th. That no Members hall be at liberty to speak more than twice to the same point, without leave of the President for the time then being.

12th. That every Member of this Congress shall keep secret all such matters, proceedings, and things, in this Congress as shall be enjoined from the Chair to be kept secret, upon pain of expulsion.

13th. That whenever the proceedings of this Congress shall be published at the close of this session, all the Minutes shall be published, and no part concealed, unless such as the unanimous votes of the Counties shall declare to be of a secret or unimportant nature; but that extracts of the proceedings may, nevertheless, be published from time to time, as the Congress shall think fit.

Resolved and Ordered, That Messrs. Jacobus Van Zandt, Captain Denning, Mr. Sands, Mr. Beekman, and Mr. Evert Bancker, be a Committee for the auditing of Accounts, and to compose a Pay-Table, for the purpose of auditing all Accounts against the Treasury of this Congress. That they, or any three or more of them, do endorse or subscribe every Account they shall pass, and certify how much shall be paid for or on such Account. That such endorsement or certificate shall be a sufficient voucher to the Treasurer of this Congress for the payment of such sum or sums as shall be certified by the said Committee, or a major part of them, to be due or payable on or for such Account. That the said Committee do enter in a book or books, to be by them kept for the purpose, a regular account of all the Accounts by them passed.

That they be empowered to hire and employ one able and sufficient Clerk, and a room for the purpose, and that this Congress will make provision for the payment thereof.

That they be directed to make a separation in the Treasurer's Accounts between those that are of a Continental nature and those that are merely Provincial, and keep them in a proper state to be transmitted to the Continental Congress when thereunto directed by this Congress or the Committee of Safety.

That they lay before this Congress or Committee of Safety a state of the Accounts of this Colony, from time to time, as they shall be thereunto required. That the said Committee be allowed a reasonable compensation for their services.

The President informed the Congress that General Washington had discovered to him that he had lately received certain letters, affidavits, and advices of some dangerous machinations in this and one of the neighbouring Colonies; that the General does not at present think it necessary to communicate those matters to the whole Congress, but would be obliged by the appointment of a Secret Committee to confer with him on the dangers to which this Colony is exposed from its intestine enemies.

Thereupon, a motion was made and seconded that . . . . . be a Committee on behalf of this Congress, to confer with the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental forces in this Colony on all such matters as he shall choose to mention or communicate to them.

Mr. Scott moved, and was seconded, for the following amendment, to wit: That the words "relative to the execution of his office," be inserted between the word "matters" and the word "as."

Debates arose on the said proposed amendment, and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the affirmative for the amendment, in manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.

8 New-York,
3 Tryon,
2 Charlotte,
2 King's,
2 Richmond.

17 votes.

For the Negative.

4 Suffolk,
4 Westchester.
8 votes.

Ordered, therefore, That the said amendment be made.

Thereupon, Resolved and Ordered, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Morris, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Cuyler, and Mr. Wickham, or any three or more of them, be a Secret Committee, on behalf of this Congress, to confer and advise with the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental forces in this Colony, on all such matters relative to the execution of his office as he shall choose to mention or communicate to them.

Charles Friend, who voluntarily came to the late Provincial Congress, and gave them information, whereby Israel Youngs, Henry Dawkins, and others, have been apprehended, and are now in custody, for counterfeiting Continental currency, and the Bills of Credit of the Colonies of Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut, having since that time been detained here as an evidence, prays to be dismissed.* And John Henderson, who was also brought to this City on the 14th instant as a witness against the said prisoners, and is so poor as to be without means to return home, prays to be dismissed. This Congress are of opinion that, considering the poverty and fidelity of the said Charles Friend, he merits a reward: therefore,

Ordered, That John McKesson, one of the Secretaries, advance to John Henderson two Dollars, to bear his expenses in returning home; and that the said Secretary advance to the said Charles Friend twenty Dollars, as a reward for his fidelity, time, and expenses in coming to New-York to give the information aforesaid. That the Doorkeeper discharge the account of the boarding of the said two witnesses since they arrived in this city, and charge the same in his account.

And Ordered, That Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of this Congress, repay to John McKesson the said sum of twenty-two Dollars, and take his receipt for the same, for which a certified copy of this entry shall be a sufficient voucher.

Die Sabbati, 4to ho. P. M., May 18, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Bancker, Mr. Cortlandt, Mr. Van Zandt, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Hallett, Captain Denning.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. W. Harper.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Mr. Paulding, Major Lockwood, Colonel Gilbert Drake.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Mr. Wickham, General Woodhull, Mr. Gelston.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Leffertse.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Major Webster.

A Letter from Christian Jacobson, Chairman of the Committee of Richmond County, dated the 14th instant, was read and filed. He therein informs that John Garrison has declined an Ensign's commission in the Continental Troops, and recommends John Decker to be appointed with that commission.

Ordered, That the said Letter be filed.†

A Letter from James Duane, Esquire, Chairman of the Continental Treasury Office, dated at Philadelphia, on the 9th instant, (covering copies of Resolutions of Congress for numbering the inhabitants of this Colony,) was read, and follows, to wit:

"Treasury Office, Philadelphia, May 7, 1776.

"HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: We enclose to you the resolutions of Congress, passed the 26th December, 1775, and 17th February following, and have to request your honourable House will cause the number of Inhabitants of your Colony to be taken, and transmitted to this office, conformably to the directions laid down in the first-mentioned resolve.

"I have the honour to be, in the name of the Superintendents of the Treasury, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant, JAMES DUANE, Chairman."

* NEW-YORK, May 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I beg leave to inform the honourable House that I have attended ten days on the money affair, and beg leave, if consistent with reason, I may be discharged. My expenses and loss of time are a great disadvantage to my narrow circumstances, as my goods at this time are in great demand, being a button maker. Your kind compliance will greatly oblige, gentlemen, your obedient servant, CHARLES FRIEND.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress, New-York.

† RICHMOND COUNTY, May 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. John Garrison having declined the Ensign's commission, by reason of which that place becomes vacant, the bearer, John Decker, has applied to the Committee for a recommendation, and is by them thought a proper person for that office. You will, therefore, please to recommend him to the Congress, and, if approved of, get a commission made out for him to serve as Ensign in the Company to be raised between this County and King's County.

From, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servant.

By order of the Committee:

CHRISTIAN JACOBSON.

To Messrs. Richard Conner and John Journey, Esqs., Deputies for the County of Richmond, at New-York.

The Resolutions of Congress, copies whereof were received with the preceding Letter, were read, and follow, to wit:

"In Congress, December 26, 1775.

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Assemblies, Conventions, Councils, or Committees of Safety of the respective Colonies, to ascertain, by the most impartial and effectual means in their power, the number of the Inhabitants in each respective Colony, taking care that the lists be authenticated by the oaths of the several persons who shall be entrusted with this service; and that the said Assemblies, Conventions, Councils, or Committees of Safety, do respectively lay before this Congress a return of the number of Inhabitants in their respective Colonies, as soon as the same shall be procured.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

"In Congress, February 17, 1776.

"1st. Resolved, That a Standing Committee of five be appointed for superintending the Treasury.

"5th Article. That it shall be the business of this Committee to obtain from the different Assemblies and Conventions of the United Colonies accounts of the number of Inhabitants of each Colony, according to a Resolution of Congress on that subject.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

"At a Board of Treasury held at the Treasury Office in Philadelphia, the 7th day of May, Anno Domini 1776. Present: James Duane, Chairman; Thomas Willing and Elbridge Gerry, Esqs., Superintendents; and John Gibson Auditor-General, and William Webb Assistant.

"Ordered, That Letters be written, pursuant to the Resolution of Congress of the 17th day of February, to the different Assemblies and Conventions of the United Colonies, requesting them to furnish accounts of the number of Inhabitants of each Colony, respectively, according to the Resolution of Congress on that subject, and that a copy of the last-mentioned Resolution be forwarded to each of them.

"Extracts from the Minutes of the Treasury Board:

"JOHN GIBSON, Auditor-General."

Ordered, That Mr. Glenn, Colonel Stoutenburgh, and Mr. Gelston, be a Committee to form and report a plan to ascertain the number of Inhabitants in this Colony, and that they report with all convenient speed.

A Letter from James Duane, Esq., Chairman of the Continental Treasury Office at Philadelphia, requesting an account to be rendered of the expenditure of Continental Moneys, passed through this Convention, was read, and follows, to wit:

"Treasury Office, Philadelphia, May 7, 1776.

"HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: The Congress having, on the 17th February last, appointed a Standing Committee for superintending the Treasury, and on the 1st of April, among other things, 'Resolved, That all Assemblies, Conventions, Councils and Committees of Safety, Commissaries, Paymasters, and others, entrusted with publick Moneys, should, within a reasonable time after being called upon for that purpose by the Committee of the Treasury, produce their accounts at the Treasury Office, in order to their being settled and adjusted;' we are, in pursuance of the said regulations, to request that your honourable House will be pleased to give orders that an account be rendered of the expenditure of the Continental Moneys which, by the acts of Congress, have passed through your hands, in to this Office, with the proper vouchers, that the same may be settled and adjusted here, and reported for the final allowance of Congress.

"I have the honour to be, in the name of the Superintendents of the Treasury, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

"JAMES DUANE, Chairman."

The President, at the request of several Members, inquired of those Members who form the Pay-Table Committee, in what forwardness they had got the publick Accounts. Those gentlemen replied, that the publick Accounts are in great forwardness, and that they expect the accounts of disbursements of publick money will soon be ready to transmit to the Continental Congress.

Another Letter from James Duane, Esq., Chairman of the Superintendents of the Treasury at Philadelphia, requesting to know what allowances have been made to the New-York Battalions, and the reason why Heman Allen's Accounts were in part rejected, was read, and follows, viz:

"Treasury Office, Philadelphia, May 7, 1776.

"HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: Captain Heman Allen's account of disbursements, as Captain of a Company in Colonel Warren's Battalion, is now under examination in this Office. He informs us that he could not settle it with your honourable body to his satisfaction, nor are we able, without some information, to state it in a clear light to Congress. We therefore request that you will be pleased to let us know what allowances you have made to the New-York Battalions, and the reason why Captain Allen's claim was in part rejected.

"I have the honour to be, in the name of the Superintendents of the Treasury, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

"JAMES DUANE, Chairman."

Ordered, That the above Letter be referred to the Auditors, or Members who compose the Pay-Table Committee, to be answered.

A Certificate, signed by Samuel Brewster and Hugh Umphry, two of the Committee of the Precinct of New-Windsor, in Ulster County, dated the 6th instant, was read and filed. They thereby certify that on that day they attended an election of Officers for one of the Companies of Militia in the said Precinct, and in the Second Regiment of Ulster County. That James Umphry was then chosen Captain of the said Company, and that on the 1st day of February last James Kernaghan was chosen Second Lieutenant and Richard Wood Ensign of the said Company.

Ordered, That Commissions issue to those gentlemen accordingly.

A Letter from William Ellsworth, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Kingston, in Ulster County, relative to Azor Betts and John Blackler, was read. He therein says that those Prisoners have broken their promises and behaved ill, and deserved no further compliments from the Committee.

Ordered, That the said Letter be filed.

A Letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Cortlandt, dated the 15th instant at Albany, was read and filed.

A Resolution of the Committee of Albany, therein enclosed, was also read and filed.* Colonel Cortlandt by his Letter recommends, and the Committee of Albany by their Resolution also recommend, Mr. Thomas Williams, Jun., to be Quartermaster to Colonel Wynkoop's Regiment.

Ordered, That Mr. Glenn, by Letter, inform Colonel Wynkoop and the Committee of Albany, that the appointment of Adjutants and Quartermasters to the Regiments of Continental Troops raised in this Colony is given to the Colonels of the respective Regiments, who may appoint and displace them at pleasure.

A Letter from Johannes Hardenburgh, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Ulster County, dated the 15th instant, was read and filed. He thereby gives some information of the state of the several Companies of Continental Troops which were directed to be raised in Ulster County.

A Letter from Colonel Ritzema, dated this day, was read and filed. He thereby recommends Dr. Ledger for a Surgeon to his Regiment; requests Arms for his men, and that the Billeting-Money and Subsistence of some of the Corn-

* ALBANY, May 15, 1776.

SIR: Herewith I send you a copy of a resolve of the Albany Committee, recommending Mr. Thomas Williams Quartermaster in the regiment raised in the Counties of Albany, Tryon, and Charlotte, and beg the Congress will please to appoint him.

I should have sent the dates of the officers' warrants, but as only part of the regiment is with me, cannot at present furnish you with them.

Shall be much obliged if the Congress will please to appoint some active person Adjutant of our regiment, as I have no assistant, the Major being in Canada.

Am, sir, with great respect, your obedient and very humble servant,
PHILIP CORTLANDT, Deputy Commissary.

ALBANY COMMITTEE-CHAMBER, March 2, 1776.

Resolved, That Thomas Williams, Jun., be recommended to the Provincial Congress for Quartermaster in the regiment to be raised in the Counties of Albany, Tryon, and Charlotte, and he is hereby recommended accordingly.

A true copy from the Minutes: MATTHEW VISSCHER, Secretary.

panies in his Regiment, which is not finally settled, may be fully paid off and discharged.

A Letter from Garret Abeel, Deputy Chairman of the General Committee of the City of New-York, was read and filed. He thereby informs that a sub-Committee of their body viewed the Houses lately inhabited by the Troops; that it would be difficult to clean and repair them, and suggests that it would be proper for this Congress to appoint some person to see that business executed.

Ordered, That Mr. Garret Roorback, the Barrack-Master, be, and he is hereby, directed to employ as many persons as he shall judge necessary to clean all the Houses and yards lately occupied by the Troops in this City; that Mr. Roorback superintend the cleaning of the said Houses and yards, and render an account of the expenses attending the same to this Congress.

Colonel Remsen informs the Congress that it frequently and necessarily happens that the Colonels of the respective Regiments in this City are out of town for a short time; that in the absence of any such Colonel, any person of his Regiment or Battalion cannot obtain a furlough to go out of the City on any emergency whatever. For remedy whereof,

Ordered, That any of the Field Officers of any Battalion or Regiment of Militia in the City and County of New-York be empowered to give such leave of absence as by a Resolution of this House of the 10th instant is directed and permitted to be given by the Colonel or Commanding Officer of such Regiment or Battalion.

P. M. May 18, 1776.

A Letter from General Washington, dated the 17th instant, was read, as follows, viz:

"New-York, May 17, 1776.

"SIR: As I have no doubt of the willingness of the Militia of this City to join in its defence against the attempts of the enemies of America, it is highly necessary, in order to avoid confusion in the time of any alarm, that the posts of the several Regiments of Militia be fixed on in conjunction with those of the Continental Army, and that they be allotted to the Brigades most convenient to their several situations; and as I am now arranging that part of the business of the Army, it will, I presume, be proper that directions be given to the Commanding Officers of the several corps to take the stations I shall assign, and to obey the orders they may in time of danger receive from me or the Brigadier-Generals of the Continental Army. The like measure will be equally necessary with regard to the Militia of King's County and part of Queen's County, on Long-Island, and also the Militia of Staten-Island; and I am persuaded that the mention of a matter so obviously necessary will be sufficient to induce the Congress of this Province to give such directions as are proper on this occasion.

"I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

"GEORGE WASHINGTON.

"To the Hon. the President of the Colony of New-York."

A Letter from the Committee of Dutchess County was read, as follows, viz:

"Dutchess County, May 6, 1776.

"SIR: It having been represented to the General Committee of this County that the Southern Regiment of Militia was too large and extensive, containing twelve Companies and covering a space of country upwards of thirty miles in length, we have, therefore, not only because in other respects it was expedient, but also in compliance with the resolution of Congress prohibiting a Regiment to consist of more than ten Companies, divided it, and, instead of one, have formed the Militia in that quarter into two Regiments. Enclosed you have a description of the Regiments, together with a list of persons nominated Field Officers. As this part of our Militia will remain unregimented till the Officers receive their commissions, we must request that the commissions be made out as soon as possible, and sent to the Committee in Rombout's Precinct, with directions to forward them to the Officers immediately.

"I remain, by order of the Committee, your very humble servant,

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman."

The description of the two Regiments enclosed in the Letter from the Committee of Dutchess was read, as follows:

"One Regiment to consist of all the Militia in Pauling's Precinct except the Northern Company, all the Militia in Southeast Precinct, and the Militia on the Northern and Middle Short Lots in Fredericksburgh Precinct, in the County of Dutchess.

"John Field Colonel, Andrew Morehouse Lieutenant-Colonel, Jonathan Paddock First Major, Isaac Tallman Second Major, Isaac Crane Adjutant, Reuben Crosby Quartermaster.

"The other Regiment to consist of all the Militia in Fredericksburgh Precinct, except the Northern and Middle Short Lots, and all the Militia in Philips's Precinct, in the County of Dutchess.

"Moses Dusenbury Colonel, Henry Luddington Lieutenant-Colonel, Reuben Ferris First Major, Joshua Nelson Second Major, Joshua Myrick Adjutant, Solomon Hopkins Quartermaster."

A Letter from General Schuyler was read, as follows:

"Saratoga, May 13, 1776.

"SIR: Mr. Duer informs me that he has presented a petition in behalf of a considerable number of freeholders and freemen in the County of Charlotte to your honourable House, in which he engages himself to support the facts therein alleged before the Convention, on or about the 14th day of this present month.

"As I find it necessary to the publick service to engage Mr. Duer's assistance in executing an important commission, I have to request the favour that your House will not proceed to determine with respect to the election lately held in Charlotte County till Mr. Duer's arrival in New-York, which will be as soon as the matter is completed in which he is at present embarked. I have no doubt but you will then be of opinion that his stay was not only justifiable but highly expedient.

"I am, sir and gentlemen, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

"To the Honourable the President and Members of the Provincial Convention at New-York."

"Mr. Duer begs Mr. Van Buren will deliver this into the hand of J. M. Scott, Esq.; in case of Mr. Scott's absence, to Jacob Cuyler, Esq.

A Letter from Christopher Smith, directed to Mr. Robert Benson, dated at Jamaica, on Long-Island, on the 14th instant, was read. He therein mentions that he had read in the Newspapers a Resolve of Congress, ordering every person who has withdrawn himself from the City since the 1st of June last, to return without delay; and requesting, from infirmity of body, that he may be exempt from said Resolve.

Ordered, That said Letter be not answered by this House, but that Mr. Benson is directed to answer the same.

Die Solis, 10 ho. A. M., May 19, 1776.

The Congress met, &c.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Hallett, Mr. J. Van Zandt, Colonel Remsen, Major Stoutenburgh, Mr. Sands, Captain Dennings, Mr. Beekman, Mr. Bancker, Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Scott.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Morris, Major Lockwood.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Leffertse, Mr. Polhemus, Mr. Vanderbilt.

Mr. Morris, from the Committee who conferred with General Washington, informed the Congress that sundry matters of great importance had been conferred on with the General; that the General wished for the advice and assistance of this Congress to carry into execution his own powers, if not also the assistance of the powers of this Congress; that the matters conferred on are of such importance that, in order to preserve secrecy, it is necessary that each particular Member be sworn not to reveal to any person out of the Congress the matters to be mentioned, or the subject of this day's debate.

The President then put the question whether every Member is willing to take an oath of secrecy, and the same was unanimously agreed to.

Thereupon, Ordered, That the President of this Congress do take the following oath, to wit:

"I do solemnly swear on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that I will keep secret the matters and business that shall be moved, proposed, agitated, considered, or determined, in this Congress this day, and everything relating thereto, until leave shall be given from the Chair, by order of this Congress, to reveal the same. And I do further, in the same manner, solemnly swear that I will at all times keep secret all such matters and things as shall at any time be given in charge from the Chair by order of this Congress to be kept secret, until leave shall be given from the Chair, by order of this or a future Congress of this Colony, to reveal the same."

The President was then sworn accordingly.

Thereupon, Ordered, That the President administer the like oath to each of the Members present and to the Secretaries.

And the said oath was administered to each of them accordingly except to Mr. Alexander Webster, who was sworn to the same oath with uplifted hands, beginning the oath in these words:

"I do solemnly swear in the presence of Almighty God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

Ordered, That if any other Member shall attend this Congress this day, that he be required to take the oath before-written before he hear any of the debates or matters in agitation; and that any Member who shall hereafter attend this Congress do take the general oath before-written before he take his seat.

Ordered, That Mr. Scott and Mr. Morris wait on General Washington, and inform him that the Congress have taken an oath of secrecy, and the nature thereof, and receive of him such Papers as may be necessary to communicate to this Congress.

Messrs. Scott and Morris returned from General Washington, and delivered to the President such Papers as they had received of the General. They reported that a scheme of a junction is forming between the disaffected in Connecticut and on Long-Island, in order to join the Ministerial Army, and oppress the friends to liberty in these Colonies; that the Papers will give further information.

Thereupon, a Letter to General Washington from Jonathan Sturges, of Fairfield, dated the 14th day of May instant, with a list of deserted Tories therein enclosed, were respectively read, and filed.

Mr. Morris further informed the Congress, by information from General Washington, that several persons, who are strangers, have been observed taking notice of and fixing on proper places for a landing on the south side of Long-Island; that the people of Hempstead keep up a constant communication with the ships of war. The list enclosed in the letter above-mentioned.

A Letter from Matthew Adgate, Chairman of King's District, to General Washington, dated the 13th instant, was read. Mr. Morris and Mr. Scott informed the Congress that the bearer of the Letter is delayed in town for the examination of this Congress; and the plot therein-mentioned was, to have massacred the inhabitants who are friends to liberty; and the person who had given the information had been in the councils of the disaffected.

The informations of two witnesses given to a select number of the Members of King's District, and taken on oath before Matthew Adgate, Chairman of that Committee, were read and filed.

The Congress spent some time in consideration of the information received, agreed to consider thereof further until to-morrow morning.

Mr. Vanderbilt informed the Congress that he has good reason to believe that John Hendrickson, of Queen's County, can give some material information relative to the matters which General Washington has communicated to the Committee of this Congress appointed yesterday to confer with him.

Ordered, That Mr. Vanderbilt be, and he is hereby, requested to cause a Messenger to go to the said John Hendrickson, and request him to attend this Congress to-morrow morning.

Die Lunæ, 9 ho. A. M., May 20, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Bancker, Mr. Alsop, Mr. Lewis, Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President. Mr. Jacobus Van Zandt, Mr. Hallett, Captain Denning, Mr. Scott, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Sands, Mr. Peter P. Van Zandt.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Leffertse.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Major Lockwood, Colonel Gilbert Drake.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

The following gentlemen attending to take their seats, were sworn, and severally took the same oath which was administered to the Members yesterday, as entered on the Minutes, viz: Mr. Alsop, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Peter P. Van Zandt, Mr. Little, Mr. Schenck, Mr. Lawrence, and Colonel Blackwell.

The whole Proceedings of yesterday, with the several Papers brought by the Committee from General Washington yesterday, were read and taken into consideration, and some time spent therein.

John Hendrickson attending agreeable to the request of yesterday, the following oath was administered to him:

"I, John Hendrickson, do solemnly swear on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, that the evidence that I shall give to the Congress shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, and that I will keep secret my examination before this Congress until leave shall be given by order of this Congress to reveal the same."

The President, by order of Congress, assured Mr. Hendrickson that his name and the substance of the evidence which he shall give, shall, for the present, be kept secret.

John Hendrickson, being examined on oath, says: That he does not know of any private plot among the disaffected on Long-Island; that he has observed the people of Hempstead in high spirits of late; that the general part of the inhabitants of Hempstead and Rockaway are against the measures of the Colonies and in favour of the King; that about a fortnight ago there was a report that a fleet was expected to arrive, and that they appeared rejoiced at it; that they expect to reap a benefit from the arrival of a fleet; that some of them say they expect to join the King's troops if they arrive; that Richard Hulet and Thomas Cornell were esteemed leading men of those disaffected in Hempstead and Rockaway; that Stephen Hulet was also esteemed a man of influence among them and active; that Richard Hulet and Thomas Cornell are absent; that Isaac Denton, near Rockaway, is thought to be active at present and to assist in sending provisions to the ships of war; that Isaac Denton has a sloop of his own, and that he (the examinant) has heard that the said Isaac Denton has put provisions on board; that he has lately heard James Smith, of Hempstead, say he would join the King's troops if they should arrive; that people came to Hempstead from other places, who are said to come there for refuge; that he has not lately seen many strangers going there, but that in January and February last he has seen many persons, sometimes a number in a day, who were strangers, going to Hempstead; that they appeared to be reserved and cautious; that he has lately seen some strangers in the County who are not residents; that he believes several of the inhabitants are yet armed; that he has lately been informed that along the south side, among the gunners, every other man at least is armed; that he lately saw two or three men like private men who he supposed belonged to one of the ships of war; that they appeared like sailors; that from his general acquaintance it is his opinion that most part of the inhabitants would oppose the liberties of America if British troops should arrive; that there are yet some arms in and about the town of Hempstead; that the inhabitants are five or six hundred in number; that he has heard the inhabitants speak of Gabriel Ludlow, Justice Clowes, Daniel Kissam, and Isaac Smith, Esquires, as principal men, but that he has not heard any of those gentlemen say anything disaffected to the Colonies, and has not had conversation with them on the subject of the present troubles; that last winter a number of the inhabitants met two or three different times at the house of George Ryerson; that there were thirty or forty men at each of those meetings, as he imagines; that he has seen David Colden, Captain Whitehead, Dr. Arden, Thomas Cornell, Captain Richard Hulet, and Isaac Kip, go there; that Captain Hicks, at Rockaway, who formerly had a commission from Government, had about one hundred and forty men in his company; that he conceives many concealed their best arms when Colonel Heard came to disarm them; that they sometimes go out gunning and shooting, but complain for want of ammunition; that the few friends to liberty in that part of the country are afraid on account of the openness and threats of the disaffected; that Nathan Smith told the examinant that one Ackerman had informed him that he (the said Ackerman) had seen a quantity of beef and pork on board of Isaac Denton's sloop; that there were also butter, eggs, and gammons on board, and that the sloop proceeded out of Rockaway Inlet towards the ships of war; that this was a few days before Captain Parr came up there with a company of Riflemen; that he has at three different times seen one sloop come into Rockaway Inlet; that at one time it was Denton's sloop which he saw, and that the last he saw was a light sloop which came in there on a Friday, which was a fortnight ago last Friday; that from the caution the greatest part of the inhabitants observe with the few friends to liberty, it is very difficult to obtain a knowledge of their intentions or designs; that he was informed that lately at a vendue at Rockaway, one Jacob Foster, who had a cockade in his hat, was much abused and ill treated because he was a Whig; that the cockade was taken out of his hat and trod on by one Joseph Beagle; that he also heard that Jacob Hendrickson was abused and his hair pulled because he was a Whig; that he, (the examinant,) while he was at the vendue and before he left it, saw Joseph Langdon there; that he appeared to be disaffected and active among the people; that at a sheep-shearing lately in Hempstead, there was fresh lime punch plenty to be sold, and that it was sold in the pens by Timothy Clowes, a tavern-keeper.

JOHN HENDRICKSON.

Martin Beebe, the Messenger, who brought despatches from King's District to General Washington, was called in, sworn, and examined, and his Deposition follows, viz:

NEW-YORK, ss:

Martin Beebe, of King's District, in the County of Albany, Farmer, being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists, deposeth and saith: That he has acted as Clerk of the Committee of King's District; that he is bound by oath not to mention the names of two persons who on oath gave the information to sundry Members of the Committee of King's District, which are contained in two papers now shown to him, and of which he was the bearer to General Washington; that the two persons who gave those informations are esteemed to be persons of veracity and to be believed; that he has known them a considerable time; that he is informed that the person mentioned by the name of Brown, is now a non-commissioned officer in Captain Vosburgh's company, in the Continental service, and that he (this deponent) has been informed that when the said company comes to action, the said Brown is to take the command of the company; that he has understood that the information that Brown was an officer in the Thirteenth Regiment, was obtained from McDonald, the Miner, who told it to George Hinsdale; that Silas Howard is esteemed to be a Tory; that George Hinsdale is esteemed to be deceitful and inimical to his country; that the last account he heard of Brown was, that he was gone to Johnstown; that he has heard and believes that the said Brown has told the soldiers of Captain Vosburgh's company that he should sometimes be gone, but they must not wonder at it; that he would sometimes be drunk, but they must not think strange of it; that when they came into any engagement their Captain would be missing, and they must follow him; that Captain Barret Dier has formerly been a Committee-man in King's District; that Samuel Messenger is reputed to be a Tory; that John Guernsey is a person who was some time ago disarmed; that the two persons who were examined on oath before part of the Committee of King's District, and whose names are concealed, were persons who had formerly been dealt with by the Committee of King's District, and had been laid under solemn obligations not to do anything against the liberties of this country, and to give information to the Committee of any plot, conspiracy, or mischief, agreed or determined on against the country; that the said two persons have since declared that the schemes and plans in agitation appeared so horrible, that through compunction of conscience they came to the Committee to give information of what they knew; that they at the same time declared, that unless their names were concealed they would not give information of what they did know; and that the Members of the Committee who were then present and this examinant were sworn to conceal their names before the said two persons gave the information contained in the two papers exhibited as their testimony.

MARTIN BEEBE.

Die Lunæ, 5 ho. P. M., May 20, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Sands, Major Stoutenburgh, Mr. Jacobus Van Zandt, Mr. E. Bancker, Captain Denning, Mr. Van Cortlandt, Mr. Francis Lewis.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Lawrence, Colonel Blackwell.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Paulling, Major Lockwood.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus, Mr. Leffertse, Mr. Vanderbilt.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

The President informed the Congress, at the request of Mr. Webster, that Colonel Malcom is returned a Member of this Congress from Charlotte County, where he has respectable freeholds, as appears by return of the Members of that County, which has been read and filed; and that Mr. Webster desires that Mr. Malcom may take his seat.

It was objected by some Members that Mr. Malcom is not a resident in Charlotte County, and therefore ought not to be admitted to a seat.

Debates arose thereon, and the question being put, whether Mr. Malcom shall be admitted to take his seat, it was determined in the affirmative manner, as follows, viz:

For the Affirmative.

4 Suffolk,
8 New-York,
2 Richmond,
2 Charlotte.

16 votes.

For the Negative.

2 King's,
3 Tryon.

5 votes.

Westchester equally divided.

Ordered, therefore, That Mr. Malcom be admitted to take his seat, and that Mr. Webster inform Mr. Malcom that he will please to attend and take his seat.

Mr. Stoutenburgh, with leave of the House, withdrew.

The Congress then resumed the business of the day, and proceeded to consider of the information contained in the papers received of General Washington, and the examinations of John Hendrickson and Martin Beebe.

After some time spent therein, and some gentlemen having delivered their sentiments on the subject—

* * * * *

Ordered, That Mr. Schenck, Mr. Paulling, and Mr. Little, be a Committee to consider McDonald's Reports about Lead Mines, and to report to this Congress their opinion whether either, and which of the said Mines, are worth pursuing, and that they report with all convenient speed.

Ordered, That all the Members of this Congress, from the City and County of New-York, and the Counties of Queen's, King's, Richmond, and Westchester, do attend this Congress Friday next.

Die Martis, 10 ho. A. M., May 21, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Hallett, Mr. Bancker, Mr. Randall, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Peter P. Van Zandt, Mr. Van Cortlandt, Mr. Alsop, Mr. Scott.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Major Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Polhemus.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Paulding, Major Lockwood, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Morris.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Mr. Randall, Colonel Malcom, and Mr. Tompkins, came into Congress as Members, and each of them respectively was sworn, and took the general oath as before written in the Minutes on the 19th instant.

Ordered, That Mr. Paul Schenck, of Dutchess County, have leave to return to his County to procure a representation of his County to be sent to this Congress without delay, and that Mr. Schenck return to this Congress immediately.

Ordered, That Captain Ezekiel Hyatt and Captain Cornelius Steinrod, with their respective Subalterns and Companies, continue to be a part of Colonel McDougall's Regiment; and that Captain Ambrose Horton, with his Company, join Colonel McDougall's Regiment, as a part thereof, until further orders.

Ordered, That Captain John Titus, in the Township of Bushwick, Captain Ferdinandus Sydam and Captain Barent Johnson, in the Township of Broecklyn, Captain Cornelius Vander Veer, in the Township of Flat-Bush, Captain Jeremiah Vanderbilt, in the Township of Flatlands, Captain Aaron Van Brunt, in New Utrecht, and Captain ———, in Gravesend, be respectively authorized and requested, and are hereby respectively requested, in the respective Townships and Districts in which they respectively reside, to proceed from house to house through their respective Districts, and purchase, at the cheapest rate they can be obtained for ready money, all such good Muskets and Fire-locks fit for the use of soldiers, as can be spared by the inhabitants of those Townships. That those gentlemen respectively be requested not only to purchase Arms as cheap as they reasonably can, but in no case to exceed the price of four Pounds for any one Gun, Musket, or Fire-lock. That those gentlemen respectively, as soon as they can conveniently, send those Arms to Colonel Curtenius, in New-York, and transmit the account of the price of the Arms so purchased to this Congress, or the Auditors thereby appointed, that the same, together with a reasonable reward for the trouble of purchasing them, may be paid.

And Ordered, That Colonel McDougall be requested to send such proper Officers or persons to assist the gentlemen above-named in the purchase aforesaid, as are acquainted with good Arms. And it is hereby recommended to the inhabitants of the said Townships to sell such Muskets or Fire-locks as they can spare, retaining Arms for their own use.

Whereas it appears by the Return from the County Committee, and a number of respectable Freeholders in Queen's County, that Colonel Jacob Blackwell, Jonathan Lawrence, Cornelius Van Wyck, Waters Smith, Samuel Townshend, Esq., and Captain John Williams, were elected Deputies to represent the said County in this Congress; and whereas only Colonel Blackwell and Mr. Lawrence have hitherto attended, whereby that County remains unrepresented:

Therefore, Ordered, That Cornelius Van Wyck, Waters Smith, Samuel Townshend, Esq., James Townshend, and Captain John Williams, do respectively attend this Congress and take their seats, or show the cause of their neglect.

Ordered, That Colonel Ritzema send such prudent Officer as he shall think proper to Westchester County, to apply to the Chairman of the County Committee, and to the respective sub-Committees in that County, for such good Arms, fit for Soldiers' use, as they may have collected by disarming disaffected persons in that County. And the respective Committees are hereby requested to deliver such of those Arms as are fit for the Army to such Officer, taking and preserving his receipts for the same. That the said Committees, respectively, take care that all such Arms be appraised, and an account of the value of each kept, agreeable to the directions heretofore given for that purpose. And such Officer as Colonel Ritzema shall send to collect those Arms is hereby directed to deliver all such Arms as he shall so receive, to Colonel Curtenius, that they may be repaired where it may be necessary.

Ordered, That all the Deputies elected to represent Richmond County in this Congress, and named in the Return of their Deputies made by the Committee of that County, do attend this Congress, and take their seats on Friday next, as important business is designed for that day; or in default of such attendance, that the absent Members, if any, return in writing the cause of their neglect.

A Letter from General Washington, dated this day, was received and read. He therein informs that the Continental Congress have been pleased to request his attendance in Philadelphia; that he is about to set out immediately; that he had judged it necessary to give Major-General Putnam instructions for the regulation of his conduct, in case the Congress came to any determination respecting the Tories in the City of New-York and on Long-Island, and should have occasion for military assistance to carry their determination into execution, and that he had enclosed a copy of his said instructions. The instructions to Major-General Putnam above-mentioned, were also read. He is therein informed of the matters mentioned in the said Letter, and required, during General Washington's absence, to concert measures with General Greene, and to afford every aid which this Congress or their Secret Committee may apply for.

Die Martis, 4 ho. P. M., May 21, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Randall, Mr. Alsop, Mr. Bancker, Mr. P. Van Zandt, Mr. Hallett, Mr. Jacobus Van Zandt, Captain Denning, Mr. Sands, Mr. Stoutenburgh.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Major Lockwood, Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Morris.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus, Mr. Vanderbilt.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Mr. Alsop, from the Committee appointed to consider of ways and means to prevent the dangers to which this Colony is exposed by its intestine enemies, brought in the Report of the said Committee; which he read in his place, and then delivered in to the Chair, where the same was again read.

Ordered, That the same be copied by the Secretaries before the House meets in the morning.

Captain Jonathan Clarke, late from the French West-Indies, and bound to some Port to the eastward, attended, and was admitted.

He informs that he has had the misfortune to have his vessel and cargo seized and taken by an armed Tender near Black-Point, below Sandy-Hook; that he has four men of his late crew with him; that they depend on him for support; and that he is in want of a small sum of money to support them for the present.

Ordered, That Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esquire, Treasurer of this Congress, do advance to Captain Jonathan Clarke twenty-five Dollars, and take his receipt for the same.

Notes of Captain Jonathan Clarke's intelligence, which he gave to the Congress, were taken on the rough short Notes of the day, and are filed.

A Bond from Messrs. Lindlay Murray and Robert Murray, to Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., in the sum of £200, with a condition there under-written, that the said Lindlay Murray will erect Works for the manufacturing of Salt in this Colony, and the repayment of the sum of £100 lent thereon, agreeable to the Resolution of the late Provincial Congress on the 12th day of March last, was read.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of this Congress, advance to Mr. Lindlay Murray the sum of £100 on receipt of the said Bond, and take Mr. Lindlay Murray's receipt for the same.

The Congress resumed the consideration of the Report to the said Committee on the ways and means to prevent the danger to which this Colony is exposed by its intestine enemies. The same was again read, paragraph by paragraph, and on reading the second paragraph thereof, Mr. Sands moved, and was seconded, that Richmond County be inserted amongst the names of the Counties in the second clause.

Debates arose on the said motion, and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the affirmative, in manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.

8 New-York,
2 Charlotte,
4 Suffolk,
4 Westchester,
3 Tryon.

21 votes.

For the Negative.

2 King's,
2 Richmond.
4 votes.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Richmond County be inserted.

On reading the blank paragraph of the said Report, Mr. Scott moved, and was seconded, that the oath therein-mentioned be extended to all such as refused to sign the Association.

Debates arose thereon, and the question being put, it was carried in the affirmative by every County present. Mr. Morris dissented from Westchester County.

Die Mercurii, 9 ho. A. M., May 22, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Alsop, Major Stoutenburgh, Mr. Evert Buncker, Mr. Sands, Mr. Scott, Mr. Randall, Mr. Lewis.

FOR ALBANY.—Colonel Glenn, Captain Cuyler.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. Polhemus.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Lawrence.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Colonel Drake, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Paulling.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

Ordered, That Mr. Richard Norwood, Commissary of Colony Stores, from time to time deliver to Colonel Curtenius, or his Order, for the use of the Continental Troops raised in this Colony, as many Pouches and Belts, Bayonet-Belts and Gun-slings, as Colonel Curtenius shall order and direct. That Mr. Norwood take from time to time receipts for such parcels as he may from time to time deliver.

A Letter from Doctor John Hill, dated at Albany, the 12th instant, was read and filed. He thereby requests that he may be appointed Surgeon to Colonel Clinton's Regiment.*

DEAR SIR: I have had an inclination for a long time past to enter into the Continental service as Surgeon, and learn by Doctor Stringer of this place that Colonel Clinton's Regiment is unsupplied with any gentleman of that profession; on which account, in case I meet with the approbation of you and your colleagues, I am willing immediately to engage in that capacity. Doctor Stringer and Doctor Young (who are the gentlemen appointed to examine Doctors here who are about to enter into the service) do both highly approve of my abilities, and I flatter myself that Colonel Clinton will have no objections, as he has known me long. I have (yesterday) written to him by Doctor Stringer, and expect his answer soon. But if you, sir, and the other gentlemen, do not think it expedient that I should serve under Mr. Clinton, I shall take it very kind if you will try to provide for me in some other manner. I am well known to several of your Members, and in particular to Matthew Rea, Esq., and Mr. Arthur Parks, from Ulster County, by which gentlemen the Congress could be informed of my moral character, abilities in Surgery, &c. I would also inform the Congress that I am possessed of a large quantity of medicine of the best quality; also with all necessary instruments; and as I can confide in my own medicines best, I should choose to use them in case a proper allowance be made me on that account. I have taken lodgings in Albany, and should be glad to have the attendance of the troops quartered in town, until I could be better provided for. Doctor Stringer, who has formerly had the care of them, is about to leave town and go to Quebeck, and I do not hear that any person is appointed in his place. I should have waited upon you in person, but find it would be very detrimental to my business, and attended with expense. Your answer to my requests I shall expect as soon as possible; and am, sir, your very humble servant,

JOHN HILL.

To the President of the Provincial Congress in New-York.

† Your Committee do report: That there is great reason to believe that the enemies of American liberty have a general communication with each other through this and part of the neighbouring Colonies, by reason whereof the influence of the British Government is much extended, and the minds of the people poisoned by false reports and suggestions.

That many ill-disposed people have lately resorted unto and a great number dwell in the southern and eastern parts of Queen's County; that there are also several ill-disposed persons in the City and County of New-York, in King's County, in Richmond County, and in sundry other parts of this Colony, many of whom will most probably take up arms on the part of our foes whenever they shall see a prospect of success.

That, from various reports and the best intelligence which can be obtained from Europe, as also from the positive assertions of the disaffected throughout this and the neighbouring Colonies, and from such of their measures as have come to the knowledge of your Committee, there is no room to doubt that a large hostile armament will soon arrive in this Colony.

That the greater part of those who now hold offices and commissions under the Crown, and many others who are generally reputed inimical to American liberty, will be liable to suffer injuries from the resentment of the people, and the Colony in general exposed to great danger from the active exertions of those among us who are determined to assist in the subjection of America.

Your Committee are therefore of opinion, that, as well out of regard to the safety of individuals, as for the general welfare of America, it is highly and indispensably necessary to take speedy and effectual measures to prevent the hostile intentions of our foes, to stop the channels of intelligence and communication among the disaffected, and to quell the spirit of opposition which has hitherto in some measure prevailed.

Your Committee do propose that, for these purposes, it will be proper to take the assistance of his Excellency General Washington, and to march several detachments of the troops under his command into Queen's County, and disarm the inhabitants, excepting those who shall subscribe the following Declaration, viz:

"We, the subscribers, inhabitants of . . . , in Queen's County, in the Colony of New-York, do voluntarily and solemnly engage, under all the ties held sacred amongst mankind, at the risk of our lives and fortunes, to defend by arms the United American Colonies against the hostile attempts of the fleets and armies belonging to or in the pay of Great Britain, until the present unhappy controversy between the two countries shall be terminated: Provided always, That this Declaration shall not be construed to bind us to defend in person any other than the Colony of New-York, or, for that purpose, to march out of the said Colony."

That all such persons as are required as aforesaid to be disarmed, shall,

The same was taken into consideration, and read, and some amendments made in some parts thereof.

Mr. Lewis brought into Congress some Papers which he said he received from General Putnam, and in some measure relate to the matters now in consideration. The same were read.

The first was an Affidavit of Silas Howard, dated the 16th day of May instant, and taken before James Gals, Chairman of the Committee of Berkshire County, in the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay. The second is a very long Affidavit of a person whose name is concealed, taken on the 18th day of May instant, before Valentine Rathbun, Chairman of the Convention of eleven Committees.

The Congress then proceeded in the further consideration of the Report last above-mentioned, and on reading the — section thereof, relative to taking hostages of the Inhabitants of certain parts of Queen's County for their future peaceable behaviour, a motion was made and seconded that that part of the said Report be struck out.

Debates arose on the said motion; and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the affirmative, in manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.	For the Negative.
2 King's,	4 Westchester,
3 Orange,	3 Tryon.
2 Richmond,	—
8 New-York,	7 votes.
2 Charlotte,
4 Suffolk.
21 votes.

Ordered, therefore, That the said clause for taking hostages be struck out.

The said Report being read through, and sundry amendments made therein, Mr. Morris then moved, and was seconded, that the whole of the said Report be recommitted.

on pain of imprisonment, take the following Oath, or, being of the people called Quakers, the following Affirmation:

"I, A B, do swear, (or solemnly affirm and declare,) that I have not now in my possession, nor in the possession of any other person or persons, or deposited or secreted in any place or places, any arms which have not been delivered up to this Committee or their order; neither have I the arms of any other person or persons, or for any use or purpose whatsoever, now in my possession, so help me God."

That all those who, before the taking of the said oath, shall voluntarily deliver up any arms as aforesaid, shall receive a generous price for the arms by them respectively surrendered; and that the arms of those who shall not so surrender them shall be taken away without paying for them.

That . . . . ., inhabitants of Queen's County, be forthwith apprehended and secured in custody, subject to the further order of this Congress.

That . . . . . be taken as hostages for the future peaceable behaviour of the inhabitants of the said County.

That all persons in the City and County of New-York and in King's and Queen's County, holding commissions or offices under the Crown, be taken prisoners, and that those who shall give good evidence to the respective General Committees of the said Counties that they are well affected to the cause of American liberty, and good security that they will not be concerned in any manner against the United Colonies, but, on the contrary, will discover to the General or Commander-in-Chief of the Continental forces for the time being in this Colony, or to the Provincial Congress or County Committee for the time being, all such measures as shall to their knowledge be taken or devised against the said United Colonies, shall be suffered to go at large and possess the full enjoyment of their liberty, in common with other inhabitants of this Colony.

That . . . . ., residing in the City and County of New-York, . . . . ., residing in King's County, and . . . . ., residing in Queen's County, be in like manner apprehended, and suffered to go at large upon the like conditions above-named.

That it be recommended to all the General County Committees in the several Counties in this Colony to apprehend all persons holding military commissions under the King of Great Britain, and also such persons holding civil offices under the said King, and such other persons of influence in their respective Counties as are suspected of holding principles inimical to the said United Colonies; and after they shall have been apprehended, to deal with them in such manner as is prescribed for the conduct of the Committee above-named.

That all persons throughout the Colony who, after they are apprehended, shall refuse to comply with the said conditions, but who, nevertheless, in the opinion of the Committees of the several Counties, may be trusted on their parole or word of honour, may be permitted to reside in such part of one of the Colonies of Connecticut, New-Jersey, or Pennsylvania, as shall be chosen by such respective person or persons, and be agreeable to and thought proper by the Committee before whom such person is brought; and

That all persons who shall refuse such parole, or who, in the opinion of such respective Committees, may not safely be trusted upon such parole, shall be confined to close custody until the further order of this or some future Provincial Congress.

All which is, nevertheless, most humbly submitted.

JOHN ALSOP, Chairman.

Debates arose on the said motion, and the question being put thereon, it was carried in the negative, in manner following, to wit:

For the Negative.	For the Affirmative.
4 Suffolk,	4 Westchester,
2 Charlotte,	2 King's,
8 New-York,	2 Richmond.
3 Tryon.	—
17 votes.	8 votes—Orange equally divided.

Thereupon, the said motion was rejected.

Francis Lewis, Esq., informed this Congress that William Hauxhurst is employed by contract in making Anchors for the Continental Navy, in which business he cannot proceed without a small supply of Gunpowder, and therefore he applied for one hundred weight of Gunpowder for William Hauxhurst for the use of the Iron-works, to be paid for in cash.

Ordered, That Mr. Richard Norwood, Commissary of Colony Stores, deliver to Mr. William Hauxhurst one hundred weight of Gunpowder, at the price of thirty Pounds, on receiving the ready money for the said hundred weight of Gunpowder, and that the said Richard Norwood pay the said sum of thirty Pounds to Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of this Congress, and take a receipt for the same.

A Member suggested to the Congress that Mr. Abraham Livingston is very anxious to have his late Contract for victualling the Troops in this Colony settled; that no step has been taken in pursuance of his Letter of the 9th instant to the late Congress of this Colony, and that Mr. Livingston is ready to submit to a Committee of this Congress, to be appointed for that purpose, whether any and what compensation shall be made to him for his damages by the loss of that Contract.

Ordered, That the Auditors of Pay-Table Committee be a Committee to take into consideration whether any and what allowance shall be made to Mr. Livingston in lieu of that Contract, and to adjust and audit his Accounts, and make a final settlement with him for the same.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Bancker, Mr. Scott, Mr. Hallett, Mr. Sands, Mr. Alsop, Mr. Lewis.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Lawrence.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Morris, Colonel Drake.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Journey.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Mr. Stoutenburgh, from the Committee appointed to consider of and report the most expedient and effectual method of obtaining a true and impartial account of the number of Inhabitants within this Colony, reported, that a Letter be written for that purpose to the County Committee of each respective County in this Colony, in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, May 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In pursuance of an order of the honourable Continental Congress for ascertaining the number of inhabitants in this Colony, you are hereby requested to appoint such persons in your County as you shall think proper, to ascertain the number of inhabitants within your County, distinguishing the sex and age, agreeable to the enclosed form, which is to be laid before this Congress, or, in their recess, before the Committee of Safety, with all convenient speed, upon oath of the person or persons employed in taking the same, agreeable to the following form, viz:

"I, A B, do swear that the foregoing list contains a true and faithful account of the number of inhabitants within the District of . . . . ., in the County of . . . . ., in the Colony of New-York, according to the best information that I have been able to obtain, by applying at each dwelling-house, and by all other ways and means in my power within the said District.

I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant.

By order.

The form of a Return of Inhabitants, referred to in the above Letter, is as follows, viz :

NAMES OF THE HEADS OF FAMILIES.	MALES.			FEMALES.		NEGROES.
	Above 50 years of age.	Above 16 years of age & under 50.	Under 16 years of age.	Above 16 years of age.	Under 16 years of age.	Above 16 years of age.	Under 16 years of age.

Ordered, That the Secretaries prepare a number of copies of the said Letter, (which was unanimously agreed to,) and a number of copies of the said form of a Return of Inhabitants ; that the President sign the said Letters, and that one of them be directed to the County Committee of each respective County in this Colony.

The Congress were informed that Asa Douglas, who came to General Washington with the Deposition of Silas Howard, and the other Papers which were laid before this Congress this morning, has some material intelligence to communicate to this Congress. They directed him to be brought in. The said Asa Douglas signified to the President that he has material matters to mention, but could more freely confer with the Committee of the House appointed for that purpose.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Mr. Morris and Mr. Cuyler be a Committee to examine Captain Asa Douglas, and to report to this Congress the information they may obtain from him.

Mr. Randall informed the Congress that Colonel Curtenius has four Muskets of a particular kind, unfit for soldiers' use, which would be very useful and necessary on board of the private vessel of war named Putnam.

Ordered, That Colonel Curtenius deliver to Thomas Randall, Esq., or his order, four Muskets, such as Mr. Randall may choose, for the use of the armed Schooner Putnam.

Mr. Morris reported that Mr. Cuyler and himself had heard Captain Douglas ; that Captain Asa Douglas says, in substance, that great weight is to be given to those Affidavits which he had brought from King's District, though the names of the witnesses are concealed ; that he and another person, by talking to a neighbour of his who had long been suspected to be unfriendly, they impressed on him a religious dread of his conduct, and obtained from him some information which afforded a clew, and they pursued it farther ; that Silas Howard was afraid to go home after he was sworn, and that, at his request, the Committee had sent him to Hartford ; that he (Douglas) believed General Schuyler innocent of what is alleged against him, but that through a bad opinion of the General, the people in his Colony (Massachusetts-Bay) will not inlist ; that General Schuyler ought not to be trusted, lest he should deceive the country ; and, finally, that if this Congress will give him (the said Asa Douglas) an order, he will march ten thousand men to Albany in a few days, to obey the command of this Congress. And that this is the burden of his song.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

General Putnam attending, was admitted. He produced a Letter from General Washington, containing extracts of a Letter from Major-General Schuyler, requesting Intrenching-Tools, Rigging, Sail-Cloth and Sailmakers, and Lead ; desiring General Putnam to request the aid of this Congress to procure those articles, or spare any of those articles if they have them in store.

General Putnam was informed that Sail-Cloth, Rigging, and Blocks, have lately been sent up, in pursuance of a request of General Schuyler, of which he shall be furnished a particular account.

Ordered, That Mr. McKesson call on Colonel Curtenius and obtain a copy of the particulars of Sail-Cloth and Rigging lately sent to Albany, and acquaint the General therewith ; that he inform himself as to Lead, Duck, and Intrenching-Tools, to be obtained in this City, and acquaint the General with the information he may obtain.

Mr. John Lloyd, Jun., delivered to the President an Inventory and Appraisement of the Real and Personal Estate of Henry Lloyd, late of Boston, subscribed by Samuel Townshend and Zebulon Williams, Esq., and the said John Lloyd, Jun. ; which was read and filed. It thereby appears that the said personal estate amounts to the value of £203 2s. 10d., and that the said real estate is appraised at £3,000. The said John Lloyd, Jun., requests the direction of this Congress to take the care and management of the said estate.

Ordered, That Mr. John Lloyd, Jun., do remain in possession of the Estate at Queen's Village, belonging to Henry Lloyd, Esq., to improve the same to the best advantage, and to render an account thereof to this or some future Congress when called upon.

A Letter from General Putnam, dated this day, was read. He thereby informs that his Excellency General Washington was much pleased with the exertions of this Congress to prevent the Small-Pox in the Army, and had issued General Orders similar to the Resolve of Congress; notwithstanding which, a certain Dr. Betts had had the assurance to inoculate a number of people. He thereby requests some immediate exertions on this matter, and offers any aid in his power, and by a postscript thereto, informs that Dr. Foster is an evidence to the above.

Ordered, That the said Letter be sent and referred to the General Committee of the City of New-York, who are requested to examine into the matter with all possible despatch; to examine the said Betts and the said witness above named, and any other witnesses that they may know of or can obtain in that matter; that, if they find the charge proved against said Betts, they immediately cause him to be sent to jail; and that the said Committee be further requested to report thereon to this Congress.

The Congress were informed that Colonel Ritzema had many Arms, which had been collected for his Regiment, which want repairs; that he has Armourers in the Regiment who could repair those Arms if they were supplied with tools for that purpose.*

Ordered, That Colonel Curtenius procure and deliver to Colonel Ritzema, or his order, such Armourer's Tools as he may require for the purpose of employing some of the men of his Regiment in repairing such of the Arms of the said Regiment as may be out of repair.

The Report of the Committee, for that purpose, on the danger to which this Colony is exposed from the intestine enemies, and the ways and means necessary to be taken to guard against those dangers, being fairly copied, agreeable to the directions given to the Secretaries yesterday evening, the same was signed by John Alsop, Esq., their Chairman, read, and approved of; and it is agreed that a recital of the Resolution of the Continental Congress, of the 6th day of October last, recommending †

I have, out of my Regiment, collected six men—two of whom are very good gunsmiths—for the purpose of repairing the arms. Mr. Buys, the blacksmith in the Bowery, has offered me the use of his forge, but I want a few tools, such as handvices, screws, and planes. Mr. Abeel will not furnish them without an order of Congress; pray be so kind as to apply, in my behalf, for an order, that my men may go to work immediately; also for an order to Norwood for muskets. McDougall's fortnight ends Saturday next. Thursday morning.

† FRIDAY, October 6, 1775.—Resolved, That it be recommended to the several Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, and Councils or Committees of Safety, to arrest and secure every person, in their respective Colonies, whose going at large may, in their opinion, endanger the safety of the Colony or the liberties of America.

of regard to the safety of individuals as for the general welfare of America, it is highly and indispensably necessary to take speedy and effectual measures to prevent the hostile intentions of our foes, to stop the channels of intelligence and communication among the disaffected, and to quell the spirit of opposition which hath hitherto prevailed.

Your Committee do propose that, for these purposes, the following persons be apprehended, by the assistance of the Continental Troops now stationed in and near this city, to wit:

* * * * *

That a Committee be appointed to confer with the Commander-in-Chief, now here, upon the subject of apprehending the persons above-named, and to superintend the taking of them; that, upon and after the apprehension of the said persons, such of them as shall give good and sufficient security, on oath and otherwise, as the said Committee shall think proper, that they will not be concerned in any measures taken or to be taken against the United American Colonies, or any or either of them, and that they will discover all measures taken or to be taken against the said Colonies, or any or either of them, as far as the same shall come to their knowledge respectively, be permitted to go at large; and that, as to such persons as shall refuse such security, it shall be in the discretion of the said Committee to admit on their parole of honour, to be given to the said Committee as to the Continental Congress, as many of the said persons as may, in the judgment of the said Committee, safely be trusted on their said parole to reside in some part of one of the neighbouring Colonies, such as shall be chosen by the said respective persons, and approved of by the said Committee; and that all such persons as, in the opinion of the said Committee, cannot safely be trusted on their said parole, or, if to be trusted, shall refuse to give such parole, shall be reported to this Congress, to be severally dealt with as this Congress shall think proper.

That it be recommended to all the General County Committees in the several Counties of this Colony to apprehend all persons holding military commissions under the King of Great Britain, and also all such persons holding civil offices under the said King, or being possessed of influence in their respective Counties, as are suspected of holding principles inimical to the said United Colonies; and, after they shall have been apprehended, to deal with them in such manner as is prescribed for the conduct of the Committee above-named.

All which is, nevertheless, most humbly submitted.

JOHN ALSOP, Chairman.

Colonel John Broome and Mr. Anthony Rutgers, of New-York, Mr. Jeremiah Vanderbilt, from King's County, and Colonel Aaron Cortelyou, of Richmond County, attending to take their seats, were duly sworn, and severally took the oath of secrecy agreeable to the Resolution of the 19th instant.

The Order of the Day being read, the Congress proceeded to take into consideration the Resolutions of the Continental Congress, of the 15th of May instant, on the subject of composing and erecting some form of Government.

Mr. Morris opened the business by a long argument, showing the necessity of the measure, and that this is the crisis in which it should be done, and concluded with a motion, and was seconded by Mr. Webster, in the words following, to wit:

I move that a Committee be appointed to draw up a recommendation to the people of this Colony for the choosing of persons to frame a Government for the said Colony.

Mr. Scott, who came in when Mr. Morris was speaking, opposed the motion in a long argument, and concluded that he is of opinion this Congress has power to form a Government; or, at least, it is doubtful whether they have not that power; and that therefore, in his opinion, that point ought to be reserved, and a Committee appointed to consider of and report on that matter.

Thereupon, Mr. Sands moved, and was seconded by Mr. Scott, for the following amendment to Mr. Morris's motion, to wit: "I move that the words therein following after the word appointed, be obliterated, and the following words there inserted, viz: To take into consideration the Resolutions of Continental Congress of the 15th May instant, and report thereon with all convenient speed."

Debates arose on the said proposed amendment. Mr. Morris supported his motion in a long argument in opposition to the said proposed amendment.

The question being then put on Mr. Sands's motion, it was carried in the affirmative, in the manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.	For the Negative.
3 Orange,	2 King's,
8 New-York.	2 Richmond.
2 Charlotte,	—
3 Tryon,	4 votes.
4 Suffolk,
4 Westchester,—Mr. Morris dissented.
4 Queen's.
28 votes.

The Congress then proceeded to nominate and appoint a Committee for the purpose before-mentioned.

Thereupon, Resolved, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Haring, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Jay, Mr. Cuyler, and Colonel Broome, be a Committee to take into consideration the Resolutions of Continental Congress of the 15th May instant, and that the said Committee report thereon with all convenient speed.

As Colonel Remsen is appointed one of the Committee to report on the stations of the neighbouring Regiments of Militia in case of invasions or alarm, as requested by General Washington's Letter of the 17th instant, which might interfere with his attendance on the Committee above appointed:

Ordered, That he be discharged from the Committee relating to the Militia, and that Colonel Malcom be added to that Committee in his stead.

A Letter from General Putnam, dated this day, was received, read, and filed. He therein mentions that an old house very much endangers the great Laboratory in the new Bridewell near the Green; that Colonel Knox is very desirous to take it away; that as it is in a ruinous condition there is no inducement to keep it standing.

Ordered, That Mr. McKesson inform the General that the Magistrates have given orders to remove the Paupers out of that house without delay, and given permission to Colonel Knox to have it removed as soon as it is evacuated.

Die Sabbati, 9 ho. A. M., May 25, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Broome, Mr. Sands, Mr. Jay, Mr. Jacobus Van Zandt, Mr. Randall, Mr. Bancker, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Scott.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Journey, Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR ULSTER.—Major Parks, Mr. Cantine, Mr. Hasbrouck, Mr. Brewster.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus, Mr. Leffertse, Captain Jeremiah Vanderbilt.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston, Gen. Woodhull.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Mr. Paulling, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Waters Smith, Col. Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Colonel Malcom, Mr. Webster.

Matthew Cantine, Esquire, appeared and produced the Credentials of the Deputies chosen to represent the County of Ulster in Provincial Congress, dated at New-Paltz, April 16th, 1776, and signed by Johannes Hardenburgh, Chairman of the Committee of the said County; whereby it appears that Colonel Charles Dewitt, Colonel Abraham Hasbrouck, Colonel Johannes Snyder, Matthew Cantine, Esquire, Matthew Rhea, Esquire, Mr. Arthur Parks, Henry Wisner, Jun., Esquire, and Samuel Brewster, Esquire, were duly elected to represent the said County in Provincial Congress, with power, in conjunction with the other Counties, to elect Delegates for this Colony in Continental Congress, and a recommendation to them to nominate George Clinton, Esquire, as one of the said Delegates.

Colonel Abraham Hasbrouck also appeared and produced another Credential from the same County, of the same date, and signed by Johannes Hardenburgh, Chairman of the said County Committee, whereby it appears that the same gentleman were duly elected to represent the said County in Provincial Congress, and that any two of them be a quorum, reserving to the people of the County at large the right of choosing a Delegate for the Continental Congress.

The said Credentials were respectively read; and the question being put, whether those gentlemen shall take their seats: Agreed that those gentlemen (as well as any other of the gentlemen in the said Credentials named) take their seats.

And Ordered, That a Letter be written, enclosing copies of the said Credentials, to the Chairman and Members of the Committee of Ulster County, requesting of them to transmit to this Congress, without delay, a true statement of the proceedings of the said Committee relative to the election of Deputies for the said County; and, further, that they inform the Congress of the reasons for sending two sets of Credentials, contradictory to each other with respect to the subject of appointing Delegates for the Continental Congress.

Mr. Sands reported that he had spoken with Colonel Curtenius on the subject of contracting to supply Captain Hamilton's Artillery Company with Provisions; that Colonel Curtenius refused entering into contract himself, as he could not attend to the business—his time being altogether taken up with other publick business; but that Cornelius Roosevelt and Wessel Wessels were willing to contract for supplying the said Company with Provisions, at the rate of 10½d. per ration, and that Colonel Curtenius would become surety for their true and faithful performance of the same.

Ordered, That Mr. Sands be authorized to make the said Contract with those gentlemen on the terms they have offered.

A Return of the Officers of a Minute Company at Newburgh, in Ulster County, whereby it appears that the following persons were elected: Uriah Drake Captain, Jacob Lawrence First Lieutenant, William Ervin Second Lieutenant, and Thomas Dunn Ensign,—was read and filed.

Ordered, That the issuing of Commissions be delayed till the Report of the Committee on General Washington's two Letters be taken into consideration.

Messrs. John Berrian and Robert Harpur, two of the Members of the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, attending, were admitted. They delivered in the Report of the said Committee on the case of Azor Betts, charged with having inoculated persons for the Small-Pox; whereby it appears that Doctor Betts has, by the repeated applications of the Officers of the Continental Army, inoculated some of them—particularly Colonel Molton, Captain Parks, Doctor Hart, and Lieutenant Brown; and that the said Committee has committed the said Azor Betts in close custody in Jail until he be released by order of this Congress.

Messrs. Berrian and Harpur further informed, that the wife of Azor Betts, on her examination, says that Lieutenant Seymour, from Long-Island, had informed her that seven persons of the Army (Officers, as she understood) on Long-Island were taking mercurial preparations, and, as he (the said Seymour) supposed, were inoculated or preparing to be inoculated with the Small-Pox.

Ordered, That the Secretaries prepare a copy of the said Report of the General Committee, to be delivered to Major-General Putnam, that he may give such directions to the Continental Army for preventing the Small-Pox among them on Long-Island as he may think necessary.

Messrs. Berrian and Harpur also informed the Congress that William Newton, of this City, has been charged and convicted before the General Committee of New-York of violating a Resolution of the Continental Congress, in refusing to receive in payment the Continental Paper money; that the said Newton has since consented to receive the said money in payment. The General Committee therefore request the advice and opinion of this Congress on a doubt which hath arisen in the said Committee, to wit: Whether the said Newton ought, notwithstanding his present willingness to receive the said money, to be held up to the publick as an enemy to this country.

The said Committee were informed, as the opinion of this Congress, that it would be most prudent not to hold the said Newton up to the publick as an enemy to this country; provided he receive the said money without interest from the day on which the same was tendered to him in payment

The same gentlemen also delivered in a certified copy of the Proceedings of said Committee against Mr. Andrew Gautier, Jun., charged and convicted by the said Committee of violating the Resolution of Continental Congress, in refusing to receive in payment the Continental Paper emission; that the said Committee had resolved to hold Mr. Gautier up to the publick as an enemy to his country unless he appealed to the Congress; that Mr. Gautier had been sent for, and attended the Committee, and made acquainted with their determination; whereupon the said Mr. Gautier informed the said Committee that he would appeal from the decision of their body to that of the honourable Provincial Congress.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Mr. Andrew Gautier, Jun., appear before this Congress on Wednesday next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to support his appeal from the determination of the General Committee of this City, on the charge exhibited against him of violating the Resolution of the Continental Congress, by refusing to receive in payment the Paper currency emitted by the said Congress.

Several Members of this Congress, now present, have not yet taken the oath of secrecy as to such matters as may be charged from the Chair to be kept secret. They were requested to be sworn.

Thereupon Mr. Jay, Major Parks, Mr. Cantine, Colonel Hasbrouck, and Mr. Brewster, came up to the Chair, and were respectively sworn, in the words following, to wit:

"I, . . . . ., do solemnly swear on the Holy Evangelists that I will keep secret all such matters and things as shall, by order of this Congress, be given in charge from the Chair to be kept secret, until leave shall be given from the Chair, by order of this or some future Congress or Legislature of this Colony, to reveal the same."

The Report of the Committee on the dangers to which this Colony is exposed by its intestine enemies, which was approved of and agreed to by this Congress yesterday, was again read.

Ordered, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Morris, Mr. Jay, Mr. Haring, and Colonel Remsen, be a Committee to frame a Law of this Congress in pursuance of, and according to, the spirit and intention of the Resolutions contained and agreed to in that Report;

And Ordered, That the said Committee report with all convenient speed.

The Report of the Committee appointed to take into consideration General Washington's two Letters on the subject of appointing the stations and places of rendezvous of the Militia, was read.

Ordered, That the consideration thereof be postponed till Tuesday next.

Ordered, That Colonel Remsen, Colonel Malcom, Colonel Broome, Colonel Blackwell, Captain Wickham, Mr. Cortelyou, and Mr. Scott, be a Committee to take into consideration the state of the Militia of this Colony, and proper dispositions of the same, and that they report with all convenient speed.

A Letter from the Committee of Kingston, dated the 22d instant, signed by William Ellsworth, Chairman, enclosing the Examinations of James and Lemuel Monger, charged with counterfeiting and passing Bills of Credit of the Continental emission, and the emission of the Congress of the Colony of Connecticut—that said Mongers are in Kingston Jail, and the Committee request the advice of this Congress in the premises; they also mention that Godfrey Hains, heretofore sent to said Jail, had made his escape.

Ordered, That those Examinations remain until the case of the Money-makers, now confined in New-York, be resumed.

The Petition of Israel and Isaac Youngs, praying to be discharged or admitted to bail, was read.*

Ordered, That the said Petition lie on the table.

* To the Honourable the Members of the Provincial Congress for the Province of NEW-YORK, convened in Congress:

The Petition of ISRAEL YOUNGS and ISAAC YOUNGS, of the Township of HUNTINGTON, on the Island of NASSAU, in the Province of NEW-YORK, humbly sheweth:

That some time in the month of February last Henry Dawkins, late of this city, Engraver, came to the dwelling-house of your Petitioner, the said Israel Youngs, and desired to board with him for a week or two,

Colonel Henry Remsen, from the Committee to consider of the Resolution of the Continental Congress of the 15th of May, for forming a Government, delivered in a Report; which was read.

Ordered, That the consideration thereof be deferred until Monday morning, to be then taken up.

Mr. Morris had leave of absence until Monday morning.

Mr. Jay the like, their Counties being represented without them.

Mr. Conner moved, and was seconded, that the Congress do adjourn until Monday next.

For to-morrow.

4 Suffolk.
4 Westchester.
8 New-York.
4 Ulster.
3 Orange.
2 Charlotte.
3 Tryon.

For Monday.

2 Richmond.
2 King's.
4 Queen's.

8

The Deputies from Richmond and Queen's Counties asked for and obtained leave of absence until nine o'clock on Monday morning.

Die Solis, 9 ho. A. M., May 26, 1776. ]

Present:

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Randall, Colonel Broome, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Bancker.

FOR ALBANY.

FOR DUTCHESS.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Paulding, Mr. Haviland.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Mr. Brewster, Major Parks, Mr. Cantine.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

A Letter from Captain Alexander Hamilton, dated this day, requesting for his Company the pay of the Continental Army, the bounty of Frocks, and some expenses of his Officers in recruiting, was read and filed.

Thereupon, Resolved, That the Artillery Company of the said Captain Hamilton be allowed the same pay as the Continental Artillery, and that the said Captain Hamilton receive ten Shillings for every man he has or shall enlist, not exceeding one hundred men, and that each of the men of said Company be allowed a Frock as bounty.

which he consented to; that at the expiration of that time he desired to continue boarding with him for a longer time, which he agreed to; that the said Henry Dawkins, some time after being at his house, acquainted him that if he had a printing-press he could make a very good living there, for several of the hatters had spoken to him to print papers to put in their hats, and sundry other matters which he could print, by which he could make a good living, and wrote a letter by your Petitioner, the said Israel, (who was then going to New-York to buy wheat,) to a person in that city, whom he desired to send him a printing-press by your Petitioner, the said Israel; that your Petitioner, the said Israel, delivered the said letter to the said person to whom it was directed, who accordingly sent a printing-press, put up in a box, by your Petitioner, the said Israel; that after the said Henry Dawkins had got the said printing-press, and not before, he told your Petitioner, the said Israel, that he could make as good money as ever was, undiscovered, which your Petitioner, the said Israel, told your other Petitioner, the said Isaac Youngs, of, who replied, that he thought if he could it would be a sin, and that he would have nothing to do with it, which your Petitioner, the said Israel, also declared. That your Petitioners have ever supported the character of honest men and friends to the liberties of this country, of which they can produce undeniable proof, until it was their misfortune to fall in with the said Henry Dawkins in manner before-mentioned; that they are ready to prove their innocence whenever this honourable Congress shall be pleased to direct an inquiry to be made for that purpose, which they most ardently pray for, and that in the mean time they may be admitted to give bail or security for their appearance.

Your Petitioners, therefore, most humbly pray that the honourable Congress would be pleased to take their case under consideration, and appoint some short day for their trial, or admit them, or such one of them as they shall be pleased, to bail for their appearance until they can be tried, or grant such other relief in the premises as in their justice and wisdom shall seem fit.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

ISAAC YOUNGS.

New-York, May 25, 1776.

Die Lunæ, 9 ho. A. M., May 27, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Jay, Colonel Remsen, Colonel Broome, Mr. Randall, Captain Denning, Colonel Brasher, Mr. Scott, Mr. Alsop, Mr. Lewis.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR RICHMOND.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Mr. Brewster, Major Parks, Mr. Cantine.

FOR QUEEN'S.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Wickham.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Paulling, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Tompkins.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Covenhoven, Mr. Jeremiah Vanderbilt.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Colonel Malcom, Mr. Webster.

Colonel Remsen represented to the Congress that many persons were confined by order of this and the former Congress and Committee of Safety, and the necessity of appointing a Standing Committee to examine and discharge such of them as shall appear to be innocent of the charges alleged against them.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Colonel Broome, Mr. Cuyler, Colonel Remsen, Colonel Malcom, Colonel Brasher, or any three of them, be a Standing Committee to take examination of and try all such persons as are taken into custody by order of this or any former Congress or Committee of Safety of this Colony, as also all such persons as shall hereafter be taken into custody by order of this Congress or their Committee of Safety, excepting those already committed on suspicion of counterfeiting Paper currency; that the said Committee have power to call in and examine witnesses and papers for that purpose; and further, that the said Committee be, and they are hereby authorized, to discharge all such Prisoners as shall, on full inquiry, appear to said Committee to be innocent of the charges alleged against them respectively; that the said Committee keep a record of their proceedings in the premises, and to recommit all such of the said Prisoners as they shall find guilty, and report them, with their crimes, and the substance of the evidence that shall have been given for and against them.

A Letter from General Putnam, relating to Amos Bull and some other Prisoners who had been taken by one of the Military Guards, was read. A Memorandum enclosed in the said Letter was also read. The said Memorandum contains the names of sundry witnesses against John Beck and Mary, his wife, on a charge of attempting to supply Provisions to the Ships-of-War, and refers to parts of a Letter in custody of one of the Secretaries; and also contains a Memorandum that a Frenchman, known by the name of Dr. Du Buque, had been taking notes on the Batteries and Fort with a pencil.

Ordered, That Mr. McKesson wait personally on the General Committee of this City, now sitting, and deliver to them General Putnam's Letter, and all the other papers in his custody relative thereto, and give them such other information on that subject as he may have obtained, that the said General Committee may proceed thereon.

It was suggested to the Congress that some gentlemen are of opinion that it would be advantageous for the defence of this Colony to impede the navigation between Red-Hook, on Nassau-Island, and Bedlow's Island, if the same can be done.

Therefore, Ordered, That Colonel Malcom and Captain Daniel Shaw, and such persons as they shall think proper to take to their assistance for the purpose, be, and they are hereby, authorized to sound the depth of the water between Red-Hook, on Nassau-Island, and Bedlow's Island, and make report of their doings to this Congress; and that they apply to the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Troops in this Colony for permission to perform the said service without interruption or molestation from the troops on board.

Mr. Covenhoven was duly sworn and took the usual oath of secrecy.

The Order of the Day being read, the Congress proceeded to hear the Report of the Committee on the Resolution of the Continental Congress of the 15th of May relating to a new form of Government. The same was read, and being again read by paragraphs, is in the words following, to wit:

1st. That your Committee are of opinion that the right of framing, creating, or remodelling Civil Government is and ought to be in the People.

2dly. That as the present form of Government by Congress and Committees in this Colony originated from, so it depends on, the free and uncontrolled choice of the inhabitants thereof.

3dly. That the said form of Government was instituted while the old form of Government still subsisted, and, therefore, is necessarily subject to many defects, which could not then be remedied by any new institutions.

4thly. That by the voluntary abdication of the late Governor, Tryon, the dissolution of our Assembly for want of due prorogation, and the open and unwarrantable hostilities committed against the persons and properties of the inhabitants of all the United Colonies in North-America by the British Fleets and Armies, under the authority, and by the express direction and appointment of, the King, Lords, and Commons of Great Britain, the said old form of Government is become, ipso facto, dissolved; whereby it hath become absolutely necessary for the good people of this Colony to institute a new and regular form of internal Government and Police, the supreme Legislative and Executive power in which should, for the present, wholly reside and be within this Colony, in exclusion of all foreign and external power, authority, dominion, jurisdiction, and pre-eminence whatsoever.

5thly. That doubts have arisen whether this Congress are invested with sufficient authority to frame and institute such new form of internal Government and Police.

6thly. That those doubts can, and of right ought to, be removed by the good people of this Colony only.

7thly. That until such new form of internal Police and Government be constitutionally established, or until the expiration of the term for which this Congress was elected, this Congress ought to continue in the full exercise of their present authority, and, in the mean time, ought to give the good people of each several and respective County in this Colony full opportunity to remove the said doubts, either by declaring their respective Representatives in this Congress, in conjunction with the Representatives of the other Counties respectively, competent for the purpose of establishing such new form of internal Police and Government, and adding to their number, if they shall think proper, by electing others in the stead of the present Members, or any or either of them, and increasing (if they should deem it necessary) the number of Deputies from each County, with the like powers as are now vested in this Congress, and with express authority to institute and establish such new and internal form of Government and Police as aforesaid.

8thly. That therefore this House take some order, to be publicly notified throughout the several Counties in this Colony, whereby the inhabitants of each County respectively, on a given day to be appointed in each of them respectively by this Congress for the purpose, may, by plurality of voices, either confirm their present Representatives respectively in this Congress in their present power, and with express authority, in conjunction with the Representatives in this Congress for the other Counties, to institute a new internal form of Government and Police for this Colony, suited to the present critical emergency, and to continue in full force and effect until a future peace with Great Britain shall render the same unnecessary, or elect new Members for that purpose to take seat in Congress, in place of those Members respectively who shall not be so confirmed. The whole number to be capable of such addition or increase in each respective County as aforesaid.

By order of the Committee:

HENRY REMSEN, Chairman.

The said Report being considered, was accepted.

Mr. Covenhoven and Mr. Jeremiah Vanderbilt dissent from said fourth paragraph and the seventh and eighth paragraphs.

Ordered, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Jay, and Mr. Haring, be a Committee to take said Report and frame it into Resolutions to be published.

The office of Captain of the Company of Light-Horse in the City and County of New-York becoming vacant by the promotion of Abraham P. Lott to the Colonelcy of the Third Regiment of Militia, Mr. John Leary, Jun., is returned a Captain of the said Company vice Abraham P. Lott, Peter Kettletas First Lieutenant, Thomas Beckman Cornet, and Jeremiah Allen Adjutant and Quartermaster.

Ordered, That Commissions issue to those gentlemen respectively. And they were issued accordingly.

Monday, 5 o'clock P. M., May 27, 1776.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.
 FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Alsop, Mr. Scott, Mr. Randall, Mr. Van Zandt, Captain Denning.
 FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn.
 FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.
 FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.
 FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Paulding, Mr. Morris, Mr. Haviland.
 FOR KING'S.—Mr. Jeremiah Vanderbilt.
 FOR ULSTER.—Mr. Cantine, Mr. Brewster, Major Parkes, Colonel Hasbrouck.
 FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.
 FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Mr. Vanderbilt had leave of absence this afternoon.

Ordered, That Mr. Gelston, Mr. Brewster, and Mr. Paulding, be a Committee to take into consideration the several Reports upon Lead Mines, and report thereon to this House.

A Letter from Cornelius Swartwout was read. He prays to be appointed a Third Lieutenant in Captain Bowman's Company.*

Ordered, That he be appointed accordingly, and that John Reid, Jun., be Second Lieutenant of said Company.

A Petition from the City Committee of New-York, to enable them to build sheds for the Poor in Westchester County, was read. After some time spent in consideration thereof, it was Ordered, That the same be referred to Mr. Haviland, Mr. Glenn, and Colonel Hasbrouck, to report thereon.

A Letter from Mr. Robert Harpur, Chairman of the City Committee of New-York, was read. He thereby informs that they have sent Mrs. Beck to Jail for sending Provisions on board the Ships-of-War. †

* NEW-YORK, May 25, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: I am requested by Captain Bauman to lay before your Honours that, with his approbation, I have done duty in his Company of Artillery as Third Lieutenant, and have recruited great part of the men both in town and country. I have already passed review before Lord Stirling. His Lordship and Colonel Knox having given orders for the Company to pass general muster with the Regiment of Artillery to-morrow morning, I beg your Honours will be pleased to grant me that appointment, which will confer an honour upon me, who always have been, and ever shall be, ready to lay down my life in defence of my country.

I have the honour to be, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient servant,
 CORNELIUS SWARTWOUT.
 To the Honourable Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York.

† COMMITTEE-CHAMBER, NEW-YORK, May 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In consequence of information being laid before this Committee of Margaret Beck her having frequently sent provisions on board the ships of war, in violation of a Resolution of the honourable the Committee of Safety of this Colony, bearing date the 18th day of April last, we proceeded to examine sundry evidences thereon upon oath, and find by them and her own confession that she has three several times attempted to violate the said Resolution, and in two of which she has succeeded. We have, therefore, sent her in safe custody to the City Jail, until your further pleasure shall be known concerning her.

We are, respectfully, your very humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT HARPUR, Deputy Chairman.

To the Honourable the Congress of the Colony of New-York.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Paulding.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence, Mr. Smith.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Mr. Brewster, Mr. Cantine, Major Parks.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Cortelyou, Mr. Journey.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

A Letter from Petrus Schoonmaker, Captain of a Company of Militia in Colonel Paulding's Regiment, of Ulster County. He complains that the Committee have not given him his proper rank in the Regiment; therefore has returned his Commission to the Congress.

Ordered, That the foregoing Letter be referred to the Deputies for Ulster County.

A Letter from Lieutenant Jacob Lawrence, of a Minute Company in Ulster County. He informs Congress that himself, Ensign Dunn, and Sergeant Lane, marched eight days, through four different Precincts, to fetch seventeen of their men to go to Fort Montgomery; for which they have not been paid.*

Ordered, To lie on the table for the perusal of the Members.

A Letter from Paul Micheau, Esquire, of Richmond County, setting forth that his bad state of health renders it impossible for him to attend Congress as Deputy from said County. †

Postponed for consideration.

Mr. Smith informed Congress that Captain Baylie's Company of Militia, and also some of the Minute-men in the Township of Jamaica, stood in great need of some Gunpowder, and requested that a small quantity be ordered to be delivered to the General Committee of Queen's County, to be dealt out among the men of the said Company.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Mr. Norwood, Commissary of Colony Stores, deliver to Captain Ephraim Baylie one hundred weight of Gunpowder, and take his receipt for the same.

And Ordered, That Captain Baylie deliver the said Gunpowder to the County Committee of Queen's County, who are requested to distribute the same to the Minute-men and Militia of the said County, who may appear to the said Committee to be well affected to the American cause; the said County Committee to stand charged for said Powder at the rate of £25 per hundred; and the Chairman is requested to take care that the sum of £25 be remitted to this Congress, or their Treasurer, for said Gunpowder.

Colonel Fleming attending, was admitted. He returned General Putnam's thanks for the exertions of this Congress, and the General Committee of the City, for their commit-

Whereas these are to certify that Colonel Palmer sent marching orders to Captain Uriah Drake, then Captain of a Minute Company, and on the 25th of March last past we marched to Newburgh, in the County of Ulster, and about seventeen of our men not appearing, Captain Drake gave me and Ensign Dunn and Sergeant Lane, warrants from under his hand and seal to go and fetch those men down,—they living in four different Precincts, it took us eight days, from the first day of our marching, before we arrived at the garrison at Fort Montgomery. Our not having anything allowed for the above-said eight days, the honourable Congress will please to take it into consideration, and act thereon as in their wisdom shall appear to them to be just; and their humble Petitioner shall, as in duty bound, ever for them pray.

JACOB LAWRENCE, Lieutenant.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of New-York.

† RICHMOND COUNTY, May 25, 1776.

SIR: I embrace the first opportunity of rendering my reasons for not attending in Congress. I have been in a bad state of health for some months; in fact have been much indisposed since September last, attended with a fever, and pain in my breast, which renders me incapable of transacting any publick business, having for some time been obliged to pay a clerk to do the business of my office.

I hope our County is fully represented in Congress without me; if not, expect you will make an order on our Committee to convene the people to appoint another in my place—making not the least doubt but the above reasons will be a sufficient excuse for your most obedient, humble servant,

PAUL MICHEAU.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq.

ment of Doctor Azor Betts, and their extraordinary exertions to prevent the spreading of the Small-Pox among the Continental Army. And he requested to know whether this Congress will consent that he publish the copy of the determination of the City Committee and of this Congress on that subject.

The Congress returned their thanks to General Putnam for his polite message, and will send him an answer as to publishing the determination of the Committee and Report of this Congress.

The Order of the Day being read, the Congress proceeded to hear the Report of the Committee on General Washington's two Letters on the subject of having a part of the Militia at all times ready on any alarm to join the Continental Troops; which was read.

Ordered, That it be postponed till the afternoon.

A Letter from Captain Cornelius Steenrod, dated this day, was read and filed.* He therein mentions that he did not receive his Warrant to enlist a Company in the Continental service until the 27th of last month, but had engaged many of his men on the 9th day of the month. That about twenty of the said men have refused, and still do refuse, to join the Company, unless they be allowed pay from that day. He also informs that two of his men are confined under guard by Captain Hobby, as persons who have also enlisted in his Company. And Captain Steenrod requests the direction of this Congress in the premises.

The Congress are of opinion that Captain Steenrod ought not to receive pay for any of the men in his Company prior to the date of his Warrant; and for such of his men who enlisted after the date of his Warrant, only from the time of their respective enlistment.

Ordered, That one of the Secretaries write a Letter to Captain Steenrod to this effect.

Mr. James Livingston and Dr. Benjamin De Lavergne, two Members from Dutchess County, having this morning attended and taken their seats, the said two gentlemen, at the Chair, were respectively duly sworn, and took the general oath of secrecy as before entered on the Minutes, to keep secret all such matters and things as shall be given in charge by order of this Congress to be kept secret until leave shall be given by the like order to divulge the same.

Colonel Malcom came into the Congress, and reported the Soundings between Red-Hook and the Pest-Island.

The Report read,

Ordered, That it be returned to Colonel Malcom, to be amended and reduced to a scale.

Mr. Scott, from the Committee appointed to report a Law or set of Resolutions of this Congress to prevent the dangers to which this Colony is exposed by its internal enemies, brought in the Report of the said Committee, which he read in his place, and delivered in at the Chair.† The Whereas I did, on the 9th day of last month, enlist a number of men upon condition that if I went into the Continental service, then they were to go with me—some of which are now in my Company, and others of them have not yet joined the Regiment, and will not unless they are assured of their drawing pay from the said 9th day, although my warrant was dated on the 27th. Provided they are allowed pay from the 9th day, they will immediately join my Company, but otherwise not. Two of those men are now, and have been for some days past, under guard, by reason of a claim Captain Hobby makes by their enlisting conditionally under him; the truth of which, should be glad the honourable Congress might know. Your Petitioner earnestly desires the above to be considered by you, gentlemen, and the resolve to be transmitted to him as soon as conveniently may be; who, in duty bound, shall ever for you pray.

CORNELIUS STEENROD, Captain.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress of New-York.

P. S. I have settled with all those who enlisted under me on the said 9th day, excepting twenty; and should it be judged by you, gentlemen, agreeable to my Petition, shall immediately send for them, as above.

C. STEENROD.

† Whereas the honourable the Continental Congress, by their Resolve of the 6th day of October last, did recommend to the several Provincial Assemblies or Conventions, and Councils or Committees of Safety, to arrest and secure every person in their respective Colonies whose going at large might, in their opinion, endanger the safety of the Colony or the liberties of America; and whereas his Excellency General Washington hath lately exhibited to this Congress sundry informations and evidences, from which it appears that the enemies of American liberty have a general communication with each other through this and part of the neighbouring Colonies; by reason whereof the influence of the British Government is much extended, and the minds of the people poisoned by false reports and suggestions:

same was again read through, and was then read paragraph by paragraph. On reading the third paragraph of the preamble, and the question being put thereon, whether the Congress agrees with this Committee in their Report?

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR KING'S.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Captain Jeremiah Wool, attending, was admitted. He informed the Congress that the persons under guard, charged with counterfeiting Continental and Provincial Money, were not properly attended to by some of the Guards, and that

And whereas many ill-disposed persons have lately resorted unto and a great number dwell in King's County, particularly in the southern and eastern parts thereof; and there are also several ill-disposed persons in the City and County of New-York, in King's County, Richmond County, and in sundry other parts of this Colony, many of whom will most probably take up arms on the part of our foes whenever they shall see a prospect of success:

And whereas from the various reports and the best intelligence which can be obtained from Europe, as also from the positive assertions of the disaffected throughout this and the neighbouring Colonies, and from the measures by them taken, there is no room to doubt that a large hostile armament will soon arrive in this Colony:

And whereas many of those who now hold offices and commissions under the Crown, and many others who are generally reputed inimical to American liberty, will be liable to suffer injuries from the resentment of the people, and the Colony in general exposed to great danger from the active exertions of those among us who are determined to assist in the subjection of America:

Wherefore, as well out of regard to the safety of individuals as for the general welfare of America, it is highly and indispensably necessary to take speedy and effectual measures to prevent the hostile intentions of our foes, to stop the channels of intelligence and communication among the disaffected, and to quell the spirit of opposition which hath hitherto prevailed; for which purposes it is hereby ordered that the following persons be apprehended, by the assistance of the Continental troops now stationed in and near this City, to wit:

That . . . . . be a Committee to confer with the Commander-in-Chief now here, upon the subject of apprehending the persons above-named and to superintend the taking of them; that upon and after the apprehending of the said persons, such of them as shall give good and sufficient security on oath and otherwise, as the said Committee shall think proper, that they will not be concerned in any measures taken or to be taken against the United American Colonies, or any or either of them; and that they will discover all measures taken, or to be taken, against the said Colonies, or any, or either of them, as far as the same shall come to their knowledge respectively, be permitted to go at large.

That as to such persons as shall refuse such security, it shall be taken in the discretion of the said Committee to admit as many of the said persons as may, in the judgment of the said Committee, be safely trusted, on their parole or word of honour to reside in such part of one of the neighbouring Colonies as shall be chosen by the said respective persons, approved of by the said Committee, such persons giving their parole or word of honour respectively to the said Committee to reside in the place marked out as aforesaid for their residence until the further order of the Continental Congress, and to be subject to such order as to their removal to any other place.

That all such persons as, in the opinion of the said Committee, cannot safely be trusted on their said parole, or if to be trusted, shall refuse to give such parole, shall be reported to this Congress, to be severally dealt with as this Congress shall think proper. And there is great danger of an escape.* Thereupon, the Congress made the following Order, to wit:

That it be recommended to all the General County Committees in the several Counties in this Colony to apprehend all persons holding military commissions under the King of Great Britain; and also all such persons holding civil offices under the said King, or being possessed of influence in their respective Counties as are suspected of holding principles inimical to the said United Colonies; and after they shall have been apprehended, to deal with them in such manner as is prescribed for the conduct of the Committee above-named.

Whereas it has been represented to this Congress that Israel Youngs, Isaac Youngs, Henry Dawkins, and Isaac Ketcham, committed not to the custody of Guards appointed by General Washington, at the request of divers Members of this Congress, on suspicion of counterfeiting the Continental Money and that of the neighbouring Colonies, are meditating their escape:

Ordered, That the said persons be forthwith put in irons, and kept in the place where they now are, and that the Guards be directed not to permit any person to have access to them without license from this Congress till the further order of this Congress.

Ordered, That Captain Jeremiah Wool be requested to see this order, as far as it relates to the putting the said persons in irons, duly executed.

And Ordered, further, That Captain Wool be requested to provide the said persons with necessary Provisions at their own particular expense, and that the said Guard permit Captain Wool to enter the room where the said persons are confined whenever he shall think necessary, for the purpose of supplying them with Provisions as aforesaid.

Ordered, That a copy of the foregoing Order be delivered to Captain Wool, who is requested to deliver the same to the Officer of the Guard, to be handed to the different Officers who shall relieve the said Guard from time to time.

A Letter from the Committee of Newtown, dated yesterday, was read and filed. They therein inform that, on complaint of several of the inhabitants of Newtown against John Moore, Jun., of a fresh insult to the United Colonies, by hoisting, or suffering to be hoisted, on his ground a large Flag in imitation of the King's Standard; and as he had refused to give sufficient satisfaction to the Committee, that they have sent him down to this Congress for examination, together with a Flag, under a guard, by Captain Abraham Remsen.

Captain Abraham Remsen, with the said Flag, and John Moore, Jun., the prisoner, were brought in.

John Moore, Jun., examined, says: That it was a parcel of school-boys who go to school in Newtown, who hoisted colours on his field; that he first saw them on a small, and afterwards on a high, pole of fifteen or twenty feet; that he does not know whose colours they are, and why they were put up; that he first saw them hoisted on a fast-day; that the boys told him they got the colours of a lad from New-York, now in Newtown, whose name is Moore; that he ordered them down on the fast-day, but not afterwards; that as children put them up, he did not imagine that men would take notice of it; that he has not signed the General Association; that it was not offered to him to sign; that he knew where the Association was one day; that no person ever advised him to have the Flag taken down; that it was flying in his yard when the gentlemen of the Committee came for him yesterday, and they took it down; that it has been up some days and down on other days; that he lives near the school; that Thomas Walton's son lodges with him; that there are there two sons of Mr. Le Roy, two of Thomas White, and one of Mr. Matthews, and others, about sixteen or seventeen in number; that he does not recollect what is in the Association. Being asked if he would defend the United Colonies by force of arms, answered that he did not choose to fight, and never meant to fight if he could avoid it, and would avoid it as long as he could.

Captain Abraham Remsen withdrew with his prisoner, and the Congress took the same into consideration.

On motion of Mr. Morris,

Ordered, That John Moore, Jun., be kept in this Town

* NEW-YORK, May 28, 1776.

SIR: As I have something of importance to communicate to this Congress concerning the Prisoners now in custody for counterfeiting Bills of Credit, I therefore beg that I may be heard upon that subject. From, sir, your very humble servant,

JEREMIAH WOOL.

To the President of the Provincial Congress, New-York.

Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Congress for the Government of NEW-YORK.

I, the subscriber, beg the favour to be once more admitted to come in and address myself before you.

ISAAC YOUNGS.

May 28, 1776.

P. S. Gentlemen, if I have written or said anything amiss, I beg to be forgiven; for, if I have, it is innocently.

a prisoner upon his parole, until the Congress shall make further order concerning him.

Captain Remsen and John Moore, Jun., were called in. The said John Moore, Jun., in Congress, gave his promise parole to abide and tarry in the City of New-York, and attend at the City-Hall, from day to day, ready to obey the call or direction of this Congress, and not to depart the City without leave. He was thereupon permitted to go at large.

A draft of a Letter to the Committee of Newtown, returning them thanks for their vigilance, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

GENTLEMEN: I am directed by the Congress to return you the thanks of this Congress for your zeal manifested in the securing John Moore, Jun., and sending him to this city.

With the warmest wishes for success upon every effort you shall make in the great and glorious cause of freedom, I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant.

To the Chairman and Members of the Committee of Newtown.

Ordered, That a copy of the said Letter be signed by the President and transmitted.

"Captain Thomas Harriot being calling before this Committee, was duly convicted of having refused to receive in payment the Continental bills, and still persists in refusing the same; and further, said he would appeal to the Provincial Congress, but refused to give security for his answering to the said appeal, though a gentleman present offered his service to him on that account; and the said Harriot added that he did not care whether he was held up or not to the publick as an enemy to his country; and when he was informed of the disagreeable circumstances that he might bring himself into by his conduct, he replied he hoped or expected he would be provided for.

"This Committee conceiving the said Thomas Harriot to be a dangerous person, do request that the Provincial Congress may acquaint them if they think he ought to be suffered to go at large, as he is now in the custody of the guard.

"New-York Committee-Chamber, May 28, 1776.

"By order of the Committee:

"ROBERT HARPUR, Deputy Chairman.

"To the Honourable the Congress of the Colony of New-York."

Resolved, That the General Committee of the City of New-York be requested and authorized, and are hereby requested and authorized, to direct that Thomas Harriot be immediately committed to close Jail in this City, there to remain until further order of this Congress; for which this shall be their direction and authority.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Broome, Mr. Sands, Mr. Randall, Mr. Jay, Mr. P. Van Zandt, Mr. Van Cortlandt, Mr. Alsop, Mr. Scott.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Ten Broeck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR KING'S.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Mr. Cantine, Mr. Brewster, Major Parks.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Paulding.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Cortelyou, Mr. Journey.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Livingston, Mr. DeLaverne, Major H. Schenck.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Mr. Smith, Captain Lawrence.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

Major Henry Schenck, a Deputy for Dutchess County, and John Ten Broeck, Esq., a Deputy for the City and County of Albany, appeared in Congress, and, after taking the general oath of secrecy, respectively took their seats.

A Letter from Colonel Charles Dewitt, enclosing Returns of Officers chosen for two Minute Companies in his Regiment, and requesting Commissions may be sent.*

Ordered, To remain for further consideration till the Militia Committee make their Report.

A Letter from Colonel Levi Pawling, dated May 19th, at Marbletown, setting forth that Zacharias Rosekrans, Ensign in Captain Joakim Schoonmaker's Company, had resigned, and that Moses Depue, Jun., was duly elected in his stead.

Ordered, That a Commission issue to Moses Depue, Jun., vice Zacharias Rosekrans resigned.

A Letter from Colonel Thomas Thomas, of Westchester County, dated May 27th, was delivered and read. Colonel Thomas informs that Elijah Hunter is desirous of raising a Grenadier Company, to belong to the Regiment of Militia whereof Thomas Thomas is Colonel; that the following are the intended Officers, to wit: Elijah Hunter Captain, Richard Jacket First Lieutenant, Silas Millar Second Lieutenant, and Jeremiah Lounsberry Ensign; and prays Commissions may issue speedily.

Ordered, That Commissions issue; and they were accordingly immediately issued to those gentlemen.

Mr. Sands, on behalf of the Auditors, informed the Congress that the Officers of the First (or Colonel Lasher's) Battalion have delivered in their Accounts for the services of that Regiment on fatigue, in pursuance of the order of the Provincial Congress of the 14th day of March last; that the Officers of that Regiment have charged full pay, and the number of Rations allowed to Officers in the Continental Army, at 10½*d.* for each Ration, for every day they were on duty; though it appears, by their Returns, that very frequently they had not the number of privates on duty ordered and directed by the ninth Resolution, an Order for that purpose passed on the said 14th day of March last; that as the said ninth Resolution does not enable the Auditors to discharge those Accounts, the Auditors request the direction of Congress on this subject.

Determined, That the Officers shall be allowed the like number of Rations as the Continental Officers of like rank are allowed; but that the Officers who, in any instance, have not had the full complement of men on duty or fatigue, agreeable to the said ninth Resolution, be allowed only a proportion of pay and a proportion of the value of Rations in the proportion the number of men they had on fatigue bears to the numbers ordered for a Regiment or a Company by the said ninth Resolution of the 14th day of March last.

Mr. Andrew Gautier, Jun., attending at the door (in pursuance of the Order of the Day) to prosecute his appeal from the judgment of the General Committee of the City of New-York, that he be held up publicly for having refused Continental money:

Ordered, That the doors be set open; that notice be given at the door and below in the Hall, where the inhabitants are assembled at an election for Members of the City Committee, that the door is set open for all persons.

The said Andrew Gautier, Jun., came into the Chamber, and attended at the bar. Some Members of the General Committee who were below in the Hall came in and attended.

The report of the evidence given to the General Committee, and their determination thereon, with the said appeal of the said Andrew Gautier, Jun., and the order of this Congress for hearing the said appeal, were read.

Mr. Gautier delivered his defence in writing, which was also read. The appellant informed the Congress that his witness is at present absent out of town. And the witnesses against the appellant not appearing at present,

Ordered, That the further hearing of this appeal be deferred until next Tuesday morning.

The appellant and persons attending withdrew.

* GREEN RILL, May 16, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed returns of the election for Officers of two Companies of Minute-Men, in the Regiment under my command, were delivered to me by the different Committees of Marbletown and Rochester, requesting me to transmit them to the Provincial Congress for commissions; the rest of the Companies to be formed are not yet complete, owing, I suppose, at present to a report which is propagated, that the Minute Regiments are to be broken, which some men, whom I look upon unfriendly, wish to see. If the Congress thought proper to issue a positive order to the Officers of the Militia to deliver their number without delay, I believe most of them would immediately do it, as many Companies, I hear, are nearly ready with their complement; but such reports as those which I just mentioned make the officers and men slack.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant, CHARLES DE WITT.

FOURTH SERIES.—VOL. VI.

From the circumstances attending this appeal, and other information, it is represented to this Congress that persons under various pretences sell Tea at more than six shillings per pound.

Ordered, That Mr. Jay, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Sands, be a Committee to inquire into the grounds of such reports, and to report the measures they may think necessary to prevent any infraction of the Resolution of the Continental Congress thereupon published, and that they report with all convenient speed.

Mr. Morris informed Congress that Doctor Charlton, at Jamaica, * * * * *

A Letter from William Smith, Esq., of Suffolk County, of the 25th instant, informing Congress, by the request of a meeting of the Committee of Brookhaven, Manor of St. George, and Patentship of Meriches, that there is a communication kept up between Winthrop's Patent and the Ships-of-War at Sandy Hook, and that men, water, oysters, and clams, are carried from the inlet at South Bay on board the Men-of-War:

Ordered, That Mr. Randall and Mr. Gelston be a Committee to wait on General Putnam, and confer with him on the subject of said Letter.

The gentlemen returned, and reported that the General had read the Letter from Mr. Smith, and was much displeased when informed that the armed vessels had not sailed, and said that he would give immediate orders that they take their stations, but did not say that he would give any particular directions as to that inlet.

Mr. Morris moved, and was seconded, "that the Resolutions of the last and this Congress for compelling all the inhabitants of this City who had removed therefrom before the 1st day of last June to return," be reconsidered.

The question being put thereon, it was—

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

A draft of a Letter to William Smith, Esq., at Brookhaven, in answer to his Letter received and read this morning; which, being read and approved, is in the words following, to wit:

SIR: I am desired by the House to inform you that measures have already been taken to prevent all communication between the King's ships and the inhabitants of the southern parts of Nassau-Island, and also that such steps will be taken in future as the House shall deem necessary for that purpose. They are further of opinion that it will not be necessary to burden the country with the attendance of Minute-men to prevent the attempts of the enemy at the inlet mentioned in your letter. You will be pleased to send down the arms collected in your County, or so many of them as shall remain after the supplies which may be found necessary for the troops now in your County, with as much despatch as possible. I am, &c. By order.

To William Smith, Esq.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, signed by the President, and transmitted.

A Letter from Alexander Moncrief, Keeper of the Congress Jail, was read. He therein informs Congress that his bad state of health renders him incapable of executing the office of Jailer any longer; therefore prays to be discharged from his said office, and recommends Daniel Goldsmith to succeed him.

Thereupon, Agreed and Ordered, That Daniel Goldsmith be, and he is hereby, appointed Keeper of the Jail set apart for the reception and confinement of all such persons as shall, or may from time to time, be committed to close custody by order of this Congress, their Committee of Safety, or of the General Committee of the City and County of New-York; that the said Mr. Goldsmith keep no Prisoners in his custody at the expense of this Colony (as to Provisions) but such as shall be committed by order as aforesaid; and that Mr. Goldsmith be allowed at the rate of four Pounds per month for his services while employed as Jailer as aforesaid.

It being suggested in Congress that there is an absolute necessity of imposing some penalty on persons convicted of violating the Resolution of the Provincial Congress prohibiting the practice of inoculating for the Small-Pox in this Colony till the further order of Congress,

Ordered, That Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Van Cortlandt, and Mr. Livingston, be a Committee to prepare some Resolutions imposing a penalty on persons who shall presume to inoculate for the Small-Pox in this Colony, and that they report the same with all convenient speed.

A Petition of Charles Loosly and Thomas Elms, Paper-Makers, praying to be exempted from military duty.

Ordered to lie on the table.

John Moore, the person sent by the Committee of Newtown to this Congress under guard, for suffering a Flag in imitation of a Royal standard to be hoisted on his land, requesting permission to return home on his parole:

Ordered, That he be permitted to return home on his promise parole to attend this Congress whenever he shall be summoned to appear.

Colonel Malcom brought into Congress a Draft containing the soundings of the depth of water between Red-Hook and Bedlow's Island.

Ordered, That Mr. Morris, Mr. Randall, and Colonel Malcolm, be a Committee to take the same into consideration, and report their opinion thereon as soon as possible.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Mr. Paulling, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Livingston, Major H. Schenck.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Smith, Colonel Blackwell, Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Captain Lawrence.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

Colonel Hasbrouck, from the Committee appointed to take into consideration the Letter from Captain Petrus Schoonmaker, complaining that the Committee have done him injustice in settling the rank of the Companies in Colonel Pawling's Regiment, in Ulster County, reported as their opinion, that a Letter be written to the County Committee, directing them to settle the arrangements of said Regiment with Captain Schoonmaker; and if he is dissatisfied with such arrangement, that they give orders to the Company commanded by the said Petrus Schoonmaker to elect other Officers in the room and stead of such Officers who refuse to serve, and that their names be transmitted, to be commissioned without delay.

The said Report being read, was approved.

A draft of a Letter to the Committee of Ulster County, agreeable to the said Report, was read and approved.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be signed by the President, and transmitted.

A Letter from General Putnam was read. He informs Congress that the ladies visit the Tory gentry confined in Jail, and that some bad fellows daily visit women of the same character in Jail; and refers the matter to the consideration of the Congress.

Ordered to lie on the table for further consideration.

The Petition of Amos Bull was read. He prays to be heard and tried before this Congress for the charges of supplying, or aiding others in supplying, the Ships-of-War with Provisions, of which he is entirely innocent.

Ordered to be referred to the Committee appointed to examine and take examinations of persons committed to custody by order of Congress, who are directed to report thereon without delay.

The Congress were informed by a Member that one Mr. Latham was unmercifully fired at and wounded by a Continental of Colonel McDougall's Regiment.

Ordered, That Mr. Gelston and Mr. Schenck be a Committee to make inquiry into this matter, take the necessary examinations, and make report thereon to this House.

The Memorial of Samuel Loudon (presented to the Committee of Safety of the late Congress) against Christopher Duyckinck and others, for entering his house without any authority, and burning and destroying printed copies of the Pamphlet entitled "The Deceiver Unmasked," with his remarks on the subject, were read.

Ordered, That the Memorial of Samuel Loudon be taken into consideration on Tuesday next, and that the Doorkeeper summon Samuel Loudon to attend with his witnesses on that day, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and that the Doorkeeper also summon Christopher Duyckinck, John Gilbert, Thomas Pratt, John Buchanan, the Innkeeper, Brower, the Carpenter, ——— Bicker, now or late an Officer, and Malcolm McEwen, Pewterer, to attend this Congress at the same time, to answer to the charge of entering the house of the said Samuel Loudon, unwarrantably, and without proper authority, destroying a number of Pamphlets, as the same is set forth more particularly in the said Memorial.

The Congress, taking into consideration the dangers to which this City and Colony will be exposed should the Ministerial Troops speedily arrive,

Resolved, That two Battalions be taken into the service and pay of this Colony for three months.

Ordered, That a Committee be appointed to take into consideration, and report to this Congress their opinion of the number of which the said Battalion shall consist, what pay shall be given them, whence they shall be procured, and by what regulations governed, together with such other matters relative to the same as they may think proper and necessary.

And Ordered, That Mr. James Livingston, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Jay, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Samuel Townshend, be the Committee.

A Petition from the Vestrymen of the City and County of New-York, setting forth the distresses which must unavoidably attend the poor of the said City and County for want of money in the hands of the Church-Wardens to defray the expenses attending the maintenance of the City Alms-House, and praying the loan of five thousand Pounds for that purpose, was read and filed.

Ordered, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Rutgers, Mr. Beekman, and Mr. Paulling, be a Committee to take the said Petition into consideration, and inquire into the state of the Corporation funds.

A Letter from Mr. Beck, confined in Jail by order of the General Committee for supplying our enemies, referred to the Committee appointed to take examinations and try persons charged with offences.

Mrs. Youngs, wife of one of the Prisoners confined for counterfeiting Continental money, attending, prays that she may be permitted to visit her husband.

Thereupon, Ordered, That the Officers of the Guard appointed to guard the Prisoners charged with counterfeiting the Continental money be authorized and requested to permit the wives of those Prisoners to visit and converse with their husbands in the presence and hearing of the Officer of the said Guard till further order.

Messrs. Samuel and James Townshend, Deputies from Queen's County, were sworn to the general oath of secrecy.

An Information, signed by Aaron Stockholm, Samuel Prince, John Bogart, and Thomas Gardner, referred to this Congress by the General Committee of the City of New-York, charging Peter McLean, Samuel Galsworthy, Francis Delaroche, and a young man in military clothing of their acquaintance, with uttering sentiments highly inimical and dangerous to the cause of America, was read and filed.

Ordered, That their names be added to dangerous disaffected persons to be apprehended.

The Affidavit of Amasa Mills, Ebenezer Sumner, Henry Champion, and Robert Warner, and the substance of the Affidavit of Samuel Richards, Ensign of Captain Mills's Company, charging Amos Bull with expressions inimical to the Colonies, both dated 30th May, were read. Referred to the Committee of Examination and Inquiry.

Mr. Smith and Mr. Haviland have leave of absence, their Counties being fully represented.

Die Veneris, 9 ho. A. M., May 31, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Bancker, Major Van Zandt, Mr. Randall, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Beekman, Mr. Scott.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Ten Broeck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Van Houten, Mr. Little.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

A draft of a Letter to the County Committee of Ulster County was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

GENTLEMEN: The Deputies from your County have produced to this Congress two credentials signed by your Chairman, bearing the same date, but contradicting each other as to the powers given to your Deputies for the election of Continental Delegates. Although this Congress is fully authorized to elect Delegates at their pleasure, even if your County should not join in the choice, but remain represented there, yet Congress would choose to be informed how far the good people of your County have authorized, or intended to authorize, their Deputies to join in such election of Delegates if it should take place, and by what means returns so very different in themselves have been made, and to have a true state of the proceedings of your Committee on that subject.

Copies of your different Returns, and of the order of this Congress thereon, are herewith enclosed for your examination. We are, gentlemen, your very humble servants.

By order.

To the Chairman and Members of the County Committee, Ulster County.

One of the Members informed the Congress that some of Captain Hamilton's Company of Artillery are deserted, and he sees some reasons to suspect that they are on board of the Continental ship or vessel in this harbour under the command of Captain Kennedy.

Ordered, That Captain Alexander Hamilton, or any or either of his Officers, be, and they are hereby, authorized to go on board any ship or vessel in this harbour, and take with them such guard as may be necessary, and that they make strict search for any men which may have deserted from Captain Hamilton's Company.

It was suggested to the Congress by the President, that Mr. Nathaniel Williams has hopes that some discoveries may be made of a large sum of money which he has lost, if Mr. John Carpenter could be permitted to have a private conference with Isaac Ketcham, now a Prisoner in the City-Hall.

Ordered, That the Officer commanding that Guard be desired to permit Mr. John Carpenter to have a private conference with the said Isaac Ketcham, either in the room where the Prisoners now are, or any other room in the City-Hall. That the Officer place one or more Sentries at the door of the room where Mr. Carpenter and the said Prisoner may go to confer while they are together. And the Officer of the Guard is requested to keep the substance of this order and its design a secret from the Guard.

Mr. Van Houten, one of the Deputies from Orange County, attending and having taken his seat, came up to the Chair and took the general oath of secrecy, which has been administered to the other Members.

Ordered, That Mr. Norwood, the Commissary of Colony Stores, deliver to Colonel Ritzema, or his Order, all the Muskets or Fire-locks fit for use, which now are or may come into the Store for the course of three weeks from last Monday, the Arms collected in King's County excepted.

A Return from John Jackson, Chairman of the Committee of Goshen Precinct, dated the 28th instant, was read and filed. It is thereby returned that the following persons are elected Officers of the Company in Colonel Hawthorn's Regiment, called the Pond Company, viz: Peter Bertolf Captain, John De Bow First Lieutenant, Anthony Finn Second Lieutenant, Joseph Jewell Ensign.

And that the said Election was made in the presence of Henry Wisner and John Minthorne, two Members of the Committee of Goshen Precinct.

It is further thereby returned, that a new Company is formed in Goshen Precinct, and added to that Regiment, by the name of the Stirling Company. And that the following gentlemen were elected Officers of that Company in the presence of Henry Wisner and Nathaniel Ketchum, two Members of the Committee, viz: John Norman Captain, Solomon Finch First Lieutenant, William Fitzgerald Second Lieutenant, and Elisha Bennet Ensign.

Ordered, That Commissions issue for those eight gentlemen as Officers of those two Companies in the rank to which they have been respectively elected.

And they were issued accordingly.

Mr. Gelston reported that the Committee appointed for that purpose had obtained the Affidavits of ——— Latham and two other persons; that the said Latham was shot and wounded by a Sentinel on one of the wharves of this City in coming in in the night with his vessel, though he endeavoured to comply with the demands of the said Sentinel.

The said Affidavits were read.

Ordered, That Mr. Gelston and ——— wait on General Putnam with the said Affidavits, and deliver the Affidavits to the General.

Mr. Ten Broeck informed the Congress that, by reason of many changes and resignations of the Officers in the Regiments of Militia in the County of Albany, many new Commissions for Officers are wanted in that County; and moved that one hundred blank Commissions be sent to the County Committee of Albany, to supply vacancies.

Several other gentlemen moved for Commissions to be sent to their respective County Committees.

Ordered, That seventy blank Commissions be sent to the Committee of the County of Albany. That blank Commissions be also sent to the County Committee of any other County represented in the Congress, on request made by the Members from any such County; the County Committee of every such County to be accountable for the number of blank Commissions which may be sent to them, and from time to time to make true and perfect returns to this Congress of all such Commissions as shall be issued by such Committee, with the times of elections, the names of the Committee-men presiding therein, the names and rank of the respective Officers, with the dates of their Commissions, and in what Regiment appointed.

Mr. Haring and Mr. Tompkins respectively obtained leave of absence.

Die Veneris, 4 ho. P. M., May 31, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Jay, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Peter Van Zandt, Colonel Broome, Captain Rutgers, Mr. Van Cortlandt.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Ten Broeck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Van Houten.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Mr. Paulding.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Wickham, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Strong.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Paul Schenck, Mr. Livingston, Mr. Henry Schenck.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Captain Lawrence, Mr. Van Wyck.

General Putnam's Aid-de-Camp returned to the President the several Affidavits relative to Mr. Hubbard Latham, who was fired at and wounded by a Sentinel on the wharf, which which were sent to him this morning.

The President informed the Congress that the said Aid-de-Camp informed him that the Sentinel is committed to the main guard; and that the General refers the matter to Congress whether the criminal shall be tried by a Court-Martial or by the civil authority.

Thereupon, Resolved, That the Courts of Judicature in this Colony being as yet held by authority derived from the Crown of Great Britain, are, for that reason, incompetent to the full and impartial trial of the said Sentinel for the offence wherewith he stands charged; and therefore that he must, of necessity, be tried by a Court-Martial only.

Ordered, That one of the Secretaries wait on General Putnam with a copy of the foregoing Entry and Resolution, and return to the General the Affidavits therein mentioned.

Mr. Scott, Mr. Jay, and Mr. Haring, the Committee to whom was referred the Report accepted on the 27th, with instructions to frame the same into Resolutions to be published, reported said Resolutions; which, being considered, were adopted, in the words following:

Whereas the present Government of this Colony, by Congress and Committees, was instituted while the former Government, under the Crown of Great Britain, existed in full force, and was established for the sole purpose of opposing the usurpation of the British Parliament, and was intended to expire on a reconciliation with Great Britain, which it was then apprehended would soon take place, but is now considered as remote and uncertain:

And whereas many and great inconveniences attend the said mode of Government by Congress and Committees, as of necessity, in many instances, Legislative, Judicial and Executive powers have been vested therein, especially since the dissolution of the form of Government by the abdication of the late Governour, and the exclusion of this Colony from the protection of the King of Great Britain:

And whereas the Continental Congress did resolve as follows, to wit:

"Whereas his Britannick Majesty, in conjunction with the Lords and Commons of Great Britain, has, by a late act of Parliament, excluded the inhabitants of these United Colonies from the protection of the Crown; and whereas no answer whatever to the humble Petition of the Colonies for redress of grievances and reconciliation with Great Britain has been, or is likely to be given, but the whole force of that Kingdom, aided by foreign mercenaries, is to be exerted for the destruction of the good people of these Colonies; and whereas it appears absolutely irreconcilable to reason and good conscience for the people of these Colonies now to take the oaths and affirmations necessary for the support of any Government under the Crown of Great Britain, and it is necessary that the exercise of every kind of authority under the said Crown should be totally suppressed, and all the powers of Government exerted under the authority of the people of the Colonies, for the preservation of internal peace, virtue, and good order, as well as for the defence of our lives, liberties, and properties, against the hostile invasions and cruel depredations of our enemies: Therefore,

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the respective Assemblies and Conventions of the United Colonies where no Government sufficient to the exigencies of their affairs has been hitherto established, to adopt such Government as shall, in the opinion of the Representatives of the People, best conduce to the happiness and safety of their constituents in particular, and America in general."

And whereas doubts have arisen whether this Congress are invested with sufficient power and authority to deliberate and determine on so important a subject as the necessity of erecting and constituting a new form of Government and internal police, to the exclusion of all foreign jurisdiction and dominion and control whatever: And whereas it appertains of right solely to the people of this Colony to determine the said doubts: Therefore,

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Electors in the several Counties of this Colony, by election, in the manner and form prescribed for the election of the present Congress, either to authorize (in addition to the powers vested in this Congress) their present Deputies, or others in the stead of their present Deputies, or either of them, to take into consideration the necessity and propriety of instituting such new Government as in and by the said Resolution of the Continental Congress is described and recommended; and if the majority of the Counties, by their Deputies in Provincial Congress, shall be of opinion that such new Government ought to be instituted and established, then to institute and establish such a Government as they shall deem best calculated to secure the rights, liberties, and happiness, of the good people of this Colony, and to continue in force until a future peace with Great Britain shall render the same unnecessary.

And Resolved, That the said Elections in the several Counties ought to be had on such day, and at such place or places as by the Committee of each County respectively shall be determined; and it is recommended to the said Committees to fix such early days for the said Election as that all the Deputies to be elected have sufficient time to repair to the City of New-York by the second Monday in July next; on which day all the said Deputies ought punctually to give their attendance.

And whereas the object of the foregoing Resolutions is of the utmost importance to the good people of this Colony:

Resolved, That it be, and it is hereby, earnestly recommended to the Committees, freeholders, and other electors, in the different Counties in this Colony, diligently to carry the same into execution.

Ordered, That the foregoing Resolutions be published in all publick Newspapers in this Colony, and in handbills, to be distributed in the Counties.*

William Denning,	Evert Bancker,	Abraham P. Lott,
Abraham Brasher,	Thomas Randall,	Daniel Dunscomb.

† LITTLE-NECK, May 21, 1776.

SIR: I received yesterday an extract from the Minutes of the Congress, by which I am ordered to attend and take my seat, or show the cause of my neglect. The ill state of my health, sir, and the extreme weakness of my constitution, render me utterly incapable of performing cause of his non-attendance, the ill state of his health and the extreme weakness of his constitution.

A Letter from John Williams, Esq., lately elected one of the Deputies of Queen's County, dated the 27th of May, was also read and filed.* Mr. Williams therein shows, for cause or excuse of his non-attendance, that he is so little acquainted with such business that he should be of no service, but remains a hearty friend in the American cause.

Ordered, That copies of said Letters be made, and transmitted to the County Committee of Queen's County.

Ordered, That the Officer commanding the Guard over the Prisoners confined on suspicion of counterfeiting Continental money, be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to permit George Youngs to speak to his sons, Israel and Isaac Youngs, this morning only, in the presence and hearing of said Officer.

A Return of the Officers elected in the Out Ward of the City of New-York, in Beat No. 28, of the City, in the presence of Daniel Shaw and Henry Rutgers, Jun., two of the Committee, was read and filed. It thereby appears that Josiah Firman was elected First-Lieutenant, Stephen Hilliker Second-Lieutenant, and Adam Vandenburg Ensign.

A Return of Officers elected in the Out Ward of the City of New-York, in Beat No. 29, of the City, in the presence of Abraham P. Lott and Jecamiah Allen, two of the Committee, was read and filed. Martin Shire is thereby returned as duly elected Captain, and Jacob Van Orden First-Lieutenant of the Company of Militia in that Beat.

Ordered, That Commissions issue for those gentlemen in the respective ranks in which they were elected.

And Commissions were issued for them accordingly.

A Letter from Captain James Smith, late Commander of the armed Sloop Schuyler, dated yesterday, was read and filed.† He therein enclosed his late Commission as Commander of the Sloop Schuyler, in order to cancel the Bond given for his punctual observance of his instructions; and returns his sincere thanks for all past favours.

Ordered, That the said Bond be cancelled, and that the said Commission be also filed.

A Letter from Colonel Allison, at Goshen, to John Haring, Esq., dated the 27th of May, was read and filed. He therein informs that he has purchased several small parcels of Saltpetre, in pursuance of his appointment, with Mr. Haring, as a Committee for that purpose; that he is not provided with cash for that purpose, and therefore requests some cash may be furnished to him.

Ordered, That Peter Van Brugh Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of the Congress of this Colony, advance to Colonel William Allison, of Orange County, five hundred Dollars, to pay for Saltpetre which he has purchased, and to enable him to continue to purchase Saltpetre; that Colonel Allison give his receipt for that money to the Treasurer, and be accountable for the same.

Jacob Brush was brought into Congress and examined;

Whereupon, Ordered, That Mr. McKesson, one of the Secretaries, withdraw, and take down in writing the examination of said Jacob Brush.

* * * * *

Whereas, from the oath of Jacob Brush, it appears that the duty of a Deputy. This, I hope, will be considered by the Congress as a sufficient apology for my non-attendance.

I am, sir, your most obedient humble servant, THOMAS HICKS.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Esq., President of the New-York Provincial Congress.

* QUEEN'S COUNTY, HEMPSTEAD, May 27, 1776.

I recieved your letter, bearing date 21st instant, which requires me to give my attendance, to which I send you these lines, desiring to be excused, as I am so little acquainted with such business that I shall be of no service; but remain your hearty friend in the American cause.

JOHN WILLIAMS.

To John McKesson, New-York Congress.

† NEW-YORK, May 31, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: This morning, agreeable to my request, was informed by Captain Randall that I am no longer in publick service, since delivering my accounts for the sloop Schuyler on the 1st instant, for which reason think it highly necessary to enclose my late commission of the 17th April for the sloop Schuyler, in order to cancel the bond for the same. Gentlemen, I return you my sincere thanks for all past favours; mean time remain, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JAMES SMITH.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress.

there is great reason to believe that Philip Youngs has been party or privy to a design of counterfeiting the Bills of Credit now current and passing in this and some of the other United Colonies:

Ordered, That the said Philip Youngs be immediately arrested, taken, and sent in safe custody to this Congress, and that the Committee of Huntington direct Samuel Brown to attend at the Congress Chamber in New-York without delay; and all Officers, civil and military, in this Colony, and Minute-men and Militia of any District, Town, Precinct or place on Nassau-Island, are hereby directed to give all necessary aid to the Committee of Huntington to carry these orders into execution. And the Committee of Huntington are hereby requested and authorized to cause the strictest search to be made in the house of the said Philip Youngs, and in such other houses or places as they may think proper, for any plates that may have been made for counterfeiting any Paper money or Bills of Credit whatever, and for any counterfeited Paper money or Bills of Credit, and report their proceedings thereon to this Congress.

A Letter to the Committee of Dutchess County was read and approved of.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, and transmitted.

A Resolution of the Committee of New-York, passed the 25th ultimo, requesting that this Congress would publish an order that no persons in this Colony shall presume to ask Gold or Silver in preference to the Continental Bills of Credit or the Bills of Credit of this Colony, unless previously authorized by this Congress, was read.*

Ordered, That the consideration thereof be postponed.

A Letter from Captain Thomas Harriott, now confined by order of the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, was read.†

Ordered, That the said Thomas Harriott be brought before the bar of this House, in custody of the Jailer, this afternoon at five o'clock.

A Letter from Thomas Vernon and Henry Killegrove, praying to be discharged, was read and filed.‡

* NEW-YORK COMMITTEE-CHAMBER, May 25, 1776.

Upon motion, Resolved, That the Provincial Congress be requested by this Committee to publish an order from that honourable House that no person or persons in this Colony shall presume to ask Silver or Gold in preference to the Continental Bills of Credit, or the Bills of Credit emitted by this Colony, unless by authority previously obtained from Congress.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOSEPH WINTER, Secretary.

† NEW-JAIL, June 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I do hereby declare that I will not, at any time, do anything prejudicial to the interests of my country, and that I never meant to do anything injurious to this Colony, or to the continent in general; and I hereby request my enlargement. If my word or honour as a gentleman should be thought necessary, or security should be desired, I am willing to give either that I will never take an active part against the United Colonies, if you will be pleased to give me my liberty.

I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

THOMAS HARRIOTT.

‡ NEW CITY-HALL, June 1, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: The humble petition of Thomas Vernon, who humbly implores of your Honours to take into consideration to relieve the distressed, who has now been in this prison these three months, and ever since had no hearing of any crime alleged to me to this day. I solemnly declare to the Almighty God that it was never my intention to be any way an enemy to this country, but always made it my endeavour to the reverse of what some cruel persons have reported of me, especially ever since my first coming to this country, I found great encouragement, which is now nine years, and have kept business in this town, and freeman of this city of York.

Honourable gentlemen, I humbly implore of your Honours to permit me to have my liberty, so as to follow my business as usual, and to take care of my poor family as before; and your Honours may be assured of my good conduct, and a true friend to the cause for the future.

I remain, honourable gentlemen, yours to command,

THOMAS VERNON.

N. B. The humble petition of Henry Killegrove, late Pilot of this Port, till taken by his Majesty's ship Phoenix, and knowing me as the above business kept me on board for that purpose, much against my inclination. But, as his Majesty's ships rule the sea, and therefore can command at their pleasure, your Honours, I hope, will take it into consideration relative to the annexed petition of Thomas Vernon.

Now, honourable gentlemen, I humbly implore of you to let me free from this prison and confinement that I endure, at the same time my poor family famishing. I have no objections to fitting your vessels for the sea, or any of that kind.

I remain, honourable gentlemen, yours to command,

HENRY KILLEGROVE.

To the Honourable Congress at New-York.

A Petition of the Prisoners in Jail belonging to the ship of war Phenix, dated the 22d ultimo, complaining of their allowance, was read and considered.* Thereupon, Ordered, That the said persons be respectively allowed 4d. per day for their subsistence.

Saturday, P. M., June 1, 1775.

Present: General Nathaniel Woodhull, President.
 FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Broome, Mr. Jay, Mr. Randall, Mr. Rutgers.
 FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Glenn.
 FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Van Houten, Mr. Little.
 FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.
 FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Paul Schenck, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. James Livingston.
 FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.
 FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Mr. Van Wyck.
 FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Strong.
 FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Mr. Paulding.
 FOR ULSTER.—Major Parks, Colonel Hasbrouck.

Mr. Thomas Harriott attending according to an order of this morning, was admitted, and asked several questions, and directed to withdraw. The Report of the New-York Committee, the order of Commitment, and his Letter of this morning, were read:

Thereupon, Ordered, That the said Thomas Harriott be permitted to go at large on his parole.

He also mentioned that he had appealed from the judgment of said Committee to this Congress, and was informed that a day will be fixed to prosecute his appeal. He then signed his parole, as follows, namely:

I do most solemnly swear, upon my honour, that I will not, either directly or indirectly, by word, act, or deed, contravene the measures or resolutions of the Continental or this Congress; and that I will not, either directly or indirectly, afford any aid, sustenance, or support of any kind whatsoever to the British King or Parliament, their fleets, armies, allies, agents, or adherents, during the present controversy between Great Britain and the United Colonies of North-America.

THOMAS HARRIOTT.

Witness: ROBERT BENSON.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Mr. Daniel Goldsmith, the keeper of the Congress Jail, be, and he is hereby, directed to permit Mr. Thomas Harriott to go at large.

Ordered, That Doctor Hunloke Woodruff be, and he is hereby, appointed Surgeon of the Third Regiment of Continental Troops raised in this Colony, of which said Third Regiment Rudolphus Ritzema, Esq., is Colonel. †

* NEW CITY-HALL, May 22, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE THE HONOURABLE COMMITTEE: Honourable gentlemen: We, the prisoners of his Majesty's ships the Phenix and Savage, humbly implore of your Honours to allow us a proportion of provisions to live upon. The keeper, McCleef, gives us but sixpence sterling per day; we are almost perished, for it is impossible for us to live at this rate. We cannot say, gentlemen, had your Honours been notified before, you would make us a sufficiency of provisions; therefore, gentlemen, here follows, for instance, the proportion of provisions that is allowed to prisoners taken by his Majesty's ship of war, from the honourable Congress: The proportion per week, Bread, 7 lbs.; Beef, 7 lbs.; Pease, 1 quart; Oatmeal, 1½ quarts; Brandy, 1½ quarts; Butter, ½ lbs.; Flour, 3 lbs.; Suet, ½ lb.

Now, honourable gentlemen, compute; the current price of provisions never deviates from the above proportion on board his Majesty's ships, by whatsoever nation he takes prisoners from, much more a natural fraternity, as we all can't say to the reverse. The market in this port is so that by it we can't live. The midshipmen taken with us, you allow eighteen shillings per week, and we are to live upon sixpence sterling per day. Had the highest Commander of France or Spain been taken by his said Majesty, have no more of provisions to be allowed them than the seamen on board the respective ships. Had any Commander-in-Chief been taken at this your honourable cause's side, there would be no proportion of provisions made than the said proportion. Now, gentlemen, consider this. Have been myself steward and clerk in the naval service these six years.

I am your Honours' humble servant, JEREMIAH BIERDAN.
 To the Honourable Congress, at New-York.

† ALBANY, May 25, 1776.

SIR: I am so far on my way home. I have been down as far as Sorel. When I arrived there I found that there had been a report in Camp that I was returned to New-York; upon the strength of which another Surgeon was appointed to that Regiment, and I have got leave to return to join the Regiment I was appointed to in New-York. I am in a great hurry, and waiting to settle with the Paymaster, which I shall do to-morrow morning. You may expect me in the first boat.

I am yours, as usual, HUNLOKE WOODRUFF.

A Letter from Captain Varick, requesting that two tons of Oakum be forwarded to Albany, was read.

Ordered, That Colonel Broome and Mr. Glenn wait on General Putnam, and inform him that this Congress are about closing their accounts, and it being out of their department, they request him to execute said order.

Die Solis, 9 ho. A. M., June 2, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.
 FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Broome, Mr. Denning, Mr. Randall, Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Duane.
 FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler.
 FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Gelston.
 FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Van Houten, Mr. Little.
 FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Livingston, Mr. Paul Schenck.
 FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend.
 FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.
 FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.
 FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Colonel Broome reported that Mr. Glenn and himself had waited on General Putnam, with Captain Varick's Letter on behalf of General Schuyler, requesting two tons of Oakum to be sent to Albany immediately, and had delivered the message directed to them by this Congress; that General Putnam informed them that the Order should be executed without delay, if so much Oakum can be obtained.

Die Lunæ, 9 ho. A. M., June 3, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.
 FOR NEW-YORK.—Col. Stoutenburgh, Col. Broome, Mr. Beekman, Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Duane, Mr. Randall.
 FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Ten Broeck.
 FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Strong.
 FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Livingston.
 FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Van Houten.
 FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris.
 FOR KING'S.
 FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend.
 FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.
 FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Cortelyou.
 FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.
 FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

An extract of the Minutes of the Committee of Huntington, on Nassau-Island, dated June 3, 1776, signed Daniel Wiggins, Clerk, was read and filed. They thereby inform that, pursuant to the Order of this House of the 1st instant, the said Committee have sent down Philip Youngs in the care of Messrs. Thomas Wickes and Eliphelet Brush, and also that the said Committee have made strict search in the house of the said Philip Youngs and the houses of George Youngs, Isaac Youngs, and John Williams, but that they discovered nothing material as to the articles recommended by this Congress to be searched for.

Samuel Brown being likewise sent down by the said Committee, as a witness, was called in and examined. Afterwards the said Philip Youngs was ordered in and examined, both which Examinations are as follow, to wit:

* * * * *

The said Examinations being immediately taken into consideration, debates arose thereon, and the question being put whether the said Philip Youngs ought to be committed in close custody of the Guard, with the other Prisoners charged with counterfeiting the Continental money, it was carried in the affirmative in the manner following, to wit:

For the Affirmative.	For the Negative.
6 Albany,	4 Suffolk,
2 Charlotte,	2 Richmond,
3 Orange,	4 Ulster.
8 New-York.
19 votes.	10 votes.

Whereas there is just grounds of suspicion that Philip Youngs has been privy to a design of counterfeiting the Bills of Credit now current and passing in this and some of the other United Colonies,

Ordered, That the said Philip Youngs be committed to close custody, and the Officer of the Guard appointed to guard the Prisoners now under confinement on suspicion of being guilty of the same crime, be, and he is hereby, directed and required to receive into the custody of this said Guard the said Philip Youngs, and him keep in close custody until the further orders of this Congress.

Ordered, That George Youngs be, and he is hereby, permitted to go into the Guard-Room wherein the persons are confined on suspicion of counterfeiting the Bills of Credit of the United Colonies, to visit and converse with his sons in the presence and hearing of the Officer of said Guard.

Mr. James Livingston, from the Committee appointed to take into consideration the dangerous consequences of the Small-Pox spreading in this Colony made a Report.* After some time spent in consideration thereof,

Ordered, That the same be recommitted.

Ordered, That Colonel Broome and Colonel Stoutenburgh be added to the Committee to stop the Channel.

A Certificate of Henry Lockwood and Denne Ralye, Sen., two of the Committee of New-Marlborough Precinct, certifying that at an election held by Captain Bowdewine Tarepenning's Company, David Ostrander was duly chosen Second Lieutenant of said Company, was read and filed.

Ordered, That the said David Ostrander be commissioned accordingly.

Die Junæ, 4 ho. P. M., June 3, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Broome, Mr. Randall, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Beekman.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Ten Broeck.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Strong.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Paul Schenck, Mr. Livingston.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Van Houten, Mr. Little.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Mr. Parks.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

A Letter from General Putnam, dated this day—informing this House of complaint being lodged against Sergeant McFall, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, taken at St. John's; that he is a dangerous man, frequently visiting the Fortifications in and about this City and the Encampments, and is represented as a cunning, designing fellow. The General requests an inquiry may be made—was read and filed.

Ordered, That it be referred to the Committee for taking Examinations; to be reported with all convenient speed.

Samuel Hopkins, attending, requested permission to speak to Israel Youngs, who is confined by order of this Congress.

Ordered, That the Officer commanding the Guard at the City-Hall be requested to permit the bearer, Samuel Hopkins, to speak to Israel Youngs in the presence and hearing of the said Officer.

Another Letter from General Putnam of this day's date,

* Whereas the Congress of the Colony of New-York, now convened in the City of New-York, have taken into consideration the dangerous consequences of the Small-Pox spreading in this Colony, especially as great numbers of the Army have not had it: To prevent the same as much as possible, we do

Resolve, That no Doctor, or any other person or persons whatsoever, do presume at any time or times hereafter, to inoculate any person or persons with the Small-Pox within this Colony.

And it is further

Resolved, That if any person or persons shall presume to inoculate any person or persons within this Colony, and shall be thereof convicted before any Committee of the respective Counties within this Colony, such person or persons so convicted shall, for every offence, forfeit the sum of dollars, to be paid to and applied by the Churchwardens or Overseers of the Poor for the County in which such convictions shall happen, to the use of the poor of the said County; the said Churchwardens or Overseers accounting, from time to time, to the said Committee for the sums by them so received, and the manner in which they shall apply and expend the same. And in case such person or persons, so offending and found guilty as aforesaid, shall refuse to pay the penalty inflicted as aforesaid, he, she, or they, so offending, shall be imprisoned until he, she, or they pay the same.

Which is humbly submitted to Congress by their Committee.

JAMES LIVINGSTON, Chairman.

with a list of Tory Prisoners committed to hard labour at the forts, was read and filed.

“Head-Quarters, New-York, June 3, 1776.

“SIR: I am informed by the Earl of Stirling, who has lately visited the fortifications on Hudson's River, in the Highlands, that there are several persons at Fort Montgomery, sent in there prisoners from the Counties of Westchester, Dutchess, and Albany, by Committees of certain Districts, persons notoriously inimical to the present measures of the United Colonies, with orders to the commanding officer to keep them at hard labour till further orders. How far such a punishment, or the place of confinement may be proper, I will not determine; but as it does not accord with any general rule or order of Congress, I must have some doubts of the propriety of the officers of the Army carrying such an order into execution without some higher authority; and should, therefore, be glad to have the sentiments of the Congress of this Province on this subject. A copy of the names of the prisoners is enclosed.

In consequence of an order of Congress, all the Militia and Minute-men employed in Continental pay, were, soon after the arrival of the Army from Cambridge, dismissed from that service; however, Colonel Nicoll remains in command at Fort Constitution, on a supposition that he has not been properly discharged by the Congress of this Province, who employed him. As the Field-Officers of Colonel Clinton's Regiment are now ordered to that post, the expense is become unnecessary; and, therefore, it will be proper that Colonel Nicoll be informed of the sentiments of your Congress thereon.

“I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant, “ISRAEL PUTNAM.

“To the President of the Congress of New-York.”

“Fort Montgomery, May 31, 1776.

“A list of Tory Prisoners now at this garrison, who were sent here by order of Dutchess, Manor of Livingston, East Camp, Claverack, and Rhinebeck Precincts: Nathaniel Finch, George Shannon, John Johnson, Dennis Riley, Philip Teed, Benjamin Dubois, David Close, Johannes Coupar, Philip Chine, Frederick Row, Coenrad Hoffman, Martinus Coupar, Jun.; were sent to be kept at the laborious part of the duty of this garrison during the pleasure of the aforesaid Committee.

“From Westchester County: Johnson, of Peekskill.”

Thereupon, Resolved, That the persons confined in Forts Montgomery and Constitution be kept close Prisoners in the same until they shall give the Committees, by whose viour as the said Committees shall think needful; and that order they are now there, such security for their good behavior in the intermediate time the said Prisoners be not compelled to labour at the said Fort.

Ordered, That a Letter be written to General Putnam, in answer to his two Letters received and read this afternoon, and that a copy of the foregoing Order be enclosed; also, that copies of the said Order be transmitted to the several Committees by whose order the said Prisoners were sent to the Fortifications.

A draft of the said Letter was read, and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

SIR: We have been honoured by your letter of this day relative to the confinement of sundry persons at the fortifications in the Highlands, the conduct of Sergeant McFall, and the dismissal of Colonel Nicoll.

By the enclosed orders, you will perceive that we have paid attention to the situation of the prisoners, and complied with your request concerning the Colonel. We have the honour further to inform you, sir, that a Committee is appointed to take cognizance of Sergeant McFall's conduct, and report the same to this House; and that we are, with the utmost respect, yours, &c.

By order.

To Major-General Putnam.

Ordered, That a copy, signed by the President, be transmitted.

A Petition of Henry Dawkins was read and filed. He therein informs the Congress that Philip Youngs is innocent of the suspicion of being concerned in counterfeiting money. Ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. Randall, from the Committee appointed to take into consideration Colonel Malcom's draft of the depth of water in the Channel, reported as follows, to wit:

Your Committee do report that, from the best intelligence they have obtained, the obstructing the navigation of Hudson's River, although a difficult and laborious undertaking, is, nevertheless, in our opinion, practicable; wherefore they do report that they conceive it to be an object worthy of the publick attention, and proper to be submitted to the consideration of his Excellency General Washington.

By order of the Committee:

THOMAS RANDALL, Chairman.

The House having heard the above Report, do approve of the same.

Ordered, That Mr. Morris, Mr. Randall, and Colonel Broome, be a Committee to wait on General Putnam with the said Report.

The House being informed that Lord Stirling had signified his willingness to go with such persons as this House shall appoint, and give his aid and advice in sounding the Channel:

Ordered, That Mr. Randall, Mr. Mercer, and Mr. Shaw, be requested to attend Lord Stirling on Wednesday next, to sound the Harbour, and that Mr. Shaw provide three boats for that purpose.

A Letter from Augustus Van Horne, Vincent P. Ashfield, John L. C. Roome, and Thomas W. Moore, all confined in Jail by order of the General Committee of New-York, for refusing to sign the Declaration, or deliver up their arms on oath as directed by the Resolutions of the late Provincial Congress,—was read and filed.

Ordered, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Duane, Mr. Randall, Mr. Paul Schenck, and Mr. Samuel Townshend, be a Committee to take the said Letter into consideration, and report their opinion thereon to this House.

On motion, Ordered, That Mr. Norwood, the Colony Storekeeper, deliver to Colonel Malcom two hundred pounds of Gunpowder, two hundred pounds of Lead in Bullets, and four hundred Fints, from the Provincial Magazine, to be sent to the General Committee of Charlotte County, for the use of the inhabitants thereof.

Ordered, That Mr. Norwood, the Colony Storekeeper, be, and he is hereby, directed to employ as many proper persons as may be necessary, for the purpose of making up half a ton of Gunpowder into Cartridges of different sizes, from sixteen to twenty-two balls in the pound, with all despatch.

A recommendation from the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, recommending Mr. Leary as Second Major of the Third Regiment of Militia of the said City and County, vice John Reade, resigned.*

Ordered, That a Commission be made out to Mr. Leary. Which was accordingly done immediately.

A Certificate, dated at Blooming Grove, May 27th, 1776, and signed by Pheneas Heard and Thomas Moffat, two of the Members of the Committee of Cornwall Precinct, in Orange County, whereby it appears that a number of men residing within the limits of the Regiment of Cornwall, imbodyed with a view of forming a company of Light-Horse, and that the following persons were chosen Officers, to wit: Ebenezer Woodhull Captain, James Sayre Lieutenant, William Heard Cornet, and Azariah Martin Quartermaster.

Ordered, That Commissions issue to those gentlemen respectively, agreeable to the rank as set forth in the said Return. And they were issued accordingly.

Die Martis, 9 ho. A. M., June 4, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Broome, Captain Denning, Mr. Randall, Col. Stoutenburgh, Col. Brasher, Mr. Scott.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler.

* COMMITTEE-CHAMBER, NEW-YORK, June 2, 1776.

Colonel Abraham Lott having acquainted the Committee that Mr. John Reade, formerly elected by their body as Second Major to the New-York Militia, of which he is Colonel, has declined serving, at the same time recommending Mr. William Leary to supply his place,

The Committee Resolved, unanimously, That Mr. William Leary be recommended to the Congress for the commission of Second Major of Colonel Lott's Regiment.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOSEPH WINTER, Secretary.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Van Houton.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Comer, Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Major Lockwood, Captain Fleming.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Gelston.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Paul Schenck, Mr. Livingston.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Leffertse.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Mr. Malcom.

Major Webb attended the Congress with a Letter from Abraham Livingston, directed to Colonel McDougall. He therein informs Colonel McDougall of a correspondence being carried on between the Governour's Ship and one Mrs. Hill, and that Mrs. Hatch is concerned in the same.

Ordered, That Mr. Randall and Mr. Morris be a Committee to examine Mrs. Hatch, and all such persons and places as they shall think necessary for the discovery of a certain correspondence between the said Mrs. Hatch, or others, and persons on board some or one of the Ships now lying at or near Sandy-Hook.

The Petition of Philip Youngs, confined by order of this House on suspicion of being privy to the counterfeiting Continental money:*

Ordered, That he be heard at the bar of this House this afternoon.

Mr. Cortelyou requested blank Commissions for the Troop of Horse in Richmond County.

Ordered, That blank Commissions be sent to the Committee of Richmond County, subject to the same regulations as the other Counties to which blanks are sent.

On motion, Resolved, That ways and means be devised to take or arrest Townshend Hulet, as he stands charged with being concerned with the Youngs and others of counterfeiting Continental and other Paper money.

Thereupon, Ordered, That Captain Jeremiah Wool be, and he is hereby, requested to take with him such men as he may deem necessary, not exceeding four, and proceed to Nassau-Island; that Captain Wool use his utmost endeavours to apprehend Townshend Hulet, charged with being concerned in counterfeiting the Bills of Credit of the United Colonies.

The Order of the Day, for hearing the appeal of Andrew Gautier, Jun., from the decision of the General Committee of the City of New-York, was read.

The parties, with their witnesses and others, being attending in the Hall:

Ordered, That all the doors be opened, and the parties, with their witnesses, directed to attend at the bar of the House, and all other persons attending, be informed that the doors are open for admission.

An appeal from the judgment of the General Committee of New-York for refusing Continental money.

Samuel Ward sworn. He and Mr. Van Horne went to Ten Eyck & Simmons's store to purchase tea, and asked whether they had any tea to sell. Zacharias Sickles, one of the clerks, made answer, Yes, for six shillings per pound; that Mr. Gautier went to weigh the tea, and, while he was weighing it, Mr. Sickles said it must be hard money for the tea—gold or silver, for that he would not sell an ounce of it for Continental money. This was said in the hearing of Mr. Gautier. That the witness and Mr. Van Horne answered, that it was very hard that they could not get necessities for Continental money; that for six shillings in silver they could purchase more than for eight shillings of Continental money, and that they had no hard money with them. Sickles said they were good-for-nothing rascals; ordered them

* To the Honourable the Provincial Congress for the Province of NEW-YORK, this 4th day of June, 1776.

The Petition of PHILIP YOUNGS, a Prisoner in custody, humbly sheweth:

That your Petitioner humbly conceives himself hardly dealt by, merely on suspicion of a fact of which he is entirely innocent, to the great detriment of himself and family, as his business, in his absence, lays very much neglected, having at this time his vessel ready to sail. Your Petitioner, therefore, humbly begs your Honours to admit him to a further hearing as soon as may be convenient. Your compliance will greatly oblige your distressed humble servant,

PHILIP YOUNGS.

out of the house; said they should not have the tea for Continental money, and that they might do their worst; complain to the Committee, or whatever they pleased, for that Mr. Alsop, one of the Continental Delegates, sold his tea for hard money and no otherwise, and would not; that Mr. Gautier weighed the tea for Van Horne, and started it out afterwards; says Mr. Gautier weighed the tea for Van Horne, took it out of the box for that purpose and put it in a paper, and when he found he could get nothing but Continental money, poured it back again. Witness says he did not say that if he had the hard money they should not have it. Acknowledges that he said he would not be too good to raise a posse and take the tea by force. Sickles said if he did he would blow his brains out.

Cornelius Van Horne sworn. He and Ward went to purchase tea, and Ward asked the price; Sickles said it was six shillings per pound. Witness asked to have a pound weighed; Mr. Gautier went to weigh it. Witness was going to pull out his pocket-book, and Sickles said he should not have the tea without hard money—silver or gold; he said he thought Mr. Sickles was joking; where should carmen get hard money? we work for the Continent and get Continental money. Told him further that it was very hard to work for Continental money and not be able to purchase with it the necessaries for his family. Whereupon Mr. Gautier, who had weighed the tea, threw it back into the chest; that the conversation about hard money arose after Mr. Gautier had begun to weigh the tea.

The defendant confesses that he told the witnesses he asked gold or silver for his tea, and turned it back into the chest when they declared they would not give gold or silver.

Joseph Winter sworn. Says the defendant fully exculpated Mr. Sickles, and took the charge on himself.

Mr. Dunscombe says that Gautier before the Committee cleared Sickles, and Sickles declared he had never refused Continental money, and he alone had refused the money; that the Secretary of the Committee will prove this. Mr. Gautier so far admits this matter that he acknowledges he turned the tea into the box. Gautier further says that he does not know what money the cartmen had; that no money was tendered to him; that they told him it was paper money, and therefore he refused to deliver the tea.

Joseph Winter, being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists, says: That Mr. Andrew Gautier, on his examination before the General Committee, fully exculpated Sickles, and took the whole charge upon himself; that he understood that he exculpated Sickles to both charges. Mr. Gautier says he has not any questions to ask the witness.

The parties and witnesses withdrew. The allegations of the parties examined. The Congress having heard the witnesses in the case of Andrew Gautier, Jun.,

Resolved, That the decision of the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, in the case of Andrew Gautier, Jun., be and is hereby confirmed.

THE UNITED COLONIES, }
vs. } On an appeal from the General
ANDREW GAUTIER, JUN. } Committee of New-York.

Mr. Dunscombe and Mr. John Campbell, two of the General Committee, attended on behalf of the Committee, and their appointments were read.

The Minutes of the General Committee of the City of New-York were read; whereby it appears that complaint had been made against Andrew Gautier, Jun., for refusing Continental bills in payment. That on the testimony of Samuel Pratt and Samuel Ward, (whose depositions taken before the Committee were read,) the said General Committee had "Resolved, That Mr. Andrew Gautier, Jun., had violated the Resolution of Congress in refusing to receive the Continental bills in payment, and that he be held up to the publick as an enemy to his country."

That from this decision Mr. Gautier has appealed to this Congress. The defence of the said Andrew Gautier, Jun., by him delivered in writing, was also read, whereby he confesses and avoids the said charge.

Mr. Dunscombe informed that Samuel Pratt is on board of a Continental Sloop.

Samuel Ward, being duly sworn and examined, says: That he and Van Horne heard that there was tea to sell at Ten Eyck & Seaman's store; that they went to the store and asked if they had tea to sell; that Zacharias Sickles answered, Yes, for six shillings per pound; that Gautier weighed the tea; that, while Gautier weighed the tea, Sickles said it must be paid for in hard money—gold or silver; that he and Van Horne complained that they should be refused necessaries for Continental money; that for six shillings in silver they could purchase more than for eight shillings in Continental money, and told them they had not any hard money; that this was said in the hearing of Gautier; that Sickles said he would not sell the tea for Continental money, and called him a rascal, and bid him begone out of the house, and told him he might do his worst—complain to the Committee or do as he pleased, for that Mr. Alsop, one of the Continental Delegates, sold his tea for hard money, and would not sell it otherwise; that Gautier, when he had weighed the tea and put it up in a paper, returned it into the box when he could not get gold or silver for it; that Gautier had weighed the tea for Van Horne; that though the deponent went for tea, he did not ask to weigh any for himself, because Van Horne was refused. The witness being asked by Gautier whether he did not declare that if he had hard money he would not pay it for the tea? the witness says he did not make any such declaration; that after he was much irritated by abusive language, he said he thought it right for a mob to take the tea by force and weigh it out, but that he then meant, and soon after declared to the people, that in that case it ought to be sold at six shillings per pound, Continental money.

Cornelius Van Horne, being duly sworn, says: He went with Ward to purchase tea; Ward asked the price; Sickles said six shillings per pound; he desired to weigh a pound; that Gautier weighed the tea; that when he took out his pocket-book to pay for the tea, Sickles said he should not have the tea without hard money—gold or silver; that he (the said Ward) told Sickles that he thought he was joking; that cartmen had no hard money; that they worked for the Continent and were paid in Continental money; that it was hard they could not get necessaries for Continental money; that Gautier, who had weighed the tea, returned it into the box; that Gautier was weighing the tea when he was about paying for it, and before any mention had been made about hard money; that the said Sickles refused to take Continental money for tea.

Mr. Lewis Thibou and a number of citizens, who style themselves a Committee of Mechanicks, having come into the Congress-Chamber while the last-mentioned witness was under examination, and delivered at the Chair a paper which they style an Address, the House was ordered to be cleared, in order that the said paper may be inspected, to discover whether it is proper for this Congress to receive the same. The said paper and Address being inspected, the door was opened, and the said citizens were desired to come into the Chamber, and the said paper or Address being read by the said Lewis Thibou, was delivered in at the Chair.

They therein set forth that they are devoted friends to their bleeding country; that they are afflicted by beholding her struggling under heavy loads of oppression and tyranny, and the more so when they view the iron hand lifted up against them; that their Prince is deaf to petitions for interposing his royal authority for redressing our grievances; that one year has not sufficed to satisfy the rage of a cruel Ministry in their bloody pursuits, designed to reduce us to be slaves, and to be taxed by them without our consent; that, therefore, they rather wish to separate from, than continue connected with, such oppressors; and declare that, if this Congress should think proper to instruct their Delegates in Continental Congress to use their utmost endeavours in that august assembly to cause these United Colonies to become independent of Great Britain, it would give them the highest satisfaction; and they thereby sincerely promise to endeavour to support the same with their lives and fortunes.

Thereupon an Answer was given to Mr. Lewis Thibou in the words following, viz:

In Provincial Congress, June 4, 1776.

Sir: We consider the Mechanicks in Union as a voluntary association of a number of the inhabitants of this city, who are warmly attached to the cause of liberty. We flatter ourselves, however, that neither that Association nor their Committee will claim any authority whatsoever in the transactions of the present times; but that, on the contrary, they will ever be ready to submit to that constitutional authority which, by a free election, has been vested in Congress and Committees. This Congress is, at all times, ready and willing to attend to every request of their constituents, or any part of them. We are of opinion that the Continental Congress alone have that enlarged view of our political circumstances which will enable them to decide upon those measures which are necessary for the general welfare. We cannot presume, by any instructions, to make or declare any resolutions or declarations upon so general and momentous a concern; but are determined patiently to await and firmly to abide by whatever a majority of that august body shall think needful. We therefore cannot presume to instruct the Delegates of this Colony upon the momentous question to which your Address refers, until we are informed that it is brought before the Continental Congress, and the sense of this Colony be required through this Congress.

Nathaniel Woodhull * * * * *
Ordered, This bill to be taken up the first thing to-morrow.

* * * * *

A Letter from Edmund Pendleton, President of the Convention of Virginia, dated May 22, 1776, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

“Virginia, May 22, 1776.

“I am honoured with the commands of the General Convention of this Colony to transmit you the enclosed Resolutions, which they have thought it indispensably necessary to enter into at this important crisis; requesting you will communicate their contents to the Convention of your country for their consideration.

“I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

“EDMUND PENDLETON, President.

“To the President of the Convention of New-York.”

Resolves of the said Convention, enclosed in the said Letter, were also read and filed, and are in the words following, to wit:

“In Convention, Wednesday, May 15, 1776.

“Present: One hundred and twelve Members.

“Forasmuch as all the endeavours of the United Colonies, by the most decent representations and Petitions to the King and Parliament of Great Britain, to restore peace and security to America under the British Government, and a reunion with that people upon just and liberal terms, instead of a redress of grievances, have produced from an imperious and vindictive Administration increased insult, oppression, and a vigorous attempt to effect our total destruction. By a late act all these Colonies are declared to be in rebellion and out of the protection of the British Crown; our properties subject to confiscation; our people, when captivated, compelled to join in the murder and plunder of their relations and countrymen; and all former rapine and oppression of Americans declared legal and just. Fleets and armies are raised, and the aid of foreign troops engaged to assist these destructive purposes. The King's Representative in this Colony hath not only withheld all the powers of Government from operating for our safety, but, having retired on board an armed ship, is carrying on a piratical and savage war against us, tempting our slaves, by every artifice, to resort to him, and training and employing them against their masters.

“In this state of extreme danger we have no alternative left but an abject submission to the will of those overbearing tyrants, or a total separation from the Crown and Government of Great Britain, uniting and exerting the strength of all America for defence, and forming alliances with foreign Powers for commerce and aid in war. Wherefore, appealing to the Searcher of hearts for the sincerity of former declarations expressing our desire to preserve the connection with that nation, and that we are driven from that inclination by their wicked councils and the eternal laws of self-preservation:

“Resolved, unanimously, That the Delegates appointed to represent this Colony in General Congress be instructed to propose to that respectable body to declare the United Colonies free and independent States, absolved from all allegiance to, or dependance upon, the Crown and Parliament of Great Britain; and that they give the assent of this Colony for such declaration, and to whatever measures may be thought proper and necessary by the Congress, for forming foreign alliances, and a confederation of the Colonies, at such time and in such manner as to them shall seem best; provided that the power of forming Government for, and the regulation of the internal concerns of each Colony, be left to the respective Colonial Legislatures.

“Resolved, unanimously, That a Committee be appointed to prepare a Declaration of Rights and such a plan of Government as will be most likely to maintain peace and order in this Colony, and secure substantial and equal liberty to the people.

“EDMUND PENDLETON, Pres't.”

Ordered, That Mr. Jay and Mr. Morris be a Committee to prepare a draft of an Answer to the foregoing Letter, and report the same.

A Letter from William Rogers, Commander of the Provincial armed Sloop Montgomery, dated at Little Egg-Harbour, May 22, 1776, was read and filed.

It was suggested to the Congress by a Member, that many people in the Colony are manufacturing Saltpetre; that it will probably become a staple of the Colony; that as the Congress of this Colony is to pay an exceeding high price for all such quantities of Saltpetre as shall be made in this Colony in a given time, that, therefore, as well for the publick safety to procure good Saltpetre, as to increase the goodness and value of the commodity, it is necessary to have Inspectors of Saltpetre appointed to ascertain its quality.

Ordered, That Colonel Lewis Graham, Mr. Livingston, and Mr. Haring, be a Committee to form and report such method of appointing Inspectors of Saltpetre as may prevent impositions in that article, and that the said Committee report with all convenient speed.

The Congress took into consideration the case of Andrew Gautier, Jun., and thereupon came to the following determination:

Andrew Gautier, Jun., having been duly convicted before the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, of refusing to receive the Continental paper currency in payment for tea; and the judgment of the said Committee now being by the Congress on appeal confirmed, the said Andrew Gautier saith: That he never refused Continental money for goods, except in this instance, for which he hath been condemned; that he hath always been a steady and warm friend to the American cause; that he is determined to support the same at the risk of his life, and that he served in the New-York Fusileers until he was elected an Officer in one of the Ward Companies; and further declares, in the most solemn manner, upon his word of honour, that his offence was committed undesignedly, and that he is sincerely sorry for the same.

Resolved, therefore, That the said Andrew Gautier, Jun., be, and is hereby, pardoned and absolved from the said offence.

Application was made to the Congress for an additional small quantity of Gunpowder for Queen's County, and information therewith given that Captain John Sands has upwards of one hundred and forty men in his District, but that they are in general destitute of Gunpowder.

Ordered, That Mr. Richard Norwood, the Commissary, deliver one hundred weight of Gunpowder to Oliver Thorne, the bearer hereof, to be conveyed to the Chairman of the County Committee of Queen's County, for the use of the inhabitants of that County who are friends to the American cause, to be charged to the said County, and to be paid for at the same price as the former parcel sent to that County. And the Chairman of the County Committee is requested to take the same care as to the distribution of, and payment for this Gunpowder, as the former parcel. Mr. Norwood is to take a receipt for the Gunpowder he may deliver.

The Congress being informed that Captain John Johnson has it in his power to apprehend a negro of Colonel Edmund Fanning, who has heretofore been made use of to keep up a communication with the ships-of-war, and the ship on board of which Governour Tryon resides:

Ordered, That Captain Johnson be requested to cause the said negro to be apprehended, and put into safe custody until further order.

The President informed the Congress that Dr. Treat had informed him that the Director of the General Hospital for the American Army was desirous to purchase the Medicines belonging to the Colony which are in the care of Dr. Treat, and desires the direction of this Congress whether the said Medicines shall be sold to Dr. Morgan for the use of the said General Hospital.

The Congress took the same into consideration, and determined that the said Medicines ought not to be sold at present, as the inhabitants may thereby be left destitute and suffer, and there may be a greater necessity for them before others can be obtained. That Dr. Treat be requested to continue to take care of, and preserve the said Medicines, until further order, and that the Congress of this Colony will allow him a reasonable reward for his trouble in the premises.

The Congress proceeded to hear the Resolutions relative to persons dangerous and disaffected to the American cause, and to persons of equivocal character. The same being deliberately read and agreed to, and the Committee appointed to carry those Resolutions into execution, they are in the words following, to wit:

Whereas the Continental Congress, by their Resolve of the 6th day of October last, did recommend to the several Provincial Assemblies and Conventions, and Councils or Committees of Safety, to arrest and secure every person in their respective Colonies whose going at large might, in their opinion, endanger the safety of the Colony or the liberties of America:

And whereas, from sundry informations and evidences exhibited to this Congress, it appears that the enemies of American liberty in this and the neighbouring Colonies have a general communication with each other, by reason whereof the influence of the British Ministry, however feeble, is in some measure sustained, and the minds of the people frequently alarmed and poisoned by false reports and misrepresentations purposely framed and propagated with design to promote the views and machinations of the enemies of America:

And whereas certain persons in Queen's County, King's County, the City and County of New-York, Richmond County, and Westchester County, have been represented to this Congress as disaffected to the American cause, and, together with others in various parts of the Colony, who having little or no property in it, or regard for its rights, may be influenced by the hope of plunder and confiscation to take an active part with our enemies whenever it may, in their opinion, be done with success:

And whereas, from various reports and the best intelligence which could be obtained from Europe, as well as from the positive assertions of the disaffected throughout this and the neighbouring Colonies, there is great reason to expect that an hostile armament will soon arrive in the Colony, whereby it hath become highly expedient and necessary to provide that the inhabitants of this Colony, while employed in repelling a foreign invasion, be not injured or annoyed by domestick enemies:

Resolved, therefore, That the following persons in Queen's County, the City and County of New-York, and Richmond County, whose conduct has been represented to this Congress as inimical to the cause and rights of America, and who, if summoned, would probably not appear, but secrete themselves, be arrested and brought before a Committee of this Congress, hereinafter nominated and appointed, to wit:

In Queen's County*—

Richard Hulet,	} of Rockaway .	John Bodine, Chase of Jamaica .
Stephen Hulet,		John Hulet, of Oyster-Bay .
Joseph Beagle,		Isaac Denton, of Near Rockaway .
John Kendall, at Daniel Thom's, Flushing .

In the City and County of New-York—

Peter McLean, Samuel Galsworthy, Francis De La Roach.

In Richmond County—

Isaac Decker, Abraham Harris, Ephraim Taylor,
Minne Burger.

And that the following persons in the Counties aforesaid, and in the County of Westchester and King's County, whose conduct has been represented to this Congress as equally inimical with that of the former, but who would probably appear on being summoned, be summoned by the said Committee to appear before them at such time and place as they may appoint, and in default of appearance, on proof of the service of the summons, that they be arrested in like manner as the former, to wit—

William Newton,	Theop. Hardenbergh,	William Bayard,
Linus King,	Samuel Burling,	Christopher Benson,
John B. Dash,	John Woods,	Frederick Rhineland,
Henry Law,	Benjamin Williams,	James Coggeshall.
John Milliner,	Theophylact Bache,

In King's County—

Theophylact Bache, Benjamin James.

*A List of QUEEN's County Tories.—Richard Hulet, Thomas Cornwall, Stephen Hulet, Gabriel Ludlow, Dr. Charles Arden, Joseph Beagle, Joseph Langdon, Dr. Martin, Judge Thomas Jones, Captain Archibald Hamilton, Flushing; David Coldan, ditto; Richard Coldan, ditto; Judge Ludlow, Plains; Justice Claus, Captain John Kendall, at Daniel Thom's, Flushing; John Moore, Newtown; David Beattie, Hempstead; Mr. John Baudin, at Jamaica; Mr. Chafe, ditto; John Hulet, Oyster-Bay; Hugh Wallace, Esq., George Folliott, Samuel Doughty.

A List of Inhabitants of QUEEN's County, under bonds filed in the Provincial Congress.—Daniel Kissam, Gilbert Van Wyck, John Willett, David Brooks, Charles Hicks, John Townshend, John Polhemus, Benjamin Whitehead, Thomas Smith, John Shoals, Samuel Martiñ, Nathaniel Moore, Samuel Hallett, William Wayman.

In Queen's County—Charles Arden, John Moore, Sen., David Beatty, of Hempstead.In Westchester County—

Frederick Phillips,	Samuel Merrill,	James Horton, Jun.,
Caleb Morgan,	Peter Corne,	William Sutton,
Nathaniel Underhill,	Peter Huggeford,	William Barker.
Joshua Purdy,	Absalom Gidney,

Which said Committee are hereby authorized and required impartially to inquire and determine whether any, and which of the said persons, have afforded aid or sustenance to the British Fleets or Armies, contrary to the Resolutions of the Continental Congress, or of the Provincial Congress, or Committee of Safety of this Colony, or been active in dissuading any of the inhabitants of this Colony from associating for the defence of the United Colonies against the unjust claims and hostile attacks of the British Parliament, decried the value of the Continental money, and endeavoured to prevent its currency, contrary to the Resolutions of the Continental Congress, or Provincial Congress, or Committee of Safety of the Colony, or been concerned or actually engaged in any schemes to retard or oppose the measures now pursuing by the United Colonies for their defence against the tyrannical and cruel attacks of the British Ministry, or their allies, adherents, or agents.

That all such of the said persons as shall be found by the said Committee to be innocent of the said offences, be immediately discharged; and that a certificate of such acquittal, and of the true light in which they may respectively appear to the said Committee, under the hands of the said Committee, be given by them to the said several persons so acquitted; and that they also report to this Congress the names of the persons so acquitted, that the same may be entered on their Journals, and published, to the end that the reputation of such innocent persons may not suffer or be injured by their having been so arrested. Provided, nevertheless, That if the said persons so to be acquitted should appear in a suspicious light to the said Committee, that the said Committee proceed against them in the manner hereinafter prescribed for their conduct against persons of a suspicious and equivocal character.

And with respect to all such of the said persons as the Committee shall find guilty of all or any of said offences, the said Committee are hereby authorized and required to commit to safe custody all such of them whose going at large would, in their opinion, endanger the safety of the Colony or the liberties of America; and that they discharge the remainder of them on their giving bond, with good security, to the President of the Provincial Congress for the time being, by name, to cease and forbear all opposition to the resolutions and measures of the Continental Congress, or Provincial Congress, or Committee of Safety of this Colony, for the defence of the United Colonies against the unjust claims and hostile operations of the British Ministry to enforce them.

And in case it should appear to the said Committee inexpedient that any of the said persons should continue to dwell at his usual place of residence, that then they do assign to such person or persons another place of residence in this or one of the neighbouring Colonies, and take his or their parole, or word of honour; or if they should not be deemed sufficient, other security to abide there, and not leave it without license from this or a future Congress; and in case of refusal to give such parole and security, to commit him or them to safe custody.

And whereas it may happen that the said Committee may be informed of other dangerous persons not herein named, whom it would be expedient and necessary to summon or apprehend:

Resolved, That the said Committee be, and they hereby are, authorized and required to cause such persons to be summoned or apprehended, as they may think proper, and to proceed against them in the same manner as is hereinbefore directed with respect to the persons herein particularly named.

And whereas employing detachments of the Militia of this Colony, in arresting the said persons will not only be expensive, but the assembling of them may alarm the suspicions of the said persons and their adherents, and thereby tend to defeat the design of these Resolutions; and as the Continental troops quartered in and near the said three Counties of New-York, Queen's, and Richmond, may be employed in the said business with little trouble to themselves and with greater prospect of success:

Resolved, therefore, That the said Committee be, and they hereby are, authorized to confer with the Commander-in-Chief of the said troops, and to request of him such detachments of them as may be necessary for the purpose aforesaid; and that he give order that the said detachments while so employed be under the direction of the said Committee, or of discreet persons to be by them appointed: Provided, nevertheless, That the said Committee are hereby empowered to employ such detachments of the Militia as they may think expedient for the purpose aforesaid.

And whereas there may be, and doubtless are, in other Counties of this Colony, divers dangerous persons at present unknown to this Congress:

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Committees of all the Counties in this Colony to be vigilant, and use their utmost endeavours from time to time to discover and summon or apprehend them, and treat them in like manner as is hereinbefore prescribed with respect to the persons hereby ordered to be arrested, and to report their proceedings therein to the Congress of this Colony for the time being.

And whereas it may often happen that the Committees of Towns and other Districts in a County may discover many dangerous persons whom it would be proper immediately to secure, in which case an application to the County Committee would not only be attended with great delay, but would also afford such dangerous persons an opportunity to escape:

Resolved, therefore, That the said Committees of the different Towns and Districts in the several Counties of this Colony be, and they hereby are, authorized and required to cause all persons whom they may esteem dangerous and disaffected, to appear before them, either by arrest or summons, as the said Committee, in their discretion, may think proper, and take from the said persons respectively good and sufficient security to appear before the General Committee of the County at such time and place as they shall order him to attend, and then and there to answer such matters as shall before the said General Committee be alleged against him; and on refusal to give such security, to commit to safe custody the said person or persons so refusing, until the then next meeting of the said General Committee with whom the accusation against the said dangerous and disaffected person or persons ought forthwith to be lodged by the Committee of the Town or District by whom they may be apprehended, summoned, or committed as aforesaid.

And whereas there is in this Colony divers persons who, by reason of their holding offices from the King of Great Britain, from their having neglected or refused to associate with their fellow-citizens for the defence of their common rights, from their having never manifested by their conduct a zeal for and attachment to the American cause, or from their having maintained an equivocal neutrality, have been considered by their countrymen in a suspicious light, whereby it hath become necessary, as well for the safety as for the satisfaction of the people, who, in times so dangerous and critical, are naturally led to consider those as their enemies who withhold from them their aid and influence:

Resolved, That the following persons, who are generally supposed to come under the above description, to wit:

In the City and County of New-York—

Oliver De Lancey,	Charles Nicoll,	Robert Bayard,
Charles W. Apthorpe,	Gerard Walton,	Peter Graham,
William Smith,*	Donald McLean,	Peter Van Shaack,

NEW-YORK, May 11, 1776.

SIR: As I have not a doubt of my last letters to Administration convincing them that this City and Province is the only spot in America for carrying on the war with effect against the Rebels, and that in consequence the forces expected this spring, as well as those now under your command, will be ordered hither; it may be necessary and advisable to send the Army through the Sound, between Connecticut and Long-Island. Of the latter, it will be proper to give a description: It is one hundred and thirty miles long, is very fertile, abounding in wheat and every other kind of corn; innumerable black cattle, sheep, hogs, &c.; is very populous; and Suffolk County in particular, as well as the other parts of it, all good and loyal subjects, of which they have lately given proof, and only wait to be assisted by the King's troops. The Island has a plain on it at least twenty-four miles long, which has a fertile country about it; is twenty miles from the city of New-York; Connecticut opposite to it; New-Jersey about thirty miles distant; Philadelphia one hundred and ten; Maryland one hundred and thirty; Rhode-Island one hundred and fifty miles; so that in this fertile Island the Army can subsist without and also all such other persons of the like character as the said Committee may think proper, to be summoned by the said Committee to appear before them at such time and place as they shall appoint, then and there to show cause, if any they have, why they should be considered as friends to the American cause, and as of the number of those who are ready to risk their lives and fortunes in defence of the rights and liberties of America, against the usurpation, unjust claims, and cruel oppressions of the British Parliament, which rights and liberties, and which unjust claims and cruel oppressions, are specified and stated in divers Addresses, Petitions, and Resolutions of the present and late Continental Congress; and in default of appearance, the said Committee, on proof made of the service of the said summons, are authorized and directed to cause them to be arrested and brought before them by warrant, under their hands, directed to any Militia Officer in this Colony, who is hereby required to execute the same.

And if, on the appearance and examination of the said persons, it shall appear to the satisfaction of the said Committee any succour from Britain or Ireland, and in five or six days invade and reduce any of the above Colonies at pleasure. Add to these great advantages, that the possession of the Narrows and Nutten-Island would be the destruction of this city; but of this I think there would be no need, for all the principal inhabitants are at heart with the Crown, particularly all my brethren the Members of the Assembly; but as the mob now commands, prudence forbids them to declare without a military force. You have many with you who are well acquainted with the navigation of the Sound. The spot which I advise you to land at is Cow-Bay.

TO THE PRINTER OF THE CONNECTICUT GAZETTE.

DOBBS'S FERRY, September 19, 1776.

MR. GREEN: As I understand you have republished a letter in your paper which was reprinted from a London paper, and said to be written by the Honourable William Smith, Esq., I beg leave to inform you that it is a forgery, and I doubt not was written by some of the Refugees in England, with a view to render Mr. Smith's situation as disagreeable as their own was. The letter will not prejudice Mr. Smith in the opinion of those who know him; but the natural and just jealousy of the times may lead those who are unacquainted with him to form an unjust idea of him; I doubt not, therefore, that, in justice to injured innocence, you will publish the following extract from a letter written by Mr. Smith respecting the letter above-mentioned, and insert a paragraph requesting the Printers who have already published or may yet publish the forgery, to print this too. It is dated the 4th instant.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

EBENEZER HAZARD.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM THE HON. WILLIAM SMITH, ESQ.

The artlessness of the author of the letter in the Baltimore Journal, of the 8th of August, is very apparent. Indeed, as the forgery was contrived in England, he could not know of my removal from New-York on the 29th of March. You will observe that the printed letter is dated there the 11th of May, and that the writer supposes himself a Member of the Assembly. I have not been in town since March, and never was in the Assembly. These mistakes in personating me, render the fraud manifest. There are other marks of it. No man who knows me will imagine that, after my asserting, in the history of New-York, (page 20,) that Long-Island was one hundred and twenty miles long and Hempstead Plain but sixteen, will suppose me the informer that the Island is one hundred and thirty miles in length and the plain twenty-four; and that I am so ignorant of America as to place New-Jersey at fifty miles from Long-Island, and Rhode-Island at one hundred and fifty, and Maryland but thirty from Philadelphia; or that I should believe the people of Suffolk, and especially the Members elected but last spring, to be well-affected to the measures now under the direction of General Howe.

I am not fond of oaths to remove groundless suspicions, or I should enclose you an affidavit that I never wrote a letter to Mr. Howe upon any subject whatsoever; nor to any man living, in the smallest degree similar to the letter in the Maryland Journal. Such an affidavit I will publish, if it is necessary, for the satisfaction of my countrymen; after which, as Mr. Howe is upon the spot, no man can believe the calumny who does not think me both a fool and a knave.

mittee that they, or any or either of them, are friends to the American cause, that such of them whom they shall so adjudge to be friends, shall be forthwith discharged, and a certificate thereof, under the hands of the said Committee, given them, and their names forthwith reported to this Congress, to the end that the same may be entered on their Journals and published, and justice thereby done to their characters and reputations.

And it is further Resolved, That all such of the said persons as the said Committee shall not adjudge and determine to be friends of the American cause, the said Committee be, and they hereby are, required to treat and dispose of in the following manner, to wit:

That such of them as may be men of influence in the neighbourhood of the place of their present residence, be removed to such place in this or a neighbouring Colony as will deprive them of an opportunity of exerting that influence to the prejudice of the American cause, and respectively bound by their parole or word of honour, or other security, at the discretion of the said Committee, neither directly nor indirectly to oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress, or the Congress of this Colony, and to abide in the place and within the limits to be assigned them, till the further order of the present or future Provincial Congress, or Continental Congress; and in case they shall refuse to give such parole or other security, to commit them to safe custody.

And as to such of the said persons whose removal, in the judgment of the said Committee, shall not appear necessary, that the said Committee do cause them to be respectively bound with such security, by parole or otherwise, as the said Committee shall deem necessary, neither directly nor indirectly to oppose or contravene the measures of the Continental Congress or the Congress of this Colony. Provided, nevertheless, that the said Committee shall be, and they are hereby, authorized, in case they shall, on inquiry, find any or either of the said persons to be so dangerous as that they ought not to be permitted to go at large, to order such of them to be kept in safe custody.

Resolved, That the said Committee and the County Committees keep a just record of their proceedings, in pursuance of these Resolutions, and report the same, with the substance of the evidence offered to them for and against the several persons who shall be by them apprehended, summoned, tried, and examined, by virtue of the aforesaid Resolutions; and that they have power to send for witnesses and papers.

Resolved, That the said Committee consist of the following gentlemen, to wit: Mr. Morris, Colonel Remsen, Mr. John Ten Broeck, Mr. Haring, Mr. Tredwell, Colonel Lewis Graham, and Mr. Hallett; and that any five of them be a quorum, and that before they enter on the business herein before assigned them, they, and also all such of the County Committees as may be engaged in carrying these Resolutions into execution, severally take an oath diligently, impartially, without fear, favour, affection, or hope of reward, to execute and discharge the duties imposed on them by the foregoing Resolutions.

Resolved, That the said Committee appoint such persons as they may think proper to repair to the said Counties, to inquire for and procure the witnesses against the persons herein directed to be arrested or summoned, to appear and give evidence against the said persons before the said Committee; and that the said persons be paid for their trouble at the rate of fifteen shillings for each day they shall respectively be employed on that service, and that the witnesses they may direct to attend as aforesaid be paid their reasonable expenses for travelling charges and subsistence, to be certified and allowed by the said Committee, which certificate shall be a warrant to the Treasurer of this Congress to pay the person or persons in whose favour such certificate shall be given the sum or sums therein allowed as aforesaid.

Colonel Broome, from the Committee appointed to hear and determine on the cases of such confined Prisoners as have been confined by order of this Colony's Congress, brought in a Report on the case of Neil McFall, which was read, to wit:

"New-York, June 5, 1776.

"Colonel Fleming says that Neil McFall, Sergeant of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, was taken prisoner at St. Johns; that he knows him to be zealously attached to the Ministerial cause, and a sensible, discerning, intelligent man; that he believes him capable of making such remarks upon our works and Army here as may be extremely injurious to the American cause; that it is well known that he has frequently been viewing our Fortifications and Encampments, and that upon being asked, at General Putnam's, if he would not join the Ministerial Army, nor give them any intelligence on their arrival here, he declined making any such declaration, and replied that he should be sorry not always to do his duty.

"Your Committee, to whom the case of the said Neil McFall was referred, are of opinion, that from the above representation of Colonel Fleming, and the aforesaid Neil McFall being a Continental Prisoner, and this Congress having no further interfered than by taking his parole at the request of General Schuyler, his case be referred to the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental forces, to deal with him as in his discretion shall seem meet; which, nevertheless, is humbly submitted. JOHN BROOME, Chairman."

The same being read, the Congress agree with their Committee in their said Report.

Ordered, That a copy of the foregoing Report, together with the Parole of the said Neil McFall, be immediately sent to Major-General Putnam.

Die Mercurii, 4 ho. P. M., June 5, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Sands, Colonel Broome, Mr. Hallett, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Randall.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Ten Broeck.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Strong.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. James Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Schenck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little, Mr. Pye.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Major Lockwood, Colonel L. Graham, Captain Flemming.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Mr. Van Wyck.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Colonel Malcom, Mr. Webster.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

The Report of the Committee for taking into consideration General Washington's Letter relative to the Militia, which Report was read and filed on 26th May, was again read.

A Report of a Committee, whereof Mr. Scott was Chairman, of a plan or set of Resolutions for regulating the Militia, which was, on the 13th day of May, made to the late Provincial Congress, and then read and filed, and referred over to this Provincial Congress, was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

Your Committee do report: That they have deliberately considered the condition of the Militia of this Colony as distinguished into Minute-men and common Militia, a distinction which they are of opinion was ill-timed and unfortunate, by not being well adapted to the state of things in this Colony; and as they propose to offer some reasons for a change of the plan of defence by the natural strength of the Colony, they beg leave to begin by assigning these reasons:

The Continental Congress, on the 18th of July last, among other things, resolved that one-fourth part of the Militia in every Colony be selected for Minute-men, of such persons as are willing to enter into this necessary service of defending their rights against Ministerial tyranny, formed into Companies and Battalions, and their Officers, under the degree of Field-Officers, chosen by the men, and commissioned, as well as the Field-Officers, by the respective Assemblies or Conventions, to be ready, on the shortest notice, to march to any place where their assistance might be required for the defence of their own or a neighbouring Colony; and that as these Minute-men might eventually be called to action before the whole body could be sufficiently trained, it was, therefore, recommended that a more particular and diligent attention should be paid to their instruction in military discipline, and that such of the Minute-men as desire it should be relieved by new drafts from the whole body of the Militia once in four months, and that where, in any Colony, a Militia was already formed under regulations approved by the Convention of such Colony, or by such Assemblies as are annually elected, the said Congress referred it to the discretion of such Convention or Assembly either to adopt the foregoing regulations, in the whole or in part, or to continue their former, as they, on consideration of all circumstances, should think best.

Upon this plan the Minute-men of this Colony was formed, and your Committee report the following inconveniences attending the execution of that plan, to wit:

1st. All the Officers, as well those of the common Militia as of the Minute-men, under the degree of Field-Officers, are made eligible by the Privates of each Company; and, therefore, as the above-mentioned regulation for Minute-men gives a choice of Minute-Officers by one-fourth of the Militia, and a succession of Privates is provided for by drafts, it follows that in the succession three-fourths of the Militia will be subject to Officers not of their own election, contrary to the evident design of Congress.

2dly. That in the regulation above-mentioned, by the Continental Congress, for the appointment of Officers, those under the degree of Field being placed in the election of the people, they conceive it to be their undoubted right so to elect, and as the succession by draft will exclude three-fourths of the Militia from such election, there is no possibility of supplying a succession of Privates upon the principle whereon the Minute-men are established; from whence it follows,

3dly. That throughout the different Minute Regiments in the Colony, while the different corps of Officers are complete, the Regiments as to Privates are, and must of necessity continue, very deficient, unless some new regulation be made. Therefore, we report it as the opinion of your Committee,

1st. That the distinction between Minute-men and common Militia, which seems to be a consequence of the aforesaid Resolve of the Continental Congress, be henceforth abolished, that thereby the Militia of the Colony may be again reduced to one common mass.

2dly. That therefore all the commissions for Minute Officers be forthwith recalled, and that every Private be placed under his proper Militia Officer, leaving each Regiment to be officered according to the mode prescribed, that is to say: those under the degree of Field-Officers by election of the Privates, and those above that degree by the appointment of the Provincial Congress.

3dly. As upon this plan many Officers may be reduced to the station of Privates, and it would be very degrading to compel those whose appointments as Officers of Minute-men must be a clear proof of their distinguished attachment to the publick cause, to appear in the ranks, your Committee report it as their opinion that such gentlemen as have been appointed Minute-Officers and will be reduced in consequence of the reform now proposed, be not enrolled among the Militia nor be compelled to do military duties required by the Militia Regulations, but that they be requested by this Congress to keep themselves well equipped as the Militia Regulations require, your Committee not doubting that the laudable spirit which entitled them to a preference as Officers, will induce them, upon any publick emergency, to turn out in defence of their country in the character of Volunteers.

4thly. As your Committee consider the City and County of New-York, Richmond County, and King's County, as most liable to a sudden invasion, and as the more immediate object of his Excellency General Washington's request to provide him with a Militia aid in case of an invasion seems to have a more immediate reference to those Counties, your Committee therefore report it as their opinion that the whole of the Militia of the said three Counties, forming together the New-York Brigade, be required to hold themselves completely provided, according to the Militia Regulations, to be at the command of his said Excellency, or the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental forces on the spot, for the time being, at a minute's warning, upon a proper order to be issued by the Commanding Officer of the Militia for that purpose.

5thly. That it is the opinion of your Committee that one-third part of all the rest of the Militia, without abating any part of the duty prescribed to the Militia in general, be selected and prepared to turn out at the command of the Militia Commanding Officer, in case of an alarm or invasion, under the following Regulations, to wit :

That to the end that such selected Militia may at all times be ready for immediate service, your Committee do advise that they be selected in manner following, that is to say : That a Major-General be appointed to command the Militia of the whole Colony ; that the office of Brigadier-General in every Brigade be filled up according to the former military arrangement, by Provincial Congress ; that the Major-General, when appointed, do forthwith issue his orders to the several Brigadier-Generals, who, in consequence thereof, are to issue their orders respectively to the respective Colonels or other Commanding Officers of the several Battalions or Regiments under their command, requiring them to cause to be selected by ballot one-third part of the Militia of each Battalion or Regiment, to be ready to march at a minute's warning, accoutred as the Militia Regulations require, and with five days' provisions ; which men, so selected, shall be ready to march at a minute's warning, and shall keep themselves in such readiness for one whole year, at the expiration of which another third of each whole Battalion shall be balloted for the like service for one year, excluding those from the ballot who shall have already served, and that for the third year's service the remaining third part of each Battalion shall be ready to perform the service in manner before directed ; and that in order properly to officer such detachments of the Militia for active and immediate service, the men balloted for the first and second year's service shall have the election of the Officers according to their respective ranks, the number and rank of each of which said Officers shall be according to their standing in the Militia ; no Officer to be employed in this service for more than one year, nor more than two Officers at a time out of one Company, and the remaining Officers in the third year to be Officers of course, according to their standing in the Militia ; and we recommend it as a necessary provision to permit any selected person, except Officers for the service aforesaid, to procure a person to serve in his stead, provided he be approved of by the Commanding Officer of the Regiment ; that the same proportion of Officers shall be allotted for the command of such selected men as are allotted by the Militia Regulations ; that the Field-Officers to command such selected men shall be chosen by ballot by the Officers chosen to command the selected Militia, and that no more than one Field-Officer shall be elected out of each Battalion or Regiment for the aforesaid Minute or Select service ; the Militia thus selected to be under command of their respective Brigadier and the Major-General, as the rest of the Militia.

By order of the Committee :

JOHN MORIN SCOTT, Chairman.

Mr. Sands then moved, and was seconded by Mr. Strong, in the words following, to wit :

"I move that this Congress proceed immediately into the consideration of the Regulation of the Militia of this Colony."

After some time spent in consideration of Regulations for the Militia of this Colony, and some progress made therein, Colonel Malcom moved, and was seconded, That the Order of Minute-men in this Colony be abolished.

Debates arose thereon, and the question being put, it was carried in the affirmative, in manner following, to wit :

For the Affirmative.	For the Negative.

3 Orange,	4 Suffolk,
8 New-York,	5 Dutchess,
2 Richmond,	4 Queen's,

Mr. Duane then came into Congress and gave information that he had reason to believe that a body of the Militia would very speedily be called on, and be taken into present pay, to assist the Continental Army for a limited time ; and, from other matters mentioned by Mr. Duane, the further consideration of this subject was postponed for this afternoon.

Mr. Duane had leave of absence to visit his family and provide a house for their reception.

The Congress adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Die Jovis, 9 ho. A. M., June 6, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present : Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Colonel Broome, Mr. Sands, Mr. Randall, Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Scott, Mr. Jay, Mr. Hallett.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Cuyler.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Strong.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. James Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Schenck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Van Houten.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Major Lockwood, Colonel L. Graham, Captain Fleming, Mr. Morris, Colonel Gilbert Drake.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Mr. Van Wyck.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

A Petition of Philip Youngs, now in custody, praying to be discharged, or permitted to go at large on giving security, was read and filed.*

Debates arose on the said Petition ; and the question being put, whether the said Philip Youngs shall be admitted to give security and to go at large, or remain in confinement, it was determined that he remain in confinement, in manner following, that is to say—

That he remain in confinement.	That he be admitted to bail, and go at large.

MR. SPEAKER AND GENTLEMEN OF THIS HONOURABLE HOUSE: I, Philip Youngs, a confined prisoner, humbly make bold to address this honourable House, in hopes that they will indulge your Petitioner with a hearing, as your Petitioner is entirely innocent of the charge laid against him, of knowing, directly or indirectly, of any attempt to make, counterfeit, sign, or pass, any bill or bills of any kind or denomination whatsoever. Your Petitioner humbly hopes the House will be kind enough to consider his hard case—your Petitioner having a vessel and cargo lying by for want of your Petitioner's presence, by which he is losing considerably every day. As your Petitioner is confined upon mere suspicion, your compliance with your Petitioner's request will greatly oblige your distressed, humble servant,

PHILIP YOUNGS.

To Nathaniel Woodhull, Speaker of the Honourable House of Provincial Congress in New-York.

To the Honourable Speaker of the House of Provincial Congress of New-York, and to the House :

The Petition of Philip Youngs, now a prisoner, desireth once more the favour of this honourable House to take in consideration your Petitioner's hard fate, and be pleased to set him at liberty once more, any ways as this House shall think proper, as he (your Petitioner) always has, ever since the present contest between Great Britain and America, striven, all that lay in his power, to promote the welfare of America, as is well known by persons that live near me ; that I have got a great deal of ill will by standing for my country, and by that have been threatened to be tarred and feathered, and now the Tories boast and say, You have been a great Whig, and see what the Congress will do with you now : they will confine you, guilty or not guilty, and make you spend your money ; and they cry out who hath complained, A great Tory. Which, gentlemen, if I had an opportunity, could prove every word of this assertion ; and, gentlemen, what I am confined, absolutely I am clear of, as true as the sun shines, which I am positive of before God and man, which, if I was not, would not say for ten thousand worlds. And your Petitioner humbly hopes that this honourable House will consider my hard fate that I labour under ; and further, gentlemen, the hard usage that my family labours under on account of the Tories, who, when they pass the house, cry out to my family, Where is Youngs, that great Whig ? Why, the Congress has confined him, because he is a Whig ; and such like expressions, to terrify my family, and to make this honourable House look ridiculous, which, gentlemen, it grieves your Petitioner to hear of ; and your compliance will oblige your distressed humble servant,

PHILIP YOUNGS.

June, 8th day, 1776.

P. S. Gentlemen, I make no doubt but if Samuel Brumes was here he would convince you all that I ever have striven to promote the welfare of America, for which I appeal, gentlemen, to this honourable House for relief in this day of trouble. Be pleased to indulge me.

P. Y.

of negroes dancing in a small house of Davan's, in the East Ward, near the East River; that from one of the negroes, named Will, belonging to the estate of the late Joshua Delaplaine, deceased, he took a Drum with the King's Arms on it; that the negro said he got the Drum from General Heath. Captain Johnson says that a few nights ago he discovered upwards of thirty negroes dancing in Mr. Walton's house in the Square.

Ordered, That Captain Johnson be requested to cause a negro man named Will, who lately belonged to Joshua Delaplaine, deceased, to be apprehended, and put into safe custody and close confinement until further order.

The proceedings of the General Committee of the City of New-York against Thomas Harriot, for refusing to receive Continental money in payment, and his appeal, were read.*

Ordered, That the said appeal be heard on Monday next; that a copy of the order be forwarded to Thomas Harriot; and that the said General Committee be requested to appoint a sub-Committee to prosecute the said appeal, and to direct the evidences to attend this Congress, and that the General Committee have the aid of the Congress for the attendance of their witnesses, if necessary.

Sundry Officers from General Greene's camp attending, with John Livingston, Jun., a prisoner in their custody, sent in a Letter from General Greene; which was read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Camp on Long-Island, June 6, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: I send you prisoner Mr. John Livingston and his barber, taken into custody by order of the Committee of Jamaica, as you will see by the papers accompanying this. He was delivered by the Captain of the Minute Company to Lieutenant-Colonel Cornwell, who commanded a detachment from this division of the Army, by order of General Putnam, to Hempstead. The Captain requested that he might be delivered safely into the hands of the Congress; accordingly, I have sent him (Livingston) and his barber under the care of a number of officers. It is notorious that many of the inhabitants of Queen's County are very unfriendly; arms, I am informed by the officers of my brigade, are daily carrying by the camp down into that part of the Island; and the inhabitants here say they are the very people that are known to be unfriendly. I should be glad to know whether you

* COMMITTEE-CHAMBER, NEW-YORK, May 24, 1776.

Mr. Jacob Le Roy, attending at the door, was admitted. He informed the Committee that some time ago he tendered a sum of money, consisting of Continental bills, to Mr. Thomas Harriot, and that he refused to receive the same.

Resolved, That the consideration of Mr. Le Roy's complaint be deferred until Tuesday next.

TUESDAY, May 28, 1776.—Mr. Jacob Le Roy again attending this Committee, upon his complaint against Thomas Harriot, says, that he waited upon Mr. Harriot, at Jamaica, in order to pay him a sum of money in Continental bills. Mr. Harriot asked him how much other money there was; that the examinant told him no other; Mr. Harriot then replied, he would take no such money. The examinant further declares, that previous to this he tendered Mr. Harriot the money, and that Harriot told him he would receive no such sum in Continental money; that his friends would blame him for receiving it. To which Mr. Le Roy answered, he had nothing to do with his friends.

Mr. Harriot being brought before the Committee, acknowledged that Mr. Le Roy tendered him a sum of money, consisting of Continental bills, and that he refused to receive it until he could place it at interest, but that he would have received it had it been gold or Fork money.

The Committee, taking the above matter into consideration, thereupon, Resolved, That Thomas Harriot has violated the Resolution of Congress in refusing to receive the Continental bills on payment, and that he be held up to the publick as an enemy to his country.

TUESDAY, June 4, 1776.—Mr. Jacob Le Roy acquainted the Chairman that he had again tendered Thomas Harriot Continental currency, which he still refuses to receive, alleging that he had appealed to Congress, and would abide by their determination.

Resolved and Ordered, That an extract of the Minutes of this Committee relating to Mr. Harriot's case, be handed to Congress.

Extract from the Minutes: JOSEPH WINTER, Secretary.

Captain Thomas Harriot, being called before the Committee, was duly convicted of having refused to receive in payment the Continental bills, and still persists in refusing the same; and further said he would appeal to the Provincial Congress, but refused to give security for his answering to the said appeal, though a gentleman present offered his services to him on that account; and the said Harriot added, he did not care whether he was held up or not to the publick as an enemy to his country; and when he was informed of the disagreeable circumstances he might bring himself into by his conduct, said he hoped or expected he would be provided for. The Committee, considering the said Thomas Harriot to be a dangerous person, do request that the Provincial Congress may acquaint them if they think he ought to be suffered to go at large, as he is now in the custody of the guards.

Extracts from the Minutes: JOSEPH WINTER, Secretary.

approve or disapprove of such a practice. The officers tell me that not less than four or five hundred stand of arms have gone by the camp within a few days. I have given orders to stop all for the future, until I know your pleasure.

"Believe me to be, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

"NATHANAEL GREENE."

Ordered, That Mr. Jay and Mr. Morris be a Committee to prepare a draft of an Answer to General Greene's Letter.

New-York, June 6, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of this day, with the prisoners mentioned in it, have been safely delivered to this Congress. They direct me to return you their thanks for your vigilance on this occasion, and assure you that a continuance of the same attention will be exceedingly agreeable to them. They are alarmed at being informed that so great a number of arms have been carried into the country; and, as they passed in view of the camp, regret they were not detained, and the persons concerned in it apprehended. Should you be able to discover where the arms you allude to are deposited, or the persons who have been or may be concerned in that or the like business, they authorize and request you to take them and the arms found with them into custody, and send them under a proper guard to this Congress, and the names of the witnesses against them.

I am, very respectfully. By order.

To Brigadier-General Greene.

Ordered, That a copy of the preceding Letter be engrossed and signed by the President, and transmitted to General Greene by the Officer who was the bearer of General Greene's Letter.

Mr. John Livingston, Jun., sent to this Congress under a guard from the said Committee of Jamaica, was called in and heard. He produced a furlough* from Major Bleecker, of this City, for eight days from the date, and dated the 1st of June, and says he had another furlough prior to this. He acknowledges that he knew of the time appointed for the persons who had removed from New-York to Jamaica to show their furloughs to the Committee; that he knew it at least two or three days before the time appointed for that purpose; that he was not at home at the last time appointed, having on that day rode out of town. He further acknowledges that he never showed either of the said furloughs to any of the Committee at Jamaica, or informed either of them that he had any furlough. Thereupon, the following entry of the case, and determination, were unanimously agreed to, viz:

Whereas John Livingston, Jun., an inhabitant of the City of New-York, having been ordered by the Committee of Jamaica to repair to the said City of New-York, pursuant to a Resolution of the last Provincial Congress for that purpose, or produce a certificate from a Field-Officer of a Regiment to which he belonged, and not producing any such furlough to the said Committee, was sent under a guard to the Congress: And whereas the said John Livingston, Jun., on being examined by this Congress, confesses that at the time he was called upon as aforesaid by the said Committee he had a furlough from a Field-Officer of the Regiment to which he belonged, but did not produce it:

Resolved, That the said John Livingston, Junior, has treated the said Committee of Jamaica with contempt, and that they did right in sending him to the Congress in manner aforesaid; and, therefore, that the said John Livingston ought humbly to ask pardon of the said Committee for his said offence, and to pay all the expenses incurred by his being sent down as aforesaid; and that on his giving his parole of honour to this Congress to execute and perform this Resolution, he be discharged.

Whereupon, the said John Livingston, Jun., was called into Congress, and the foregoing Resolution being read to him, and he being asked whether he would perform what is required of him in the said Resolution, he answered that he would perform such part of the said Resolution as relates to paying the expenses incurred by his being sent down as

The bearer hereof, Mr. John Livingston, Jun., belonging to Captain Van Duersen's Company of the First Regiment of the City Militia of New-York, has leave of absence from his corps for eight days from the date hereof; but is to return immediately upon an alarm or invasion of this place.

ANTHONY L. BLEECKER,

Major to First Regiment of City Militia of New-York.

aforesaid; but that he would not ask pardon of the said Committee,

Therefore, Resolved, That the said John Livingston, Jun., be committed to close custody.

And Ordered, That the Officer in whose custody the said John Livingston, Jun., now is, be requested safely to convey said Livingston to the Jail in this City, and deliver him up to Daniel Goldsmith, Jailer, who is hereby directed and required to keep him in close custody until the further order of this Congress.

Two Members from the General Committee of New-York having attended, to request an explanation or removal of some difficulties which appear to the said General Committee in the late Resolutions of this Congress for an election of Members to form a plan or Constitution of Government for this Colony,

Ordered, That Mr. Scott and Mr. Jay be a Committee of this Congress to go to the General Committee and explain those Resolutions, and endeavour to remove the difficulties which appear to the said General Committee.

A draft of a Letter to the President of the Convention of the Dominion of Virginia was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 6, 1776.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 22d ultimo, covering a copy of the resolve of the Convention of Virginia relative to Independence, which were immediately communicated to the Congress of this Colony, and will be considered by them with all the deliberation due to the importance of the subject. They have directed me to request the favour of you to convey their thanks to the Convention of Virginia for this mark of their attention, and to assure them that the Congress of this Colony will invariably adopt and pursue every measure which may tend to promote the union and secure the rights and happiness of the United Colonies.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant.

By order.

To the Hon. Edmund Pendleton, Esq.

9 ho. Friday morning, June 7, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Jay, Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Hallett, Mr. Randall, Colonel Broome.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Ten Broeck.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Schenck, Mr. Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Gelston.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Colonel G. Drake, Colonel L. Graham, Major Lockwood, Captain Fleming.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Leffertse, Mr. Remsen.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Mr. Van Wyck.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Cortelyou, Mr. Conner.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

It was represented to the Congress that Henry Dawkins, one of the Prisoners in the City Hall, is injured by his irons so that his legs swell.

Ordered, That Captain Wool be, and he is, hereby, authorized and requested to have the irons taken off Henry Dawkins.

A Letter from the Hon. John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress, was received and read, and is in the words following:

"Philadelphia, June 4, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: Our affairs are hastening fast to a crisis, and the approaching campaign will, in all probability, determine forever the fate of America. Such is the unrelenting spirit which possesses the tyrant of Britain and his Parliament, that they have left no measure untried that had a tendency to accomplish our destruction. Not satisfied with having lined our coasts with ships of war to starve us into a surrender of our liberties, and to prevent us from being supplied with arms and ammunition, they are now about to pour in a number of foreign troops, who, from their want of connections and those feelings of sympathy which frequently bind together the different parts of the same empire, will be more likely to do the business of their masters without remorse or compunction.

"By the best intelligence from Canada, it appears that our affairs in that quarter wear a melancholy aspect. Should the Indians and Canadians take up arms against us, (which there is too much reason to fear,) we shall then have the whole force of that country to contend with, joined to that of Great Britain and all her foreign auxiliaries. In this situation, what steps must we pursue? The Continental troops alone are unable to stem the torrent, nor is it possible at this day to raise and discipline men ready to take the field by the time they will be wanted.

"From the secrecy with which the Ministry carry on their machinations, we neither know their views or how near our enemies may be; perhaps at this moment they are landing on some part of our country. In this difficult and trying situation of our affairs, the Congress have come to the enclosed resolves, which I have it in command to transmit you by express, containing matters of the greatest importance, and to which I beg leave to request your attention. You will there find the Congress have judged it necessary to call upon the Militia at this alarming crisis.

"Should the United Colonies be able to keep their ground this campaign, I am under no apprehensions on account of any future one. We have many disadvantages at present to struggle with, which time and progress in the art of war will remove. But this circumstance should arouse us to superior exertions on the occasion. The Militia of the United Colonies are a body of troops that may be depended upon. To their virtue their Delegates in Congress now make the most solemn appeal. They are called upon to say whether they will live slaves or die freemen; they are requested to step forth to defend their wives, their children, their liberty, and everything they hold dear. Their cause is certainly a most glorious one, and I trust every man in the Colony of New-York is determined to see it gloriously ended, or perish in the ruins of it. In short, on your exertions at this critical period, together with those of the other Colonies in the common cause, the salvation of America now evidently depends. Your Colony, I am persuaded, will not be behindhand. Exert, therefore, every nerve to distinguish yourselves. Quickened your preparations, and stimulate the good people of your Government, and there is no danger, notwithstanding the mighty armament with which we are threatened, but they will be led on to victory, to liberty, and to happiness.

"I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"To the Honourable the Convention of New-York."

The Resolutions of the Continental Congress, received in Mr. Hancock's Letter, were also read, and are in the words following, to wit:

"In Congress, June 1, 1776.

"Resolved, That six thousand Militia be employed to reinforce the Army in Canada, and to keep up the communication with that Province. And, to make up that number,

"Resolved, That the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay be requested to supply of their Militia 3,000—4 Battalions,
Connecticut of their Militia - - - 1,500—2 Battalions,
New-Hampshire of their Militia - - - 750—1 Battalion,
New-York of their Militia - - - 750—1 Battalion.

6,000—8 Battalions.

"JUNE 3, 1776.—Resolved, That the General be empowered to employ in Canada a number of Indians not exceeding two thousand.

"That thirteen thousand eight hundred Militia be employed to reinforce the Army at New-York. To complete which number,

"That the General Assembly of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay, the Governour and Assembly of Connecticut, the Conventions of New-York and New-Jersey, and the several Conventions of such other of the United Colonies in which there are any Lead-Mines, be requested to transmit to Congress, with all convenient despatch, the state and condition of the Lead-Mines in their respective Colonies, and use the most speedy means to procure their being wrought to effect.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

"June 4, 1776.

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the Assemblies and Conventions of the Colonies requested to supply or furnish Militia by the Resolutions of yesterday, to take particular care that the Militia come provided with Arms, Accoutrements, and Camp-Kettles.

"By order of Congress:

"JOHN HANCOCK, President."

The Congress conceive it necessary, towards carrying these Resolutions of the Continental Congress into execution, to appoint a Brigadier-General and a Major of Brigade of the Militia of Westchester County; and Lewis Morris, Esq., being thought the most proper person for a Brigadier-General of the Militia of that County, and having been recommended by the County Committee for that purpose, and Lewis Morris, Jun., Esq., having been also formerly recommended by the said Committee for an appointment to be the Major of Brigade of the Militia of that County,

"Resolved, That Lewis Morris, Esq., be appointed Brigadier-General of the Militia of the County of Westchester, and that Lewis Morris, Jun., Esq., be appointed Major of Brigade of the Militia of the said County.

And Ordered, That the Secretaries engross their respective Commissions, and that the same respectively be signed by the President and attested by the Secretaries, and sent to those gentlemen with all possible despatch.

Ordered, That the appointment of a Brigadier-General for the Militia of the New-York Brigade be postponed till to-morrow.

The consideration of the said Resolutions of the Contimental Congress of the 1st, 3d, and 4th days of June instant, was then resumed, and the same being deliberately read by paragraphs,

"Resolved, That this Congress do agree to the same, and will comply with the Resolutions therein contained, as far forth as they concern this Colony.

"Resolved, That the said Resolutions of the Continental Congress (except that relating to the Lead-Mines, on which subject a Committee was some days ago appointed) be referred to a Committee, to report a plan, in their opinion, most eligible to carry those Resolutions into execution.

That the said Committee consist of the following gentlemen, to wit:

Mr. Scott, Colonel Broome, Mr. John Ten Broeck, Mr. James Livingston, Colonel L. Graham, Mr. Strong, Colonel Hasbrouck, Mr. Haring, Mr. Little, Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. Webster, Mr. Conner, Mr. Moore, Mr. Leffertse; and that they report with all convenient speed.

Ordered, That the Committee for Lead-Mines report to-morrow morning.

"Resolved, That Gouverneur Morris, Esquire, one of the Members of this Congress, be sent to Philadelphia, to apply to the Congress of the United Colonies, and endeavour to obtain such a resolution of that body as may establish an equality of Pay for the Militia and Troops of this Colony, called into actual service, with those of the Eastern Colonies, either by raising the pay to be allowed to the inhabitants of this Colony, or reducing the pay allowed to those of the Eastern Colonies.

Ordered, That Mr. Jay and Mr. Morris be a Committee to prepare a draft of a Letter on that subject to the Delegates of this Colony at Continental Congress, and that they report with all convenient speed.

Die Veneris, 4 ho. P. M., June 7, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Colonel Malcom, Mr. Webster.

A draft of a Letter to the Honourable John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress, in answer to his of the 4th instant, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 7, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 4th of June instant, enclosing certain important resolves of the honourable the Continental Congress of the 1st, 3d, and 4th instant, was delivered to me this morning, and immediately communicated to the Convention of this Colony. They have directed me to present to the Congress their warmest acknowledgment for the unwearied attention they have paid to the welfare and happiness of the United Colonies, and to assure them that this Colony will most cheerfully endeavour to comply with all their requisitions.

Persuaded that the pay allowed to the Eastern Army during the last campaign was unreasonably high, this Convention received great satisfaction from the measures taken by the Congress, as they supposed, with a view to reduce it. The inferior allowance of pay given to the troops raised in this Colony, and those of New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, and the lower Counties, was considered as a precedent, which would soon become general; and it was expected that the patriotism and laudable pride of the other Colonies would not long permit them to accept higher wages than their neighbours for fighting in the same glorious cause, and for the attainment of the same great and valuable objects.

This Convention are most sensibly affected by the continuance of that discrimination; and though ready to consent to a still greater reduction of pay, provided it be general, yet a due regard to the honour of this Colony will no longer permit them, by a silent acquiescence in so odious a discrimination, to give posterity reason to conclude that it was established on just and proper principles. This Convention readily confess the merit of the Eastern forces, but as yet have no reason to believe it exceeds that of the troops raised in the other Colonies; and, therefore, claim of the Congress, as a matter of justice, that they be put on one general footing. It would neither be wise nor honest to conceal from the Congress the discontents that have arisen from the continuance of this invidious distinction. They are too great and too general not to injure the service, and therefore merit the notice and attention of those who alone can remove them.

By this unfortunate circumstance the levies of this Colony have been, and in all probability will continue to be, retarded; and there is now a great number of the inhabitants of this Colony, invited by higher pay, actually bearing arms in the New-England Regiments.

The resolves received this morning have been considered, and a Committee appointed to ascertain the quotas of men to be furnished by the different Counties, in order to complete the number required of this Colony, which Committee hath made report on that subject, and the said report been considered of and agreed to; but it appearing from those resolves, that although large detachments from the Militia of several other Colonies are also required for the service, yet there is an utter silence as to the quantum of pay to be allowed them, this Convention, being unable further to proceed in this business, are under the necessity of ordering one of their members, Mr. Gouverneur Morris, to repair immediately to Philadelphia, in order to obtain from the Congress information on that head, and whether the same difference of wages now unhappily subsisting between the regular troops is to be extended to the Militia of the several Colonies. Should that be the case, this Colony will be exceedingly embarrassed; for while the regard due to its honour is suffered to clash with the regard due to the general cause, there is reason to fear its exertions will be feeble, and the harmony and mutual confidence of the Colonies probably diminished.

The Convention, therefore, earnestly request the favour of the Congress speedily to dismiss Mr. Morris, they being very desirous of forming their regiments of Militia without delay.

I am directed, sir, by the Convention, to return you their thanks for your polite letter, and to assure you that they consider the remarks and exhortations contained in it as additional proofs of that zeal which you have ever manifested for the American cause.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant. By order:

NATHANIEL WOODHULL, President.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

The Report of a Committee was then read and agreed to, and is in the words and figures following, to wit:

"In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 7, 1776.

"Your Committee, appointed for that purpose, having deliberately considered the Resolves of the Continental Congress of the 1st, 3d, and 4th instant, for raising a body of Militia for the defence of the Colonies in the present campaign, do report: That we have extracted from the said Resolves such parts thereof as immediately relate to this Colony, which are in substance as follows, to wit:

"It appears that 13,800 Militia from the different Colonies are destined to reinforce the Army at New-York; that 750 of the Militia of this Colony are to be levied for the Canada service, and that 3,000 is the proportion allotted to this Colony of the 13,800 who are to reinforce the Army at New-York; that the Militia are to be engaged to the 1st of December next, unless sooner discharged by the Continental Congress—their pay to commence from the day of their marching, with allowance of one penny, lawful money, per mile for their subsistence, in lieu of rations, and one day's pay for every twenty miles between home and rendezvous, going and returning.

"That one Brigadier-General be appointed by this Congress.

"That this Congress take particular care that the Militia come well provided with arms and accoutrements and camp-kettles.

"Of the 3,000 Militia of this Colony destined to reinforce the Army at New-York, your Committee are of opinion that the following quotas be levied out of the several Counties, to wit:

The City and County of New-York..... 1,200

[Those to consist of the two Independent Battalions, to be filled up to the complement of two Battalions by three hundred men, Officers included, from the quotas of the other Counties. The Field-Officers to be nominated out of the City and County of New-York, and the present Officers of the said two Battalions, or such Officers of the City and County of New-York, under the degree of Field-Officers, as are necessary to be provided for, in the proportion of 12 to 3.]

Richmond .....	57
King's .....	58
Queen's .....	175
Suffolk .....	200
Westchester .....	300
Dutchess .....	335
Orange .....	200
Ulster .....	300
Albany .....	600
Tryon .....	75
Charlotte .....	50
Cumberland .....	125
Gloucester .....	75

Total.....3,750

"To make up the 750 to reinforce the Army in Canada, as follows, to wit:

Albany .....	425
Tryon .....	75
Charlotte .....	50
Cumberland .....	125
Gloucester .....	75

Makes..... 750

"Therefore there remains of the quota of

Albany .....	175
New-York .....	1,200
Richmond .....	57
King's .....	58
Queen's .....	175
Suffolk .....	200
Westchester .....	300
Dutchess .....	335
Orange .....	200
Ulster .....	300

Makes for reinforcing the Army at New-York...3,000

"The 3,750 men to be divided into five Battalions of 750 men each, and each Battalion into ten Companies, Officers included, except Field and Staff-Officers; each Battalion to have 1 Colonel, 1 Lieutenant-Colonel, 1 Major, 1 Adjutant, 1 Quartermaster, 1 Surgeon, and 1 Surgeon's Mate; and each Company to consist of 1 Captain, 2 Lieutenants, 3 Sergeants, 3 Corporals, 1 Drummer, 1 Fifer, and 64 Privates, and 2 Chaplains to the four Battalions destined for reinforcing the Army at New-York, and 1 Chaplain for the Battalion destined for Canada.

"The Officers for the 3,750 men, your Committee submit, to be appointed by this Congress.

"Your Committee further beg leave to report, that it will, in their opinion, highly promote the publick service to raise the quotas of Militia by Volunteers; and, to that end, as the discrimination hitherto made between the New-York and New-England Troops, not employed in the Canada service, is exceedingly odious, and greatly discourages levies in the Colony of New-York, your Committee are, therefore, of opinion, that the pay of each Private be fixed at 53s. 4d. per month, New-York currency, unless the Continental Congress shall think proper to reduce the pay of the New-England Troops, not employed in the Canada service, to an equality with the troops of this Colony who are not employed in that service. That the most strenuous efforts be made to induce the Continental Congress to agree to such increase or reduction.

"And whereas, by the Resolutions aforesaid, it is required that the men so as aforesaid to be raised by this Colony, be well provided with arms, accoutrements, and camp-kettles, your Committee do further report it as their opinion, that it will be proper to complete the number of arms from the Militia of the respective Counties, which shall remain after forming the aforesaid Battalions; and that the Provincial Commissary be ordered to provide, at the expense of this Colony, such camp-kettles as shall be necessary for the purposes aforesaid."

Resolved, That this Congress do agree with the Committee in their said Report, and that it be deemed, and esteemed, and taken in all things, as a Resolve and Order of this Congress.

Die Sabbati, 9 ho. A. M., June 8, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Jay, Mr. Van Zandt, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Colonel Broome, Mr. Sands, Mr. Philip Livingston.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Leffertse.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn, Mr. Ten Broeck.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little, Mr. Van Houten.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Gelston.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. DeLavernne, Mr. James Livingston, Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel Gilbert Drake, Colonel L. Graham, Major Lockwood, Mr. Morris.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Doctor Morgan, Director-General of the Continental Hospital, attending, was admitted. He applied for the Medicine in the care of Doctor Treat, for the use of the Continental Hospital, on paying the price of them.

Ordered, That Colonel Broome and Colonel Graham be a Committee to take this application into consideration, and report thereon with all convenient speed.

Mr. William Bedlow, attending, informed the Congress that Lord Stirling had ordered an additional Barrack to be erected in the Highlands, and Mr. Bedlow requests to know whether it is the sense of this Congress that the Commissioners execute those orders.

Ordered, That Mr. Bedlow wait on his Excellency General Washington, and inform him of Lord Stirling's direction, and that Mr. Bedlow and the other Commissioners take all their future directions from the General respecting those Fortifications and the Works or Buildings to be there erected, and from what funds the future expense of those Works shall be defrayed.

Mr. Bedlow informed the Congress that the Commissioners had been put to some expense in entertaining a Committee of the Continental Congress, and other gentlemen passing and repassing the Fortifications, and requests to know whether any allowance will be made for the same.

Mr. Bedlow is desired to apply to the General for an answer.

Colonel McDougall, attending, was admitted. He informed the Congress that, by the Resolutions of Congress, the Recruiting Officers are to have ten shillings per man for recruiting, without specifying the currency; that there is a particular Resolution for the purpose; that Officers of the Jersey and Pennsylvania Battalions have received 1½ Dollar; and he requested to know whether his orders in favour of his Officers will receive the like payment.

Ordered, That Colonel McDougall send a Return of his Regiment to this Congress, and a copy of the Resolution of Congress referred to.

Jonathan Baker and Stephen Fountain, charged and convicted by the Joint Committees of Brookhaven, Manor of St. George, and Patentship of Meritches, of being enemies to their country, and, as such, of having taken up arms and held correspondence with our enemies on board of the Ministerial Ships of War, and very much promoted discord amongst the inhabitants, and seduced many to forsake the cause of their country, were sent to this Congress.

Resolved, That the said Jonathan Baker and Stephen Fountain be committed to close custody.

And Ordered, That Daniel Goldsmith, the Jailer, be, and he is hereby, directed and requested to receive and keep them in safe custody until the further order of this Congress.

A draft of a Letter to the Chairman of the Committee of Brookhaven, &c., was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

SIR: Lieutenant William Clarke, in pursuance of an order of the Joint Committees of Brookhaven, Manor of St. George, and the Patentship of Meritches, has delivered to this Congress Jonathan Baker and Stephen Fountain, whom they have committed to safe custody. The Congress much approves of the determination of the Committees of New-Haven, not to receive the said prisoners, it being the proper business of every Colony to regulate their own internal concerns without the aid or interference of other Colonies, unless on a sudden and great emergency, or when duly requested.

I am directed to desire your Committees to transmit to this Congress the affidavits and examinations (or certified copies of them) now in their custody, which relate to the said prisoners.

I am, sir, your obedient servant.

By order.

To Josiah Smith, Esquire, Brookhaven.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, and transmitted.

Colonel Broome, from the Committee appointed this morning to take into consideration the application of Doctor Morgan, delivered in their Report, which was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

New-York, June 8, 1776.

Your Committee, to whom was referred Doctor Morgan's application respecting the Medicine belonging to this Colony in Doctor Treat's possession, report, that from the best information they have obtained, Doctor Morgan is in want of sundry necessary Medicines for the use of the Continental Army in this City; that, therefore, in their opinion, one-half of the Medicine in quantity and kind, in Doctor Treat's hands as aforesaid, may, without danger of injury to the inhabitants of this Colony, be disposed of to Doctor Morgan for the use aforesaid, which is nevertheless submitted.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN BROOME, Chairman.

Resolved, That this Congress do agree with their Committee in the said Report, and that one moiety of those Medicines, in quantity and kind, be sold and delivered for cash to Doctor Morgan, for the use mentioned in the said Report.

Mr. Haring delivered to the Chair the Affidavits of three persons, to wit: Jacobus Ver Verlen, James Ramsay, and John Montanye, sworn before Mr. Alderman Brasher; which were read and filed. It thereby appears that there is a defection in Bergen County, in or near the English Neighbourhood; that two Companies refused to turn out any Volunteers, or be drafted to supply any part of the Militia ordered to join the Army; that the said two Companies were loudly riotous in favour of Ministerial measures, and against the Continental measures.

Ordered, That copies of those Affidavits be transmitted to the Congress of the Colony of New-Jersey.

Thereupon, a draft of a Letter for that purpose to the President of the Congress of New-Jersey, was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

SIR: The Congress of this Colony have directed me to transmit the enclosed copies of Affidavits to you. They respect a defection which appears to subsist in Bergen County, and which, unless suppressed very speedily, will probably increase.

I am, sir, your very humble servant.

By order.

To Samuel Tucker, Esq., President of the Congress of the Colony of New-Jersey.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, and transmitted.

A Return of Officers of Militia duly elected for the Township of Flushing, in Queen's County, on the 20th of May last, which Return is dated the 6th June instant, and signed by John Talman, Chairman, was read and filed. It is thereby certified that Nathaniel Tom was elected Captain, and Mathew Van Dyke First Lieutenant, Jeffry Hicks Second Lieutenant, and Nicholas Van Dyke Ensign; and that the said election was duly held, in the presence of Thomas Thorne and Edward Pinfold, Inspectors, and two of the Committee.

Ordered, That Commissions issue for those gentlemen in the offices to which they are respectively elected.

The Committee who were appointed to report on the several Lead-Mines on which Essays have been made in this Colony, delivered in their Report; which was twice read. They thereby report that the Lead-Mine in the Oblong, in Dutchess County, is the most likely to be valuable, and that, in their opinion, it merits the attention of this Congress, so far as to be at the expense of clearing the old pits and endeavouring to obtain a certainty of the quality of the oar.

So far the House agrees with their Committee in the said Report.

Ordered, That Colonel Malcom apply to Mr. Erskine, as a proper person, to know if he would attend to that Mine a short time, to examine its value and quality, and the prospect of success in working it.

Ordered, That Mr. Scott, Mr. Glenn, and Mr. Haring, be a Committee to draw Instructions for raising the Detachment of Militia to be furnished by this Colony, and to report thereon with all convenient speed.

Die Sabbati, 6 ho. P. M., June 8, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Sands, Colonel Broome, Major Van Zandt, Colonel Stoutenburgh.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Haring, Mr. Van Houten.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Tredwell.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. J. Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Schenck.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Samuel Townshend, Mr. James Townshend, Mr. Lawrence.

Ordered, That Captain Hamilton furnish such a Guard as may be necessary to guard the Provincial Gunpowder.

And if Captain Hamilton should stand in need of any Tents for that purpose:

Ordered, That Colonel Curtenius furnish him with Tents for that Guard.

And Ordered, further, That Captain Hamilton furnish daily six of his best Cartridge-Makers, to work and assist in that business at the Store or Laboratory, under the care of Mr. Norwood, the Commissary.

Ordered, that ———, a sister of Israel and Isaac Youngs, be permitted to speak to her brothers this afternoon, only in the presence and hearing of the Officer of the Guard.

Mr. Scott, from the Committee appointed this morning to draw Instructions for raising a Detachment of Militia, brought in the Report of the said Committee; which he read in his place, and delivered in at the Table, where the same was again read.

Ordered, That the further consideration thereof be postponed.

A Letter from Ezekiel Hawley, Chairman of the Committee of Salem, in Westchester County, was read and filed, and is in the words following, to wit:

“To the Hon. the Provincial Congress of NEW-YORK:

“The Committee of Salem, in Westchester County, have the unhappiness of having a large number of the inhabitants very much opposed to the measures of the United Colonies, and numbers of them are determined not to comply with nor adopt the doings of the Congress, which make a great deal of trouble for said Committee. Said Committee have advertised some, obliged others to give bonds—some of one or two hundred pounds, some of whom have forfeited their bonds and run off, and have made considerable cost (one in particular) in sending after him. We desire to know what shall be done with the forfeitures, and likewise how to proceed in taking of it, and how to turn it into money if taken in stock or whatever else, or whether or no the Congress will not take the forfeitures and pay the cost. We desire you would give us some rule and directions how to proceed; and likewise those men that still behave inimical, and put the Committee to so much trouble, whether or no we might not take cost of them, to pay us what is reasonable for our time, for we grow weary of being called together to deal with Tories; that has been our whole business ever since we have been formed as a Committee; it has cost me, in particular, not less than six hundred miles riding, and, I believe, at a moderate guess, twenty or thirty dollars in cash, and I never yet expected pay; but I find I cannot live so, and if the Tories make all the trouble, why ought they not to pay all the cost? Gentlemen, we only want orders from you to take it. We have sent Mr. Benjamin Chapman, one of the members of this Committee, to you, praying of you to send us some directions on this important affair.

“By order of the Committee:

“June 5, 1776.”

Resolved, That the thanks of this Congress be presented to his Excellency General Washington, for the important service he has rendered to the United Colonies, and for the attention he has paid to the interest and civil authority of this Colony, and that he be assured of the readiness of this Congress to afford him all the aid in their power to enable him to execute the important trust reposed in him.

Ordered, That the President wait on General Washington, and communicate to him the foregoing Resolution.

Sunday morning, June 9, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Colonel Broome, Mr. Beekman, Mr. Van Cortlandt, Mr. Sands, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Captain Denning.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Haring, Mr. Little.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel G. Drake, Colonel L. Graham, Mr. Lockwood.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Tredwell, Mr. Gelston, Mr. Strong.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. P. Schenck, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Livingston.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Mr. Tredwell took the general oath of secrecy.

A draft of an Answer to the Letter from Ezekiel Hawley, Chairman of the Committee of Salem, in Westchester County, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 9, 1776.

SIR: Your letter by Mr. Chapman, of the 5th instant, was laid before the Congress, who are of opinion the contents require the most serious consideration, and have directed me to acquaint you that whenever several matters of importance for the general defence and preservation of the Colony, now under consideration, are despatched, the Committee of Salem may be assured a proper attention will be paid to their application, the Congress not doubting that the Committee will still persevere with zeal in the cause of their country. By order.

To Ezekiel Hawley, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Salem, Westchester.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, and transmitted.

The President reported that he had waited on his Excellency General Washington, and communicated to him the Resolution of yesterday, to which his Excellency returned the following Answer:

“GENTLEMEN: I am extremely obliged for the high sense you entertain of my services, and for your promise of every possible assistance in the discharge of my important duty.

You may rest assured that every attention to the interest and happiness of this Colony shall not be wanting, nor my regard to its civil authority remitted whilst I am honoured with the command I now hold."

Sunday afternoon, June 9, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. Van Cortlandt, Mr. Denning, Mr. Van Zandt, Mr. Sands, Colonel Broome, Colonel Stoutenburgh.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Livingston, Mr. P. Schenck, Mr. De Lavergne.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Tredwell.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Haring.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel G. Drake, Colonel L. Graham, Major Lockwood.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

The Report of the Committee for raising a Detachment of Militia was taken up; and after some time spent in the consideration thereof, the same was agreed to, in the words following, to wit:

Your Committee appointed for taking into consideration Regulations and Instructions for raising the detachments of Militia to reinforce the Army at New-York and that in Canada, do report: That they have maturely considered the matter referred to them, and think it necessary to report the following Regulations for the more orderly and despatchful levy of the Militia destined to reinforce the Continental Army in this City and that in Canada, to wit:

As it is evident that the nature of the service hereby provided for requires the utmost despatch, this House do recommend it to the several Counties to furnish their respective quotas with all possible expedition. And as it would by no means be proper to leave it to the discretion of the different Counties, your Committee do advise that this Congress earnestly recommend that the several levies to be made in the different parts of this Colony, from without the City and County of New-York, for the purpose of reinforcing the Army at New-York, begin their respective marches to the City of New-York, unless the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army should order them to march to some other place, at the latest on the several days hereafter mentioned: those of King's County and Richmond County on the 15th instant; those of Westchester and Queen's County on the 17th instant; those of Orange on the 19th instant; those of Dutchess, Ulster, and Suffolk, on the 21st instant; and those of the County of Albany on the 23d.

2dly. That those of the City and County of New-York be ready for parade and review on the 14th instant.

3dly. That though your Committee are of opinion that the several levies above mentioned if consisting of volunteers, would be most advancive of the publick service, yet they conceive that the said levies ought, at all events, to be made with the utmost despatch. For which reason your Committee do advise that each detachment in the several respective Counties, except New-York, be mustered two days before the respective days of their march; and that of New-York two days before the day of their parade and review. And that the deficiency of volunteers in each quota, on such days, ought respectively to be completed by drafts, to be ascertained by casting lots; and that to this end the several Commanding Officers do assemble on such day their respective battalions.

4thly. That the rank and number of the officers which are to command the respective detachments be fixed by this Congress. That it be recommended to the Commanding Officer of each battalion out of which any detachment is to be made, on or before the day of muster, and with the assistance of the sub-Committee or sub-Committees, to procure volunteer officers of such battalions, under the degree of Field-Officers, to command such detachment of volunteers as can be had before the day of muster, and if not, to select them on that day by casting lots; and that such officers thus selected, either by volunteers or by casting lots, be the officers to command the detachment; and if a detachment should consist of men belonging to different battalions, the several Commanding Officers, with the several sub-Committees within whose district such detachment shall be, shall so proportion the officers, as to rank and number, according to the number from each battalion who form such detachment; and if too great a number of officers shall offer their services as volunteers, that it be determined by casting of lots, for the honour of the service.

5thly. That in case of detaching by draft, every drafted non-commissioned officer and private be permitted to supply an able-bodied man in his room, so that such indulgence do not retard the march of the detachment.

6thly. That care be taken that, at the respective times of the commencement of such marches respectively from the other Counties, and at the time of such parade as aforesaid in New-York, each detachment be completely provided with arms, accoutrements, and ammunition, as directed by the regulations for the Militia; and to that end that their deficiencies in those particulars, if any such there be, be made up from that of the other men belonging to their respective battalions, either by purchase, to be deducted out of the pay of the several persons detached who shall be thus provided for march or parade, or by loan, as the respective owners shall choose, they to be secured in that case for return in good order to such respective owners, by an allowance on valuation out of the pay of the persons respectively who shall thus be provided for their march or parade; and in case of loss or injury, and there be not sufficiency of pay due and in arrear to the person to recompense the owner to whom the loss or injury shall happen, in such case the recompense to be made by the Colony. For which purpose just valuation shall be made by the sub-Committees through whose District each brigade shall extend; and the Brigadier-General of the brigade of a general muster shall be had for the purpose, or by the commanding officer of each battalion, and the proper District Committee or Committees, if such general muster shall not be had. And it is further advised that it be recommended to the Brigadier-General of each brigade, or, in his absence, to the next commanding officer, and the several County Committees to whose respective Districts such brigades shall respectively extend, to determine whether such muster as aforesaid shall be held in brigades or battalions; and that the Brigadier-General and the County Committees of such musters shall be made in brigade, preside over, direct, and conduct the making of such detachments aforesaid, and the valuation of arms as aforesaid; and if the said detachments shall be made in battalions, then such presidency, direction, and conduct, to be in the commanding officer of the battalion, and the District Committee or Committees; and that all questions in the execution of the matters so submitted to the presidency, direction, and conduct, respectively, be determined by a majority of voices, and being thus done and transacted, report under their hands be made by them thereof, as well as of the respective detachments to be directed to the Brigadier-General to be appointed by this Congress for the command of the detachments of Militia of the Colony of New-York, destined to reinforce the Continental Army at New-York, and to be transmitted to him by the hands of the commanding officer of each detachment respectively.

7thly. That, to this end, this Congress immediately do, in pursuance of the Resolve of the Continental Congress, nominate and appoint such Brigadier as aforesaid.

8thly. That it be committed to the care of the Brigadier-General and General Committees, and other Commanding Officers and District Committees, as aforesaid, respectively, to give proper orders for the regular and despatchful march of the several detachments, either by land or by water, as will best expedite the arrival of the several detachments at New-York.

9thly. That the necessary despatches for the purpose of expediting the raising the aforesaid detachments destined to join the Army at New-York, be made by the said Brigadier-General, so to be appointed by this Congress, to the respective Counties in this Colony, either by express or otherwise, as he shall think proper, at the publick expense of this Colony, and that he transmit therewith copies of the Resolutions and Proceedings of this Congress relative to the said detachments.

10thly. That in forming the detachments above-mentioned, the Minute Battalions, as well officers as privates, ought to be considered as part of the common Militia.

11thly. That the detachments to join the Army in Canada be formed in one battalion, and that the making the said detachments, in the manner above directed, be committed to the care of the different County Committees, and the Brigadier-General of Albany and Tryon, and the march of the said battalion, either in body or detachments, shall be on such day or days respectively as the said Brigadier of Albany and Tryon, and the said General Committees of the Counties wherein such detachments are to be levied, shall, by majority of voices, be determined, provided always that the last day of such march does not exceed the first day of July next.

12thly. That all returns as aforesaid, respecting the said battalion, be respectively made in manner aforesaid to this Congress.

Lastly. For the encouragement of all privates who shall be employed in the aforesaid service, your Committee do advise that it be resolved by this Congress that, in case the Continental Congress do not increase their pay from 40s. to 53s. 4d., current lawful money of this Colony, that this Congress will make full provision for such increase.

Resolved and Ordered, That the aforesaid Report stand confirmed; and that it be deemed, esteemed, and taken in all things, as a Resolve and Order of this Congress.

The Congress having taken into consideration the appointment of a Brigadier-General to take the command of the three thousand of the Militia of the Colony of New-York, destined, by the Resolve of the Continental Congress of the 3d instant, to reinforce the Army at New-York:

Resolved and Ordered, That John Morin Scott be, and he is hereby, nominated and appointed Brigadier-General of the said three thousand of the Militia of this Colony.

And it is hereby Ordered, That a Commission be signed by the President for this purpose, and issued accordingly.

The detachments from Queen's, King's, and Richmond Counties, to be joined to, and make part of the two battalions of the City and County of New-York; that two Captains, three First Lieutenants, and two Second Lieutenants, be appointed in Queen's County; that one Captain and one Second Lieutenant be appointed in King's County; and that one Captain and one Second Lieutenant be appointed in Richmond County.

Resolved, That the rank and number of Officers in the said three thousand Militia destined to reinforce the Army at New-York, be as follows, to wit:

That there be appointed in Westchester County one Colonel, four Captains, four First Lieutenants, and four Second Lieutenants.

That there be appointed in Suffolk County one Lieutenant-Colonel, three Captains, two First Lieutenants, and three Second Lieutenants.

That there be appointed in Orange County one Major, three Captains, two First Lieutenants, and three Second Lieutenants.

That the detachments from the three last-mentioned Counties, with such addition as is hereafter mentioned, be one battalion.

That there be appointed in the County of Dutchess one Colonel, four Captains, five First Lieutenants, and four Second Lieutenants.

That there be appointed in Ulster County one Lieutenant-Colonel, four Captains, four First Lieutenants, and four Second Lieutenants.

That there be appointed in Albany County one Major, two Captains, three First Lieutenants, and two Second Lieutenants.

That one First Lieutenant, one Sergeant, one Corporal, and twenty-two Privates, from Albany County, be joined to the detachment of Orange County; that one First Lieutenant, one Sergeant, one Corporal, and twenty-two Privates, from Dutchess County, be joined to the detachment of Suffolk County; that a Sergeant and nine Privates, from the detachment of Dutchess County, be added to the two battalions of New-York; that the detachment of one hundred and seventy-five men from Albany, and the detachments from Dutchess and Ulster Counties, (excepting those directed to be joined to the detachments of Orange and Suffolk, and to the battalions of New-York;) be one separate battalion.

A draft of a Commission to John Morin Scott, as Brigadier-General, was read and approved of, as follows, viz:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 9, 1776.

To JOHN MORIN SCOTT, Esquire, Greeting:

Whereas the Continental Congress, by their Resolutions of the 1st and 3d day of June instant, did, among other things, in substance, resolve that the Colony of New-York be requested to furnish three thousand of their Militia to reinforce the Army at New-York, to be engaged to the 1st day of December next, unless sooner discharged by Congress; that a Provincial Brigadier-General from New-York be employed in the New-York Department; and that the said Brigadier-General should be appointed by this Colony:

We, therefore, reposing especial trust and confidence in your patriotism, valour, conduct, and fidelity, do, by these presents, constitute and appoint you, the said John Morin Scott, Provincial Brigadier-General, for the purposes aforesaid. You are therefore carefully and diligently to discharge the duty of Brigadier-General, by doing and performing all manner of things thereunto belonging, for the defence of American liberty, and repelling every hostile invasion thereof. And we do strictly charge and require all officers and privates under your command, to be obedient to your orders as Brigadier-General; and you are to observe and follow such orders and directions, from time to time, in the execution of your said office, as you shall receive from the Continental Congress, or from the Commander-in-Chief for the time being of the Army of the United Colonies, or any other your superior officer, according to the rule and discipline of war. This Commission to be in force until revoked by this or some future Congress or Legislature of this Colony.

A Return of Officers of a Minute-Company in Smithtown was read.*

Ordered, That their Commissions issue.

The Congress proceeded by ballot to the choice of a Brigadier-General for the four Battalions of Militia to reinforce the Army at New-York; when Mr. Scott was elected in the following manner, to wit:

For Mr. SCOTT.	For General WOODHULL.
8 New-York,	3 Orange,
4 Westchester,	3 Suffolk,
3 Tryon,	5 Dutchess,
2 Charlotte,	4 Ulster.
6 Albany.	—
23 votes.	16 votes.

Resolved, That the non-Commissioned Officers and Privates of the Battalions or Detachments of the Militia raised in the Counties of Albany, Tryon, Charlotte, Cumberland, and Gloucester, and destined to reinforce the Army in Canada, be allowed a bounty of four dollars each; and that in case the Continental Congress should not make allowance for the same, such bounty shall be at the charge of this Colony. And to expedite the service, it is hereby Ordered, That the Treasurer of this Congress do advance and pay into the hands of Messrs. Henry Glenn, John Ten Broeck, and Jacob Cuyler, the sum of two thousand eight hundred and eighty dollars, to be applied for that purpose.

Die Lunæ, 9 ho. A. M., June 10, 1776.

A Letter from the Delegates of this Colony at Continental Congress, mentioning that the question of Independence was there agitated, and requesting Instructions relative thereto, was read, with closed doors, in the words following, to wit:

“DEAR SIR: Your Delegates here expect that the question of Independence will very shortly be agitated in Congress. Some of us consider ourselves as bound by our instructions not to vote on that question, and all wish to have your sentiments thereon. The matter will admit of no delay. We have, therefore, sent an express, who will wait your orders.

Doors opened. The appeal of Thomas Harriot from the decision of the General Committee of the City of New-York, that the said Thomas Harriot should be held up as an enemy to his country for having refused Continental Bills of Credit in payment, and the Proceedings before the said Committee, were read.* The witnesses were examined; the Resolution of the Continental Congress of the 11th day of January last, on that subject, was also read; and the said Thomas Harriot heard in his defence. The same being considered,

Resolved, That the decision or determination of the General Committee of the City and County of New-York, in the case of Thomas Harriot, be, and is hereby, confirmed.

Brigadier-General Gates stated to Congress that the Commissioners who came down Hudson River, informed him that Fort Constitution is in a bad state of defence; that he has reason to expect the enemy will make a push up the River; that General Washington desires that a Regiment of Militia be sent immediately there; and further, that the General requests to know what steps are taken about the Militia already ordered.

The Petition of the Vestrymen of the City of New-York, received and read on the — instant, being committed to a Committee, and no report made thereon, the same being taken into consideration,

Resolved, That the sum of £1500 be by this Congress lent to the Justices and Vestrymen of the City and County of New-York, for the purpose of providing for the Poor of the said City and County; the said City and County to stand charged with the said sum as lent by the Colony, to be repaid at such time and in such manner as this or some future Congress or Legislature of this Colony shall direct.

And Ordered, That Peter V. B. Livingston, Esq., as Treasurer of this Congress, pay to Mr. Abraham Duryee and Peter T. Curtenius, or either of them, as Church Wardens and Overseers of the Poor of the City and County of New-York, the sum of £1500, to be by them applied in supporting the Poor of the said City and County, in the

The Petition of William Tillou, of the City of New-York, praying leave to remove with his family to Charlotte Precinct, in Dutchess County,* was read and considered.

Thereupon, Ordered, That the prayer thereof be granted, and that the said William Tillou be, and is hereby, permitted to remove from the said City, with his wife and family, to Dutchess County.

The Congress then took into consideration the Letter received this morning from the Delegates of this Colony at Continental Congress, which was again read.

The powers of this Congress in the Resolutions for their election and the powers of the Delegates at Continental Congress, were also read. And after some time spent in the consideration of said Letter, it was ordered that the further consideration thereof be postponed.

Sundry Resolutions for electing Deputies to form a Government were also read and discussed, and the further consideration thereof postponed.

New-York, Tuesday morning, June 11, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Van Zandt, Colonel Broome, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Van Cortlandt, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Philip Livingston, Mr. Sands, Mr. Jay.

* NEW-YORK, June 8, 1776.

William Tillou, of this City, Joiner, from the decay of trade, is under the necessity of laying his case before the honourable the Provincial Congress, imploring them, upon an impartial survey of his situation, to afford him the aid he requires, which is to grant him a certificate to the Committee of Charlotte Precinct, Dutchess County, that he may be permitted to reside in that Precinct, (as he is promised a good deal of work there,) and endeavour by honesty and application to maintain himself and small helpless family. The aforesaid William Tillou has a wife, who is a lunatick, by which she is rendered utterly incapable of serving herself, much more of minding her two small children. In this condition, beside the want of employ, should the Ministerial troops invade this city, this poor family must undergo all the miseries of war, not having wherewith to sustain themselves, nor able to assist one another.

WILLIAM TILLOU.

The above is attested as a truth by the subscribers,

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel G. Drake, Mr. Haviland, Colonel L. Graham, Mr. Lockwood.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

On motion, it was Ordered, That Major Lockwood have leave of absence.

Ordered, That Samuel Loudon's application and the parties be dismissed until the further order of this Congress.

A Letter from Joseph Trumbull, Esq., Commissary-General, was received and read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"New-York, June 11, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: I am directed by his Excellency General Washington to apply to you, informing that he understands that considerable quantities of salted pork are shipping from this City and Colony to different foreign ports and places, and that he is apprehensive that the great augmentation of troops to be made here and in Canada will require all the pork in this and the neighbouring Colonies for their subsistence this campaign until new pork comes in; and therefore requests your interposition to put a stop to such exportation in such manner as to you shall appear most proper, to prevent the want of provisions for subsisting the troops employed in the necessary defence of our just rights and liberties.

"I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient humble servant,

"JOSEPH TRUMBULL,
"Commissary of Stores and Provisions.

"To the Hon. the Colonial Congress of New-York."

On consideration whereof, the Congress came into the following determination and Resolution, to wit:

Whereas it has been represented to this Congress that great quantities of salted Pork and Beef have been purchased for exportation, which, if not retained, may render the supplies of the Army difficult and uncertain:

Resolved, therefore, That no salted Beef or Pork, except as much as may be necessary for the use of the crew, be exported from this Colony in any vessel under any pretence whatsoever for the space of fourteen days, by which time the Continental Congress will have an opportunity of making some general regulations respecting the same.

A draft of an Answer to the Letter of Joseph Trumbull, Esq., Commissary-General, received this day, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 11, 1776.

SIR: Your letter has been received and communicated to the Congress of the Colony. Be pleased to inform his Excellency General Washington that this Congress has, by a resolution, of which the enclosed is a copy, restrained the exportation of beef and pork for fourteen days. They are of opinion that application should immediately be made to the Continental Congress, in order that a general regulation may take place; for although this Congress will always be ready to pursue such measures as may advance the common cause, yet the justice due to their constituents forbids them subjecting their Colony to partial restraints.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant.

By order.

days, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am directed by the Congress of this Colony to transmit the enclosed papers to you, for the purpose of being communicated to the Continental Congress.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant.

By order.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, and transmitted.

The Petition of Thomas Wooley, confined in Queen's County Jail, was read. He therein makes submission for his past offences, and prays to be discharged.*

Ordered, That the said Petition be referred to the Committee of Queen's County, who are authorized to hear and determine thereon; and if the said Thomas Wooley shall make such concessions and engagements, or, if they should require it, give such security as they may think necessary, that they may direct him to be discharged.

A draft of a Letter to the Committee of Queen's County, covering the Petition of Thomas Wooley, was read and approved of, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, A. M., June 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have a petition from Thomas Wooley to this Congress, which we have chosen to refer to you to judge of; and if you should think it contains a reasonable concession for his offences, you will then give orders for his discharge, only taking security for his future good behaviour if you should think that necessary.

We are, respectfully, sir, your most obedient servants.

To the Committee of Queen's County.

Ordered, That a copy thereof be engrossed, and signed by the President, and transmitted.

A Letter from Colonel Ritzema, informing the Congress that there are about thirty Muskets, purchased by the Committee of Jamaica, and requesting an order for them,† was read.

Ordered, That Captain Riker be, and he is hereby, authorized to receive from the Committee of Jamaica the said Muskets, and have them repaired, where necessary, for the use of the Troops raised in this Colony; that Captain Riker take care that the said Committee send a particular account of the price of those Arms to Colonel Curtenius, at New-York; and that the said Arms pass through the hands of Colonel Curtenius in such manner that he may be enabled

The Petition of THOMAS WOOLEY, of Cow-NECK, in the Township of HEMPSTEAD, humbly sheweth:

That although your Petitioner, rather from inadvertency than any design to offend, may have rendered himself obnoxious to this honourable body, and drawn on himself as well their resentment as that misery and distress from which only the innocent can claim an exemption, (being confined in close jail by an order from this honourable board,) yet he humbly conceives that the punishment he has already suffered is fully adequate to his crime; that however unworthy a member of society your Petitioner may have been represented or conceived to be, he has yet the full confidence to assure this honourable Board that there yet remains in him that virtue that can distinguish him as a friend to his native country, (a greater love for which no man can have,) especially when every tender tie and affection that can endear him to his family and connexions inspires his breast with the warmest wishes for their happiness and welfare; that should the most cordial declaration of your Petitioner fail to excite commiseration for his present unhappy circumstances, he has only that consolation left which innocence always affords the distressed, that your Petitioner never meant to counteract nor in the least oppose the authority of this or any other the honourable Congress, but, on the contrary, cautiously, as he thought, avoided every infringement; and therefore prays that he may be released from his present imprisonment.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray, &c.

THOMAS WOOLEY.

JAMAICA JAIL, June 9, 1776.

†SIR: Captain Riker informs me that Mr. Joseph Robinson acquainted him last Sunday that he could furnish him with about thirty muskets, so an order was obtained from Congress to the Committee of Jamaica to deliver them to the Captain. The wretched situation of my regiment for the want of arms has rendered it necessary for me to embrace every opportunity to procure them. I shall be glad, therefore, of an order to the Committee of Jamaica to deliver their arms to Captain Riker, and that he be directed to have them repaired and put in order at Newtown.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

to pay for them, and take proper receipts for them, so that the Officer or Officers to whose Company they may be furnished, may be accountable for them, and that they may be accounted for, and paid for to the Colony.

Ordered, That Colonel Curtenius direct such Arms as are fit for the use of Soldiers which the General Committee of the City and County of New-York have taken from disaffected persons, and sent to him after they are appraised and repaired where necessary, be put into the Colony Store, in the same manner as other Arms.

Ordered, That Mr. Sands, Mr. Denning, and Mr. Ten Broeck, be a Committee to inquire into and report the state of the Magazines in this Colony, and what quantity of Powder is due from the Colony.

Ordered, That Captain Wool examine the situation of Isaac Youngs, a prisoner, and cause the irons to be taken off him if he thinks it necessary.*

Tuesday, P. M., June 11, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

And the same Members as in the morning, excepting Colonel Rensselaer, Mr. Lockwood, Mr. Leffertse, Mr. Conner, Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

Mrs. Betts and a woman from Stone Street were introduced to Congress. They said they came to be examined respecting the charge of their having kept up a correspondence with the Asia ship-of-war, &c.

Ordered, That Mr. Glenn and Mr. Schenck be a Committee to examine them, and report to this Congress.

Several Resolutions on the subject of Independence, moved by Mr. Jay, and seconded by Colonel Remsen, were read; and being again read by paragraphs, were amended and agreed to, and are in the words following, to wit:

Resolved, unanimously, That the good people of this Colony have not, in the opinion of this Congress, authorized this Congress, or the Delegates of this Colony in the Continental Congress, to declare this Colony to be and continue independent of the Crown of Great Britain.

But whereas the perseverance of the British King and Parliament, in an unjustifiable attempt to subjugate and enslave these United Colonies, may render a determination on that and many other important points highly necessary and expedient, and a recurrence to the people at large for their sentiments on every great question that may occur in the course of the present contest would be very inconvenient to them, and probably be attended with dangerous delays:

Resolved, unanimously, therefore, That it be, and is hereby, earnestly recommended to all the Freeholders and other Electors in this Colony, at the ensuing election, to be held in pursuance of a Resolution of the Congress of the 31st day of May last past, not only to vest their Representatives or Deputies with the powers therein mentioned, but also with full power to deliberate and determine on every question whatsoever that may concern or affect the interest of this Colony, and to conclude upon, ordain, and execute every act and measure which to them shall appear conducive to the happiness, security, and welfare of this Colony, and that they hold and exercise the said powers until the second Tuesday of May next, or until a regular form of Government for this Colony shall be established, in case that event shall sooner take place; and it is further recommended to

*To the Honourable Provincial Congress of the Government of NEW-YORK:

I, your humble Petitioner, Isaac Youngs, beg leave once more to address myself to you in the most dutiful manner, and beg to be relieved from these bands of irons, which are sore and desperate, which I dare say any man that ever was exercised therewith will assert the same. Gentlemen, I can assert to you that I have passed these many days with very sore legs, and in continual pain in one of my knees, which has been hurt by a fall of a horse. Gentlemen, I beg that I may not be forgotten, and long to have our cases taken into consideration, that I may have liberty to satisfy the House that I have suffered wrongfully; and I think the time long that I am confined for nothing, for I denied the charge laid against me, by reason I thought it was a sin, which I did assert to you in my examination. And if anything more than this is alleged against me by anybody, I should be glad to know it, for it is groundless and absolutely false, which I don't doubt I can make appear to you if I could have a hearing. Gentlemen of the honourable Congress, I think it a hard case to be taken away from my family, in their distressed situation, and to be confined in irons, when I never have committed any crime. Gentlemen, I can do no more than beg for tenderness, mercy, and humanity.

ISAAC YOUNGS.

June 10, 1776.

the said Freeholders and Electors by instructions or otherwise to inform their said Deputies of their sentiments relative to the great question of Independence, and such other points as they may think proper.

On motion, Agreed, That the publishing of the foregoing Resolves be postponed until after the election of Deputies with powers to establish a new form of Government.

Ordered, That Mr. Jay and Colonel Remsen be a Committee to draft an answer to the Letter of our Delegates at Continental Congress, received the 10th instant, on the subject of Independence.

The Petition of John Hilton, showing that he had laden his vessel with Beef and Pork, and was ready to sail in a few hours, when he was this day informed of the Resolve prohibiting the exportation of Beef and Pork, &c.; and praying permission to complete his cargo and depart,* was read.

Ordered, That Mr. Van Zandt cause the Inspector of exportation to collect an account of all the Vessels now in this Port laden with Beef and Pork, and the quantity in each, and report the same to this Congress.

Ordered, That Colonel Remsen and Colonel Malcom be a Committee to draw and report a plan for drafting, in case of a deficiency of Volunteers, to make up the quota of Militia of this City and County in the service.

Ordered, That Colonel Broome, Colonel Van Rensselaer, and Mr. Tredwell, be a Committee to report how the people called Quakers shall be considered and treated, in the raising, furnishing and drafting the Militia ordered to be embodied for service in this Colony.

Ordered, That Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Sands be a Committee to consider and report how the Second Battalion shall be paid.

Resolved, That the calling out of the Militia of the City and County of New-York, for the purpose of raising or drafting their quota of Militia for actual service, be deferred until Friday next; and that the respective Colonels of the respective Regiments of New-York cause their Regiments to be paraded on that day for that purpose.

Wednesday morning, June 12, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: Brigadier-General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Sands, Mr. J. Van Zandt, Mr. P. Van Zandt, Mr. Jay, Mr. Hallett, Mr. Brasher, General Scott.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Cuyler, Mr. Glenn.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Mr. Strong, Mr. Tredwell, General Woodhull.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel G. Drake, Colonel L. Graham, Mr. Haviland.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. P. Schenck.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Van Houten.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Captain Lawrence, Mr. Blackwell.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Journey.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

*To the Honourable the Provincial Congress for the Colony of NEW-YORK, in the City of NEW-YORK, now convened.

The Memorial of JOHN HILTON, Master of the Ship called the BETSY and POLLY, now lying in the Harbour of said City, humbly sheweth:

That your Memorialist, on the 31st day of May last, obtained from Mr. Robert Ray (who officiates as an officer for that purpose) a permit to take on board the said ship a lading of beef, pork, flour, &c., and also four hundred and fifty shakers hogsheads; and, in pursuance of said permission, the said ship is now completely freighted therewith, except about two hundred barrels of bread and flour to be taken on board.

That the greatest part of the said beef and pork has been purchased at a very exorbitant price, and now lies at the bottom of the said ship, and in a few hours the said ship would have been ready to depart this Province had not your Memorialist been informed that a resolve of this honourable House, so late as this very day, prohibited the same, to the very great injury, loss, and disappointment of your Memorialist and his owners, who fairly and openly shipped the said provisions, with permission of an officer acting under the immediate authority of this honourable House.

Your Memorialist, therefore, in tender consideration of the premises, humbly prays he may be permitted to complete his cargo, and depart this Port, and such further relief as shall seem just and reasonable.

And your Memorialist shall ever pray.

JOHN HILTON.

NEW-YORK, June 11, 1776.

Mr. Mercier attending with a Manifest of the Cargoes of several Vessels now lading in this Port,*

Ordered, That the consideration of John Hilton's Petition be postponed until the expiration of the prohibition contained in the Resolution of yesterday for preventing the exportation of Beef and Pork, or until the determination of the Continental Congress, if they should make a prior determination thereon.

A Letter from Mr. Abraham Yates, Junior, enclosing an extract of a Letter of Colonel Frederick Bellenger, was read, requesting Powder for the frontiers.

Ordered, That twelve hundred pounds of Gunpowder be immediately sent to the Committee of Albany, for the use of the frontier inhabitants of Albany and Tryon Counties who are most exposed; and that Mr. R. Norwood, Commissary of Colony Stores, deliver the said twelve hundred pounds weight of Gunpowder, in good order, to Jacob Cuyler, Esq., for the use aforesaid, and take his receipt for the same.

Ordered, That Mr. Van Zandt, Colonel Graham, and Mr. Sands, be a Committee to sell the Flour, Bread, and Peas, purchased by the Committee of Safety.

Ordered, That Mr. Livingston, Mr. Hackett, and Mr. Sands, be a Committee to agree with John McDonald, the Miner.

Resolved, That the calling out of the Militia of the City and County of New-York, for the purpose of raising or drafting their quotas of Militia for actual service, be deferred until Tuesday next, and that the respective Colonels of the Militia of the City and County of New-York, and of the Counties of King's and Richmond, cause their Regiments to be paraded on that day for that purpose.

Resolved, That this Congress will give to the General and Staff Officers a Dinner at the publick expense.

And Ordered, That the President wait on his Excellency General Washington, to know what day will be most convenient to him.

Wednesday afternoon, June 12, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Scott, Mr. J. Van Zandt, Mr. P. Van Zandt, Mr. Bancker, Mr. Randall.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Glenn, Mr. Gansevoort, Colonel Rensselaer.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Tredwell.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Van Houten.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel L. Graham, Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Haviland.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Schenck, Mr. Livingston.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Mr. Parks.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Ordered, That Daniel Goldsmith, the Jailer, apply to Mr. Roorback, the Barrackmaster, for two Benches and a Table for the use of the Mariners who are prisoners of war, and that Mr. Roorback supply him with those articles.

Generals Putnam and Mifflin having complained to this Congress of the riotous and disorderly conduct of numbers of the inhabitants of this City, which had led this day to * Manifest of the cargo of Sloop Resolution, John Hathaway Master, for Providence, viz: 40 bbls. Oil; 10 bbls. of Beef; 57 bbls. Flour; 3 bbls. pickled Codfish; 9 kegs butter Biscuit; 39 bush. Wheat; 85 lbs. Butter.

City of New-York:

John Hathaway, Master of Sloop Resolution, being duly sworn, deposeseth and saith, that the above manifest is a just and true account of all the cargo he hath or will take on board said vessel from this city in this his intended voyage to Providence. And further saith not.

JOHN HATHAWAY.

Sworn this 11th June, 1776, before me:

ANDREW GAUTIER, Justice.

Manifest of cargo on board Ship Betsy and Polly, viz: 179 bbls. Beef; 219 bbls. Pork; 200 Shakes; 136 tierces, 49 bbls., and 12 hhds. Bread; 19 bbls. and tierces Hams; 405 bbls. Flour; 120 kegs of Bread; 28 boxes sperm Candles; 150 Boards.

JOHN HYLTON.

The above sworn to before me this 11th day of June, 1776:

FRANCIS FILKIN, Alderman.

acts of violence towards some disaffected persons: It was, therefore,

Resolved, That this Congress by no means approve of the riots that have happened this day. They flatter themselves, however, that they have proceeded from a real regard to liberty, and a detestation of those persons who, by their language and conduct, have discovered themselves to be inimical to the cause of America. To urge the warm friends of liberty to decency and good order, this Congress assures the publick that effectual measures shall be taken to secure the enemies of American liberty in this Colony; and do require the good people of this City and Colony to desist from all riots, and leave the offenders against so good a cause to be dealt with by the constitutional Representatives of the Colony.

Mr. Gansevoort and Colonel Rensselaer took the general oath of secrecy.

The President reported that he had waited on his Excellency General Washington, and that Friday next was fixed on as the most convenient day for his Excellency to accept the invitation of the complimentary Dinner resolved to be given him and his Officers by this Congress.

Thursday morning, June 13, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Hallett, Mr. Sands, Mr. P. Van Zandt, Mr. Denning, Mr. Brasher, Mr. Randall, Mr. Bancker.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Ten Broeck, Mr. Rensselaer, Mr. Gansevoort.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Tredwell.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Van Houten, Mr. Little.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel Drake, Colonel Graham, Mr. Haviland, Mr. Tompkins.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. P. Schenck, Mr. Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Conner, Mr. Journey.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Colonel Malcom, Mr. Webster.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

A Certificate, dated 31st May, 1776, signed by David Jagger and John Barclay, two of the Members of the Committee of Hanover Precinct, Ulster County, appointed to inspect the election of the Officers of a Company of Militia taken from the Company commanded by Captain (which Company was divided by said Committee into two Companies;) which Certificate returned and certified that James McBride was duly elected Captain, James McClaughry First Lieutenant, Abraham Neely Second Lieutenant, and Andrew Neely Ensign.

Ordered, That Commissions issue accordingly.

A Letter from Governour Trumbull, explaining the reasons why he had not sooner answered the Letter of this Congress of last winter relative to the people of Connecticut carrying away James Rivington's Types, was received and read, and is in the words following, to wit:

“Hartford, June 10, 1776.

“SIR: I received your letter of the 12th December ultimo, and paid a particular regard to the contents; but the subject-matter being of publick concern, by the usage and custom of this Colony I was not warranted to give an answer before the same was laid before the General Assembly, which was soon after to convene. When the Assembly met I early laid your two letters before them. They appointed a Committee to take into consideration the subject-matter of your letters, who never made report until near the close of the Assembly, and in the hurry and multiplicity of important business then crowding, their report was passed over without the Assembly making any resolve thereon. On my return home I found the unhappy omission; but as the Assembly had the matter under consideration, I could not, with propriety, make any answer thereto; therefore, of necessity, it was delayed till the sitting of this Assembly; and can, gentlemen, give you the strongest assurance that the delay in answering those letters was not from any disregard to your respectable body, nor for want of inclination to cultivate the utmost harmony between this and the Province you represent; and you may be assured nothing shall be wanting on our part to restore and effect the same.

"Your candour in imputing the intrusion of a number of our people into your capital (in the manner they did) to an imprudent, though well-intended, zeal for the publick cause, gives me real pleasure, and can give you the strongest assurance that this Colony by no means approve their conduct; yet a severe censure at this time upon them, in this unhappy and enervated state of Government, might be attended with such inconveniences as you will readily apprehend, and would be needless for me to point out, and which, I dare say, will suggest to you at once a satisfactory excuse for our not taking such measures as might have been expected in times of peace and quiet, though, in such happy seasons, the proper resort for the private injury must have been to the courts of law, which are the only jurisdiction who can legally take notice of violences of this kind. As to the publick insult, you candidly extenuate by saying that it was noonday, not in the darkness of night, which would be accompanied with terror, though we by no means approve or justify the people of this Colony taking any part therein; but the same candour you have expressed in your letter, I presume, will induce you to view the matter, so far as it respects this Colony, or any of our people being concerned therein, in a still more favourable light, when you reflect that the head or leader of the whole transaction was a respectable member of your City and Congress, whom we consider as the proper person to whom the whole transaction is imputable, and who belongs and is amenable to your jurisdiction alone, and therefore the affair cannot be considered as an intrusion of our people into your Province, but as a violence or disorder happening among yourselves, and not an intrusion from another Colony; and you have the power to compel the gentleman we point out to return and restore that property which was taken away by such methods as you think most proper. Care was taken that the person of Mr. Seabury, who was brought into this Colony, was released and set at liberty.

"Your desire signified to us to prevent any of the people of this Colony from entering into yours for the like purposes, unless invited by your Provincial Congress or Committees, we esteem very reasonable, and you may rely upon it we do and shall discountenance and endeavour to prevent any such like incursions.

"The approbation you express, in your other letter of the same date, of our people on request affording you their assistance in Westchester County, and which came to hand at the same time, gives us much pleasure, and shall be ready at all times to afford every friendly aid.

"We hope what is said on the subject of your letter will prove satisfactory, both as to the matter and the occasion of delay in not sooner giving you an answer; and we hope every jealousy may be removed, and that the most friendly harmony and intercourse may be renewed and kept up between this Assembly and your Provincial Congress, and with whom we sincerely wish to hold the most free and amicable correspondence, especially at this time of common danger and oppression; and am, with esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

"JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

"To the Honourable Nathaniel Woodhull."

Ordered, That Mr. Sands and Captain Denning be a Committee to wait on General Washington, and ascertain whether he will have further occasion for the attendance of five Commissioners now at the posts in the Highlands; and also, whether the Company of Minute-men, from Orange County Militia, now at those Fortifications, may not be discharged.

And whereas it is represented to this Congress that the men of Colonel Ritzema's Regiment cannot procure their pay, and that they are mutinous for want of it:

Therefore, Ordered, That Captain Denning and Mr. Sands be a Committee to call on Colonel Ritzema to know why his men are not paid.

Four Fishermen were, by request, admitted. They stated that they have permission from the people of Islin, in Suffolk County, to fish in their Bay; but that the people of Huntington hinder them from bringing their fish down the Bay, or crossing towards New-York. The President, therefore, advised the said Fishermen to procure certificates from Queen's County Committee, which would protect them from any further interruption.

A Petition of Mangle Minthorne, who was advertised, praying to be restored,* was read:

Ordered, That the said Petition be referred to Alderman Brasher and Mr. Peter P. Van Zandt.

On request of Colonel McDougall,

Resolved, That Mr. Israel Evans be, and he is hereby, appointed Chaplain to Colonel McDougall's and Colonel Ritzema's Regiments.

Resolved, That if Mr. William Tapp shall enlist twenty men in twenty days for Captain Van Wyck's Company, he shall thereupon be entitled to and receive the appointment of Second Lieutenant.

Colonel McDougall produced to Congress an Order of the General, that Recruiting Officers should have 1½ Dollar for recruiting fees, and requested to know whether this Congress will grant a like allowance to the Officers of his Regiment, and direct the Auditor accordingly.

Colonel McDougall also made a Report of the First Regiment of Troops raised in this Colony for the Continental service under his command; which was read and filed.

Ordered, That Mr. Jay and Mr. Hobart be, and they are hereby, appointed two of the Members of the Committee appointed by this Congress to execute certain Resolutions of this Congress of the 5th instant, relative to persons dangerous and disaffected to the American cause, and to persons of equivocal character; and that Colonel Remsen, whose necessary attention to the affairs of his Battalion engrosses the greater part of his time, be discharged from the said Committee.

And it is further Ordered, That all the Members of the said Committee do attend this Congress to-morrow morning, and take the oaths in and by the said Resolution prescribed.

A sub-Committee from the Committee of the City and County of New-York, attending, requesting permission to inspect the Minutes of Congress:†

Ordered, That Mr. McKesson furnish the said sub-Committee with an abstract of the information they require.

A Letter from his Excellency General Washington was received and read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Head-Quarters, June 13, 1776.

"SIR: I am informed that a number of persons on Long-Island (by character not the most friendly to the cause of the United Colonies) have in their hands considerable quantities of pork and other provisions, which they refuse to part with for Continental bills. They may have other reasons for their conduct still more detrimental; and therefore I must beg the interposition of your Congress in this matter, so as to prevent the evils which are much to be apprehended.

The Memorial of MANGLE MINTHORNE humbly sheweth:

That some short time before the publication of a Resolve of the Continental Congress, regulating, among other articles, the price of Bohea tea, and fixing the same at six shillings the pound, he purchased a quantity of Bohea tea of Captain Deal; that the said tea cost him more than the price affixed as aforesaid by the Continental Congress; that said Minthorne has sold the said tea at a higher price (since the publication of the resolve of the Continental Congress, which took away the power from the several respective Committees of regulating any articles except green tea) than was stipulated by said Congress; that in so doing he looked upon himself as only acting similarly to others, and not the least degree inimical to his country; that he professes the highest respect for the Continental Congress; and as he has, by the Committee of this City, been advertised in the publick Gazette as an enemy to this country for selling said tea as aforesaid, (a stigma which he would ever wish to avoid,) he hereby declares that he is sorry for the same; that he did it ignorantly; and that he humbly hopes this Congress will, by reinstating him in the good opinion of his fellow-citizens, put it once more in his power to convince them how much he is a friend to the liberties and privileges of America.

MANGLE MINTHORNE.

† IN COMMITTEE-CHAMBER, NEW-YORK, June 13, 1776.

The General Committee for this City and County request the favour of the honourable Provincial Congress to permit them a sight of their Minute-Book or Journal since the second Tuesday in May last, which shall be safely returned in a few minutes. The Congress, if necessary, will be pleased to send the same by a messenger from their own body, who will have it in his power to prevent the Committee from seeing such Minutes as the Congress may think proper to conceal.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT HARPUR, Deputy Chairman.

To the Hon. the Provincial Congress of the Colony of New-York.

"The Commissary-General will purchase all their provisions at good prices and give them Continental bills in pay. Gold and silver he has none. The provisions are wanted for the Army; and those who are well-wishers to the cause, and live in exposed situations, will, undoubtedly, be glad to dispose of them. The disadvantages which may result to the publick by leaving them in the hands of men of a different complexion, are too obvious to need animadversion.

"I have had your report respecting the obstruction of the navigation of the Hudson River under consideration, and am pursuing measures to carry it into execution with all possible despatch.

"With great respect, I remain, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

"To the Hon. the President of the New-York Congress."

Ordered, That Mr. Hallett and Mr. Brasher be a Committee to wait on Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., the Commissary-General, and ascertain in whose possession the Pork is; and also inquire what has become of the Pork purchased in Connecticut.

Captain Denning and Mr. Sands, the Committee appointed to call on General Washington, returned, and reported that the General has, or will have, an Engineer at the Fortifications in the Highlands; and says he will not have occasion for the further service of the Commissioners there, as he will take the sole direction of those Fortifications; that such Minute-men as are employed at those Fortifications (only as Minute-men) may be discharged, but that none who are inlisted as Continental Troops in Captain Wisner's Company be discharged:

Resolved, therefore, That the Commissioners employed to superintend the Fortifications in the Highlands be, and they are hereby, discharged from that service, as being employed by or under direction from this Congress; and that all such Minute-men as are employed at the Fortifications, only as Minute-men, be immediately discharged; but that any men who are inlisted as Continental Troops in Captain Wisner's Company, be not discharged.

Thursday afternoon, June 13, 1776.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—General Scott, Mr. Hallett, Colonel Brasher, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Bancker, Mr. Jay, Mr. Randall, Captain Denning.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Haviland, Colonel G. Drake.

And from the other Counties, the same Members as in the forenoon.

Mr. James Beekman obtained leave of absence to escort his lady and family to Kingston, and to return as soon as possible.

A Letter from the Honourable John Hancock, Esq., enclosing a Resolution of the Continental Congress, that all the Troops raised in the Middle Colonies shall have the same pay as those raised in the Eastern Colonies, was received and read.

Another Letter from the same, giving advice of the approach of a British Fleet and Army, under command of General Howe, was received and read, and is in the words following, to wit:

"Philadelphia, June 11, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: The Congress have this day received advices, and are fully convinced, that it is the design of General Howe to make an attack upon the city of New-York as soon as possible. The attack, they have reason to believe, will be made within ten days; I am therefore most earnestly to request you, by order of Congress, to call forth your Militia, as requested in my letter of the 4th instant, and to forward them with all despatch to the city of New-York, and that you direct them to march in companies, or in any other way that will hasten their arrival there.

"The important day is at hand which will decide not only the fate of the city of New-York, but, in all probability, of the whole Province. On such an occasion there is no necessity to use arguments with Americans. Their feelings, I well know, will prompt them to their duty, and the sacredness of the cause will urge them to the field.

"The greatest exertion of vigour and expedition are requisite to prevent our enemies from getting possession of that town; I must, therefore, again most earnestly request you, in the name and by the authority of Congress, to send forward the Militia, agreeably to the requisition of Congress; and that you will do it with all the despatch which the infinite importance of the cause demands.

"I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

"JOHN HANCOCK, President.

"To the Honourable Convention of New-York."

"In Congress, June 11, 1776.

"Resolved, That Letters be immediately written by the President, and sent by express to the several Colonies, who are to furnish Militia for the defence of New-York, acquainting them with the necessity of forwarding their supplies with all possible despatch.

"JOHN HANCOCK, President."

Ordered, That the said Letter be immediately communicated to General Scott, and that he be desired immediately to take the most effectual measures for expediting the service required of this Colony.

Whereas this Congress have been informed by the Continental Congress, and have great reason to believe that an invasion of this Colony will shortly be made:

Resolved, unanimously, That it be, and it is hereby, recommended to all the Officers of Militia of this Colony to review the same, and give orders that they prepare themselves, and be ready to march whenever they may be called upon.

Ordered, That the foregoing Resolutions be published in the publick Newspapers, and printed in Handbills to be distributed.

On motion of Mr. —, seconded by Colonel Remsen,

Resolved, unanimously, That the President, and five or more Members of this Congress, for the time being, be authorized to order out such detachments of the Militia of this County, or of the two Independent Battalions, as they may think necessary, to suppress Riots or tumultuous meetings in this City, at any time when this Congress are not convened.

Ordered, That the Barrackmaster cause as many of the upper Barrack Rooms to be cleared out and put in order as Colonel Malcom may direct, for the reception of his Regiment.

Die Veneris, 9 ho. A. M., June 14, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. P. Livingston, Mr. Bancker, Col. Remsen, Mr. Sands, Mr. Hallett, Captain Rutgers, Captain Denning, Colonel Brasher, Mr. Randall.

FOR ALBANY.—Colonel Rensselaer, Mr. Gansevoort.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Mr. Lawrence.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel G. Drake, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Journey, Mr. Conner.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster.

FOR SUFFOLK.—Gen. Woodhull, Mr. Tredwell, Mr. Strong.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. James Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Resolved, That all Proceedings by the Loan Officers of the City and County of New-York, against all persons who owe interest on the principal sums by them borrowed of the Colony, be stayed until the third Tuesday in April next; the securities taken for the payment of the said principal sums remaining also subject to the payment of the said arrear of interest.*

*NEW-YORK, June 14, 1776.

SIR: By the request of Mr. Theodorus Van Wyck, an officer who is out of town, I am desired to acquaint you that to-morrow morning will be exposed, in publick advertisement, the houses and lands of such persons who have not paid their interest money; and many say they have it not in their power, and if their estates are sold, will be the ruin of them and their families. You will, therefore, be pleased to mention it in Congress, so as that he may know how to act; and, in so doing, you will oblige, sir, your very humble servant,

FOR MR. THEODORUS VAN WYCK,
ABRAHAM VAN WYCK, Dep't Loan Officer.

To Colonel Henry Remsen.

A Letter from Brigadier-General Nathanael Greene, dated in Camp on Long-Island, this day, was received and filed.* He therein requests that his brother, Jacob Greene, be permitted to be inoculated for the Small-Pox; and, also, that the said Jacob have permission to purchase some Guns suitable for a Privateer.

Ordered, That Philip Livingston, Esq., delay his return to the Continental Congress, and attend the business of this Congress until further order.

Ordered, That Mr. Philip Livingston be, and he is hereby, appointed a Member of the Committee constituted by this Congress for the hearing and trial of disaffected persons, and persons of equivocal character, according to the Resolution of this Congress of the 5th of June instant.

Ordered, That the administration of the Oath to be taken by the Members of the Committee above-mentioned, be postponed until this afternoon.

Resolved, That the Publick Records of this Colony, now at the house of Nicholas Bayard, Esq., be forthwith removed to Kingston, in Ulster County.

That Samuel Bayard, Esq., the Deputy Secretary, be ordered and requested to go and remain with the said Records, and continue to exercise his office till the further order of this House.

That Dirck Wynkoop, Esq., Colonel Abraham Hasbrouck, Joseph Gusherie, and Christopher Tappan, be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to provide a proper place for the said Records, and proper accommodations for the said Deputy Secretary.

That they have the general superintendence of the said Records, and by guards, or otherwise, provide for their safety and security.

That the said Deputy Secretary leave the Seal of the Supreme Court with a Deputy or one of his Clerks, and direct him to seal Writs and do the common and ordinary business of the said Court.

That Mr. Robert Benson, together with Mr. Bayard, have the direction of the removal of the said Records on board of a Sloop provided by Mr. James Beekman.

And that Mr. Beekman, with Mr. Bayard, take care of them during the passage, and see them safely landed at Kingston, and committed to the direction of the aforesaid Dirck Wynkoop, Esq., Colonel Abraham Hasbrouck, Joseph Gusherie, and Christopher Tappan.

Ordered, That if any persons committed to any Jail in this Colony by order of this House, or any Committee thereof authorized to make such commitment, or any of the County Commissioners, escape from the custody of the Jailer, by design or negligence of the said Jailer or Jailers to whom they may respectively be committed, the said Jailer or Jailers shall receive the treatment due to the offences whereof the persons so escaping stood charged.

And to the end that the said Jailer may have all necessary assistance in securing their said Prisoners,

Resolved, That the County Committees of the several Counties be, and they are hereby, authorized and required to inspect and cause the Jails in the several and respective Counties to be made safe and secure, and that this Congress will pay the expense thereof, and charge it to the account of said County.

Ordered, That the foregoing Resolution be published.

On motion of Mr. Jay,

Ordered, That Colonel Brasher and Mr. Van Zandt, the Committee to whom was referred the Petition of Mangle Minturn, report thereon this afternoon.

The Petition of Azor Betts, confined in the new Jail for contravening a Resolution of this Congress by inoculating

SIR: I have a brother here from Rhode-Island, (Mr. Jacob Greene), that has an inclination to have the small-pox by inoculation. He is much exposed often in the execution of the publick business. He purposes to go upon the Hospital Island, and there be inoculated, and stay till he is properly cleansed. If the Congress can grant him this favour without injuring the publick, shall esteem it a peculiar kindness.

My brother also wants to purchase a few small cannon for a privateer. He begs the Congress permission for the same. The proprietors of the cannon think it necessary to obtain your consent before they dispose of them, notwithstanding they are private property. You will be kind enough to favour me with the resolution of the Congress upon the above requests, which will oblige your most obedient humble servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To Mr. Woodhull, Esq., President of the Congress.

some Officers with the Small-Pox, praying to be discharged, was read.*

Ordered, That it lay on the table.

Ordered, That the Officer commanding the Guard at the City-Hall be requested to permit George Youngs to speak to his sons in custody this afternoon, but only in the presence and hearing of the Officers of the Guard, at such time as it may be convenient to the Officer.

A Letter from John W. Livingston, confined in Jail, declaring his willingness to comply with the Resolve of Congress, and praying to be discharged, was read and filed.†

Also a Letter from Renier Van Hoese, imprisoned in the City-Hall, and praying to be liberated, was read.‡

Ordered, That the said Letters be referred to a Committee to consist of Mr. Gansevoort and Mr. Lawrence.

Mr. Hallett, from the Committee appointed to call on Colonel Trumbull, Commissary-General, reports: That the said Committee waited on Colonel Trumbull, who informed them that no person was authorized to receive the Pork in question or pay for it; that therefore the holders sold it.

Mr. Abraham Livingston, being called in and examined, says: That on being consulted by Colonel Trumbull relative to the article of Pork, he informed Mr. Trumbull that there was, in his opinion, considerable quantities on Long-Island; that he thought, and was confident in his own mind, that the reason why it was not disposed of, was from a dislike many persons here had to receiving Continental money, added to a desire of serving the British Fleet and Army; that those persons, he believes, chiefly reside in Queen's and Suffolk Counties.

Mr. Livingston further informed the Congress that he has reason to believe there is at least sixty head of horned fat Cattle on Sandy-Hook, and about one hundred more at or near the Neversinks—the whole of which he supposes to be the property of Messrs. Hartshorn.

Ordered, That Mr. Livingston's information relative to the Cattle on Sandy-Hook and the Neversinks, be communicated to the Congress of New-Jersey and General Washington.

* To the Honourable Provincial Congress of the Province of NEW-YORK, now sitting in the City of NEW-YORK.

The Petition of AZOR BETTS most humbly sheweth:

That your Petitioner hath been for some time past confined in the new Jail of the City of New-York.

That the cause of his confinement is, that he hath violated a resolve of the honourable Provincial Congress, he having inoculated some officers in the service of this country.

That your Petitioner meant not to injure those gentlemen who were inoculated, nor to show any contempt to your worshipful House, but ardently wished to render his best services to those who had the command in relieving them from those fears which people in general have who are subject to that disorder.

That your Petitioner is extremely sorry for the offence he hath given his countrymen, and your honourable body in particular, and prays that he may be released from his confinement, and suffered to go at large. And your Petitioner doth hereby promise and engage that he will not for the future, by word or deed, counteract the orders of your honourable House.

And your Petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

June 14, 1776.

AZOR BETTS.

To the Chairman of the Provincial Congress of the City of New-York.

† NEW JAIL, June 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am ready to comply with the orders of your House, and beg to be released from my imprisonment.

I am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JOHN WM. LIVINGSTON.

To the Provincial Congress.

‡ NEW CITY-HALL, June 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HONOURABLE PROVINCIAL CONGRESS OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK: SIR: These are to inform you that I have been confined here a great while—the space of five months almost. I am in a sickly state of health at present, and just heard from my family that my wife is in a very melancholy state likewise, and should be willing to give any satisfaction in this life to have the liberty to return to my family with your Honours' leave. Sirs, if I understand the crime alleged against me, it is for being on board of his Majesty's ship Ross, which is true. I was pressed on board in Rhode-Island, and went down to Boston, and upon my return to Nantucket I made my escape from them, and have been with my family since, till I was taken and put in jail; and now, gentlemen, I must beg that you will discharge me if you can see it in your way, and I shall take leave to subscribe myself your humble servant,

RYNER VAN HOESE.

P. S. GENTLEMEN: It was some time in February that I was in Boston, in 1775, and I did not know that I was committing a crime worthy of four or five months' imprisonment at that time; and now, gentlemen, I beg with submission that you will let me go home to my family once more while I am alive, for I am afraid that I shall not continue a great while in this place.

To the Honourable Provincial Congress.

Whereas this Congress have good reason to believe that divers persons on Long-Island have in store, and have refused to dispose of, great quantities of salted Pork, which is now wanted for the use of the Continental Army :

Resolved, That the said persons ought to dispose of the said Pork at the market price to the Commissary-General ; and, on their refusal, that he be, and is hereby, authorized to take the same on paying the owner or owners thereof the market price aforesaid.

Ordered, That a copy of the foregoing Resolution be enclosed to the Commissary-General.

Ordered, That Colonel Blackwell, Captain Rutgers, and Mr. Parks, be a Committee to settle Colonel Drake's and Mr. Duncomb's Accounts about Salt and Leather.

Friday afternoon, June 14, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—General Scott, Mr. Livingston, Mr. Jay, Mr. Hallett, Mr. Randall, Mr. Stoutenburgh, Colonel Brasher, Mr. Bancker, Mr. Cortlandt, Colonel Remsen, Captain Rutgers.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Gansevoort, Colonel Rensselaer.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Colonel Hasbrouck.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little, Mr. Van Houten.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland.

FOR ULSTER.—Major Parks, Colonel Hasbrouck.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. James Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. Schenck.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Mr. Blackwell, Mr. Lawrence.

FOR RICHMOND.—Mr. Cortelyou.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

John William Livingston gave his parole and was discharged—the Resolution of Congress read to him.

A draft of a Letter to the Committee of New-Windsor, in Ulster, in answer to theirs of 31st ultimo, complaining that Mrs. Jonathan Lawrence sold Tea at eight shillings per pound, and that her husband made Fort Constitution an asylum for that useless herb, was read and approved of, and is in the words following to wit:

In Congress, New-York, June 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We received yours of the 31st ultimo, which should have been answered before, but more weighty and urgent business took up the time of this House.

We approve your sending Isaac De Milt to this City. The resolves for disarming suspected persons extends to the Province at large, and has been sent into your County. As to persons who act contrary to the resolves limiting the price of tea at six shillings per pound, we make no doubt but you will act spiritedly against all such as shall be convicted of that offence.

Captain Jonathan Lawrence, with all the Commissioners at the Fort, are discharged from their superintending. We are surprised at his conduct, and make no doubt you will treat him and all others according to their demerits, after a fair hearing. We commend your zeal for the publick service in this critical and trying hour.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient servant.

To the Committee in New-Windsor, Ulster County.

The Congress being informed that John Ten Broeck, Esq., one of the Members of the Committee appointed to carry into execution the Resolutions of this Congress of the 5th June instant, is very much indisposed and unable to attend:*

Therefore, Resolved, That Mr. Ten Broeck be discharged from the said Committee, and that Mr. Leonard Gansevoort be, and he is hereby, appointed a Member of that Committee in the stead of Mr. Ten Broeck.

*ALBANY, June 13, 1776.

SIR: Your letter, with the printed Resolutions of Congress enclosed, was delivered me at seven o'clock this afternoon, per express. The General Committee of this County being convened, I immediately sent your letter to their Chamber. I shall do all in my power to forward the business recommended, but am, unhappily, again confined to my room, occasioned by a bad state of health which I contracted near two months since.

I am, with great esteem, your most humble servant,

ABRAHAM TEN BROECK.

To Brigadier-General John M. Scott, at New-York.

*In pursuance to the order of this morning, the following gentlemen, members of the Committee appointed to execute the Resolutions of the 5th instant, to wit: Philip Livingston, Joseph Hallett, Lewis Graham, John Jay, Thomas Tredwell, and Leonard Gansevoort, Esquires—came up to the Chair, and were respectively sworn on the Holy Evangelists, diligently, impartially, without fear, favour, affection, or hope of reward, to execute and discharge the duties imposed on them by the said Resolutions.

Die Sabbati, A. M., June 15, 1776.

The Congress met pursuant to adjournment.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. Jay, Mr. Livingston, Captain Rutgers, Captain Denning, Colonel Remsen, Mr. Randall, Mr. Hallett, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Mr. Bancker, Mr. Scott.

FOR ALBANY.—Mr. Gansevoort, Mr. Rensselaer.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Strong, Mr. Tredwell, Mr. Hobart.

FOR ORANGE.—Mr. Little.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Mr. Morris, Colonel Drake, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland, Colonel L. Graham.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. Livingston, Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. P. Schenck.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus, Mr. Leffertse.

FOR QUEEN'S.—Colonel Blackwell, Captain Lawrence.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Mr. Webster, Colonel Malcom.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

Mr. Ten Broeck, being very sick, has leave of absence to return home.

Philip Smith, a sailor, who made his escape from the Phenix, being examined, says that the Troops were to set out from Halifax for New-York the 2d of this month ; that on board the ships at the Hook it was much wondered at where they stayed. This account they received by a store-ship from Halifax.

A Return of Officers for a Militia Company in the District of Moscheto-Cove, dated Oyster-Bay, 13th June inst., was read, and is in the words following, to wit: Daniel Cock Captain, Robert Coles First Lieutenant, William Frost Second Lieutenant, Wright Craft Ensign.

Ordered, That Commissions do issue for those gentlemen. And they were issued accordingly.

Resolved, That no military Officer in the pay of the Continental Congress, or the Congress of this Colony, ought to be eligible to a seat in the Congress of this Colony. Provided, that nothing in this Resolution contained be construed to extend to Militia Officers who, on a sudden emergency, may, for a few days or weeks, be called to action.

Ordered, That the foregoing Resolution be published in the Newspapers, and printed in Handbills to be distributed.

Whereas Micha Lynch and Thomas Hickey, two soldiers in the Continental Army, stand charged on oath with attempting to pass Counterfeit money or Bills of Credit which pass current in this Colony :

Ordered, That the said Micha Lynch and Thomas Hickey be committed to the Guard in the City-Hall, where Israel Youngs and others are now confined, and that copies of the Affidavits and Examinations relating to that matter be delivered to his Excellency General Washington.

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 15, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour to enclose your Excellency two Affidavits, by which you will see that two soldiers have attempted to pass counterfeit Bills of Credit. The Congress have thought it their duty to commit them immediately to close custody under the Guards at the City-Hall, and directed me to inform you thereof. Your Excellency will be pleased to take such further measures with them as you shall think proper.

I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

NATHANIEL WOODHULL, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Colonel Blackwell, from the Committee appointed to take into consideration the case of Colonel Gilbert Drake relative to a loss of £50 he sustained in receiving and paying out the moneys deposited in his hands for the purpose of purchasing and laying up in store a certain quantity of salted Pork, pursuant to an order of the late Provincial Congress, reported as follows:

Your Committee doth report: That the Salt taken up by Colonel Drake and Mr. Dunscomb is, part of it, now scattered about the County of Westchester, and Mr. Dunscomb says that there is considerable loss, but they have agreed to collect the Salt and make the best of it, and report to this House; and Mr. Dunscomb says that if the Congress will not allow him for the loss, that he will bear it himself.

It is the opinion of this Committee that as Mr. Dunscomb was employed by the publick, the publick should bear the loss, should there be any. It appears to this Committee that Colonel Drake has received £3,000 from the Treasurer to pay for Pork ordered by the Congress; he received that cash in packs without his counting, and in paying it out he sustained a loss of £50, which he is ready to make oath of before this Congress; and he has spent a considerable time in riding about the country in buying the Pork, and other services relating to the same.

It appears to this Committee that Colonel Drake ought to be allowed the £50 loss, and a reasonable compensation for his other services.

Thereupon, Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Congress that Colonel Gilbert Drake sustained the loss which occurred in receiving and paying out the publick money in purchasing Pork by order of the late Provincial Congress.

And Resolved, That Colonel Drake be allowed the sum of £70 as a compensation for his services, expenses, and commissions, in purchasing the said Pork as aforesaid.

Resolved, That the Secretary of this Congress, who shall from time to time be employed by the Committee for carrying into execution the Resolutions of this Congress of the 5th instant against persons suspected to be inimical to the cause of liberty, be absolved from his oath of secrecy as far as may be necessary in the execution of his said office.

A draft of a Letter to Brigadier-General Greene, in answer to his received yesterday, was read and approved, and is in the words following, to wit:

In Provincial Congress, New-York, June 15, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by the Congress to inform you that they would be very happy in giving your brother permission to be inoculated on Hospital Island, but they cannot help considering that spot as improper for the purpose by reason of its exposed situation, and are, therefore, under the disagreeable necessity of declining a compliance with your request.

The Congress have further directed me, sir, to inform you that they are equally unfortunate in being obliged to refuse their permission to purchase cannon in this Colony. The defence of this city and places in its vicinity, require such extensive works that, so far from parting with the guns now here, we are taking every method in our power to procure more. These reasons the Congress are confident will have full weight upon your mind, and therefore decline mentioning the propriety of reserving them for the sea-service of the Colony.

I have the honour to be, &c. By order.

To Brigadier-General Nathanael Greene, at the Camp on Nassau-Island.

Gouverneur Morris, one of the Committee appointed to execute the Resolutions of this Congress of the 5th instant against dangerous and disaffected persons, and those of equivocal character, appeared, and was duly sworn by the President diligently and impartially, and without fear, favour, affection, or hope of reward, to execute and discharge the duties imposed upon him as one of the Members of that Committee.

Ordered, That John McKesson, Esq., one of the Secretaries of this Congress, do attend the said Committee as their Secretary, and that the said Committee employ such other assistant Secretary or Secretaries as they may think proper, and such Messenger, Doorkeeper, and other officers as they may find necessary.

Ordered, That the President do absolve (and he did then absolve) the Members of said Committee, who are sworn, from their former oath of secrecy, so far as they may think necessary to the execution of the said Resolution.

Die Sabbati, 5 ho. P. M., June 15, 1776.

Present: General Woodhull, President.

FOR NEW-YORK.—Mr. P. Livingston, Mr. Randall, Colonel Stoutenburgh, Captain Denning, Captain Rutgers.

FOR ALBANY.—None.

FOR DUTCHESS.—Mr. De Lavergne, Mr. James Livingston, Mr. Paul Schenck.

FOR SUFFOLK.—General Woodhull, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Tredwell, Mr. Strong.

FOR TRYON.—Mr. Moore, Mr. Harper.

FOR ULSTER.—Colonel Hasbrouck, Major Parks.

FOR CHARLOTTE.—Major Webster.

FOR KING'S.—Mr. Polhemus.

FOR WESTCHESTER.—Colonel Gilbert Drake, Mr. Morris, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Haviland, Colonel L. Graham.

On motion of Mr. Jay, Resolved, That the Clergy and licensed Physicians be exempted from drafting for the Militia to be raised in this City.

Resolved, also, That such of the Firemen be exempted as will agree to form a separate Company for the preservation of this City in case of invasion, and be under the command of the General until the further order of this Congress. *
